It appears from the local papers of Texas that several slaves have been hanged for attempting to escape from their masters, and that at the last accounts twenty-three were sentenced to endure the same fate. The Texans are evidently determined to put an end to slave enemy, but now our peculiar and much sought-after friend, the sun, had gone down. Not morning we saw land, and at about twelve o'clock we began to see the forms of the mountains. We now approached the bay. The coast looks picturesque, but barren and arid; a magnificent harbour bounds upon our view; on our right rises Sampson Peak, a beautiful mountain, more than 2000 feet high. Here and there, built in the most singular and unknown places, are the little cloisters of houses built of stone, loosely put together, thatched with straw; the surrounding mountain stone fences, covered with bushes and fields stretch half way up the hills. Barley, oats, Indian corn, and millet are cultivated in the distance. We can just see some pale guarded from marauding by-boats. I think it is Mount Olympus. The bay is already full of shipping, and steamers and vessels are continually arriving. We went on shore last night, at least yesterday afternoon. The first thing we discovered was a line of British soldiers, in light and airy uniform, marketing oysters for their dinner. Yes, you must know that this is a celebrated place for the "natives." We went on shore for a walk, and came upon a few farmhouses. Some were completed, but in one we found several men employed, who were very polite and goodnatured. All the women, children, and cattle had retired to the mountains. Provisions are very cheap on the part of the mandarins—and the consequence is that fresh meat is difficult to be procured. They refuse to take money in any shape. We went into the principal village immediately for the sentences. Some of the houses were very well built; and we passed through most beautiful lanes, in which the weeping cane grows in the same way as in Europe—vines in trellis, and various fruit-trees, and, strange to say, cart-roads. The carts seemed to be of the most primitive kind, and invariably built, with the sides of the wheels well studded with thick nails. These people are very healthy-looking, browner than the southern people, but of the same part, possessing long noses and red cheeks. The dress is the same as in the south, but I have seen none of the bamboo hats. Various white felt, close-fitting caps are worn that turn down in cold weather, and cover the ears, at least so I should think. They all smoke the short pipe in use all over the empire. I was astonished to see them with teeth so beautifully clean, and to the very lowest peasant. The Cantonese are also remarkably clean about their teeth. The Fukien people are also known have them black from chewing betel-nut. These fellows here are as a good-natured race as I ever assured as our southern coast. They are splendid laugh with them yesterday, and fraternised with the best man, who was in great fear of the barbarians. He said the sailors were not worse than others; that he was afraid that we should be neglected—an opinion not to be gainsaid. He had an old dun mule with blind eyes, and a large pair of wicker panniers in tow; but he had nothing, he said, in the shape of tea or samshu.

I trust to have some good News by next mail, as two days in Manchuria are considered to be equal to a year, for the manners and customs of the natives. We are in total ignorance about everything. "Shaves" is quite as plentiful; but I never believe anything I hear in China till I see it; therefore I will not give you any of these fallacies. Others may tell you current about what is going on in Europe, or which fort we attack, and which we do not. We are here opposite the Pelho, about a hundred miles away. Lord Elgin, Sir Hope Grant, &c., have not arrived yet, and we are without a mail from England.

Telegrams report that Lord Elgin and Baron Gros arrived at Shanghai on June 28. Sir Hope Grant and Admiral Hope had left for Pechelí. The city is protected by the allies. The rebels are making progress. All Chinese matters appear more settled.

The Times correspondent confirms the report that Soochow had fallen into the hands of the rebels.

There has been a serious disturbance at Foochow between the Custom and Chinese men, but for the present quiet has been restored. The presence of a British man-of-war in all the open ports is most desirable.

THE INVASION OF CALABRIA.

Garibaldi has again made great progress in a brief period of time. The earlier telegrams that described him as landing at Bagnara were incorrect. He did not place his troops between the Neapolitan army and Naples; he disembarked in their rear. Melito was selected as the point of debarkation. In one night, slipping past the Neapolitan squadron which were looking out elsewhere, Garibaldi ran across the straits, and on the 20th ult. he was master of a portion of Calabria. Every telegram brings fresh news of the successful progress of the Garibaldian invasion and perplexity of the King of Naples and his friends. Immediately after the General's people began declaring to us that Reggio was gone when, and all efforts made to get her off have been fruitless. Another account gives more minute details. Garibaldi, near Bagnara, was the point of departure. About 3000 men embarked: 1000 of them consisted of the volunteers under Bertani, from the Island of Ponza; they were sent across the Island of Sicily to Taormina; the rest consisted of the Brigade Bixio of the Division Turr. The Torino took about 2000, and the rest were put on board the Franklin and two sailing vessels, which were taken in tow. At the last moment Garibaldi decided to go with the Torino, and had the engines stopped, which was likewise forms part. At seven p.m., after nightfall, the expedition departed.

Nothing to startling when the men were already embarked, it was found that the Franklin had sprung a leak, and the expedition had to be delayed. Garibaldi was informed of the accident, and he made to find out the leak. It was right, and there was some hesitation on the part of the sailors to plunge and look for it. Garibaldi said, "I see I must look for it myself." The next moment twenty were in the water; but the search was successful, and the leak was stopped. Three days after the Franklin came to the bottom of the ship. So nothing remained but to use the pumps, and try to get on. This was in that manner. They were able to go a certain point, but not entirely; however, Garibaldi was not foiled in his plan for that. He made the men embark again, telling them that he had navigated in a far worse plight than that, and would, therefore, a passage of a few hours was not worth speaking of.

The two vessels arrived at the point of debarkation at two a.m. they were close inland. The Torino, heavily laden with two thousand men, besides stores, ran on shore. Nevertheless, the General succeeded in getting her ashore, in a bay to the west of it. Not a trace either of Neapolitan cruisers or soldiers was to be seen; all were off watching the coast, but the bays of Scilla and Bagnara got off by being lightened was not realised. She remains fast embedded. The Franklin remained in deep water, and had the sailing vessels, with the thirteen hundred broke, but the ship did not stir. Seeing that nothing could be done, Garibaldi ordered the Franklin to return to Messina. She had steam enough to do it, and arrived there safely. It is with two Neapolitan frigates, which hastened down in the direction of Melito, that the Franklin will have to contend on her way to and pass, and came into Messina.

The first thing on landing was to destroy the Semaphore stations; the new telegraph wires, of course, higher up, could not be found in time to destroy it, and thus the tale of the landing was taken to Reggio. All the news that could be obtained was that the Royal Calabrian division was still at Messina to keep a close eye on the garrison of the citadel. The Royal Calabrian division was commanded by Bosco. The Royal Intendent of Potenza is at the head of the insurrection in the province of Basilicata. Garibaldi has been proclaimed Dictator in all Calabria, and on the 28th ult. a decree from the King of Naples to his troops in Calabria have again been defeated. The insurgents of Basilicata are subordinate to Garibaldi. It is believed that Garibaldi will go against Bosco. An official note from Naples on the same day says that Garibaldi's troops in Calabria have been attacked at Piale by the Garibaldians, by whom they were surrounded and defeated. An armistice was then proposed. The commanding officer refused to treat with rebels, and continued his attack in order to obtain his decision. In the meantime the enthusiasm of the Neapolitan troops was such that they surrounded the insurgents, and forced the latter to surrender at discretion.

The Minister of Public Instruction General Bosco have left Naples for the theatre of war with six battalions as reinforcements, having learnt, through the telegraph, that the defence of Reggio was lukewarm, and conducted by cowardly commanders.

In Sicily two Neapolitan brigades have surrendered to Cosenz, who is in command of the expedition to cross the straits and landed at Fiumicino with reinforcements for his chief.

At Naples all seems to be confusion. The press calls upon the people to arm themselves, and volunteers are being enrolled in every direction; but, owing to the backwardness of the season, He wants, besides, that an extraordinary Ambassador should go to Paris to carry there the King of Naples' humble demand of pardon. The Neapolitan Ambassador at Paris has received instructions to call upon poor Signore Martino. At the late affray between Neapolitan gendarmes and the Garibaldians a Neapolitan officer was wounded and rescued, who had ventured on land, some of the latter seem to have lost their lives. The Neapolitan Government is to make amends for that, too.

LETTER FROM GARIBALDI TO THE LADIES OF ENGLAND.

The following letter from General Garibaldi has been received by the Countess Stanhope, President of the Ladies' Garibaldi Bowl Asset Association in England:—

Southern Army of Italy, Messina, August 12.

Dear and Excellent Lady,—Amongst the many and flattering manifestations of my life I number that of having acquired for my country the sympathy of the generous ladies of England.

Be pleased to interpret my gratitude to those most valued and most kind friends to whom I owe so much.

With the most profound esteem, I remain, Madam, your devoted servant,

G. GARIBALDI.

MONTENEGRO.—The new Prince of Montenegro has deprived the Bishop of Montenegro of the dignity of his office, in the birth of the late Prince Danilo, left the funeral procession before the conclusion of the ceremony.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It is announced that the 29th of October next and the 28th of January, 1861, have been fixed for the examination of candidates for direct commissions in the Army.

Sir James Yorke Scarlett has been appointed to the colonelcy of the 5th Dragoon Guards, a regiment with whose history in the Crimea he has, and gallant officer's name is closely associated. Lord Carlingford has been transferred to the colonelcy of the 4th regiment, the 11th Hussars.

A grand ball and supper was given to the officers of the Channel Fleet on Wednesday week, by the inhabitants of Dunbeath, in their Town-hall.

A beautiful piece of sculpture has just been erected on the wall of the north aisle of the cathedral, Glasgow, opposite the south entrance, to the memory of the officers and men of the 19th Highlanders who fell in the Crimea.

On Saturday a Parliamentary return was issued showing that last year the cost to the Government was £317,818 6s. 9d. in sending male lunacy to the European troops in India. The cost to the Government in supplying the Indian troops with tea last year, was £6089.

The novices on board the Britannia cadet training-ship at Portsmouth are to be allowed to go to some other vessel; and the Britannia will be henceforth kept for the exclusive training of the cadets, whose number on board will be increased. An order of this kind has been urgently required for some time, as the two systems were constantly clashing, and can never be advantageously carried out on the same ship.

The authorities at the Horse Guards have decided on discontinuing the ugly and cumbersome shako now worn in the Army, and substituting in place of it a head-dress of a much lighter and somewhat more ornamental character, not unlike the large-pointed forage caps worn by several of the Volunteer Rifle Corps, though the crown will be somewhat higher. The materials will be felt and leather.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

The provincial volunteer corps are now in full activity. Preparations for country reviews are going on in Warwickshire, and some other counties have taken place. The battalions are as energetic as ever in all kinds of drill, and the prediction that the present movement would be the death of the old exercises of our warlike forefathers is so far amply fulfilled. The following order of the day has been issued to the troops at Chatham Garrison by Major-General Eyre, which we expect to be among the first troops to the officers and men of volunteer corps :—" The Major-General desires that all non-commissioned officers and soldiers salute officers of volunteers dressed in uniform. Guards are to be furnished to volunteer armed parties of volunteers, marching in usual military order, approach their posts. To armed parties commanded by officers in uniform are to be presented arms. Parties with side arms are to be considered as armed parties."

We give a few particulars of some of the principal meetings which have recently been held :—

On Saturday last a general review took place of the Hertfordshire Volunteer Rifle Corps, by Major-General Sir Richard Dunstervill Mainwaring, Colonel M'Murdo, and the district inspectors, Major Home and Major Hall.

On Wednesday week the Duke of Cleveland entertained, at a banquet, and by Mr. Herbert Barnard, of Portland-place, to the Victoria Rifles, who met by the invitation of the above corps, when it was awarded to Mr. Joseph Braithwaite, of Notting-hill.

On Saturday last the Cinque Ports (Ringmead) Volunteer Rifle Corps resolved to celebrate the opening of their range and butt, which are well situated on the banks of Galley Hill, about two miles from the town.

The 2nd East Yorkshire Artillery Corps (Pavenham) had a set of rocket instruments for their amusement on the 16th inst., on the ground of Mr. Pawsham Recreation ground.

The volunteer corps belonging to Plymouth, Devonport, and Stonehouse were inspected and reviewed on Thursday week, on the Parade, Mount Wise, by Colonel Dyneley.

The 10th (Chichester) Sussex Rifle Volunteers, under the command of Captain Hall, went through a complete field day exercise in the Priory Park, by the kind permission of Sir John Lawrence, Bart., G.C.B.

The first annual review of the Lancashire Rifle Volunteers, accompanied by the 19th Lancashire Artillery (Manchester), the 31st Lancashire, and the 9th, 12th, and 20th Cheshire, and 2nd Staffordshire, artillery corps, took place on Saturday last, by the invitation of the above corps, when it was awarded to Mr. Joseph Braithwaite, of Notting-hill.

On Saturday last the 1st (Lingfield) Surrey Rifle Volunteers and Mayo

LITERATURE.

HANDBOOK OF PAINTING—THE GERMAN, FLEMISH, AND DUTCH SCHOOLS—based on the Handbook of Kugler, Enlarged, and for the most part Rewritten, by Dr. Waagen, Director of the Royal Gallery of Pictures, Berlin. In Two Parts. Murray.

The preface to these volumes opens with a rather long explanation of their not very clearly-expressed title, and more particularly as to how they came to be "based upon the handbook of Kugler," and "enlarged, and for the most part rewritten, by Dr. Waagen." It appears that, "although the translation of Kugler's Handbook" was excellent Handbook of German, Flemish, and Dutch Painters not only gave a faithful version of its contents, but also contributed much additional information (the result of great judgment and erudition), yet the researches which have since taken place with regard to these schools have brought so much new and important matter to light as greatly to alter the conditions under which the work was originally written." What these altered conditions are, what the researches are which rendered necessary the substitution of a new work for one already prepared with considerable care, and the latest edition of which appeared no longer than four or five years ago, we do not pretend to have been previously aware of, nor do they very prominently appear upon inspection of the works themselves. However, we are assured that "Mr. Murray, always anxious to keep his handbooks in every respect on a par with the scientific standard of the age, has, not without reason, considered it necessary to prepare a new edition," or rather a work to a great extent new, in its place. Kugler having died in 1858, Dr. Waagen has been induced to undertake this revision of his friend's labours, which he has handled as freely in the case of his friend's labours, which he has handled as freely in the case of his friend's labours, with the exception of some of the earlier portions, and more particularly those relating to Albert Dürer and Holbein, very little of the original text remains in a form in which it would be recognised by the author. How far this may be considered just to the reputation of the writer in question, or whether it would have been permitted to take place if he had been alive, it is not for us now to inquire; nor will we discuss how far it may prove satisfactory to the former purchasers of the work, some of whom possess both the original edition and the illustrated edition, and who may imagine that they had a right to expect that in purchasing a handbook from the great emporium in Albemarle-street they would obtain one which should be considered "on a par with the scientific standard of the age," during a moderate series of years. We simply view the two new volumes as a whole, and as substitute for the single volume heretofore forming part of Kugler's series, and we feel bound to state that in point of style they present, to our taste, no improvement upon it, nor any essential enlargement of the scope of the work, which could justify the work of suppression and substitution accomplished upon it. That there are more names of painters and a somewhat fuller notice of some had incidentally referred to by Kugler, together with ampler reference by name to their works, is very true; and this description of information, to the picture-collector and the visitor to picture galleries, would doubtless be acceptable. But the introduction of these details to a considerable extent impairs the effect of the more salient features in the history of German and Dutch art as given by Kugler; while the style in which the whole is written by the Berlin connoisseur is even less attractive than that of the former, and most of the amusing notes, containing anecdotes of artists, collectors, and works, with which it was illustrated, have been boldly omitted. Dr. Waagen, in going into the details of his performance, a little exaggerates it, as far as the great names—those of the heads of schools—are concerned; and only in the case of Rubens and Rembrandt. He says :—"But in the later periods—such, for instance, as the notices of Rubens and Rembrandt—while the text has been greatly enlarged, I may say that only a small portion of the original text has been preserved." Now, upon collating the two works, what do we find? Why, that Kugler devotes seven pages to Rubens and nine to Rembrandt, while Waagen devotes eleven to the former and twelve to the latter. To be sure, the text in Waagen's work is written closer than in Kugler's; but then, on the other hand, Kugler's pages are crowded with notes in small type, so that his work, as regards these two masters, would be, notes and all, fully equal in point of quantity to that of Dr. Waagen. The new materials, for which the conciseness of style of the latter makes space, are chiefly in the nature of a catalogue raisonnée of some of the two masters' works; the general scope of their genius being less fully treated than by Kugler. Whilst, however, Dr. Waagen gives us the advantage of his knowledge of the contents of the various public galleries abroad and at home, he is generally very little communicative in reference to the pictures in private collections in England, and for reasons which do not appear to us to be satisfactory—namely, "partly from their inaccessibility, and partly from their liability to be dispersed." The contents of these collections, it will be remembered, have been already fully treated in another work by Dr. Waagen, and to this work we are continually recommended to refer in such terms as the following:—"As regards the many masterpieces by Teniers in England I may observe that, for number and excellence, no collection can vie with that of her Majesty at Buckingham Palace. Next in order may be placed those of Sir Robert Peel, of Lords Ellesmere and Ashburton, of Thomas Barry, Esq., and of Lord Overstone. I abstain from entering into any enumeration, partly because most of the examples are not easily accessible, and also because I have described them in the above-mentioned collections, and also a number of them in various parts of England, in my 'Treasures of Art.'" And to the new "Collections" is appended the edifying footnote—"Treasures of Art, vol. ii., p. 111; vol. iv., p. 404; vol. iii., pp. 91, 100, 131, 132, 139, 143." It happens that much of this sort of information, at least as regarded more important pictures, was given in the text or notes of Kugler's latter edition; but now, in the improved handbook of Dr. Waagen, "in every respect on a par with the scientific standard of the age," it is excluded, and whoever would know anything of the German and Dutch school of painting, as illustrated in the rich private collections of England must fork up his outlay of a guinea for Dr. Waagen's "Handbook" by an investment of two guineas for the same gentleman's "Art-Treasures," both very conveniently to be had of the same publisher.

STATUE OF THE LATE LORD LYONS FOR ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL. SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 208.

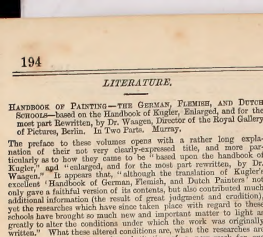
But, in truth, notwithstanding all that has been written about it, since Dr. Waagen "was the first who came forward as early as the year 1822 with a work on the brothers Van Eyck," to the present time, the history of German and Dutch painting, or, as Dr. Waagen generalises it, "the Teutonic style," is still in a very unsatisfactory position, and we will, therefore, seize the opportunity before closing this article to offer a few observations upon the subject, with the view to counteract erroneous impressions which are very prevalent in regard to it. Many people look upon painting as painting, and the "old masters" as a generic term, including all who painted at any period between the eighth or tenth century, and the century immediately preceding our own time. Seeing the works of many Dutch and Flemish and some few German painters comprised, in the same galleries, with those of painters of Italy, Spain, and France, and exhibiting some superficial qualities in common, the uninformed spectator is apt to suppose that they are all referable to a common origin, and have been based upon the same principles. Than this, however, there could not be a greater mistake. The Renascence art of the Revival, and Teutonic art, have had no point of coincidence in their history, their sources of inspiration, or the principles guiding their practice, with the exception only of the Low Countries, where the progressive process of colouring spread to Italy, and thence to other parts of Europe, and where, in exchange, the imperfect drawing of the Revival was subsequently corrected from Italy, and freely acted upon, with results which led to the creation of a new and original school.

The idea, then, of instituting an historical parallel between the Romanesque art of the Revival, and Teutonic art, is simply absurd, and the absurdity of it is none the less palpable from the circumstance of something of the kind having been attempted in the Manchester Art-Treasures Exhibition of 1857; and the rationale of this may be satisfactorily explained without at all detracting from the honour due to the genuine art of the North. Twenty centuries had passed since Greece had created the poetic arts; ten centuries since Rome had imported them—when Art and Christianity were carried into still barbarous Germany by the conqueror Charlemagne; and vigorously both threw there, improved or modified by subsequent influences derived from Byzantium, until the Gothic became firmly established as a distinct style, its technic essentials being derived from the South, whilst its characteristics still during succeeding centuries displayed the spiritual influences of the wild and savage North. For even during the whole of the dark unhappy period from the tenth to the twelfth century, when in Italy mind and poetry and art were a blank, in Germany fancy, poetry, and art still survived, were still actively at work, and a mass of works in painting and sculpture were produced which (though many of them in later troubles have been destroyed) fill a distinct page in history. Yet, mark the sequel. The independence of the Germanic nations from southern influences established in the middle ages was maintained still later, inasmuch that when the Revival commenced in Italy in the fourteenth century, and was carried on to the end of the sixteenth, under the influence of examples of the purest art derived from Greece and the awaking of new mental faculties in Italy itself, Germany maintained still her individuality in art—took no inspiration from these new elements. To institute any comparison, therefore, between Meister Wilhelm, Meister von Leeden, or Hans Memling, and their Italian contemporaries Massaccio, Filippo Lippi, Bellini, and Domenico Ghirlandajo, or between Michael Wohlgemuth or Albert Dürer himself, and their contemporaries Correggio, Titian, and Raphael, would be equally unmeaning and unjust. Yet there have been, and are, those who would maintain a ridiculous and unseemly rivalry between Germany and Italy as the source and parent of art, and M. Kugler and Dr. Waagen are not free from these tendencies. M. Kugler, in his now suppressed work, writes, for instance, as follows :—

With the commencement of the fifteenth century a new element in art again appears amongst the nations of the Germano-Teuton race. This element is the feeling for nature which, later in the century, prevailed in Italy, &c.

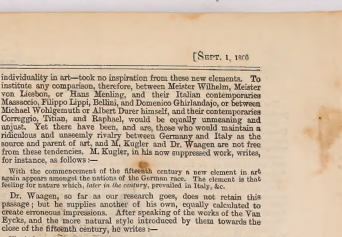
Dr. Waagen, so far as our research goes, does not retain this passage; but he supplies another of his own, equally calculated to create erroneous impressions. After speaking of the works of the Van Eycks, and the more natural style introduced by them towards the close of the fifteenth century, he writes :—

The influence of this realistic tendency in art thus carried out, as well as of the new and admirable method of applying oil-paint, extended to every country in Europe where art was practised with any success. In the Netherlands itself it was, of course, most felt; after them in Germany, and then in France, England, Italy, Spain, and Portugal."



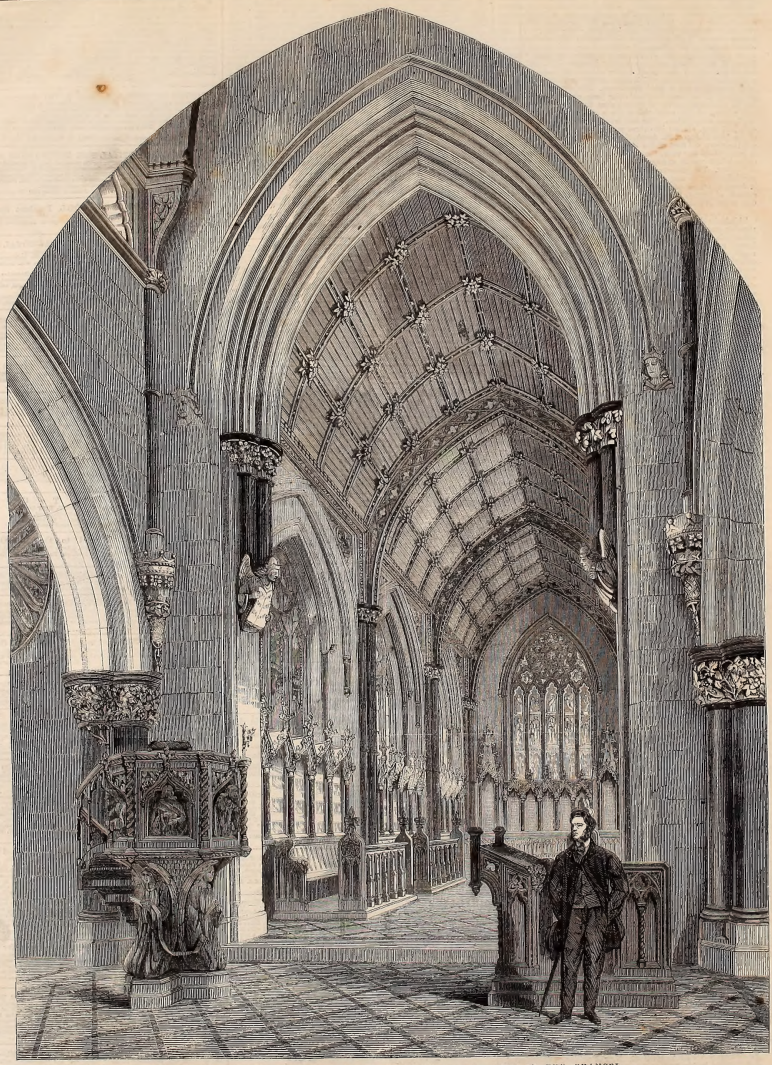
We need hardly point to the great names of the predecessors of Raphael in Italy, whose long line occupies from the early part of the thirteenth to the close of the fifteenth century, to suggest the absurdity of the assumption, as implied in this passage. It is a very marked example of the dangers and inconveniences which attend the habit into which, through haste or from some less excusable cause, we have of late years fallen, of deriving our opinions on art, as we sometimes also do on history, from German sources.

The claims of the late Flemish and Dutch schools we have already admitted, and need not further expatiate upon. But their inspiration was in great measure derived from that of Italy, though of great original genius—Rubens and Rembrandt, converting the inspiration to their own—founded schools which in every respect must be admitted to be independent, and which flourished in pre-eminent merit long after Italian art had sunk into weakness and insignificance, and whilst German art was still semi-barbarous, not having yet become insipid under incongruous influences from the "sweet South," which are still in action, with a doubtful prospective result.



TOURISTS' GUIDES.

A Handbook for Travellers in South Wales and its Borders, including the River Wye: with a Travelling Map (Murray).—In the preface to this handbook it is stated that during the last twenty years the general features of South Wales have undergone great changes in social, commercial, and even geographical points of view. The enormous development of mining enterprise and the opening of new railways have peopled districts which were formerly uninhabited, New towns have arisen, new harbours have been formed, and the fair counties of South Wales, particularly those of Gwent and Morgannwg, have woke up to a new phase of existence. It is with the object of bringing all information respecting the district up to the present day that this work has been prepared, under the care of an editor who has lived the greater portion of his life in it. An introduction comprises a chapter on the physical features of South Wales, its geology, manufactures, and products; communications; an antiquarian and a social view; a glossary of Welsh words which occur in the construction of Welsh names; points of interest for the geologist; and a series of skeleton routes, which give a full guide to the chief places of interest, arranged according to counties; tours of one month through the southern portion of South Wales; a general tour of six weeks; a pedestrian tour through the heart of Wales; and a coast walk of a fortnight. Then follows the regular Handbook; and the whole is accompanied by an excellent travelling map, placed in a pocket in the volume. Completeness is essentially attained in this guide-book.



A Guide to the Mountains, Lakes, and North-west Coast of England, by Mackenzie E. C. Walcott, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford (Edward Stanford).—The present volume completes a series of Coast Guides of England, by the same author, which embrace three distinct works—the South, the East, and North-west Coasts; and, in addition to the Lake District, the rest of the counties of Cumberland and Westmorland, and as much of North Lancashire as is included in the basin of the Lune, have been described. All the public lines of communication by railroad or by sea-steamers have been prefixed, and the expenses indicated. The introduction affords a general description of the entire area, its topography, the character of the scenery, the localities interesting to the naturalist and geologist, the history of the people, and archæological remains. Copious itineraries of routes are given, and practical suggestions are made to direct as well the tourist whose time admits only of a hasty visit, as the more leisurely traveller who intends to take a complete and systematic view of the country. The principal and most agreeable places of resort and chief starting-points are described in detail, and every care taken to obviate any unnecessary or irksome reference to previous or subsequent pages in planning or making excursions from them.

THE STOCKTON-ON-TEES REGATTA CUP.—SEE PAGE 204.

TESTIMONIAL RECENTLY PRESENTED TO MR. H. LEWIS, AT HULL. SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 208.

ST. MARGARET'S CHURCH, BODELWYDDAN, NEAR ST. ASAPH.—VIEW OF THE CHANCEL.

ON Thursday week the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph consecrated this magnificent church, the first stone of which was laid by the Dowager Lady Willoughby de Broke (the munificent donor), on the 24th of July, 1856. The new edifice, which is dedicated to St. Margaret, is in grateful memory of the late Lord Henry Peyto Willoughby de Broke. It is situated in the most picturesque spot of the Vale of Clwyd, to the north and nearly in front of Bodelwyddan Hall. It is seen to advantage from almost any point of view, and is pronounced the Pearl of the Vale. The edifice, which is erected in the Decorated Gothic of the fourteenth century, consists of centre nave transept, with north and south aisles and chancel, with an octangular vestry as an adjunct to the latter. The spire is 200 feet high. Around it are eight pinnacles that stand up at the base, relieved and adorned by flying buttresses, the outer one on each side springing from the buttresses at the base of the tower. It is pierced by four traceried windows, and perforated above by three rows of tracery and two sets of trefoil openings, having altogether a light and elegant appearance. The roofing of the nave and aisles is pierced by trefoil openings or windows, which admit the light into the interior without the windows being seen. There are ten of the same in the chancel roof. At the junction of the nave and chancel are placed two pinnacles as entrance-towers to the roof. On the east ends of the nave and chancel are placed a carved stone cross with traceried carving around. The belfry of the tower is constructed for a peal of eight bells, but at present there are only three—namely, treble, tenor, and grand diapason. In the front of the tower is a handsome clock-dial. The tower is ascended by a circular stone staircase, let into the north-east angle of the structure. The entrance to the edifice is by an elegant Gothic arch (supported by polished Aberdeen marble columns), which forms in itself the porch, having massive oak doors with ornamental hinges. The doors open into the lobby, which is a square room, embellished with two stained-glass niches, in each of which are representations of Kentigern, the first Bishop of St. Asaph and St. Margaret. The tower screen is formed

THE CHANCEL.

This is the chef-d'œuvre of the edifice; it opens to view through a superbly grand Gothic arch, supporting the outer mouldings of which are perfects, on which an carved the portraits of the late Lord and her Ladyship. Within the arch are Grecite marble columns, supported by angels, and adorned with a foliated capital of Caen stone. Over each side the angel holds a book, inscribed on which, in letters of gold, are the scriptural words, "I will that my people shall dwell in a sure dwelling, and in quiet resting-places." The floor of the chancel is also chequer-worked in polished Sicilian marble, with bands of Belgian marble and black polished marble borders. The altar is of solid oak, surmounted with carved foliated finials—they have bookshelves covered with crimson velvet, and are supplied with cushions to match. On each side over the stalls are magnificently-carved canopies of Caen stone, supported by polished marble columns, with alabaster groups. The bases of the columns are of Purbeck stone, with rich statuary marble capitals. The steps to the altar are of statuary marble, chequer formed. The reredos presents a chaste and pleasing appearance. The canopies are of polished alabaster, supported by columns of Languedoc marble. Between the canopies are panels of dove marble, upon which are limned in letters of gold the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, and the Creed. The centre, of carved alabaster, bears the monogram I.H.S. in a wreath of leaves, in white marble, upon which are symbolised, by ears of wheat and bunches of grapes, the bread and wine of the Lord's Supper. The floor of the altar is chequer-work interlacing the full set of the passion-flower. The chancel roof is supported by eight beautiful columns of polished Grotte marble, elegantly and elegant group of alabaster. The north and south windows of the chancel are superb works of art. The east window, filled with the honours of all the Scriptural events. The windows of the chancel altogether form a set, upon which are portrayed in the different events in the life of our Saviour—the Nativity, Life, Passion, Crucifixion, and Ascension. The first window of the north side bears the following inscription :—"This window was erected by Mary and Emma William, in memory of their uncle, the Rev. William Williams Edwards. He died January 27, 1829, aged fifty-five, and their aunt Janet, his wife, who died August 8, 1869, aged eighty-four." The whole of the windows were presented by these two ladies, sisters of Lady Willoughby, the founders. The roof of the chancel is of oak, in all the rich and elegant style of the nave and transept, having square panels of carved oak, forming a polished arch. Over the centre of the nave and chancel are two magnificent oak plaus. The bulwalde in the front of the gallery in the tower is of Rokeby-dale stone. On each side of the tweful arch above the circular window in the west are portraits of the Right Rev. Dr. Broke: while on the east window are those of the Right Rev. Dr. Short and the Queen. The translucent-plate, in a niche below the figure of St. Margaret, bears the following inscription in English and in Welsh :—"This stone was laid July 25, 1868, in the 31st year of our Lord, 1856, by Margaret Willoughby de Broke, who founded, erected, and endowed this church at her sole expense, in the devout hope that it might tend to the glory of God. 'More than these shall be called a house of prayer for all people.'—Isaiah lvi.7."

For the above account of St. Margaret's Church we are indebted to the Carnarvon and Denbigh Herald. The church was designed and executed by Mr. John Gibson, of Westminster; and Mr. Wyatt, jan., was clerk of the works.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Sept. 2.—13th Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, Atlantic Telegraph failed, 1858.
TUESDAY, 4.—New Style introduced, 1752.
WEDNESDAY, 5.—Comte died, 1857.
THURSDAY, 6.—Riots at Nottingham, 1854.
FRIDAY, 7.—Queen Victoria visited Paris, 1855.
SATURDAY, 8.—Sebastopol taken, 1855. Moon's last quarter, 11h. 7m.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 8, 1860.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
11 21	11 59	0 37	1 15	1 53	2 31	3 9

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK

FOR 1861, containing numerous beautiful Engravings from Original Drawings by Mrs. MARGETTS, will be published the latter end of October. Price 1s.

ADVERTISEMENTS are now received at the following rates :—

Whole Page 20
Half 10
Quarter 5

Any smaller Advertisement at 2s. 6d. per line (double columns). Speedy application should be made to secure eligibility of Display spaces.
Office, 198, Strand, London.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Monday, September 3, and during the Week (positively the Last Week but One), THE OVERLAND ROUTE. After which, for three nights only, A GAME OF CHESS and THE ENCHANTED ISLAND. Mr. C. Mathews: concluding with THE ORDEALING. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, THE OVERLAND ROUTE. Doors open at Seven o'clock. Commence at Half-past. Mr. C. Mathews, concluding with THE KING'S GARDENER. Box-office open daily from Ten till Five.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. Webster.—On Monday, and during the Week, JANET PRIDE: Mrs. Stirling, Mrs. Billington, Mr. Addison, and Mr. Frederick Vokins. Concluding with A DEAL BOX. Boxford, G. Selby, Miss Woolgar, K. Kelly, and E. Thorne. Commence at 7.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Batty.—On Monday, and during the Week, at Seven, a Grand Selection from the Grand Spectacle of MAZEPPA and the WILD HORSE. To be followed by SCENES in the CIRCUS, introducing the Celebrated Troupe and Little Morelle. Commence at Seven.

EASTERN OPERA HOUSE, New Pavilion, Whitechapel. Proprietor, Mr. John Hamilton. Open every Evening at Seven. CALLAN MELLON'S CELEBRATED ARTISTES; Band and Chorus of 100 Performers. Italian Nights, Tuesdays and Fridays.

FLORAL HALL, COVENT-GARDEN.—LAST WEEK of ALFRED MELLON'S CONCERTS.—It is respectfully announced that these Concerts will positively terminate on Saturday next, September 8, when the Band and Chorus being engaged for the Worcester Triennial Musical Festival. Full particulars of the arrangements for the Last Six Nights will be duly announced. On Saturday next, the 8th inst., Mr. SIMS REEVES and Mr. SANTLEY will take place, being for the BENEFIT of ALFRED MELLON, Conductor, Alfred Mellon, Promenade. One Shilling. Commence at Eight.

THE SISTERS SOPHIE and ANNIE will have the honour of appearing in their new and highly-successful Instantaneous Vertical MERRY MEETING, at Yarmouth, Sept. 8 and 9; Lowestoft, 7; and Norwich, 10. Musical Director, Mr. W. Gavin.

THE NORWICH MUSICAL FESTIVAL, on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, September the 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th, St. Andrew's Hall, with the patronage of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince Consort, H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, and other members of the Royal Family. Principal Vocalists—Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, Madame Sainton-Dolby, Mr. Wellesley Mercer, Remember H. Hamilton, "Brilliant in Beauty," and Sydney Cottrell, "The Last Judgment." On Thursday Morning, Handel's Grand Oratorio, "Israel in Egypt." On Thursday Evening, Mendelssohn's Psalm, "As the Hart pants." On Friday Morning, September 14, Handel's Oratorio, "The Messiah." On Friday Evening, September 14, Handel's Oratorio, "Judas Maccabæus." On Saturday Morning, September 15, Handel's Oratorio, "Samson." On Saturday Evening, September 15, and 17th, Haydn's Oratorio, "The Creation." Mr. Benedict's Cantata, "Mar Queen," Gilbert's "Arcadia," and Benedict's Cantata "Undine" (first time). Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Principal Violin, Prospective performer—Mdme. Clara Novello (her last appearance in Norwich). Mdme. Weiss, Mdme. Rudersdorff, Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, Madame Sainton-Dolby, Miss Poole, Miss Byrne (full), and Miss Lascelles. Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Wallworth, Mr. Wellesley Mercer, Mr. Santley, Mr. Nelson and Mr. H. Stagpoole; organist, Mr. Harewell; chorus-master, Mr. J. Brown. Full Band and Chorus of 300 Performers. The Service in Choir on Sunday, September 12, at Eleven o'clock, will be performed by the Choir of St. Peter Mancroft, assisted by the Band and Chorus of the Festival. Mr. Hopper.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GREAT CONCERT and CHORAL PERFORMANCE on SATURDAY next, September 8. Commence at Three. Conductor, Mr. Manns. Distribution of Prizes and Grand Performance in Handel Orchestra at 4.30.

PART I.
"Now, King of Glory" (Crystal Palace Choir).
Bach's Suite No. 3.
"I will give thanks" (Palestrina).
"Every oddest bird of hell" (Handel).
Mozart's Symphony in G.
"Hail, bright Cecilia" (Handel).
"When the earth is hushed" (Dr. Cox).
Duets sung at Ten Additional Pianofortes, under Twelve, Stepson. Reserved Seats, Half-a-Crown extra.
Notice.—The new Half-Guinea Season Tickets are available for this Concert, and till April 30, 1861.

PART II.
Distribution of Prizes and Grand Performance in Handel Orchestra at 4.30.
"Now, King of Glory" (Crystal Palace Choir).
"The fortune-teller" (Gerbeck).
Bach's Suite No. 3.
"How, how, thou wintry winds" (Stevens).
"I will give thanks" (Palestrina).
"O, hills, O, vales of pleasure" (Handel).
Mozart's Symphony in G.
"Hail, bright Cecilia" (Handel).
"God save the Queen in Fairyland" (Stevens).
Duets sung at Ten Additional Pianofortes, under Twelve, Stepson. Reserved Seats, Half-a-Crown extra.
Lewis, Esq.).

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Arrangements for the Week ending Saturday, September 8th.—Monday, Great Fountains and last day of Hollyhock Show. Tuesday, Operatic Concert. Wednesday, Fountains and Operatic Concert. Thursday, Choristers Thursday and Friday, the usual Band and Organ Performances. Friday, Choristers Thursday and Friday, the usual Band and Organ Performances. Saturday, Great Fountains, Grand Performance of Sacred Music, Children's Festival, Distribution of Prizes, Illumination, and Display of Fireworks. Admission, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, 1s.; other days as Two. Sunday, open at 1.30, to Shareholders exclusively; Monday, 1s.; Tuesday, 2s. 6d.; Wednesday, 1s.; Thursday, 2s. 6d.; Friday, 1s.; Saturday, 1s. Guinea Season Tickets admit on and after Saturday, September 1. Early application for forward Reserved Seats is required.

WASHINGTON FRIEND'S 500 MILES in CANADA and the UNITED STATES, 1860, with his Portrait, Map, and Illustrations, is published (from the Prince of Wales), including the Falls of Niagara, River St. Lawrence, Toledo Lake, &c. which has already obtained the patronage of the Queen's Hall, Piccadilly Hall, &c.; Area, 3s.; Gallery, 1s. Daily at Three and Eight o'Clock.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE.—WAUGH and SONS, 67, Lombard-street, City, Manufacturers of Brussels, Tapestry, and Velvet Carpets, Curtains, Furniture, Chintzes, &c., of first-class manufacture, for every style of decoration.

BEDSTEADS of every description, both Wood, Iron, and Brass, fitted with Furniture and Bedding complete.—J. MAPLE and CO., entrance 197, Tottenham-court-road, and 1, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE'S NEW CARPET-ROOMS
MACHINE CARPETS
at 3s. 6d. per yard.
Entrance,
197, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S Superior HOUSEHOLD LINENS. FAMILIES REQUIRING LINENS should inspect this Stock, get samples, wash and measure, to compare prices. Sheets, 2s. 6d. per pair and upwards. Quilts, 6s. 6d. each. Blankets for washing. Sample Parcels, containing two 5-4 Damask Cloths, two Tray-cloths, one dozen Table Napkins, and one dozen Huck Towels, 21s. Patterns and Price-lists of any make-up Linens in England, on the receipt of an order.
J. MAPLE and CO.,
196, Tottenham-court-road, and 1, Tottenham-place.
Established 29 years.

WALNUT SUITE OF DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, recall to-day's prices, handsomely fitted up in the best walnut, consisting of a fine gilt-glass back and marble slab; a chiffonier, with plate-glass back and marble slab; a sofa and table, an occasional table, a large-sized chiffonier-bedroom, a cabinet, a pier-glass, and six chairs, all in the best style, and covered in the finest green rep, or any other colour, price 40 gns., half in value. Also a Spanish mahogany Suite of Dining-room Furniture, consisting of a fine sideboard, with plate-glass back, a telescope dining-table, and six chairs, price 20 gns. At 8, Aldersgate-street.

PIANOFORTE (a Great Bargain).—A 6½ Cottage, in fine walnut case. Only been used a few months. Fitted with metallic-plate, and all the most recent improvements. Warranted for five years, and to stand in any climate. To be seen at 3, Mortimer-street, five doors from Regent-street, W.

PIANOFORTE, the property of a Lady leaving England, a Model, by Schuntzel (taken in part exchange), in elegant walnut case, with fine-toned plate, and every improvement, by a good maker. Price Twenty Guineas.—Call at 27, Kensington-park-road, Notting-hill.—May be seen at Brompton House, 32 and 33, Queen's-buildings, Brompton.

FURNITURE.—Great a new and elaborately-illustrated CATALOGUE, containing 350 Designs of Bedsteads, Bedding, Chairs, Tables, &c., with prices and estimates for all classes of houses. Country orders carriage-free.—HEAL and SON, 196, Tottenham-court-road, corner of Castle-street, W. Established 1810. Heavy Oak Dining-room Suite, consisting of a Sideboard, Telescope Dining-table, and Six Chairs, to be SOLD for 30 guineas, recently cost 60 guineas; dining-room dilto, in Spanish mahogany, 28 guineas; a very handsome and massive Suite of Leather-covered Furniture, in oak and birch, with winged wardrobe and marble-top washstands, 35 guineas each suite. The whole of the above are finished regardless of cost.

OLD OAK DINING-ROOM SUITE, in rich velvet, comprising two twelve ample and solid chairs, pair of easy-chairs to match, handsome sideboard with plate-glass back, telescope dining-table, and chiffonier, with plate-glass back, the whole of which is in perfect condition, and may be seen at Bolgrave House, 19, Sussex-street, Belgravia.—N.B. Also a whole oak Suite, recently purchased from the Great Exhibition of 1851.

SUPERIOR SECONDHAND FURNITURE.—The attention of intending purchasers is invited to the following suite of walnut drawing-room furniture, in rich velvet, which is offered for immediate SALE, at a very moderate price, consisting of a handsome couch, easy-chair, and four occasional dilto, all of elegant design and covered with rich velvet; also a handsome chiffonier, with plate-glass back, and marble slab; a loo-table, occasional table, a pair of card-tables, small fancy work-table, a pair of handsome pier-glasses, and a pair of rich Brussels carpets, all in perfect condition, and may be seen at very moderate prices. Also a handsome Suite of Dining-room Furniture, in oak and birch, with winged wardrobe and marble-top washstands, 35 guineas each suite. The whole of the above are finished regardless of cost.

DR. DE JONGH'S
(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL,
ADMINISTERED WITH THE GREATEST SUCCESS IN MANY CASES OF CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, RICKETS, INFANTILE WASTING, AND ALL SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS.
RICKETS, INFANTILE WASTING, AND ALL SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS.

Extensive experience, and the recorded testimony of numberless eminent medical practitioners, have established the fact that DR. DE JONGH'S OIL is the most efficacious form in which this remedy can be administered. Further, it is unquestionably the most palatable and the most easily digested.

Sole Consignee, specify efficacy, safety, and economy unitedly recommend this unrivalled preparation to invalids. NO OTHER OIL CAN POSSIBLY PRODUCE THE SAME BENEFICIAL RESULTS.

To the JONATHAN PEREIRA, M.D., F.R.S., F.L.S.,
Physician to the London Hospital, Professor of Materia Medica, &c.

"I was thinking that the subject of the best analysis and investigations to the properties of the various kinds of Cod-liver Oil, and the best mode of administering it, would be a subject with reference to my lectures. Several, or rather, numerous inquiries, I am sorry to say, have been addressed to me on the subject."

Dr. JONATHAN PEREIRA, M.D., F.R.S., F.L.S.,
Physician to the London Hospital, Professor of Materia Medica, &c.

Reports from Dr. LETHEBY, Medical Officer of Health, Examiner of Drugs, &c.
Dr. LANKESTER, Coroner for Central Middlesex, Examiner of Drugs, &c.
Dr. LETHEBY, Medical Officer of Health, Examiner of Drugs, &c.
Dr. LANKESTER, Coroner for Central Middlesex, Examiner of Drugs, &c.
Dr. LETHEBY, Medical Officer of Health, Examiner of Drugs, &c.
Dr. LANKESTER, Coroner for Central Middlesex, Examiner of Drugs, &c.

"I consider that the purity of this Oil is secured in the preparation by the personal attendance of so good a Chemist and intelligent a Physician as Dr. de Jongh. Hence I deem the Cod-Liver Oil sold under his guarantee to be preferable to any other Oil as regards genuine pure and medicinal efficacy."

Dr. LETHEBY, Medical Officer of Health, Examiner of Drugs, &c.

Sold only in Imperial Half-pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s., capsuled, and labelled with DR. DE JONGH'S Stamp and Signature, WITHOUT WHICH NONE CAN POSSIBLY BE GENUINE, by respectable Chemists.

ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.
GAUTIER—BOUTARD'S CHOCOLATE.

TESTIMONIAL to WM. MARSDEN, Esq., M.D., Surgeon. At the SIXTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Governors of the Queen Charlotte's Lying-in Hospital, on Friday, the 31st of July, 1860,

It was resolved, That the medical thanks of this meeting are respectfully due, and are hereby cordially given to WILLIAM MARSDEN, Esq., M.D., for the zeal, ability, and success with which he has conducted the Out-door Department of this Charity. That this unanimous opinion is formed, not only from the intimate knowledge Dr. Marsden's diligently-recorded treatment of the following diseases of cancer, his clinical lectures on so much valuable time and attention in interesting, arousing, and more or less relieving the sufferings of the poor women who attended his practice, but also from the consideration of the careful tabulation of the origin, symptoms, and pathological development of each case, at any time to the inspection of medical practitioners, the experience derived from which is universally admitted to be of the highest importance to the progress of the healing art and humanity. That the above resolution be expressed, and presented in a suitable form to Dr. Marsden; and signed by the Chairman of this Meeting.
OLIVER FARRER, Chairman.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL from 3, Old Broad-street, to 6, GRESHAM-STREET, CITY, E.C.—Mr. HENRY GRISSELL, Solicitor, Parliamentary Agent, and Conveyancer, begs to inform his friends, and the public generally, that he has REMOVED his Professional Offices, as above, to the Head Office. This Company, without union with any other, has paid for compensation £60,000.
Railway Passengers Assurance Company: Office, 64, Cornhill, E.C. Aug. 23, 1860.

THE ROYAL HOSPITAL FOR INCURABLES, at Putney. The Governors of this Institution are desirous to receive Donations and Annual Subscriptions, by whom, legacy, or otherwise, or decidedly, are hopelessly disqualified for the duties of life. Information may be obtained at the Office, 73, Lombard-street, City, E.C., where Subscriptions will be received, and by application to the Secretary, Mr. FREDERICK ARDEN, to whom Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable.
16, Feather's-court, Lombard-street, E.C. By Order, J. BLOMFIELD, Sec.

MANILLA-HOUSE SCHOOL, Peckham Rye, Surrey. Conducted by Mr. JOHN DOUGLAS. The premises have been considerably enlarged, and the Establishment, with other improvements, added. Competent masters are engaged for the modern languages.

NAVAL AND MARINE CADETS.—ROYAL NAVAL SCHOLARSHIP ESTABLISHMENT, Eastern Parade, Southsea. Mr. J. H. WILLIAMS, Master of the Royal Naval School, and Candidates of the Royal Naval Scholarship, assisted by a staff of Masters in many branches, RECEIVES PUPILS, Eastern, R.N.
In addition to special instruction for Naval Examinations, Pupils receive a Classical and sound General Education, in preparation for the Army and other professions.
Terms, including Uniform, Books, &c., for Pupils under fourteen years of age, not more than 100 Guineas per annum.
Applications to be addressed to Mr. Sprckwell, the Head Master. Prospectuses and other information may be obtained at Messrs. Gieves's, Naval Outfitters, Portsmouth and Plymouth.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97a, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in Swallow-street), removed from Piccadilly. Open from Ten till Four daily. Every style of writing taught in Six Lessons. Ladies and Gentlemen taught their own copperplates. Lessons can now be had. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in Eight or Twelve Lessons. Separate Classes for Ladies in the Evening, Private and Professional. Mrs. Smart will attend. For prospectuses, terms, &c., apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

CORREGGIOS ECCE HOMO.—The long-sought Replica of the Picture at Dresden, which the world has been taught to consider as the finest painting in the country, is ON VIEW at GARDNER'S GALLERY, 134, Oxford-street, W., a few doors from Regent-circus. Admission, 1s.

PICTURE FRAMES, cheap and good, of every description.—A neat Gold Frame, Glass, and Back for the "Falls of Niagara," &c., a bather Frame, 2s. Every picture supplied with the moulding in the length.—GEO. REES, 37, Drury-lane. Established 1800.

EBONITE RIPLE PROTECTOR, pics., is prevents injury to the rifle by corrosion, and is a perfect preventive to the ill effects of the use of nitrates; at the Cystal Palace, and of the six manufacturers, S. W. SILVER and CO., 5, Ludgate-hill, E.C., and 66, Charing-cross, S.W. Wholesale and for Exportation.

BEFORE YOUR WEDDING DAY, a guinea-gold Wedding-ring and half-sovereign Keepsake, in a morocco box, to carry out the Invention, 170, Piccadilly, and 22, Cornhill, corner of Finch-lane. Illustrated Pamphlets, with Price-list and Juveniles, 172, Piccadilly-street, London.

FURNITURE.
WHERE TO BUY, WHAT TO BUY, HOW TO BUY.
Cash or Credit.
Goods carriage paid to any part of the kingdom.
Apply for Catalogues, Estimates, and Designs.

FOR FAMILY ARMS send to the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE Name and County. Arms Painted, Emboss, and Quartered, 5s. each. Sketch, 2s. Engrave of Pedigree, 10s.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The established 1 office for Genealogy, Family Arms, Crests, Pedigrees, Seals, Dies, &c., with that authority known throughout Europe.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

CAUTION on HERALDRY.—The Errors committed by Heralds' Office, and other unauthorised persons, are such that the Nobility are generally mocked, the married bachelors, and the maiden widows. The public are solicited, for their own protection, to apply to H. SALT, Herald, &c., Office for the Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, who now execute Engraving.—H. SALT, Heraldist.

FOR FAMILY ARMS send to the Royal Heraldic Office name and address, and receive Arms, Crest, and Motto, painted, 5s. Engraved, 10s. Family Pedigrees traced, 21s. The Manual of Heraldry, 160 Engravings, 3s. By C. CULLETON, Author of "Guide to the Study of Heraldry," &c. Consultations, 10, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W. To Sculptors of Heraldry wanted.

WEDDING CARDS—For Lady and Gentleman—50 each, fine thick Embossed Bristol, beautifully engraved in the newest style. Best fine Cream Laid Note Paper and Envelopes, with Arms or Crest, 5s. each. Arms, Crest, and Address Dies, 10s. 6d. each.—T. CULLETON, Heraldic Engraver, 25, High Holborn, W.C.

THE PEN SUPERSEDED.—MARK YOUR LINEN.—The Universal Marking Ink, without preparation, for Linen, Cotton, Silk, &c., is to prevent the ink washing out, is with CULLETON'S PATENT ELECTRO-SILVER PLATED PENS, which mark in any colour, without preparation. Sold by all Stationers in one Hour, with Initials, Name, Crescent, or Crest; with directions for use. Sent post-free for 54 Stamps. Crest Dies, 10s. 6d. Arms, 21s. Cheques and Orders crossed "Coutts and Co." Culleton, Patentee, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

TO TOURISTS.—CALLAGHAN'S RACE AND FIELD GLASSES combine extraordinary power and brilliancy with portability, and are portable as to be worn round the neck as a double opera-glass, price 30s. each. For the convenience of Tourists, Sportsmen, Yachtsmen, Travellers, Officers, Clergymen, Ladies, Gentlemen, &c. Manufactured by Callaghan and Co., Opticians, 4, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, London. Chester, Owen, Derby, Dover, Doncaster, Farnham, Folkestone, Gloucester, Gresham, Hereford, Hull, Ipswich, Leeds, Lincoln, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Nottingham, Petersfield, Portsmouth, Ramsgate, Redhill, Retford, Rhyl, Richmond, Ripley, Rye, Scarborough, Sheffield, Shrewsbury, Southampton, Stockton, Tunbridge Wells, Warwick, Weymouth, Whitby, Winchester, Windsor, Worcester, Wrexham, Yarmouth, York, and Newbridge. In Scotland—at Berwick, Cupar-Fife, Inverness, N.B. These Glasses will be sent post-free to any part of the kingdom by WILLIAM CALLAGHAN, Opticians, 4A, New Bond-street, corner of Conduit-street, London, W.

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY, &c. The Field, Farmer, and Gardener, Jan. 14, 1860, says:—"We have received from the York Hotel, Portobello (enclosed with great power in FIELD, RACECOURSE, and MARINE GLASSES, by Mr. Wray, Optician, 74, Cornhill, and 220, Regent-street, London. The Racecourse Glass is capable of containing 12 miles, and the Field Glass of 6 miles. Of the correctness of German glass, will show distinctly a person to know them at 25 and 3 miles. They serve also as opera-glasses. Mr. Wray's telescopes for Yachts, Travellers, Sportsmen, and ships are chiefly four of 8 to 10 inches. They are also invaluable for Shooting, Deer-stalking, Hunting, Yachting, Boating, Travelling, Reviews, Races, &c. Mr. Wray's Telescopes are used by the Queen, Prince Consort, Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, and Newbridge. In Scotland—at Berwick, Cupar-Fife, Inverness, N.B. These Glasses will be sent post-free to any part of the kingdom by WILLIAM CALLAGHAN, Opticians, 4A, New Bond-street, corner of Conduit-street, London, W.

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme Deafness, by which the most confirmed Member, Organist, Professor, Lecturer, Gentleman, or Lady can hear distinctly in Church, Theatre, Lecture-room, or Public Meeting, noises in the head is entirely removed. It affords instant relief to deaf persons, and enables them to hear in any position, however complete. Sold only by the Inventor, and Sole Manufacturer, MOSES SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

SPECTACLES.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at 50 as advanced age to read with ease, and to distinguish objects with perfect distinctness. Testimonials from the most eminent Physicians and Opticians. Pamphlets forwarded on application. Sold by the Inventor, and Sole Manufacturer, MOSES SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W. Spectacles adapted to preserved and strengthened; very aged persons are enabled to employ their sight at the most minute occupations, can see with distinctness at a much less expenditure of light, and they do not require the frequent changes, to the dangerous effects of further powerful assistance.—39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

IMPORTANT to OWNERS of RACEHORSES.—PHILO. C. BUSH, Esq., Owner of "Pauline," "Cyclone," and "Syrmitis," writes as follows from Lake Maxinkuckee:—"Pauline" arrived here on the 15th of June.
"Last May (whereupon I had Thirsty's Food by a distinguished veterinary surgeon, who pronounced it the best preparation he had ever seen. Pauline is at present in training, and I find it the best preparation for her engagements at the Kelpie Course, Long Island. I brought her to the post fit, and defeated Prophet and Coach. This was in about one month after commencing the use of Thirsty's food."
Thirsty's Food is the best for racing fillies, Cyclone and Syrmitis, and I find them equally improving. Pauline, therefore, can now be had from Lancashire in three-year-olds to run for Thirsty's Gold Cup, at the Fashion Racecourse, Fall Meeting, next month."
The fact that his horses, the Pauline, Cyclone, and Syrmitis, and that Admiral Rous, in his evidence before the English racehorse, strongly recommends it, is the best testimonial in favour of this value. "Horses," says the Admiral, "are like human beings, and require nourishment, and as we have to train them, we must give them a nourishing food, and Thirsty's Food, may be introduced with great advantage."—Sold by Thirsty's Food Manufacturers, 4, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, London. Agents required in every town where none are already appointed. Depôt for the United States of America, 31, Broadway, New York.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN AND MIDLAND RAILWAYS.—EXCURSION TRAINS, EVERY SATURDAY and EVERY MONDAY, to LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, LEEDS, BRADFORD, and other STATIONS, to and from LONDON, to all Parties in the Kingdom. On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, the 10th, 11th, 12th, and 14th of September, return tickets to BIRTLEY by all Excursion Trains will be issued. By Order, W. CAWKWELL, Secretary. Euston Station, August, 1860.

A LARGE PICTURE, PRINTED IN COLOURS, of the METROPOLITAN RIFLE CORPS IN HYDE PARK, IN THEIR RESPECTIVE COSTUMES, will shortly appear in this Journal.

A carefully-finished VIEW OF THE FALLS OF NIAGARA, FROM THE TOP OF THE FALLS ON THE AMERICAN SIDE, also PRINTED IN COLOURS, will be given at the same time.

Numerous interesting Sketches in connection with the PRINCE OF WALES'S VISIT TO BRITISH NORTH AMERICA have been received from our Special Artists, and will be engraved in the forthcoming Numbers of this Journal.

THE VOLUNTEER REVIEW AT EDINBURGH.—Notwithstanding the care taken to select efficient persons to delineate every event for this Journal, we regret to say that our Artist dispatched to Edinburgh to illustrate the Review failed in correctness of detail. The ensuing Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will contain an illustration of the Review at Edinburgh more worthy of this Journal and of the important event which it will commemorate.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1860.

No doubt the prominent topic of the week, in spite of the weather and the prorogation, will have put an end at once and for ever to the worst Government which has disgraced an age of progress and improvement. The question is—what next? On this and kindred topics the French noblemen whom a long residence in London and the manner of discharging his diplomatic duties have succeeded in making very popular amongst Englishmen has been very eloquent in the department of the Loire, and speaks of the Italians placing in jeopardy, by their own fault, the liberties which the French have restored to them—significant words, but not more so than those used in the same very remarkable speech in reference to ourselves. Not only is the Treaty of Commerce dwelt upon with an amount of laudation abundantly enthusiastic, but the idea of the possibility of a French invasion is treated with a laboured contempt so intense as to be almost suspicious. The Count is astonished that men of any authority among us should have "appeared to believe in the possibility" of an attack; it would be "the height of folly" to suppose that "the spirit of the old régime" of France at an end; and that there never was, is, or can be another such magnificent, beneficent, astute, kind-hearted, or liberal ruler as Napoleon III.

Apropos of volunteers, the Irish cultivators for the Pope's delight ought to have the exact counterpart in Captain Style's mission here. Not only has the enthusiasm to engage in the liberation of Italy under the great Dictator spread like an epidemic amongst all sorts of men on the spot, but in steady, phlegmatic Scotland an incidental advertisement by a young gentleman on a visit for a commission in the regiment has elicited a full mouth was made of the dignified attitude of a certain crowd of young volunteers. Perhaps the most noticeable paragraphs of this speech, however, are those in which M. de Persigny labours to impress upon us, in the most emphatic manner, that the year 1815 is spent; that le vieux militaire of France at an end; and that there never was, is, or can be another such magnificent, beneficent, astute, kind-hearted, or liberal ruler as Napoleon III.

Apropos of volunteers, the Irish cultivators for the Pope's delight ought to have the exact counterpart in Captain Style's mission here. Not only has the enthusiasm to engage in the liberation of Italy under the great Dictator spread like an epidemic amongst all sorts of men on the spot, but in steady, phlegmatic Scotland an incidental advertisement by a young gentleman on a visit for a commission in the regiment has elicited a perfect storm of volunteering, and the solitary companion sought has already swelled into hundreds. Great men are subscribing under cover of their ladies' names; and the Premier himself, when called to question in the House touching this Foreign Enlistment Act, laughingly suggests that there is no difficulty about laying hands on tourists who want to have a look at Mount Etna, or, he might have added more appropriately, Vesuvius.

The same noble Lord emphatically denies that there is any pretence whatever for the rumour about Austria's intention to oppose Garibaldi; but the denial is remarkably worded. Non-intervention in the affairs of Italy is declared to be the principle of that country, but the basis of the rumour was an intention to interfere, not in the affairs of Italy, but in her own; the whole gist of the surmise being that, the Dictator having expressed openly an intention to liberate Venetia, Austria would not await his attack there, but adopt the common military tactic of anticipation and meet him on Neapolitan ground. The existence of such an intention is perfectly consistent with the most honest disavowal of any idea of interference with the affairs of Italy, for Austria does not look upon Venetia as part of Italy. Garibaldi and others do.

The Great Eastern's performances have been, of course, much discussed. The triumphant tone adopted in some quarters seems hardly warranted by the circumstance that the average speed of the home voyage does not reach fourteen knots—a little over sixteen statute miles—an hour. If the fundamental calculations of her commercial career are to be carried out, her performances must average considerably more than this. No doubt, however, the excuse of a foul bottom must have its weight; and it must also be remembered that she has never yet been down to her proper draught, having to mind that she has to engage she attained occasionally a speed of more than sixteen knots—about nineteen miles an hour—it seems quite possible that Mr. Brunel's calculations may yet turn out what every one would wish them to be.

The subscriptions destined to allay some of the miseries under which the outraged Christians in Syria are labouring continue to pour in, the list being headed by the Queen and the Prince Consort; but, in order to calculate how far the eight or nine thousand pounds so far collected may be adequate to provide the relief intended, it is necessary to ascertain the extent of the disaster as set forth by the committee; and when it is seen that no less than 150 towns and villages have been pillaged and burnt, 10,000 human beings killed, and 3000 Christian women and girls forcibly borne away into slavery, the wonder is that more than 70,000 to 80,000 people are left destitute. The funds raised in this country so far will furnish some two shillings a head to these poor creatures. Need we say more?

The state of the weather is forcing itself on the attention of the most insouciant. The potato crop is, we fear, going; the harvest is bad; and a very short time will determine whether the wheat is to be a failure also or not. All Bishops and Cuntes seem to have found out that the time has really arrived for using the prayer for fine weather.

COURTING NEWS.

A new Coroner's Court for Liverpool was opened in Dalestreet on Thursday.

The corner-stone of a new chapel belonging to the Methodist New Connexion was laid last Saturday at Dukin, Glossop.

Mr. Bell's Bank, Newcastle, the Tyne Bank, Tilbury, and Southend line, was drowned by the upsetting of a sailing-boat yesterday week.

Colonel Percy Herbert, who is said to have received the appointment of Governor-General of India, has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds, and a new writ has been issued for Ludlow.

The colossal statues of Sir Earl Grifon and Lord Stowell have arrived in Oxford. They are intended to be placed in the new library of University College, of which society the illustrious brothers were members on the foundation.

A collision occurred on Tuesday between two engines on a single line of rails on the Caledonian Railway, between Beattock Bridge and Moffat, a distance of 22 miles. The driver of one of the engines was killed on the spot, and the latter was seriously injured.

Last Saturday afternoon a pleasant open-air entertainment was given to the school children belonging to the little village of Cramond, near Edinburgh, by Sir Lyon Playfair, Deputy Chairman of the Commissioners of Police, in the grounds of Cramond House.

On Tuesday morning two men, named Charles Coward and John Rajph, were sounding the shaft of the Whitcroft Silkstone Colliery, which has been recently isolated by a fire, preparatory to the commencement of a conducting-rod, and they remained in awful suspense for ten minutes, when he was drawn up. His companion was found dead.

The statue of Dr. Isaac Watts at Southampton, his native town, has been commenced. It will be erected in the public park in July next, on the anniversary of his birth. The figure is to be seated in a chair of Sicilian mosaic, and the pedestal of polished Aberdeen grey granite. The total cost will be nearly twenty feet.

A public banquet in connection with the Galway line took place at Roebuck House, Stillorgan, on Saturday, the Lord Lieutenant being present. Mr. Lever, M.P., who was loudly applauded, detailed the history of the Atlantic Steam Company's connection with the line. The success of the line is sufficiently evidenced by Mr. Roebuck, M.P., chiefly upon the desirability of a new route between Ireland and the Continent.

Two parochial school fêtes have within the last few days taken place at Hoohampton Park, belonging to the Conservative Lord Sandys—first, at the annual assembling of the children of the parochial school, and subsequently of those in the parish of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, to the great enjoyment of the young people, who were treated to a banquet in tents.

The completion of the large warehouses and other important works erected by the Tyne Railway Company, for including and increasing the coal and goods traffic at Tyne Docks was celebrated last Saturday by a dinner, which aggregating all railway speeches were made by the railway officials and representatives of the coal trade.

SUICIDE AT FROME.—A fresh catastrophe has occurred at Frome, where a respectable woman has committed suicide. She was at one point of being married, the banns being in, when he destroyed himself: and his betrothed, after the first shock was over, found that she had involved herself on the ground that she had already taken an excursion ticket. The unfortunate woman was found in the river Frome, and it is supposed she threw herself whilst in an unsound state of mind from continued intemperance.

A YOUNG HERO.—The Rev. Mr. Hedgeland, of the Royal Humane Society, was on Thursday week presented to William Slattery, fourteen years of age, by Reuben Green, Derwent, Cumberland, for his gallant exertion to save life on the evening of November 20, 1859. He ascended twice to a window on fire in a lodging-house at Keswick, in Cumberland, at first time bringing out two infant children, and the second their mother, all of whom were overcome by the smoke, which he inhaled to excess. The children did not long survive, but their mother recovered. We are informed that about £8 was raised by the inhabitants of Keswick, and handed to the Benevolence Corporation at the time the above-named testimonial was presented to him.

OPENING OF THE PEOPLE'S PARK AT HULL.—The ceremony of formally opening the new park presented by Mr. Alderman Thomas Ferens took place on Monday in the presence of from sixty to seventy thousand people. The proceedings commenced with a procession of the mayor and corporation, which left the Townhall at one o'clock, and consisted of the Mayor of Hull (T. Thompson, Esq.), the Sheriff (J. Wilkinson, Esq.), Lord Hotham, M.P., Lord Wenlock, Lord Ashley, M.P.; the Hon. Evelyn Ashley (private secretary to Lord Palmerston), Sir Frederick Smith, M.P., Sir James Clark, Bart., and Sones, Esq., M.P., and others. The Mayors of several boroughs were also present. The Sheriff then read the proclamation, declaring the park a recreation public bolles of the town, including the Hull Dock Company, Trinity House, the municipal authorities, and the East India Company, with the Captains and officers of H.M.S. Cumberlia, the Shipwrights' Society, and the order of Ingineers. Afterwards the Mayor and party proceeded to the Royal Infirmary, the hall of Oddfellows, Foresters, Druids, Coopers' Association, &c. Volunteer riflemen and artillery, and the Hull Rifle Brigade accompanied the procession on the most attractive feature in the procession. The military bands of the Worldron Royal Artillery and the Hull Rifle Brigade were in attendance, and nearly twenty other bands. All along the route the houses were gaily decorated with flags, banners, emblems, &c., and the streets were thronged with spectators. The whole was conducted in the most orderly manner. Upon arriving at the park the Mayor ascended the dais overlooking the lake and the Hull Local Board of Health. The address to the Queen was read by Alderman Ellis, and the address of Lord Hotham, M.P.; Lord Wenlock, the Lord Mayor of York; James Clay, Esq., M.P., Joseph Sones, Esq., M.P., and a few others. His Lordship afterwards planted the first tree, which was a Wellingtonia gigantea—the emperor of all the trees. The Sheriff then read the address to the Emperor Napoleon on the day's fête, then came off. The reviewing officer was the Lord Lieutenant of Yorkshire, Lord Feversham, accompanied by his staff. Various movements were put were executed with considerable skill and precision, and called forth the hearty approbation of the thousands present. The review took some time, and was concluded by various manœuvres, which kept the interest of the fête up until the close. The volunteer artillery were afterwards entertained with luncheon at the Hull Citadel, and the volunteer rifles at the rifle barracks in Anlaby-street. Seven hundred of the volunteers were accommodated in a tent erected near the park. In the evening the Mayor gave a banquet at the Royal Station Hotel to between 200 and 300 noblemen and gentlemen from different parts of the country. Some of the officers of the various corps taking part in the review also dined with the Mayor at the Victoria Hotel. During the evening a grand torchlight procession paraded the town after the manner of the Scottish Highlanders. The fête was continued on Tuesday. In the afternoon two aseo trees were planted in the park—one by Master Pearson (the Mayor's son), and another by Miss Pearson. The ceremony was witnessed by a large company, including the Mayor, Mr. W. D. Seymour, M.P., the Mayor of Scarborough, &c. Various amusements were indulged in during the day, and the Pearson Park fête will be an event long remembered by the inhabitants of Hull.

Prince and Princess Frederick William have accepted the invitation sent by the town of Stettin, and will be present at the entertainment to be offered to them on the 16th of September, on the return of their Royal Highnesses from the sea-baths of Putbus.

THE COURT.

The Court continues to enjoy the relaxation afforded by a residence in the Highlands.

On Tuesday morning the Queen, accompanied by the Prince Consort, Princess Alice, and Princess Helena, drove to Loch Ballig, and rode round by Glen Muick and Invercauld. The Princess Arthur and Leopold went to Loch Muick. The Royal dinner party included Lord and Lady John Russell, and the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert.

On Wednesday morning her Majesty accompanied by Princess Alice and Princess Louise, drove to the Linn of Muick, and rode up the Cuin, returning by the route by Birkhall. Her Majesty honoured Sir James and Lady Clark with a visit. The Prince Consort went out deerstalking.

On Thursday morning her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Louise and Prince Leopold, rode with the Prince Consort to the Mead of Mar, where his Royal Highness met Prince Arthur, attended by Major Elphinstone, R.E., went to fish in the Golden.

On Friday morning her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by Princess Alice and Princess Helena, drove to the Derrie Seat; rode to the top of Mitch Dale, and visited Loch Vean on their way home. The Royal party left Balmoral at half-past nine a.m. and returned at ten in the evening. Prince Arthur and Leopold drove to Loch Callater, attended by Major Elphinstone, R.E. Princess Louise drove to the Linn of Dee.

On Saturday last her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Alice and Prince Arthur, and attended by Lady Macdonald, drove round by the Bridge of Dee and then walked round by the Dhu Loch to the Queen's Cairn, and back to Balmoral through the Dalloch Pluie. The Prince Consort went out deerstalking.

On Sunday the Queen, the Prince Consort, and Princess Alice attended Divine service in the parish church of Crathie. The ladies and gentlemen of the household were in attendance. The Very Rev. Dr. Barclay, Principal of the University of Glasgow, officiated. The Prince Consort's birthday was celebrated privately.

On Monday, at an early hour, the Queen held a Privy Council. The Prince Consort, Prince Arthur, Prince Leopold, the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, attended the Council. At a later hour in the day the Queen, accompanied by Princess Alice, and attended by the Hon. Caroline Byng, left the castle for Ah-an-Guisech, where her Majesty remained until Tuesday. The Prince Consort went out deerstalking, and joined her Majesty at Ah-an-Guisech in the evening. Princesses Helena and Louise rode to the Garr-a-vait.

On Tuesday the Queen and the Prince Consort, with Princess Alice, returned to Balmoral.

Their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz and Prince Frederick Adolphus left Osborne Friday last for Dover, and embarked on the following day for Ostend, en route to Germany, their sudden departure having been occasioned by the illness of the reigning Grand Duke, the uncle of the Duchess, who is in his eighth year.

Their Royal Highnesses the Crown Prince and Princess of Wurtemberg, and her Imperial Highness the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, accompanied by Count G. Stroganoff, honoured the Baron and Baroness Brunnow with their company at dinner on Monday evening at Chudleigh House.

Their Royal Highnesses the Count de Paris and the Duke de Chartres returned at the close of last week from a Continental tour, and have since joined the Countess de Paris and the Queen of the French at Claremont.

The Duke and Duchess of Somerset gave a déjeûner to a distinguished company on Saturday last, at his Grace's official residence in Whitehall, in celebration of the marriage of Miss Helen Percy, youngest daughter of the Right Hon. Sir James Graham, Bart., M.P., with Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Burnaby, which ceremony took place the same day in St. Peter's Church, Pimlico.

The Right Hon. the Speaker and Lady Charlotte Denison have left town for Ossington Park, Notts. The right hon. gentleman goes to Scotland for grouse-shooting with the Duke of Portland having placed his hunting-box at the Speaker's disposal.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mrs. Gladstone have left London for Hawarden Castle, Flintshire.

Sir Robert Peel, Bart., M.P., who arrived at Drayton Manor on Saturday from York races, has since passed through town on his way to join Lady Emily Peel, his wife, at the Lake of Geneva.

Colonel Burnaby has taken his departure for Syria.

PROGRESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

THE tour of his Royal Highness in the Lower Provinces of North America was concluded at Fredericton, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, which colony received its name after Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, father of our Queen. The Prince reached St. Charlotte Town on Wednesday, the 10th ult. "The day was stormy and wet, but he was nevertheless received by a great number of the inhabitants, who had come from distant parts, and had to camp out for lack of accommodation. The arrangements for the reception were good. The Prince landed under right Royal salutes from the ships and battery. He proceeded on Queen's-wharf by the officers of the Government, members of the Council, the bar, the clergy, and deputations of prominent citizens. He was conveyed in the Governor's carriage, and accompanied by a procession along the streets, which were lined by the 17th Volunteer Battalion. Numerous triumphal arches were erected, and the enthusiasm was very warm. The reception was considered a complete success.

Lord Mulgrave accompanied the Prince from Nova Scotia, as also did a grand of honour of Artillery.

His Royal Highness on the 11th held a levée at the Government House and afterwards proceeded to the Colonial-buildings and received an address from the Legislature. To this he made a suitable reply. The day was finer than when he landed, the enthusiasm greater, and the ladies numerous.

At one o'clock the Prince and suite embarked for Gaspé, the forts firing salutes, and the ships manning their yards, as did also the French frigate Possesse.

On Sunday afternoon, the 12th, the Prince reached the shores of Canada, arriving at Gaspé, where he was met by the Lieutenant-General of Canada and his Cabinet. He remained for the night, and proceeded westward the next day.

Admiral Milne and a portion of the West Indian squadron arrived at Quebec on the 17th. The squadron of the Prince arrived there on the afternoon of the 18th, and was received with a salute from the men-of-war, the citadel, and the town. The shipping were dressed with flags and their yards manned. Illuminations and the streets of the houses were covered with spectators. The scene was very animated. The city was crowded by visitors from all parts of the Province and possessions and the United States. Great enthusiasm prevailed. [We give an Illustration of Quebec on page 211.]

Extensive preparations were made at Montreal for the entertainment of the Prince.

There is one manifestation of Canadian loyalty which may be overlooked, but nevertheless deserves kindly notice. We refer to a resolution which was arrived at by a convention of coloured men, held at Toronto on the 2nd ult., that they would present an address to the Prince as an expression of their gratitude for the liberty which they enjoy under British rule.

A meeting of the most prominent merchants, bankers, and others, of the city of New York, on the 14th ult. at the Merchants' Exchange Bank in Wall-street, to adopt measures for giving an appropriate reception and welcome on behalf of the people of New York to the Prince of Wales, on his visit to that city.

Preparations are being made by the Government and citizens of Bermuda, which, it is expected, the Royal Squadron will visit on his way home, to receive the Prince in an appropriate manner; the Assembly appropriating £1000 to defray the expenses.

The Great Eastern is thrown open for public inspection at Milford Haven. She will sail from this port for New York on Wednesday, October 17.

It is announced that the directors of the United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Company have made arrangements from which they anticipate being in a position to establish cheap telegraphy between London and some of the more important seats of commerce within a few months of the present date.

PRESENTATIONS TO CLERGYMEN.—Last Saturday evening the parishioners of St. Peter's, Oldham-road, presented their Rector, the Rev. F. W. Davis, who is about to leave Manchester for Stroyd, with a silver salver, and tea and coffee service, together with a purse containing £100, as a testimonial of the respect which they entertain towards him.——The Rev. W. H. Ryde has been presented with a pocket communion service, and an elegant silver font for the administration of private baptism, from the congregation; and a gold pencil-case from the Sunday-school teachers, on resigning the curacy of St. James's, Wolverhampton.

THE PROGRESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES IN BRITISH NORTH AMERICA.—HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS LANDING AT HALIFAX.—FROM A DRAWING BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 203.

S LANDING AT HALIFAX.—FROM A DRAWING BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 205.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

The closing hours of the abnormal Session of this abnormal year of storm and rain were marked by the same features as have characterized it all through. Within, the fast, never-ending, patter of tongues, and, without, the fast, never-ending patter, of watery drops, the rivalry of flow, was preserved to the extreme moment—still the same persistent lawyers and Irish members, few in number but strong in voice and gifted with a continuity of producing nothings, which not all the reticence or all the patient longsuffering of enforced Government officials could meditate or silence. Happily, however, an inference intervened by means of which that admirable mode of cutting Parliamentary knots—counting out—was rendered available, and so early closing was perforce adopted, and the "chambers beyond" quenched at seven or eight o'clock in the last two or three evenings of the sittings. It was on this wise. The purveyor of the means of restoration, looking to the reduced number of members who were left to swallow his viands and drink his sounding corridors, dispensed with the aid of his artistic corps, fell back on kitchenmaids, and, copying the condition of the notice-paper, reduced his bill of fare to the vanishing point of a single dish and a single incapability to minister to the higher tastes of representative palates by spreading only one or two tables in the long area of the refreshment-rooms, and himself took to standing listlessly about the lobby in an unemployed attitude, and with a pensive abandonment of all careful thought, marked by the expression of his countenance. Hence the departure a little before seven of that body of gentlemen who generally delight to dine and digest at the House, and to a readiness to answer the summons of the electric-bells, and who have been designated by a metaphor-loving metropolitan member "the subterranean phalanx." Thus, when a red from Mr. Brand, Speaker, by a singular attraction of gravity, was the unexplainable whipper-in for some apparently inextricable spot in the ceiling of the House, has been given to a grootinduced senator, who, gliding up to the table, with a word or two to Mr. Speaker, in the act of putting on to cover behind his chair—notwithstanding the unusually loud clatter of the surrounding footsteps—that the door of the House is open to admit more than one persevering lingerer in the halls that late were resound with talk and echoing now and then with laughter; and the consequence of such a reminder is effected in a manner which is represented by the presence of, say, twenty-three members in the House.

Some few episodical events have nevertheless broken this which was the established order of things last week. In the first place, the Speaker came out in quite a new style as the vindicator of the privileges of the House. In one of the bills—that for the amendment of the constitution of the Ecclesiastical Courts—which had been passed by the Lords, their Lordships, whether by accident or design—who can say?—chose to omit the clause which referred to the scale on which the fees, salaries of certain officials appointed by the bill, and thereby took on themselves the sole right of the Commons to dispose the contents of the initiating money according to their own idea. Mr. Speaker saw this. This caught the eye of Mr. Hennessy, a member who has gone up in the world as a skyscraper, and who has never ceased to supply the latter part of a proverbial expression which has taken its origin in the quiet and downward movement of the water-work. He brought the matter publicly before the House, and the Speaker not only delivered himself in good, set terms of his opinion on the question of privileges, which was received with loud forth the warm applause of the House, but, in the interval between that and the consideration of the amendments of the Lords, privately took steps to communicate with the officials of the Upper House, and was able to state that something very like an apology had been made on the part of the Lords, and a promise of not offending in the like manner again duly made. From every part of the House there was sympathy in the current which led to Lord Palmerston's bringing in a bill to stop his passage and decisive conduct; and so nearly universal has since become the feeling that we have not heard a word of any organized movement on the part of the Lords on the financial privileges of the Commons that, when a pendorous vindicator of the rights of the representatives of the people a day or two after the commencement of the reopen the vexed subject of the Lords and the excise duty on paper, even the member for Oldham—the legal, not the Irish, one—found himself in a position to rebuke the watering-place legislator, and to assure him that his grievance had been reduced to the shadow of a shade, and his speech to his constituents more or less dull in its reduced impulse and virtuous indignation.

On one of the latter days of the week last week a few members had assembled before the House met. To them entered hurriedly another, who delivered himself of tidings thus:—"Up in the Lobby of the Lords Lucy Evans is absolutely going to bring on a motion pledging the House to fortify Woolwich, and to begin the fortification at the earliest day this evening, at such a point as may be decided, and such a House as there is sure to be?" The answer was prompt and to the point: "Then he shall be counted, as he richly deserves ingly, about seven, when every mortal thing on the paper of business for the evening was happily disposed of, up rose the veteran, placed his spectacles on the top of his head in a manner to which began to discourse on the probable routes which an invading army would take on reaching the soil of London. Some of the members was not there to suggest that a few line-of-battle ships should be brought up whence by the Surrey side of the river Waterloo and the Secretary for War was at Balmoral, and there were ten members in the House—nine on the Treasury bench, and one lurking on the Opposition side, and he spoke to the latter. He did not address the Speaker, and his purpose carried out in a few minutes. The inevitable "count" came, and Woolwich was left to the mercy of Lucy Evans for another year.

The next night was Friday. It was known that there was to be a sitting on Saturday, in order to enable both Houses to bottle up, or to shovel away—whichever phrase is most appropriate—the remaining bills; and on the formal adjournment Mr Monsell was asked by the Government. But one member to whom long immobility is a habit, and who, for some reason which is not very intelligible, has been for nearly twenty years ago, he wrote a book of Eastern travels; who has promised to produce an account of the Crimean war about this period when, according to Dr. Cumming, all wars and wonders are to be wound up; and whose exhibitions as a member of Parliament cause some people to decide that he could have been the original of so much jocularity as the book of travels in question contains), has been exalted into a quasi-authority on this affair, had prepared a few remarks on the same words on that topic. No one who has not seen can conceive the exceeding self-complacency with which this gentleman, assuming a Napoleonic attitude, has been proudly displaying here his hands, and his eyes staring into vacancy, delivers himself of his platitudinous commonplaces. Now, in the course of this speech he had made allusion to Syria, he alluded, in terms which he meant to be catching, to the book of travels aforesaid; but it was a miserable fiasco. The House came, and it seemed as if those of his hearers who had received entertainment from the perusal of the book in question felt that as much human capabilities allowed by having listened to the senatorial speeches of the author. The Government which had been given by a most worthy and good-natured gentleman who combines the two pursuits of building and Parliamentary activity, was seized by another governance-monger, the last one of the ex-Secretary and ex-Under-Secretary faction, who remained at the post which he rose to his maximum of power in the most presentable hour of his Parliamentary existence this year. But even he was not to be considered: for he knew that when he lurked there was a question on which there could be debate, to be put by a gentleman on the Opposition side, whose capacity for bringing forward every subject under the sun is immeasurable: who can talk sensibly, straight on, without moving any muscles but those of his mouth—without changing his monotone for one instant—and who always answers, by a curious infelicity, to rise exactly at the moment when everybody else wants to have done. Notwithstanding that Lord Palmerston jumped up, and by answering all that had been said endeavoured to cut short the discussion, the model member, it talk to the criterion of fitness, went calmly in for his speech as if nothing had happened to warn him of the fate which fell upon him in five minutes in the shape of "Question, question!" and Lord Palmerston had to arrange that the adjournment should be moved from that day (Saturday) to the following Tuesday. A count out was, therefore, impossible, and Mr. Darby Griffith—for why should his name be withheld from the fame that attaches to him?—quietly rose when everything had been settled, and, having pulled to his heart-content the many which occurred to him, and had the honour of running the long, long, weary Session to earth.

For on Tuesday, by some contrivance, the House had hardly met, and the last lingering Irish member had scarcely time to say a word or two, when Black Rod came—Sir Augustus Clifford, in full dress and gold, and, gleaming with stars and ribbons, shook his portentous black rod three times at the Speaker, who ordained a message to be sent to the other, and summoned the House to the Upper Chamber in that curt and imperious tone, tempered by elaborate bows, which, since the loss of Mr. Raymond Barnes, has been displayed by no one but him alone for the new functionary who officiates in the absence of Sir Augustus—Lieutenant-Colonel Gold. Colonel Gold, with great timidity in his mode of giving the usual invitation to the Lower House, went to the Lords to hear the Royal Assent signified by the avenging Commons, and held as hostage until these privileges outraged by the Lords had been vindicated. In the House of Lords, Lord Cranworth, in the Queen's robes, sat in splendour by the absence of the Queen, and retaining only its ludicrous side by the appearance of the Lords Commissioners in their ermine-fully-worn robes, and their funny cocked hats stuck on in all sorts of directions. Lord Cranworth, the Individual Commissioner—as conducted by Lord Campbell, as Chancellor, in the most remarkable way. Somewhere he seemed to think that the Royal Speech was something in the nature of a sentence for a capital offence to be passed on the Speaker at the bar, standing in custody between his own Sergeant-at-Arms and Black Rod, and in the Lords' custody; and Mr. Brand there compared hat all awry on his large wig, so that he looked like the picture of Captain Macheath when singing "How happy could I be with either" were he not privately pulling at the cord which he delivery reached to the very lowest depths of bathos. When the Speaker returned to the House the Speech from the Throne was passed to exist, so that he comes in as a private individual, unattended by the Serjeant and unadorned by the mace, which has mysteriously disappeared; and Mr. Evelyn Denison, as he walked up the floor, off the official dignity of his step, wrapped his gown carelessly around him in such a form as to be easily taken for a dressing-gown by any from him, and with a smile that spoke of liberty and free air, said in a pickish manner to one of the Irish members, who was standing near, that the assembled members the speech they had just heard elsewhere—because that was the regular way of telling them that the Session was over.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—SATURDAY.

The Spirits Bill, Savings Banks Bill, Ecclesiastical Courts Amendment Bill, the Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill, the East India Loan Bill, the Sports Grounds Bill, the Appropriation Bill, the Public Works Loan Bill, and Roman Catholic Charities Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Lunatic Asylums (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill was read a second time and agreed to.

The only bill to which there was an objection to agree to the Commons' amendments was the Newspaper Stamp Abolition (Ireland) Act Bill, which was moved by the Earl of DESART, but they were agreed to by 7 to 6.

The House adjourned till Tuesday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—SATURDAY.

The only order was the consideration of the Lords' amendments to the Customs Duties (Ports) Act Amendment Bill.

Lord PALMERSTON, in moving the adjournment of the House to Tuesday, called attention to the state of the business of the Petitions. The number of petitions presented this year was 14,264, which the Chairman of Committees had to examine. Of these 1,000 had been examined, and selected 1087 petitions for printing. The names of the Committee were:—Sir John Pakington, Chairman; Mr. Bernal Osborne, Mr. Ayrton, Mr. Cardwell, Mr. Hennessy, Captain Grey, Mr. Hunt, Mr. Miller, Mr. Hastings, Mr. Russell, Mr. John Stuart, Mr. Hankey, Mr. Dillwyn, Mr. Hadfield, Mr. Bentinck, Mr. Bass, and Mr. Ker Seymer. The committee for the preparation of daily services, and alluded to the examination of petitions for private bills, which was to be left to the Chairman of Committees.

A number of subjects were briefly discussed on the manner of the motion for adjournment on Friday evenings; after which the House adjourned to Tuesday.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

The Royal assent having been given to several bills by commission, the usual speech from the throne was delivered by commission, which the Lord CHANCELLOR reading the Royal Speech, the prominent parts of which were the announcement that the Queen had visited the country, Affairs in Italy, the proposed conference on the cession of Savoy and Nice, the Syrian expedition, and the cession of the five ports. Powers to raise money for the Chinese war, the supplies voted for the public service, and the provision for the Volunteer Force. The Militia Ballot Suspension Act, the Volunteer Forces in India Bill, and the more important Acts of the Session: Issue of Exchequer-bills, Customs Duties (Ports), Savings Banks, Spirits, Ecclesiastical Courts, Mr. Hunt, Mr. Miller, Mr. Hastings, Mr. Russell, Mr. John Stuart, Mr. Hankey, Mr. Dillwyn, Mr. Hadfield, Mr. Bentinck, Mr. Bass, and Mr. Ker Seymer. The committee for the preparation of daily services, and alluded to the examination of petitions for private bills, which was to be left to the Chairman of Committees.

The Lord CHANCELLOR then, by virtue of the commission, declared the Parliament prorogued to Thursday, the 6th day of November.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

THE PROROGATION.

The Usher of the Black Rod summoned the House, shortly after it had assembled, to the House of Lords, for the purpose of hearing the Queen's Speech prorogating Parliament.

The Speech having been delivered by several hon. members, then proceeded to the House of Peers.

The Speaker on his read her Majesty's Speech, and announced to the House that Parliament had been prorogued until Tuesday, the 6th day of November.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The Lord Bishop of Oxford purposes to hold an ordination in the parish church of Aylesbury on Sunday, the 23rd inst.

Miss Macpherson Grant, of Aberlour, has devoted £1000 to the building of a new church at Archiestown, Morayshire.

The confirmation of the election of the Very Rev. Dr. Henry Montagu Villiers (brother of Carlisle) to the bishopric of Durham took place in York Minster yesterday week.

The parish church of Edenbridge, Kent, was reopened on Tuesday week, after restoration and enlargement. Divine service by Archbishop of Canterbury preached the sermon from Psalm xl. 4.

The fine ancient parish church of Pershore is to be erected a church the plan of which will be an exact copy of that in Westbourne, Sussex, the birthplace of Swaton.

St. Peter's church, Mosley-street, the interior of which has undergone a thorough painting and decoration, is to be reopened for Divine service on Sunday next, September 2.

Renfrew parish church is on the eve of being replaced by a new church. Services, for the last time, will be performed in the old church next Sunday forenoon.

A memorial window, in memory of the late Colonel Hambley, the Bulle Brigade, has just been placed at the east end of Spaxtonv Church, Hunts.

The consecration of the Protestant and Clergy of the province of Canterbury was appointed on Thursday last by the Archbishop of Canterbury, 23rd of October.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—Canonries: Ven. J. Jones, Archdeacon of Bangor, to Bangor Cathedral; Ven. H. W. White, Archdeacon of Merioneth, to Bangor Cathedral. Livings: Rev. J. Bell, to Brooksby, Leicestershire. Vicarages: Rev. T. A. Smith, to Tunbury, Worcestershire; Rev. F. Watkins, to Bridstowell, Yorkshire. Chaplaincies: Rev. F. J. Maule, to the Dorset County Lunatic Asylum; Rev. F. G. Salt, Curate of Heydon, Norfolk, to the Marquis of Townsend. Perpetual Curacies: Rev. W. E. Burkitt, to All Saints' Charlton, near Salisbury; Rev. B. Cassia, to St. George, Battersea; Rev. F. W. Harnett, to St. George the Martyr, Wolverton, Bucks; Rev. G. J. Robinson, to Gorton, Lancashire; Rev. R. C. Weston, to Buslingthorpe, Lincs. Curacies, &c.: Rev. T. Bourke, to St. Paul, Warwick, Cheshire; Rev. T. Hughes, to Wigan, Lancaster; Rev. R. R. Williams, to Smallwood, Cheshire; Rev. C. Green, to be Missionary Secretary for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts for the Diocese of Bombay; Rev. E. J. Haynes, Bucksland Monachorum, Devon, to be Organising Secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel for the Archdeaconry of Totnes.—Guardian.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

On Tuesday afternoon the Commissioners appointed by her Majesty to prorogue Parliament took their seats shortly after two o'clock. The Commons having been summoned, the Speaker, with a few members, appeared at the bar, and the Royal assent having been given to some public and private bills,

The Lord Chancellor read her Majesty's Speech, which was as follows:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"We are commanded by her Majesty to release you from further attendance in Parliament, and at the same time to convey to you her Majesty's acknowledgments for the zeal and assiduity with which you have applied yourselves to the performance of your important duties during the long and laborious Session of Parliament now about to close.

"Her Majesty commands us to inform you that her relations with foreign Powers are friendly and satisfactory; and her Majesty trusts that there is no danger of any interruption of the general peace of Europe. Events of considerable importance have, indeed, taken place in Italy; but no foreign Powers interfere therein, and if the Italians are left to settle their own affairs, the tranquillity of other States will not be disturbed.

"The proposed conferences on the subject of the cession of Savoy and of Nice to France have not yet been held. But her Majesty confidently trusts that, in any negotiations which may take place, full and adequate provision will be made for securing, in accordance with the spirit and letter of the Treaty of Vienna of 1815, the independence and neutrality of the Swiss Confederation. That neutrality and independence were an object to which all the Powers who were parties to the Treaties of Vienna attached great importance, and they are no less important now than when the Treaties of Europe were framed.

"Her Majesty commands us to assure you that the atrocities which have been committed upon the Christian population in Syria have inspired her Majesty with the deepest grief and indignation. Her Majesty has therefore cordially concurred with the Emperor of Austria, the Emperor of the French, the Prince Regent of Prussia, and the Emperor of All the Russias, in entering into an engagement with the Sultan, by which temporary military assistance has been afforded to the Sultan for the purpose of re-establishing order in that part of his dominions.

"We are commanded by her Majesty to inform you that her Majesty greatly regrets that the differences between her and the Viceroy of Egypt and Pasha of Egypt in China made it necessary to have recourse to hostilities.

"Her Majesty has received from her cordial assent to the Act for amalgamating her local European force in India with her forces engaged for general service.

"Her Majesty trusts that the measure for freedom which you have given to commerce will tend to fresh development of productive industry.

"Her Majesty has given her ready assent to several measures of great public usefulness.

"The Acts for regulating the relations between landlord and tenant in Ireland will, her Majesty trusts, tend to secure fertile cause of disagreement.

"The Act for amending the law which regulates the discipline of her Majesty's Navy has established salutary rules for the administration of justice on board her Majesty's ships, and will conduce to the efficiency of the service.

"The Act leaving upon endowed charities will give means for a less expensive administration of the property of charities, and for the speedy and economical settlement of disputes respecting them. By the Public Worship Facilities Act, relief has been afforded to her Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects with regard to their burial in consecrated ground.

"Several other Acts have been passed for legal reform which must lead to the more satisfactory administration of justice.

"Her Majesty commands us to call your attention the spirit of loyalty, of order, and of obedience to the law, which prevails among her subjects, both in the United Kingdom and in her colonial possessions; and her Majesty has witnessed with heartfelt pleasure the warm and affectionate reception given to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales by her North American subjects.

"You will, on returning to your several counties, have duties to perform scarcely less important than those which have occupied you during the Session of Parliament. Her Majesty commands us to express her fervent hope that Almighty God may attend your efforts, and guide them to the attainment of the objects of her constant solicitude—the welfare and the happiness of her people."

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

Hon. John Fortescue: The Hon. John William Fortescue, of 11 Grosvenor-square, Baron and M.P. for Louth, and of Dromisken, Co. Louth, Ireland, P.C.—made his will on the 12th of September, 1859, whilst residing in Madeira, appointing as executors his brother Viscount Ebrington, M.P. for Plymouth for many years, and latterly for Marylebone. The personalty was sworn under £14,000. The testator bequeathed to his brother Viscount Ebrington, the Hon. Dudley Francis Fortescue, M.P. for Andover, a fifth interest in the Clonmel and Carlow Railway, and to his brother Viscount Ebrington, C.B. The remainder of his property he directed to be settled on the legatees of a minor nature, but the bulk of them are given to different members of his family and to servants. The testator bequeathed to his nephew Lord Ebrington £15,000, and there are two important bequests in the will—namely, £4000 to the Bishop of London for church endowments in the Bishop's diocese, and £500 for church and educational purposes in or near Castle-hill, Devon. The residue of his property he gives to his brother, Viscount Ebrington.

Sir W. Horne: The will and three codicils of Sir William Horne, Knt., Q.C., late recorder of Bristol, and M.P. for Wycombe, Bucks, have been proved, Sir Thomas Henry Hall Caine, Mr. Thomas Hall Caine, the younger, son, and Henry Reptons, Esq., barrister, Lincoln's-inn, the executors. The will is dated 1855. The property is sworn under £35,000. The testator bequeaths personally amounting to £10,000. Sir William has directed his son, the Rev. W. Horne, to convey certain property marriage settlement and other covenants. The will is entirely of a family nature, and the benefits to be derived therefrom are confined to his numerous children. Sir William was twice married, and ultimately died a widower, at the age of eighty-seven.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY, GREENWICH.

Lat. 51° 28′ 00″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above sea 51 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF						THERMOMETER.		WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours.
	Barometer corrected.	Temp. of Air.	Dew Point.	Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Ozone.	Highest.	Lowest.	General Direction.	Movement in miles.	Inches.	Hours.
Aug. 22	29·670	54·4	54·4	100	10	3·6	57·6	52·6	S. S.W. W.	281	Mean 0·281	Mean 3·1
23	29·847	54·1	53·1	91	7	4·0	62·2	49·1	W.S.W.and W.	317
24	29·774	53·5	50·9	100	10	3·9	60·2	47·9	S.W. and W.	339	0·479	4·6
25	29·719	57·3	55·9	95	9	3·9	62·9	50·1	W. and S.W.	433	0·238	2·3
26	29·809	57·2	55·6	96	9	3·9	62·9	50·1	W.	433	0·59	0·8
27	29·849	57·2	49·6	77	5	4·0	63·9	48·9	S.W.	216	0·000	0·0
28	29·764	57·4	51·1	81	6	3·9	64·0	47·9	S.W.	325	0·000	0·0

The following are the readings of the meteorological instrument for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (to inches) corrected	29·[illegible]	29·[illegible]	29·[illegible]	29·715	29·841	29·842
Temperature of Air	58°	57°	57°	60°	58°	58°
Temperature of Evaporation	51·[illegible]	51·[illegible]	51·[illegible]	52·[illegible]	52·[illegible]	52·[illegible]
Direction of Wind	W.	W.	W.	W.	W.	W.

A temporary building, in the course of erection at Toulon, for the purpose of a grand ball to be given by the Emperor, fell down with a great crash, a few days ago, killing three and wounding fifteen of the workmen.

LITERATURE AND ART.

Now that we have had the "Lives"—very excellent ones they are—"of the Queens of England," and of the "Princesses of England," and of the "Mothers of Great Men," and of "Kings' Pools," might it not serve the purpose of one of our industrious writers of biographies to collect materials for the lives of personages who had once been Kings, but had fallen from their high estate? Story there is certainly a book called "Monarchs retired from Business," by Dr. Doran, but we don't hope to have had the pleasure of perusing that particular emanation from the doctor's prolific pen. We put our question for the simple reason that we think a very amusing life of Richard Cromwell, ex-Protector of England, might be written. If Doctor Doran has already disposed of that most inoffensive of usurpers, tout pis pour nous and tant mieux pour lui; but if Richard's biography yet remains to be indited we trust that the chronicler will not object to anecdote concerning him which bears somewhat on our gallant young Albert Edward's triumphal progress in North America. We mean the story of the "Lives and Fortunes of the Good People of England." Richard, be it remembered, according to a green old age as a jolly country gentleman. He could give and take a bottle; ay, and "t'other bottle" too; and whenever he got unusually elated it was his delight to conduct his guests to a dingy little parlour under the roof of his house, where, bestriding an old hair trunk, he would declare that he was sitting on the "lives and fortunes of the good people of England." Pressed for an explanation, Squire Richard would open the trunk and produce a huge quantity of parchment and paper rolls, decorated with seals and ribbons, and containing, in the fairest and tidiest of engrossing hands, all the addresses offered up to him by the universities, corporations, and other public bodies during his brief exercise of regal power. Orb and sceptre and other vanities he had let go by him with a shrug, but he religiously preserved those monkly addresses, all of which assured him that the "lives and fortunes of his subjects were at his command."

Our fair young Prince of Wales has, we hope, a long and glorious career before him. What a collection of "lives and fortunes," in the shape of addresses, he may make if he only begins early. His trip to the loyal "blue noses" of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick alone would supply him with engrossed paper and parchment sufficient to fill a dozen hair trunks. We have been at the pains of studying the text of these addresses, and it is wonderful to see how little the genuine corporation flavour has suffered by transmission across the Atlantic. The pabulum for composition, however, must be given to the address from Windsor, and the second prize to a most sensible, manly document from a stout little town called Handsport.

The House Secretary has done a graceful thing in the appointment of Mr. T. J. Serjeant to the post of stipendiary magistrate. Mr. Serjeant has long been one of the Cyclops attached to the thunderbolt department in Printing House-square, and is, we believe, the author of the curious series of humoristic papers in Once a Week entitled "Diverse Views." The excellence of making justices of journalists was established more than a hundred years ago, and Harry Fielding, as a "stipendiary," by his zeal and shrewdness, utterly put to shame the Justice Overdones and Shallows. Though Fielding's name is not in the Continental tour on the doings in the Kursaal at Baden-Baden, Mr. Spurgeon, it appears, knows all about roulette and trente et quarante, and discoursed most learnedly thereupon to the astonished crowded hall at Exeter. Why shouldn't he? Who doesn't recollect Rowland Hill's terrible "playbill" which he put forth in opposition to the performances at the Richmond Theatre; and upon what familiarly mundane occasions did old Hugh Latimer, from his pulpit at Paul's Cross, wont to discourse? One of Mr. Spurgeon's critics, commenting upon the fact of his having preached in "full canonicals" in the "Cathedral" at Exeter, observes that the Dissenters are a "Calvinistic meeting-house," not a cathedral—a correction which is the converse to Edmund Ould's rejoinder to the adversary who accused him of having been tossed in a blanket by the Lancashire witches, "Nay, nay, quoth Edmund, "for it was in a rug."

Apropos of the famous Westminsterian seminary, the deliberations of the committee of "old Westminsters" formed to consider the question of the erection of a new school in the neighbourhood of the quarters, do not seem likely to lead to any immediately tangible result. The religio loci continues to be urged against any project of trans. plantation. "Shall Busby rest" might with equal force be urged as pleaded against suburban cemeteries, and in favour of the perpetuation of intramural interments. Meanwhile Dr. Busby's renowned "sieve for scholars" languishes, and one of these days a select committee of "old Westminsters" meeting to renew their annual dinner will, ex officio, reminiscate, will find that the "young Westminsters" have flown away altogether. Sic itur ad astra—and so Eton, Rugby, Harrow, and so forth.

We are on classic ground, and ere we, too, migrate we have a word to say concerning Horace:—not Mayhew, this time, nor Greeley, nor Vernet, nor he who, nor Nephelo—but the old, original Q. Horatius Flaccus, Esq., my Lord Macenas's very good friend. A new edition of "Horace," text, translation, and notes, has just been put forth by Jules Janin, the lively feuilletoniste of the Journal des Debats. It was of J. Janin's youth, we believe, in early life, to wander over parts of France in their humanities; and now, at mature age, he has returned to his pre-eminent study. Theodore Martin and Sir Stephen Glynne, Bart., for J. J. is a ripe scholar as well as a brilliant critic.

The beginning of the number of Notes and Queries here these lines are published will be in its usual ninety thousand pairs of hands, contains an exceedingly curious article on "Thieves and Thieving." From the pen of a "working journalist," whose naïveté in talking of the time he "lived among the thieves" is suggestive of Oliver Goldsmith's simple-minded narration of the days "when he lived among the beggars in Axe-lane." The reverend writer in the Cornhill declares that his fellows in female sewage, by either word or deed, molested him during his intercourse with them. There is plenty of evidence to corroborate such a statement. Thieves can't be always thieving, and as a rule they behave well to those who treat them with kindness. Some years since a portion of the gorgeous scenery required for the Princes' Theatre during Mr. Charles Kean's management used to be painted in certain spacious premises, rented by Messrs. Grieve and Telbin, in a notorious little street, positively swarming with common robbers, close to Drury-lane. The scenic artists lived on bonne intelligence with the marauders, and not the slightest attempt was ever made to injure, insult, or plunder them. Another illustration this of the "Not so bad as we seem" theory of Sir Bulwer Lytton.

MUSIC.

In addition to Mr. Mellon's brilliant promenade concerts at the Floral Hall, this dead season is enlivened by another musical entertainment worthy of notice. The Pavilion Theatre, in Whitechapel, has been opened as an "Eastern Opera House;" and the manager's spirited speculation promises to be successful. Two companies have been engaged for the performance of operas in English and Italian, on alternate nights. The theatre opened on Monday last, when "Norma" was performed in English, the characters of Norma and Pollio being sustained by Miss Lascia and Mr. Stevens Bishop. The lady has considerable merit, both as an actress and a singer; and Mr. Bishop's performance was excellent. The chorus, the band, and the orchestra and chorus were highly respectable; the opera was well put upon the stage; and the whole entertainment was followed by a triumphant encore, with demonstrations of the utmost enthusiasm.

The great success of Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's highly-popular performances at St. George's Hall encouraged the pair to try others of a similar kind, the result of which is Mr. and Mme. Rédenbach's entertainment, called "The Happy Pair, Married a To-day and a Hundred Years Ago." With this entertainment these talented performers are making a tour in the provinces, previous to its production in the metropolis; and we observe from the local journals that it everywhere draws crowded audiences, and meets with a cordial reception. The subject of the entertainment may be gathered from its title. It affords room for lively pictures of society and manners at different periods, and for the introduction of a variety of old and new. Mme. Rédenbach is well known as one of the most accomplished vocalists of the day, and Mr. Rédenbach's comic delineations are full of spirit and humour.

THE THEATRES.

OLYMPIC.—A new and pleasant comedietta by Mr. Montagu Williams, entitled "Leap Year; or, Woman Proposes," has been produced at this theatre. The piece is founded on the old story of "Is Anybody Coming to Dinner?" The hero, a bachelor, who, besides being a gardener, is also a poet (Mr. W. Gordon), and the latter one Dobkins, who calls himself by the name of Dudley (Mr. H. Wigan). "The respective affiances of these two gentlemen form the basis of the piece. Leap Year fixes upon the Mabel Grey (Miss Louise Keeley)—and are under the impression that the said poor Mabel would be the only female visitor, in order to escape the consequences of a duel. The nobleman and Dobkins have, in fact, changed clothes, and the latter strait-laces the former, who, in consequence, faints. The result is that he gets confined, when the two ladies begin to pity his condition, and thus discover the state of their hearts. Mr. Wigan's performance in his part of the piece was not seen by Lady Vane, but only by Mabel Grey. Subsequently, however, the earl and he are seen together by the whole of the party explained, and the jealous emotions of Mabel, cleverly interpreted by Miss Louise Keeley, are happily concluded. The interest, slight as it is, is well kept up to the close of the piece now.

PRINCESS'.—"Macbeth" was revived on Monday, when Mr. James Anderson and Miss Edworthy appeared as the guilty Thane and his ambitious wife. They were enthusiastically received. The latter lady was remarkable for the debut of Miss Marie Harris, the manager's daughter, who sustained the character of the hereditary bondswoman, Lady Macduff. The part is not, and anxious father, to whom Mr. Wigan gave so much celebrity, was performed by Mr. Harris, who made a considerable hit in it. We saw the peculiarities of the character, and acted with extraordinary effect.

NEW ADELPHI.—On Wednesday Mr. J. L. Toole, whose low comedy talent is so well known to the public, made his first bow in his first benefit at this theatre. "The Willow Copse" and "That Blessed Baby" were the pieces performed. He was received enthusiastically by a numerous audience, and we are happy to record his perfect success.

THE FARM.

ACCOUNTS from the northern parts of France and Europe speak of the same unfavourable weather which has made agricultural England look for worse. Hawick in Scotland is nearly 50 miles distant from the wheat in Mark-lane on Monday. The astro-meteorologist has been diligently surveyed by Sirius and his satellites, from the Dog-star down to us with Herschel and the Moon, and hint darkly at "some unknown power" as the cause of the failure of their fine-weather predictions. We, ourselves, in the case of last year, have to the discomfiture of 1859, when in some districts the harvest lasted eleven weeks, and barley was carried from the 20th of November, for being carried in March 1860. The sun shines and the glass goes up a trifle as we write, and there is nothing for it but hope and trust. If the weather comes to the rescue, there is a magnificent harvest in the Northern and North-Western States of America to fall back upon; and in Pennsylvania the crops are said to be unusually heavy, and the yield very large.

The principal show since our last has been the Halifax and Calder Vale Agricultural Society's meeting on Saturday, which was held on nearly swept the board. Mr. Eastwood carried off the first prize in the cow class with Rosette, but Mr. Ambler had the honour of bearing off the prize for the best cow in the yard. Mr. Thomas Gaukrodger (the rather Mr. Atherton's) Moss Rose won this cup last year, and Mr. Ambler's Rosette was second. Among the Shorthorns, those who recently presided at the Isle of Man show speak highly of the stock they met with there.

Next week will be an unusually stirring one in Lincolnshire. Mr. Vesey lets 140 of his pure Lincoln at Hallon, near Spilsby, on Monday; and Mr. Dudding's flock, at Fulnetby, will be sold on the 6th. Mr. Dudding has flocks of lowgoods on Tuesday; Aylesby Manor, near Great Grimsby, is the big-bred Lincoln sale on Wednesday; Mr. James Kirkham lets his longwools at Biscathorpe, near Louth, on Thursday; and then Mr. Strafford's voice will be heard in the hilly-wolds of Lincoln. The Ancaster Show, which was held by D. Dixon's, near Caistor, on Saturday. An agriculturist might, therefore, spend a week in a round of visits to the best flocks and studs, and wind up with blood stock at Doncaster. Mr. Dixon's herd consists of fifty-three lots, and Colonel Cracroft's Hackthorn herd to present to the public. The catalogue acknowledges to ninety-seven head, and about fifteen Sir Roger calves have been dropped since it was printed. The herd had its origin at the sale of the Collings, with whom Mr. Dudding's father was a contemporary, and Mr. Dudding made his first essay in 1825, when he bought Mr. Colling's Red Rover. Belvidere 4th and Tyne Blue succeeded; and Alamode, in 1833, commenced that South line which has been carried on in unbroken succession ever since. Bandsman, Eighthye, Alamode 2nd, Bandsman, and Vanguard, and latterly by Prince Alfred, Welcome Guest, and Sir Roger. The Alamode branch of the Ancaster herd, which, however, was bought from here; and five other Baron Warlaby heifers, which averaged 80 guineas each. Mr. Dixon's Lincoln are numerous, at least a dozen cows left of this blood, and nineteen granddaughters as well. Other great herds will be well represented in the sale ring. The Squire has just done full justice to seven Baron 3rd's, and Mr. Dixon's Lincoln herd contributes its quota through Superior, and Kirklevington through Bandsman and Grand Duke. Lennymore, Leonard, Kalafat, and Bramhead keep alive the remembrance of the Fawsley pastures and Arbuthnot's Sylph; and the Bow Bell blood, of which Mr. Dixon's herd is so famed so much at Mr. Chaloner's in vain has not been overlooked. Messrs. Heasman's Southdown "sale of ewes, and letting, and sale of rams," at Aspenden, Buntingford, is for the same day, and also at the Saturday Mr. George Harding, of Durweston, sells twenty-seven head of pure-bred Hereford heifers and a yearling bull in the Dorchester Auction Mart, on Tuesday, September, 18. Among them is the two-year-old in-calf heifer Bearwing, which won first prizes this year at Dorchester, Canterbury, and Cork, and the bull Prince Frederick, who was first at Canterbury and second at Dorchester, with several of his stock. The shearling Leicester ewes, which gained prizes everywhere on "the grand tour" with Bearwing, are also to be sold, along with some three hundred ewes and pure Babbity and Hall Compound Secret. Looking further ahead, we have an announcement from Mr. Wetherall, for October 5, of the sale of the Benhill Place shorthorn herd, near Sandy, which has lately brought back a first-prize winner from the Dublin spring meeting. Mr. Strafford will be busy at Duckington House, near Workington, in Cumberland, on the same day, with Captain Spencer's sale, which includes the well-known cows Lizzy, Leda, La Valliere (dam of Arabber's Prince Tallaynah), Costanetto, the prize-winning heifer Miss Kitty, Wild Eyes 28th, Young Ben, the first-prize winner at Dublin and Penrith, &c., and fifteen others of carefully-selected blood. Although this herd has been only established for a short time, the purchases and hirings have been on a very spirited scale, and the latter comprise Booth's Welcome Guest, and the Lady Fragrant bull. The sale of Mr. R. W. Ashburner's shorthorn herd at Low Hall, near Ulverstone, has been fixed by Mr. Strafford for the 12th of October. There are cows in it from several of the principal herds, and next year's calves will be all by Mr. Booth's Duke of Oxford. The Eighth Duke of Oxford has been hired from his Grace the Duke of Devonshire by Mr. Saunders, of Nunwick, who has just sold a bull-calf by Nunwick from his Lady Fragrant to Mr. Wm. Torr, of Ford Hall, Lancaster. Nunwick is not likely to lose sight of the favourite strain in the formation of his new herd, in the young "Mecassin" is quite as near an approach to it as he could get.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

A woman was killed last week at Dalston by falling in her room with her head between the rails of a chair, one of which, pressing on her throat, caused death.

On Thursday week John Burnham, employed in the yard of Messrs. Green and Sons, Deptford, as carting plate with a traveller propelled by a power of about seven tons, when he fell under the heavier, and was dreadfully crushed on the stomach and head, killing him on the spot.

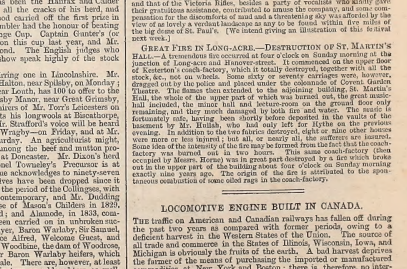
The Builder states that a plan is under consideration for a new street communicating from Coventry-street, passing south of Leicester-square, and to the eastward of the Alhambra, terminating about midway at the back of the National Gallery, and in a line with King William-street.

A Parliamentary return gives the total of donations, bequests, &c., towards reducing the National Debt, given since 1829, as £676,956 8s. 6d. The total amount received in 1859 was £67 15s. 6d. from Mr. Alderman Wilson-Patten, M.P. for Cheshire, in 1853; and among the donations are eleven of £1000 each from the late Baroness Langdale, between the years 1853-59; and £9,500, in 1859, anonymously from Paris.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Last week the births of 837 boys and 819 girls—in all 1656—were registered in London. In the 28 corresponding weeks of the years 1850-59 the average number was 1561.—The deaths in London during the week ending the 18th of August had been 1,016. In the week that ended last Saturday, the deaths of last week were less by about 200 than they would have been if the average rate for the latter week of August had prevailed. Slight nonsequences died in the week, all, we hope and believe, unchristened.

THE NEW FLOWER MARKET IN COVENT-GARDEN.—Last Saturday the temporary building erected at the expense of his Grace the Duke of Bedford, the best of the many which have been erected in London, was opened. It is situated at the south-east angle of Covent-garden, between the Bedford Arms Tavern and Tavistock-street, the former being in the line of the new building from the Strand, which is rapidly progressing. The interior flowers, vases, and ornamental trees have been arranged by the tasteful hands of Messrs. Veitch and Sons. The present temporary structure is only intended to be used during the present season, when a more permanent building will be erected, the architecture of which will be in perfect keeping with that of the fruit and vegetable market.

THE MURDER AT STEPNEY.—The Government has offered a reward of £100 for the apprehension of the murderer of the servants of Messrs. Wilson, Brandon, and Co., and a free pardon to any one who may have been privy to the crime, short of the actual murder, if it was actually committed. Mr. Whitaker and Mr. Faith, two of the relatives of the deceased by marriage, have offered a reward of £50 each for the discovery of the murderer. The inquest on the body was resumed on Monday, but no evidence calculated to throw light upon the murder was elicited. After the examination of several witnesses, the Coroner said there was other evidence, but it was not in a state at present to be laid before the jury, and he should therefore adjourn the inquiry until Friday next.



THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—The Select Committee of the House of Commons on the British Museum has reported; and published, the proposal of cutting up the great national collection into quantities on the grocer's or the Jacob Hinckman principle, for the convenience of the public. The experiments of ethnography, and the portraits and drawings, are the only portions which it would commend to the public eye. The Committee of Trustees express a preference to erecting new ones at Kensington, Victoria-street, Westminster, or Burlington House, rather than enlarge the present building. The plan of delivering lectures explanatory of the several collections it rejects as inconsistent with the purposes of the institution, which are to be carried on entirely with an educational establishment, but a "great" library and reading room.

RAGGED SCHOOL FESTIVAL AT MUSWELL-HILL.—On Tuesday, a gathering of between 400 and 500 children of some of the London Ragged Schools on the estate of the Muswell-hill Palace Land Company, but the witness of the proceedings, with the exception of the managers, the hon. Secretary, and a party he ascribed to the uncertain state of the weather on the evening before, interfered until the afternoon, when the sun shone out, and between two and three vans taken out there by the Great Northern Railway, and a pretty large assemblage of visitors, including the contributing vicar, Mr. Sumner, Mr. Hornsey, and Hilgrove, appeared on the ground, where a few booths and tents had been set up for refreshments, and the band of the Coldstream Guards, and that of the Victoria Rifles, besides a party of vocalists who kindly gave their gratuitous services, attended to amuse the company. A public subscription for the discomforts of mud and a threatening sky was afforded by the lucky of as twenty or thirty pounds, and the sum of £50 was raised at the end of the big dome of St. Paul's. (We intend giving an illustration of this festival next week.)

GREAT FIRE IN LONG-ACRE.—DESTRUCTION OF ST. MARTIN'S HALL.—A tremendous fire occurred at four o'clock on Sunday morning at the junction of Long-acre and Castle-street, which destroyed the entire floor of Kesterton's coach-factory, which it totally destroyed, together with all the stock, &c., and a portion of the roof and upper portion of the premises, dragged out by the police and placed under the colonnade of Covent Garden Theatre. The flames then spread to the adjoining building, St. Martin's Hall, the whole of the upper part of which was burned out, the great musical hall included, and the roof in places fell in. The fire was not fully got under remaining, and they much damaged by both fire and water. The stock of the Kesterton's cabs, hansoms, &c., was also destroyed, and the whole of the basement by Mr. Hollis, who had only left for Hythe on the previous evening. In addition to the above-mentioned premises, several other houses were more or less injured; but all, or nearly all, the occupiers of the premises had the interest insured. It was ascertained at an early hour that the coach-factory was burned out in two hours. This said coach-factory was occupied by Messrs. Kesterton, and was a great depository for many of the best coaches put on the upper part of the building about four years ago, and was considered to be one of the finest in London. The fire is attributed to the spontaneous combustion of some oiled rags in the coach-factory.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINE BUILT IN CANADA.

THE traffic on American and Canadian railways has fallen off during the past two years as compared with former periods, owing to a deficient harvest in the Western States of the Union, the failure of the trade and commerce of the States of Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Michigan is obviously the fruits of the earth. A bad harvest deprives the farmer of the means of purchasing the goods and the agricultural commodities at New York and Boston; there is, therefore, no interchange of commodities between the interior and the coast of America, and always connecting those distant points suffer the loss of traffic. In like manner passengers either cannot afford to travel or have no business to call them away; and the manufacturers of the railway companies show the result in diminished receipts. The Great Western Railway of Canada is no exception to the general railway misfortune. As a matter of course, during these slack times the expenses of the line were considerably curtailed, the company having, at Hamilton, Canada West, very ample and well-appointed shops for repairing locomotives, and also many clever workmen, the directors took advantage of the unemployed time to get rid of those skilled mechanics in preparing by degrees the various portions of a large locomotive engine, assisted by the tools and machinery in their own shops, and the result has been that at the beginning of the present year an engine of great power and beauty of workmanship was finished and put upon the line, and several more are being paid for out of the current income. The engine is named the "George Stephenson." The cylinders are 16 inches in diameter, with a 24-inch stroke. The total heating surface, by an ingenious arrangement of the firebox, is 1248 superficial feet; and there is this difference between this and the other engines on the line—namely, that it is adapted to burn either coal or wood, the latter being the fuel ordinarily employed. Every endeavour has been made to ensure the best workmanship and materials, both for economy in first cost and for subsequent repairs. All old materials have been worked up anew; thus, the framing is made from old scrap iron about the works reforged by steamhammer; the inside and outside connecting rods, and the valve motion, are made from worn-out Lowmoor tires; the piston-rods and sidebars are made from old and broken springs: and the cylinders are cast from broken cast-iron car wheels, which is the best metal that could be had for the purpose. The driving-wheels are six in number, coupled by threes, five feet in diameter. The tender holds nearly 2000 gallons of water. Altogether, she (as engines like ships are of the fair sex) does great credit to her designer, Mr. George Forsyth, who, in the engraving, stands under the tender, with his hands in his velveteen jacket—a true specimen of the English mechanic, and also to the indefatigable locomotive superintendent, Mr. Richard Eaton, formerly on the London and South-Western Railway, who stands, like a captain of a ship, on the footplate of the engine. It will be observed that a roof covers the footplate where the engine-driver and stoker usually stand, rendered necessary from the inclemency of the winter and from the heat of summer. This roof is provided with sliding windows, so that access may be obtained to the outside of the engine when in motion, and there can be no sufficient reason why locomotives in this country should not be furnished with a similar contrivance, and thus enable the driver to keep a better look out than he can do in the teeth of a driving storm. The personages round the engine represent the principal employés in Canada—Mr. W. C. Stephens, the secretary in Canada; Mr. A. Ayres, mechanical draughtsman; Mr. G. H. Mangaye, the paymaster; Mr. C. J. Brydges, the managing director, standing on the engine; and Mr. Thomas Reynolds, the financial director—all in winter costume.

MR. P. W. GATES, ONE OF THE DIRECTORS. MR. T. REYNOLDS, FINANCIAL DIRECTOR. MR. BRYDGES, MANAGING DIRECTOR. MR. G. H. MONCATA, PAYMASTER. MR. R. EATON, LOCOMOTIVE SUPERINTENDENT. MR. W. C. STEPHENS, SECRETARY IN CANADA. MR. G. FORSYTH.

THE "GEORGE STEPHENSON" LOCOMOTIVE ENGINE BUILT AT HAMILTON, CANADA WEST, FOR THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY OF CANADA.

GARIBALDI AT THE FARO POINT, MESSINA, RECONNOITRING THE FORT TORRE DI CAVALLO, CALABRIA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

OUR Special Artist in Sicily writes from Faro Point respecting the above Illustration as follows:—"The General never misses going at least once a day to the Faro, which is eight miles distant from Messina. Here the strait is only a mile and a half wide, and batteries are being constructed to reply to the guns of the Torre di Cavallo fort, situated exactly opposite. The batteries are exceedingly simple but very strong; they are formed of breastworks of sandbags, with the sand of the shore levelled up to them. All along the water's edge are drawn up the boats composing the flotilla which is to take us across on the first dark night. Each of these boats will hold ten men, besides six rowers; some are having platforms nailed over all, on which will be placed the cannons and horses. The truce expires this evening (August 6), and I presume we shall begin to exchange compliments immediately with the Torre di Cavallo and the Neapolitan cruisers watching for our embarkation."

THE PARIS FASHIONS FOR SEPTEMBER.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 208.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE fearfully wet state of Knavesmire has made nearly the whole of the York running a riddle which it will be the boundless duty of Dante exactly to solve. Still the rain was not without its good, as the lack of grass and the discomforts of yachting tempted many a devotee away from the heather and the Solent to try his luck in the magic circle. Such was the occasion to the Grand Stand funds and the improvement in the list under the new Johnnian regime that it has been decided to have four days in future; and thus the North, with its York and Doncaster, may at least proudly challenge competition, both as regards extent and quality of sport, with the Ascot and Goodwood of the South. As regards liberally added money, they have long since left their more pretentious rivals hopelessly in the rear. For the St. Leger Dundee (7st.) met the three-year-old Magpie (8st.), and defeated her after a dead heat, was one of the greatest flukes that the turf has seen for many a year. Not so much use was made of the Derby crack, and he was heavily spurred on one side to get up in the last stride, whereas, to say, the many never used the weight in the decisive heat, but allowed the Derby crack to enter for half a mile, and then, when he did force the pace, she never could overhaul him. Doncaster gave Mr. to Colonel Townley's Kettle Drum in the Convivial, but the chestnut, who got a wretched start, ran his way in general, at a very moderate pace, and then, after a fine race from the Stand, by a neck. The public were astonished at the performance, as they did not expect to see such a thoroughbred home get through the duty, and the stable did not back him because he had been defeated in his trial. As another proof of the glorious uncertainty, he came out on Friday, and was not only beaten by the Phœnix colt, which had no chance with little Cave colt Gardener as well. Sir Charles Monck's colt Gardener, by Cotherstone from Lady Gay, is evidently a very fine one, and will be heard of. He is a bay colt, by Cotherstone from Lady Gay, and was got by Gardener from Lady Gay, and was got by Gardener from Lady Gay, and was got by Gardener

NEW BOOKS.

ILLUMINATED by OWEN JONES and DIGBY WYATT.—PARADISE AND THE FIEL from the Divine Comedy of DANTE ALIGHIERI. The work will consist of 24 Large Designs, and it is intended to form the most elegant and splendid gift-book for the ensuing season which has yet emanated from the art of chromo-lithography. Issued by DAY and SON, to suit 42 Illustrations. Subscribers' names received by DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

Part I. on the 1st of September, 1865.

REISSUE of BRITISH GAME BIRDS AND WILDFOWL. By BEVERLEY R. MORRIS, Esq. In Monthly Parts, price 5s. each, containing Four Autotype-Coloured Plates.

London: GROOMBRIDGE and SONS, 5, Paternoster-row.

TUSCHEL'S GERMAN READING-BOOK, on an entirely new principle. A story by Franz Hoffman, literally translated word for word, and Elementary Grammatical Exercises, by Dr. M. M. Tuschel, German Master at Harrow School. "Mr. Tuschel's method is a decided improvement."—Athenæum. "A great improvement in the art of teaching."—Western Times.

D. NUTT, 270, Strand; and Bolton's, Berners-street.

New Boy's Book.—Price 5s., with 700 Engravings, pp. 448, gilt,

THE ILLUSTRATED BOY'S OWN TREASURY. "Best gift-book for boys ever produced."

WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, price 5s., with Map and Illustrations, demy 8vo,

HEALTH RESORTS OF BRITAIN; and How to Use Them. By THOMAS THOMSON, M.D.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, fcap 8vo, boards, fancy wrapper, price 2s.,

THE DIARY OF A DUDE. Compiled from the Notebook of a recently-deceased Judge.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

NEW NOVELS.

UNDER A CLOUD. By FREDERICK and JAMES GREENWOOD. 3 vols. post 8vo. This day.

THE RADDINGTON PEERAGE: Who Won It? Who Wore It. By G. ROBERTS SALA. 2 vols. post 8vo, 21s.

CAMP LIFE. By Captain WILLIAM WRAXALL. 1 vol. 10s. 6d.

London: J. and R. MAXWELL, 32, Millman-street, Bloomsbury-square.

On Sept. 1, Illustrations by M'Connell, Kenny Meadows, H. G. Hine, and Phiz, and Photograph, 1 vol. 8vo, 15s. cloth extra, gilt edges, MISS BROWN. By ROBERT B. BROUGH.

Just published, by the same Author, with 20 Illustrations by Phiz, MARSTON'S WIFE. By R. B. BROUGH.

This day, price 1s. Illustrated by Phiz,

ULP THE MISFITTE. By R. B. BROUGH.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

On September 1, price 3s. fcap 8vo, fancy boards,

JOHN JONES SYDOWN; or, the Confession of a Thief. Written by Himself. Revised by Thomas Littledale Author of the "Stirring Christmas."

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Now publishing, Second Edition, 1s. 6d. each, Parts I. and II. of

THE DRAUGHTSMAN'S BOOK OF INDUSTRIAL DESIGN. A complete series of Mechanical, Engineering, and Architectural Drawings. By WILLIAM JOHNSON, Assoc. Inst. C.E., Editor of the "Practical Mechanics' Journal." Part I. contains Practical Geometry. Part II. Projection, representing Wood Engravings, and thirteen Plates of Architectural Drawings. "The most practical work of the kind we have seen."—Editor, Office of the Patentee, 47, Lincoln's-inn-fields; Glasgow: 166, Buchanan-street.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE. No. 9 (for SEPTEMBER) is now ready. Price One Shilling, with Three Illustrations.

CONTENTS:—

The Four Georges: Sketches of Manners, Morals, Court, and Town Life. By W. M. THACKERAY. Illustrated by the Author.

Chapter I. XVII.—Dullness.

" II. XVIII.—Wit and Humour.

Physiological Riddles. III.—Living Rivers.

Framley Parsonage.

Chapter XXX.—Non-Inquiries.

" XXXI.—Mr. Crawley.

" XXXII.—Sir Hugo Mostyn

NEW MUSIC.

D'ALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLE, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival. A fine Quadrille on the most favourite of Moore's "National Melodies." Beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival, on the favourite song of "Kathleen Mavourneen." "The Waltz of the season." Beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S GARIBALDI GALOP, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival. Splendidly illustrated with a Portrait of this great Chief by BLANCHARD JERROLD. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S LILY OF GRAY VALSE, with Portrait Accompaniment. Now at last published. Beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES or ST. JAMES'S GALOP. Just published. Beautifully illustrated with a Portrait in Colours of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by HAYDEN. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CAMPBELL MINSTRELS' QUADRILLE. Just out. Introducing "Lilly Gray" and other favourite songs given by them. Beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for ORCHESTRA. Just published. Victorian Vales, Victorian Quadrille, Vales, Tyrolean Mazurka, Kathleen Mavourneen Vales, Nelly Gray Vales, Campbell Minstrel Quadrille, St. James's Galop, Derby Galop, Prince of Wales's Galop, Lily of Gray Valse, Erin go Bragh Quadrille, Garibaldi Galop, Polka, Erin go Bragh Quadrille, Arranged for Full Orchestra. Subscribers' names are requested. Catalogues of this popular Composer's works may be had gratis and postage free on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FASHIONABLE DANCE BOOK for PIANOFORTE, containing the Fifty Quadrilles, Valses, Polkas, Galops, Stratheisters, Varsovianas, &c. Composed by CHARLES D'ALBERT, Price 2s. Also, the Fifty Dances, Edited by FRANZ NAVA. Price 2s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S STANDARD DANCE BOOK for PIANOFORTE, containing the most favourite Dances, Horn-pipes, Reels, Jigs, Strathspeys, Highland Flings, Sailorns, Sword Dances, &c. Arranged by FRANZ NAVA. 1st price, 6s. 6d. As CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA, just published, a brilliant Fantasia on this favourite Air by the above popular Composer. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. Fantaisie Lete Song. Composed by the Hon. Mrs. NORTON. Transcribed with Taste by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARD'S NELLY GRAY, the favourite Song, with Pianoforte Accompaniment, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and cheapest of all Instruction Books—containing all the most popular tunes, exercises, and a great variety of the most popular Dances arranged as Lessons. Sixty pages, price 2s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

N.B. A List of Brinley Richards' Popular Tunes will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NEW SPECIFIC FANTASIAS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

KUHE'S 12th FANTASIA (DINORAH), Op. 64.
KUHE'S Two Fantasias from LES PROPHÈTE, each 4s.
KUHE'S LUCIA, 4s.
KUHE'S DON GIOVANNI, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE JUVENILE ALBUM.—Just published, A SELECTION of FAVOURITE MELODIES Arranged for the Pianoforte by CHARLES D'ALBERT. Price 2s. 6d. Nearly ready, Book II. Twenty-six Tyrolese Folks Marches (D'Albert)
1. Overland Mail Galop (D'Albert)
2. Robert tu que j'aime
3. Casta Diva (Bellini)
4. Vieni Meco (Bellini)
5. Sig Bor Polka
6. Lily of the Valley Valse (D'Albert)
7. Bob Cherry
8. Bella Donna Mazurka (D'Albert)
9. Bride Valse (D'Albert)
10. Bacio, bacii
11. Bacio, bacii
12. Carnival of Venice
13. Lilies of the Valley (D'Albert)
14. Trovatore Grand March (D'Albert)
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

PRINCE GALITZIN'S SURPRISE POLKA and HERZEN VALSE, as performed at the Floral Hall and at the Pavilion Festival, are published at CHAPPELL and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

THE BELLRINGER. Sung by Mr. Santley, the most beautiful Bass Song by WALLACE. The Bass Song that has created such a sensation at the Monday Popular Concerts; &c. &c., is now ready. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHEAP WORKS for various INSTRUMENTS.

Price 5s. 6d. each.

VIOLIN.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Second Violin Part to Ditto.
Ban Part to Ditto.
Chappell's Operatic Airs.
Chappell's Operatic Airs for Violin and Violoncello.
Alto. 100 Scotch, 100 Irish, and 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.

ENGLISH CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Alto. 100 Scotch, 100 Irish, and 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.

GUITAR.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's Popular Songs, with Guitar Accompaniment—2 books.
Chappell's New Book of Guitar Duets.

FLUTE.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Popular Songs.
Alto. 100 Scotch, 100 Irish, and 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.

CORNET-A-PISTON.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Alto. 100 Scotch, 100 Irish, and 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.

CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 50 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 50 Secular Melodies.

GERMAN CONCERTINA.
Chappell's Popular Songs, with Guitar Accompaniment—2 books.
Songs, and Dance Music.
CHAPPELL'S New Book-street.

CHAPPELL'S POPULAR INSTRUCTION BOOKS. Price 1s. 6d. each.

Violin.
Flute.
Cornet.
English Concertina.
German Concertina.
Pianoforte.
Harmonium.
Clarionet.
Harp.
Violoncello.
Guitar.
Baritone.
Bassoon.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S BRASS BAND JOURNAL. Edited by CHARLES COOTE (Royal Marines). Terms of subscription, 21s. 3s. per annum (twelve numbers); single copies, 2s. each. The Journal contains, in addition to the Quadrilles performed by the Royal Marines, Waltzes, Polkas, Galops, Dance Music, &c. &c., and is specially adapted to Amateur Bands, Rifle Corps, and Yeomanry Cavalry. Six Numbers are now ready, including a selection from Wallace's "Lurline." Subscribers' names received at CHAPPELL and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

SPEED THEE, MY BARK. Duet for equal voices. Written by Mrs. J. BOUCHER. Composed by PASQUALE ELLERTON. Price 3s. BOOSEY, HAWKES, 135, Cheapside, and 6, Mill-street.

WILLIAMS'S 100 DANCES FOR THE VIOLIN. Williams's 100 Popular Songs for the Violin. Arranged by HUGH HIGGINGLLA. Price 1s. 6d. each. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Mill-street.

MERRILY OVER THE SNOW (Key of C). Sung by MADAME SHERRINGTON. Also, in Key of A, for Soprano or Baritone. Price 3s. each. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Mill-street.

THE QUEEN OF THE SEA. The popular Ballad. By J. SCHLOSSER. Price 3s. 6d. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Mill-street.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—Under this title Messrs. BOOSEY and SONS publish, at the end of next week, a new Series of Shilling Books, intended to embrace every description of Standard and Popular Music, for the Voice and Pianoforte, and adapted for every variety of taste.

Each book will contain from 32 to 48 pages of music, beautifully printed on fine paper (being the largest publication of the kind ever issued for a shilling), and the Nos. will appear at short intervals. Specimen pages of paper and types are now ready, and will be sent post-free to the public on application.

BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street, London.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—No. 1 MENDELSSOHN'S Six Original Favourite Songs by Mendelssohn, with English Words and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—BALFE. No. 2 contains Twelve Popular Songs by Balfe, including "The Great Town" and "The Light of Other Days." Price One Shilling. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—VERDI. No. 3 contains Fourteen Popular Songs by Verdi, with English Words and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—CHRISTY'S SONGS.—No. 4 contains Twenty of the most favourite Songs of the Christy Minstrels, with Choruses and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—WALTZES.—No. 5 contains Fifty popular Waltzes by Laurent, Disney, Gungl, Lamotte, Rudolphe, &c. Price One Shilling. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—CHRISTY'S SONGS.—No. 6 contains Twenty of the most favourite Songs of the Christy Minstrels, with Choruses and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET.—No. 7 contains Fifty Popular Waltzes by Laurent, Disney, Gungl, Strauss, Lamotte, Rudolphe, &c. Price One Shilling. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE BALLROOM MUSIC-BOOK will be published next week. Price 1s., superbly bound in crimson cloth, gilt edges, containing 50 Waltzes,
50 Polkas,
50 Galops,
12 Quadrilles (complete),
12 Lancers,
12 Varsovianas.
By all the most popular Composers of the day, including D'Albert, Laurent, Tyrer, Lamotte, Rudolphe, Gungl, &c. &c. The Ballroom Music-book" forms a volume of Boosey's Musical Cabinet, and will be issued in monthly volumes, each containing 50 pieces of music, as ever published.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

COMPLETION of DINORAH in Shilling Parts.—Now ready, the Opera "Dinorah" complete, for Voice and Pianoforte, price 1s. 6d. net, in cloth boards. Also, in eight Parts, price 1s. each. Part 1 published. As the sale of Dr. Puth will be discontinued by the present month, Purchasers should not immediately commence with Part 2.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

100 OPERATIC GEMS for PIANOFORTE. Boosey's Musical Cabinet. Price 1s. Edited by CHARLES D'ALBERT, containing 100 pieces from all the newest operas, arranged for Pianoforte Solo, Duet, Trio, &c., and forming a splendid cyclopædia of operatic music. Third Edition.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

RAMSGATE SANDS QUADRILLE.—The most popular set of the day. Founded on favourite and well-known airs, illustrating the Sands in Ramsgate. Illustrated in colours. As RUNCKNALL. With a most superb Frontispiece, by BRANDARD. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

NOTRE DAME. Romance for the Pianoforte by CHARLES SEGHER. Romance for the Pianoforte by Purpose. Price 3s. Illustrated by Lody. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

KREUTZER'S 40 STUDIES for VIOLIN, new and perfect Edition, in 6d. Books 23 Overture or Studies, 24 Studies, 25 Studies, 26 Studies, 27 Scenes from Airs, with all the Variations, in 2 vols. 4s. each.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LAURENT'S SANTA LUCIA VALSE on Il Mian. Bordò-Musca's celebrated Song is published this day price 3s. net. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE MAZURKAS of CHOPIN, edited by J. W. DAVISON, complete in One large Volume, music size (150 pages), containing all the Mazurkas published by Wessel and Pottart, in Paris, and by Breitkopf and Hartel, in Leipsic, cloth, gilt edges, price 10s. 6d.

The "Athenæum" of July 28 says:—"This is a very handsome publication. The price is cheap, the page is clear, and the type is large enough to be read by gas-light. Every lover of Chopin should have these Mazurkas in a form in which he can analyse, as a conquered and well reasoned task."
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTE MUSIC.
Mabone Ouzy's Santa Lucia. 3s.
Kuhe's Secret in Flowers. 3s.
Jacker's Chelea on Village. 3s.
Kuhe's Fantasia on Lucrezia Borgia et Naples. 4s.
Kuhe's Fantasia on Lucia. 4s.
Brinley Richards' Shadow Air (Dinorah). 3s.
Brinley Richards' Coronation March. 3s. 6d.
Jacker's Thou art so Near. 3s.
Jacker's Dinorah Valse. 3s.
Price One Shilling each.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CHRISTY MINSTRELS' NEWEST SONGS, C. of 1860. The most recent provincial tour. Price 2s. each, post-free.
"Jamaica." Solo and quartet.
"She is coming with the spring." Solo and quartet.
"Lilly Gray." Solo and quartet.
"Old Dan Tucker." Solo and quartet.
"Once more, dear Annie, I return." Ballad.
Published by HEYLES and Co., 27, 28, and 29, Great Marlborough-street, W.

GARIBALDI POLKA. By T. BROWNE. Played with great success at the Hall Gardens. With a splendid illustration in Colours. Price 3s. post-free.
HEYLES and Co., 27, 28, and 29, Great Marlborough-street, W.

DAUSSOIGNE MEHUL'S SANTA LUCIA. "An effective and not difficult arrangement for the Pianoforte of this favourite Air."—Vide "Athenæum."
Published by HEYLES and Co., 27, 28, and 29, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SANTA LUCIA. By WILHELM GANZ. A brilliant and effective transcription for the Flute of this popular Air.
London: AUGUSTUS and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

NEW SONG.—THE BEAUTIFUL EARTH and OTHER SONGS. Composed by W. VINCENT WALLACE. The extraordinary success of the "Songs of the Seasons," composed by this gifted Composer, has suggested to Mr. Wallace the publication of "The beautiful earth for me," in fact published. It is one of the most charming Songs he has ever composed, and is both words and music of great originality.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—OLD FRIENDS AND OLD TIMES. Composed by W. VINCENT WALLACE. Price 3s. 6d. This is the first production of the distinguished Composer of the highly-successful Opera of "Lurline." It is written for Mr. Frank Bodger, and will be found a perfect gem by all ornithological Singers and Ballad Singers.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—THE DREAM OF OTHER DAYS. Composed by Miss LINDSAY SLOPER, Grenadier Guards. Price 3s. 6d. Colonel Percy Herbert, Grenadier Guards, sings "The Ballad." By J. SCHLOSSER. Price 3s. 6d. Mr. Frank Bodger is singing it with the most distinguished success.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

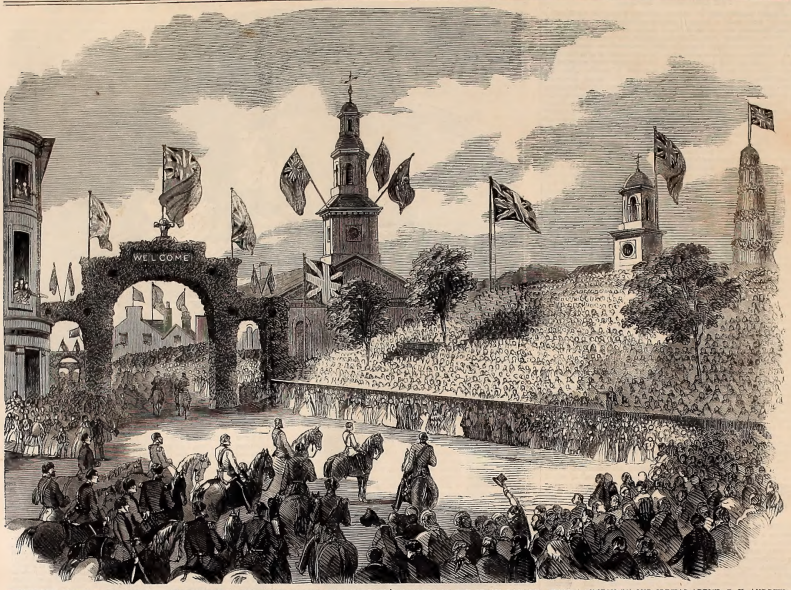
NEW MUSIC.

COOTE'S QUEEN OF THE HARVEST VALSE. Most Elegant and Effective. This popular set now ready. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s. Solo or Duet.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

MARRIOTT'S SCHILLER GALOP, price 3s. "An excellent Dancing Galop, and will doubtless become the favourite of the season."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SNOW-WHITE BLOSSOMS. New Ballad. Composed by GEORGE LINLEY. Sung at the London and Provincial Concerts with immense success; also by the Christy Minstrels. In Key of F and A flat. Price 3s. each. Beautifully illustrated. May be had with or without Chorus, price 3s. 6d.
EWER and CO., Musicsellers to her Majesty, 390, Regent-street, London.

KUHE'S FOUR LES ATTRAITS, a new and pleasing Morgeau de Salon by this popular Composer. Price 3s. 6d., just published.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.



ABRAHAM. Oratorio. By B. MOLIQUE, Esq. The Overture, Chorus, and Recitative, which is to be performed for the first time on the 20th of September, at the Norwich Festival, are published this day, price 3s. each. Also, the Air, "Sound an alarm," and the Solo and Chorus, "Thanks be to God," price 2s. each. The Pianoforte Score (complete and in single numbers). Voice Parts, and Orchestral Parts will be published on the 1st of October.
EWER and CO., Musicsellers to her Majesty, 97, Regent-street, London.

DA LIEG ICH UNTER DEN BAUMEN (Ich ruh' mir, my heart).
Mendelssohn's celebrated Song. By Miss Milnes Collins and Jenny Meyer. Sung by Madame Sherrington.
EWER and CO., 390, Regent-street, London.

O BEST IN THE LORD.—Mendelssohn's celebrated air from "Elijah." Transcribed for the Pianoforte Solo by OSBORNE. Price 3s. Just published.
EWER and CO., 97, Regent-street, London.

EWER and CO.'S UNIVERSAL MUSICAL CIRCULATING LIBRARY is now free to all members. This library, which embraces every branch of musical literature, is the largest in the world, and contains the works of every composer, ancient and modern. Terms, two guineas per annum. Town subscribers will be supplied with two guineas' worth of music at a time, and may exchange it as frequently as they please. Country subscribers will four guineas' worth, which may be exchanged twice a year. Catalogues, price 2s. 6d. each, may be had at the library, or will be forwarded on receipt of postage stamps; prize to non-subscribers, 5s. 6d. Subscribers will receive the Catalogue gratis on the first application.
EWER and CO., Musicsellers to her Majesty, 97, Regent-street London.

THE UNIVERSAL CIRCULATING MUSICAL LIBRARY is Patronised in England. The classified Catalogue contains upwards of 15,000 distinct Works, Foreign and English, and Prices are reduced to One Guinea per Annum. Subscriptions, with Terms, forwarded to Country Subscribers on One Guinea per Annum. Prospectuses

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN HALIFAX.—THE TRIUMPHAL PROCESSION PASSING THE CHILDREN'S GALLERY IN THE GRAND PARADE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.

PRESENTATIONS TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE, HALIFAX.—SEE PAGE 205.

THE CHURSTON SHIELD.

At a grand banquet held at Newton Abbott, Devon, on the 8th ult., a splendid testimonial of personal and political friendship was presented to Lord Churston, who, as Sir J. Yarde Buller, for so many years represented the southern division of that county in Parliament. The general style of the shield resembles that presented some time since to Sir J. Pakington, and, as a work of art, is quite equal to it in the richness and finish of the workmanship. The designs were supplied by Messrs. Ellis and Co., of Exeter, and executed in massive silver by Messrs. Elkington and Mason, of Birmingham. The shield, designed in the Renaissance style, is divided into five compartments. The centre group illustrates Justice supported by Britannia; one of the side subjects illustrates the landing of William the Third, Prince of Orange, at Brixham, Torbay, from an original drawing; another subject represents our export and import trade; a third illustrates agriculture, represented by various operations and implements of the most improved and scientific order; and the fourth illustrates the fine arts, represented by allegorical figures of sculpture, painting, and music. In each compartment, with a view to leave as little as possible of the field uncovered, are introduced subjects more symbolical of each subject—those of Commerce signifying Abundance; those of Agriculture, the Seasons; those of the Fine Arts, Inspiration or Genius; and those of the Landing of the Prince of Orange, Wave or Renown. Each subject is supported by figures holding the emblems used in the various groups represented. In the frieze are introduced four portraits of distinguished characters in the history of the neighbourhood (Sir Francis Drake, Sir Joshua Reynolds, the first Lord Exmouth, and Sir W. W. Follett), and eight figure holding laurels significant of their wide-spread fame. The shield is three feet three inches in diameter, and its weight is five hundred ounces. Immediately under the central group are the Churston arms; on the opposite side are the Buller arms, with the following inscription:—"John Buller Yarde Buller, Esq., nobly contested North Devon on Church and State principles, Dec. 22, 1832." In another compartment is the Yarde Buller arms, under which is engraven "Sir John Buller Yarde Buller, Bart., succeeded to the Baronetage, 1834. Elected M.P. for South Devon Jan. 13, 1835; August 2, 1837; July 1, 1841; August 31, 1847; July 16, 1852; March 30, 1857." On a fourth compartment is engraven "Sir John Buller Yarde Buller, Bart., M.P., raised to the Peerage of the United Kingdom, as John, Baron Churston, of Churston Ferrers, Devon, August 2, 1858."

The shield is enclosed in a native silver raised within the county of Devon. The cost of the testimonial was defrayed by a public subscription, which has rarely provided so splendid a recognition of political services and personal esteem.

SILVER INKSTAND RECENTLY PRESENTED TO MR. COSTA.

STATUE OF THE LATE LORD LYONS.

Mr. M. Noble, of Bruton-street, has just completed the model for a fine statue of the admiral Lord Lyons, to be executed in white Carara marble, intended to be placed in St. Paul's Cathedral—the result of a public subscription amongst the admirers of the noble and gallant deceased. The figure, which is about eight feet high, is remarkable for its strong and manly bearing, and is designed in the style of a peer, loosely thrown over the uniform of a British Admiral. In consideration of the noble Lord's eminent services in a diplomatic capacity, the left hand supports a scroll of paper, behind which appears a cepetan and anchor, exact models of those in the Royal Albert, the vessel which bore the Lordship's flag during his command on the Black Sea. The face is an original likeness, and is the result of actual sittings to the artist. We have great pleasure in giving in Engraving of this memorial to a truly brave and worthy public servant.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. HARVEY LEWIS.

A HANDSOME piece of plate has recently been presented to Mr. Harvey Lewis by a number of the electors and non-electors at Hull. The testimonial, which is adapted for the centre of a table or sideboard ornament, is formed into two flat trays, which are supported by a pair of four dolphins, and other marine emblems, having on each side a tablet, one bearing the name of Lewis, and the inscription following; the inscription as follows:—"Presented to J. Harvey Lewis, Esq., by upwards of one thousand electors and non-electors (chiefly working men) of the borough of Kingston-upon-Hull, as a small token of esteem for his unflinching advocacy of reform, and an expression of their confidence in his consistency of his political views.—Hull, August, 1860." From the base springs a graceful column, with arabesque ornaments, supported by two figures of Britannia, supporting the harp, the other blowing a conchshell. On the top of the column, resting on cornlock, is a silver shell of the nautilus form, on which six nautical figure of a sprite, and in its front a figure of the two admirably-executed basso-relievos, one representing the ship of Ulysses, the other Neptune in a car subduing the waves. The whole is most artistically executed, and is in every way creditable to the firm of Jacobs and Lucas, of Hull, who have produced it.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR SEPTEMBER.

IT seems almost an anachronism to continue to give summer fashions in a season in which usually commences the autumn. Such, however, is there may yet be in reserve a mouth or so of fine weather during which our illustrations may find a practical application. Although the months of June, July, and August have left us no unpropitious for the display of ladies' summer attire, we are far from saying that we have been found courageous enough to compare the inclemency of the past three months, and to don their novelties in spite of the state of the thermometer, which has rendered even the way the inconsiderate do not often hesitate to follow. Notwithstanding the prevalent cold winds Regalish and French lady travellers at the German watering-places have given the tone to society at Baden-Baden and elsewhere, in every variety of coiffure, from the now-common bonnet of reasonable dimensions down to the small aureola of straw without even a crown, which some of our countrywomen have introduced to the notice of their friends. All the so-called Paris Fashions are not essentially French; they are frequently merely the adaptation or the modification of foreign modes rendered, perhaps, in a more graceful form by the inventive skill of Parisian taste. Our Illustrations in this day's Number are somewhat remarkable for their simplicity of style and elegance, as the taste shown in the first figure of our Engraving, in which ease, grace, and simplicity are advantageously combined.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Fig. 1. Morning Dress.—Jaconet pelgnoir, with two narrow flounces; on the upper part of each flounce is a quilling, through which is run a blue silk cord. The corsage is of the same material, and trimmed like the skirt. Small cap a la Charlotte Corday, composed of Alencon lace and ribbon like that employed for the dress. Narrow linen collar without ornament.

Fig. 2. Walking Dress.—This dress is of rose-coloured mousseline de soie. The skirt is trimmed at the bottom with two flounces edged with silk, above which is a third flounce entirely of silk. The corsage is round and has silk tuyaux. Sleeves similar like the skirt. A wide ribbon, with large bow and long ends, ornaments the waist. White muslin sleeves. Bas-de-jupe. Bonnet composed of puffs of rose on the front; underneath, in the tour-de-tête a small garland of roses a l'Impératrice.

Fig. 3. Dress for a Morning Call.—The trimming of this dress constitutes its sole novelty. It consists of a band of stuff furnished with a second smaller pointed band, and attached at the lower extremity to a zipper like a double skirt. The same trimming which forms the ornament of the corsage united by two bands with rosettes, and terminated by a point like the skirt in front, and is not separate from it. The skirt and the body are closed by barrel-button in passementerie, the sleeves having the same ornament. Straw bonnet, with a lace scarf tied over the summit and falling gracefully on one side.

ST. CHAD'S NEW SCHOOLS, SHREWSBURY.

TESTIMONIAL TO COSTA.

AN elegant silver inkstand, designed and manufactured by Elkington and Co., has recently been presented to Mr. Costa. The inscription on its front medallion, which is as follows, fully explains the purpose of its presentation:—"From the Crystal Palace Company and the Sacred Harmonic Society, to Michael Costa, in grateful remembrance of the talent and exertion displayed by him as conductor of the Handel Centenary Commemoration, 1859." Upon the medallion at the back the following is inscribed:—"Messiah, June 20, 1859 / Te Deum, June 22, 1859 / Israel in Egypt, June 24, 1859." And upon the scroll, held by the boy figure at the right side,—"George Frederick Handel, born Feb. 24, 1684." The other scroll contains the date of his death—"April 13, 1759." The statuette of Handel was modelled from the celebrated marble statue by Roubiliac, which is now in the possession of the Sacred Harmonic Society. The figure to the beholder's right represents the genius of Music recording the strains of the great composer, while the figure to the left indicates by the palm-branch the peaceful influence of music.

OPENING OF ST. CHAD'S NEW SCHOOL, SHREWSBURY.

THE parish of St. Chad, the largest in the town of Shrewsbury, and one of the most important in the diocese of Lichfield, has long felt the want of proper accommodation for school purposes. This want has been at length supplied, for during the last year new schools, which are a credit alike to the parish and the town, have been erected at a cost of upwards of £3150. The design, which speaks well for the good taste of the architect, Mr. Edward Haycock, of Shrewsbury, is elaborate and well carried out, and is among the best, we believe, to which the Committee of Council on Education have ever made a grant (their grant to this being £1063). The contractor, Mr. John Tressure, Newport, Salop, has done justice to the design and executed his work in a most satisfactory manner, so that now it is completed it presents to the view a handsome and imposing structure. The buildings are of Elizabethan character, built of brick, with Grinshill freestone dressings to the windows, moulded chimney shafts, and mullioned and transoms. The east end of the building is surmounted by a bell-turret and cross of freestone; and midway below, on a shield of the same stone, are cut the armorial bearings of St. Chad, from whom the parish takes its name. The roofs, executed at the ridges, are covered with blue tiles. On each side of the school a teacher's residence is provided—one for the master, the other for the mistress. The whole, as well as the playgrounds attached, are separated from the street by cast-iron ornamental railings, with Grinshill freestone gate-piers.

The schools were opened on Monday, the 13th ult. The subscribers and friends, including the Mayor and the clergy of the town, met at St. Chad's Church, at four o'clock, for evening prayers. Afterwards a procession was formed. On arriving at the schools a hymn, composed for the occasion, was sung, and an opening address delivered by the Vicar.

A feast for more than 500 children and 100 mothers was provided in the lower room, nicely decorated with flags, mottoes, &c. After the feast was concluded the company moved to the upper room, where addresses were given, first by the Mayor, and afterwards by the clergy and others; and, for the satisfaction of those ladies and gentlemen who assisted on the occasion, a musical entertainment was also given between the addresses.

A VOYAGE WITH GARIBALDI.

Under this title the Times correspondent describes his recent excursion with the General from Palermo to Messina on his return from the island of Sardinia. The events touched on are not very important, but we have some pleasant incidental descriptions of Garibaldi and of his companions, and the Director's more familiar associates are thus described:—

"With Garibaldi were some of his old comrades, constant, and most intimate companions—Trecchi, a Major in the Sardinian army, who resigned his place as an orderly officer and Aide-de-Camp's person, preferring to be a body guard to the man between whom and his Sovereign his affections are equally divided. He thinks, had with good reason, that the King Alexander would be the best of all hostels were it in his power to don a red flannel shirt and join Garibaldi, the love of adventure being far superior in Victor Emmanuel's breast to the cares of state which some of the clerical cygnus so freely impute to him. Next to Trecchi, among the friends of Garibaldi, is Augustus Anderson, an Englishman, at whose house, the Villa Spinola, on the Eastern Riviera, near Genoa, Garibaldi so often and so long found a genial welcome in the days of his political perils and in his life. There was Frusciant, a Roman veteran, without whom Garibaldi never moves, with three or three more grey-headed men and one dark-haired, who, him throughout most of his adventures in the New world, and who, like the rest so many younger men accustomed to be in a subordinate position, imposed upon them may seem a practicable, if not actually possible one. Besides the Italians and the Hungarian Leiwein, also some of Garibaldi's English champions—Major, now Colonel Leeman, a young man only thirty-three years old, and of a small stature, who gotten with almost herculean strength and heaven-storming courage—a man with whom many persons would be glad to be associated, if Indian wars can be unacquainted. He comes to fight with Garibaldi by land and sea, and brings him the aid of a whole boat in himself, and is, besides, the owner of a yacht, and means to embark a dozen English sailors in it and sail about, many volunteer daredevils like him the world will hear some news by and by. We had Captain D. Dowling, R.A., who is to command a battery of Armstrong guns, and Mr. Edward P. Jervis, R.N., a young sailor who resigned the command of his vessel in England to place his skill and vigour at Garibaldi's service. The master of the Amazone, Captain R. L. Weeks, is no less Garibaldi mad."

Garibaldi's manner and appearance are thus described:—

"The General moved among the various groups upon deck with a kind and an apt word for each of them, evincing that readiness of recognition, that perfect accuracy of recollection, that tenacity of men and things and circumstances, however trifling, which are ranked among the innate privileges of Royalty. He had on his usual industrial suit of dress—the red woollen flannel shirt, with a silk bandana kerchief thrown loosely and widely round the neck by way of a scarf, sailor grey trousers, and the same wide-awake hat with turn-up brim. The prodigious breadth of the General's shoulders, his colossal chest, and the natural dignity and lamb-like majesty of his countenance, again and again tactine a beholder to overrate his real stature, which is certainly not above the middle size. When you walk up near him, and measure him by the standard of common men, before you recover from the error into which awe for that commanding figure leads you. On closer and nearer inspection, is dark hazel, almost black, darker by far than the beard, which is heavy or reddish. He wears the hair rather long. The beard is full, and relieves the length of the oval face, which might otherwise be thought excessive. The temples are somewhat compressed about the region of the eyes, and a very strong glabella depression is observable about the eyebrows. The cheek bones are high, and the nose comes down between them in a perfectly straight long line, even with the slightly shanting forehead. The completion of that small part of the face which is not hidden by the beard is not more bronzed or sunburnt, it has a peculiar sanguine hue, thickly studded with swollen freckles. This remarkable tint, the features, the colour of the hair, joined to the calm but deep expression of the dark eye, all contribute to give his countenance that unmistakable character which won for Garibaldi the appellation of the 'Lion-face.'

Garibaldi at home is thus described:—

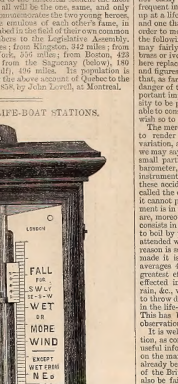
"I had a long conversation with Vecchi, who is one of his nearest and dearest friends. They were together out for or some days and that time I visited the settlers encamped at the Gallo degli Arassi, on the north-east coast of the island of Sardinia, when Garibaldi was in the habit of passing his most intimate companions into the privacy of his dwelling. I was at the time of Garibaldi's absence, and was received with his delightful hospitality by the strict of Bonifacio, between Sardinia and Corsica. As the opening of the strait of Bonifacio bears the name of Caprera, some of my readers observed to Garibaldi that it was 'a very small isle;' whereupon the possessor of the island replied by pointing to and exclaiming, 'Small, but still re-some nearer to it, and you will see it is anything but a small island.' You have come to see it, then, you shall enjoy my country.' So saying Garibaldi was in a perfect ecstasy with the spot, the air, the look of the growing corn, and the green leaves of the vine. Everywhere was milk himself. Goats, sheep, and pigs which he knew and recognised one by one, poor donkeys, one of whom he raised by the assurance of Pio Nono, and the horse others by name, names equally illustrious in contemporary history, which I shall not write here. The harmless creatures crowded round their master, fondled their master, and rubbed their long-eared heads against his legs. Then came the bipeds of the establishment, old fish-dwellers, perfectly unsuspicious of the greatness achieved by their master, and not caring a straw for it, who came out to greet him in their own rustic fashion, shaking and hugging him as a friend and a brother—as men who love the man and the master, and know nothing of the General or the hero—and falling into immediate discourse about the crop that had calved, and the field that had been ploughed, as if the fate of the world hung on the result of the harvest of merry Caprera. Garibaldi then descanted on the delights and capabilities of the place; the first-rate shooting and capital fishing. He showed me the house which Webb had built, and which I purchase the little islet opposite to Caprera (there is a whole archipelago of islets), and the way I would have it furnished, and—and could establish a correspondence by signals each from their windows, &c."

A NEW KIND OF BRONZE.—We learn from the Manchester Guardian that workers in metal are finding good uses for a new kind of bronze, made by melting together 19 parts of aluminium with 80 of copper. It is described as being tenacious as steel, and well adapted for the bearing of machinery. A pulley, we read, is for bearings to run with safety at about 2000 revolutions a minute, found it last six times longer than bearings made of other kinds of metal. It is good also for pistol barrels, and is to be tried for rifles and cannon.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN HALIFAX.

HIS ROYAL Highness arrived at Halifax, as duly reported in previous Numbers of this Journal, on Monday, July 30. A few particulars, however, of the Prince's reception at the capital of NOVA SCOTIA are here reproduced, from the Halifax Church Record, in connection with the illustrations of this auspicious event by our Special Artist on pages 196-199 and 207 in this week's Impression :—

"The hour of noon (the time appointed for the landing of the Prince) having arrived, a barge wearing the Prince of Wales's standard was seen to leave the Hero's side, hundreds of blue-jackets clustered on the yards of the ships-of-war, and the forts also volleyed forth their salute, and, while the air was trembling and ringing with welcome, the barge, steering between the little fleet of brick steamers, on which the Indians acted as a marine guard of honour, came to the landing, where the Prince, in his splendid uniform of Colonel of the Guards, attended by his staff, was received by the Lieutenant-Governor, Rear-Admiral Sir Alexander Milne and his officers, after which, according to etiquette, he stood on the platform, and was there proclaimed his welcome. Just as his Royal Highness stepped on the platform he advanced slightly in front of his suite, and stood for a few seconds in a graceful and dignified attitude. Every one was struck with the grace with which he thus commenced his triumphal entry into NOVA SCOTIA—suitably announced, as if in respect to the anthem sounding out in honour of his Royal mother, and in recognition of the loyal acclaim of her colonists, he paused for a moment in an expectant attitude, while the Royal standard, having displaced the union-jack which up to that moment had remained on the staff, unfurled itself, and, floating out upon the wind, proclaimed the heir apparent to the British dominions personally in possession of this colony. The point of honour having settled, his Royal Highness advanced to meet his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, who in the name of all present and absent welcomed him to the province. The Lord Bishop of NOVA SCOTIA, and the Major-General Commanding, were presented by his Excellency; and then, surrounded by the groups of dignitaries who had come on invitation to hail gracefully bowed, the Prince listened with attention to the municipal address, read by the Recorder in a full clear and distinct voice delivered his reply.



"With scarcely a pause from the time when the Prince rode out of the dockyard gate until he dismounted in front of Government House, the multitudes that crowded, in a most orderly manner, the line of the procession kept up one loyal, hearty, cheer, which was continuously acknowledged by him whose presence created it. So the crowning beauty of the day was witnessed on the Grand Parade. There windows at ranges in order at a rising platform were more than three thousand children, in neat dresses, and with excited, happy faces, who, when the Prince arrived, rose like a great wave, and threw all their young souls into their voices, as they cheered their future King, and invoked the Almighty, in a new and appropriate version of the National Anthem, to bless his Royal mother and her son. The Prince here halted while the anthem lasted, and he and all with him made no effort to conceal the high satisfaction afforded by such a spectacle. This well-planned exhibition was a feature in the reception which will outlive all the others: for until generation after generation descended from these choristers have died out that scene will be a household tradition, and grey-headed grandsires will remember with pleasure and relate with pride that they took in greeting in mid-long ayne the Heir Apparent to the British crown.

"Passing at this point, the procession, amid increasing cheers, reached Government House, where another guard of honour saluted the Prince, and as he dismounted, and was met and welcomed at the doorway of his temporary residence by the hostess, the Countess of Mulgrave, the Royal standard, run up by a signal-man from the Nile, announced that Government House was for the time, through its occupation by the Prince, converted into a palace. The sentries were then doubled and a permanent guard encamped on the lawn. Both Houses of the Legislature met his Royal Highness in one of the larger rooms to present him with the address of the Executive, in the name of the people. The presentation appropriately followed that of the municipal authorities. The one conveyed to him the congratulation of the city—this was to give him the more extensive welcome of the colony. The address was read by the President of the Executive Council. The reply was read by the Prince with unaffected, unembarrassed, and emphatic warmth."

QUEBEC, CANADA EAST.

IN pursuance of our plan of illustrating the places honoured by the presence of the Prince of Wales during his progress in British North America, we give on page 211, from a drawing by our Special Artist in Canada, an Engraving of Quebec. This chief seaport and stronghold of military power in British North America is situated on a rock-bound promontory at the bay or junction of the Rivers St. Lawrence and St. Charles, and was for a long time the capital of Canada. It is strongly fortified and garrisoned, completely commanding the navigation, and by many travellers is declared impregnable. The city is reputed to have derived its name from the words "Que bec !" by exclamation of the first grand adventurous discoverers when first its site broke on their astonished view. Quebec has a very grand and imposing picturesque and confused appearance, quite in keeping with the broken, bold magnificence of the surrounding country, which for natural grandeur is generally allowed to be unparalleled. Whatever site the eye may select, the city has the appearance of a huddled and confused mass, from the nature of the abrupt declivity on which it stands, the high gables and skirts; nor is the impression thus obtained at all diminished on landing; or at the steeper roads as they ascend. The Lower Town portion of the city is more open, regular, and better built than the other. It is situated within the gates and walls, and approached by a steep, narrow street and carriage-way, which, with its many rugged flights of winding stairs which dip into it here and there and lessen the distance by a few yards, forms the only road of communication with the Grand Battery, and portions of the fort, barracks, and town; toward the south, the Esplanade; and, further west, the Citadel, which crowns the heights. From Durham-terrace, which overlooks the greater part of the Lower Town, from the Cape or from the ramparts, a most magnificent natural panorama and amphitheatre of scenery is presented to the eye of the beholder a scene incomparably grand and charming—a view of many lines, and is always pronounced by strangers to be the Lower Town the streets (excepting, as to length, Champlain, St. Peter, and St. Paul, which run along between the bases of the cliffs and heights and the margin of the river) are narrow, irregular, and crooked, by reason of their frequent intersections. Eastward from the city, for some six or seven miles, to Montmorenci, and southward to Cape Rouge, for some nine miles or more; by the St. Foye-road, which runs almost the whole way parallel with the river, it slopes into the valley of the St. Charles north of the promontory, with the many handsome villas and tasteful grounds, the drives and views are very beautiful and picturesque. The wharves, with overhead cranes and the large number of ships and craft of every kind that frequent the port, are very limited in extent; besides, the anchorage ground is unsuitable for business; but on the side bounded by the St. Charles ample shipping accommodation and great improvements may easily be made. Quebec is well lighted with gas; and, by means of the works lately constructed at great expense, most abundantly supplied with excellent water from Lake St. Charles, at an elevation of several hundred feet above the highest level of the town. A considerable reservoir of water, on the principle of pressure, be thrown over the highest buildings in the city, rendering next to impossible the recurrence of any very destructive conflagration. Quebec carries on a considerable trade with the surrounding country and with the ports and fisheries below; but her great business is shipbuilding and the timber trade. She annually launches, rigged and equipped for sea, some thirty to forty vessels of varying tonnage (1000 to 2000 tons or more), and exports some 30,000,000 cubic feet of timber, besides ashes, lumber, and other produce of the country, amounting together in value to somewhere about 5,200,000 dols. From 1400 to 1500 vessels from sea annually enter the port; not a few in ballast, it is true, but many with cargo outward bound. Scourged by sundry terrible conflagrations (the last especially in 1845), Quebec seems to be, phœnix-like, rising again out of its ashes, and improving greatly on the side comprising St. Roch suburbs, where the streets are being straightened and made longer and wider, and the old frame buildings fast giving place to those of brick and stone. In wealth and population, too, the city is increasing—slowly, it may be, in comparison with many places in the West, but steadily; and it must, from its position, continue to do so, unless its people exhibit a lack of that energy which generally characterises the province. Throughout the Upper Town there are a number of objects interesting to the stranger—the Citadel, with its armoury and magazines; the Roman Catholic Cathedral; with the Seminary and Nunneries; the Protestant Episcopalian (Scotch), and other churches; the Esplanade; Governor's garden; the new Naval University, just erected at a cost of nearly 100,000 dols, &c.; but to youth and to the historical student the most attractive and instructive of them all will be the one, name, and only humble monument which marks a common grave—that of the generals Wolfe and Montcalm, who—in life enemies of each other's fame, in mortal strife for duty—now lie entombed in the field of their own common glory. Quebec returns three members to the Legislative Assembly, viz., Mr. Alexander Buchanan, Mr. Joseph Cauchon, and Mr. Charles Alleyn. It is distant from Montreal 170 miles; from Kingston, 342 miles; from Toronto, 396 miles; from Hamilton, 446 miles; from Sarnia, 610 miles; from Portland, 317 miles; from the Saguenay (below), 180 miles; and from Cape Rouge (in the north), 16 miles. The population is about 60,000. We are indebted for the above account of Quebec to the "Canada Directory," published in 1858, by John Lovell, at Montreal.

BAROMETERS FOR LIFE-BOAT STATIONS.

PUBLIC attention has frequently been called to the invaluable use of a barometer for indicating a coming storm. It is not unfrequently happens that a notice of a gale is given by a barometer two or three days before it actually takes place. Those persons that walk much on the sea, placed providentially in our hands the calamities now endured by our fishermen and coasters might in many instances be avoided. A good barometer in a public situation would warn them in time what to expect, and they could then be frequently able to avoid the terrible consequences of ruin or loss of life generally fatal to them.

Admiral Fitzroy, F.R.S., has compiled a useful and thoroughly practical manual for the use of a barometer. On that enduring rock a very ordinary capacity would soon become perfectly familiar with the indications of the instrument. We will only quote his explanatory rules :—

The barometer rises for north-easterly wind (including from north-east, by the north, to the eastward far or less with variations), or less wind, or for more than one of these changes—except on a few occasions, when rain or snow comes from the north-eastward, with strong wind.

The barometer falls for south-westerly wind (including from south-east, by the south, to the westward) for wet weather, for stronger wind, or for more than one of these changes—except on a few occasions, when moderate wind with rain, or more, comes from the north-eastward.

For change of wind towards the above directions a thermometer falls. For change of wind towards the upper directions a thermometer rises.

Moisture or dampness in the air (shown by a hygrometer) increases before rain, fog, or drizzle.

Some time since Admiral Fitzroy, who, as chief of the meteorological department of the Board of Trade, obtained the sanction of the Board of Trade to supply some forty of our poorer fishing villages with barometers, some of which have been of great service to the fishermen. It is, however, evident that something more is absolutely required in order to make barometers generally available for our fishing and seafaring population. We are happy to learn that this important subject is about to be taken up practically by the National Life-boat Institution. Admiral Fitzroy, who is a member of its committee, has promised the undertaking his cordial and valuable co-operation. The Admiral's own manual, as we have already observed, contains extracts from which will be extensively circulated on the coast, fully explaining the working of the barometer. It is proposed to fix such barometers in instruct boats and open and practicable in conspicuous positions of the society's life-boat houses, which are situated on every part of the coast of the United Kingdom. To carry out effectually the plan the institution has, fortunately, the machinery at hand, for to each of its life-boats is attached a permanent coxswain, who receives a small annual salary for his superintendence of the working part of the life-boat establishment. It is to these coxswains that the instructions are to be furnished in the indications of the barometer, so that they will act as so many storm-warners in the town or village in which they reside. It will be readily conceived what beneficial results may accrue to life and property among our hardy seacoast population from this important step. It is a lamentable fact that at the present day the masters of our smaller coasting and fishing craft hardly ever think of consulting a barometer; indeed, have they an opportunity of doing so. It is estimated that a good barometer cannot be fixed to a life-boat house under £6, so that it will require a considerable sum to carry out effectually the plan of the National Life-boat Institution. We understand that a benevolent gentleman has presented to the institution £50, to be applied specially to the purchase of barometers for its life-boat stations; and we cannot doubt that the public will readily make up what may be further required.

The making of the barometers has been intrusted to Messrs. Negretti and Zambra, who have already supplied forty of somewhat similar instruments to the Board of Trade, for various fishing stations on the northern coast, and also a number to the British Meteorological Society, for the coast of Northumberland. The object of the National Life-boat Institution will be to obtain a good instrument, and one that will not easily get out of order in travelling, or require recruiting at frequent intervals; in short, a barometer that, having been once set up at a life-boat station, will be a permanent and reliable instrument, and one that will not entail any future expense to the society. In order to meet these requirements, the makers have therefore introduced the following changes in the regular instruments, which, we think, may fairly come under the head of important improvements. The brass or other cisterns have hitherto been generally made of iron, and are here replaced by a substantial plate of porcelain, on which the degrees and figures are permanently painted and protected from corrosion; so that, as far as the divisions and figures are concerned, there will be no danger of their becoming faded or obliterated. But a very important improvement, especially for an instrument that has of necessity to be placed in an exposed position, where the mariner may be able to consult it at any time, even in the middle of the night, should be wish so to do.

The metallical tube of the barometer is of large diameter, so as to render the mercury easily visible, and show the slightest variation, and is constructed with the liability of air entering it in, we may say, entirely obviated; for it is a well-known fact that, if a small particle of air by any means finds its way up the tube of a barometer, its upward progress is ever so minute, the indications of the instrument are erroneous, and no longer to be relied upon. To prevent these accidents the tube is bent at the bottom of the cistern, and the part called the cistern, so that if any air should find its way into the tube it cannot possibly pass the trap, but is there detained, and the instrument is in no way interfered with by its presence. These tubes have been are, moreover, "boiled." The operation of boiling a barometer tube consists in the boiling of the mercury, and thus getting the mercury to boil by placing the full tube over a charcoal fire. It is an operation attended with considerable risk to the tube and operator, and for this reason is seldom carried into practice, and in the majority of barometers made it is altogether neglected. The size of the mercurial column averages 4 inches of mercury, so that altogether instruments of the greatest efficiency will be obtained. A great change has also been effected in the method of making the scales, so that fair, change, rain, &c., words which in reality have often a tendency to mislead, and to throw discredit on barometrical indications. The plan to be adopted in the life-boat barometer is shown in the accompanying Engraving. This has been arranged systematically, and after much labour and observation, by Admiral Fitzroy.

It is well known that the labours of the National Life-boat Institution, as corollaries to its own immediate sphere of action, is diffusing useful information on the treatment of the apparently drowned, and on the management of boats in heavy surfs and broken water, have already been authorised of great public benefit; not only on the coasts of the British isles but also over many parts of the globe. It may also be fairly anticipated that similar benefits will accrue from even the establishment of these barometers on its life-boat stations.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE EARL OF LAUDERDALE.

The Right Hon. Sir James Maitland, ninth Earl of Lauderdale, Viscount of Lauderdale and Maitland, and Baron of Thirlestane, Baltenn, and Lauderdale, of Thirlestane, in the Peerage of Scotland; Earl of Lauderdale, of Thirlestane, in the Peerage of Ireland; and Baronet of Nova Scotia, was the eldest son of James, the eighth Earl of Lauderdale, by his wife, Eleanor, only daughter and heir of Anthony Todd. He was born in London on the 12th of May, 1784. His Lordship, whose career was somewhat less brilliant than in public life, sat as member for the House of Commons, as M.P. for Appleby, and for the successive family honours, on the decease of his father, in 1839, became of his father, on the 13th of September, 1839.

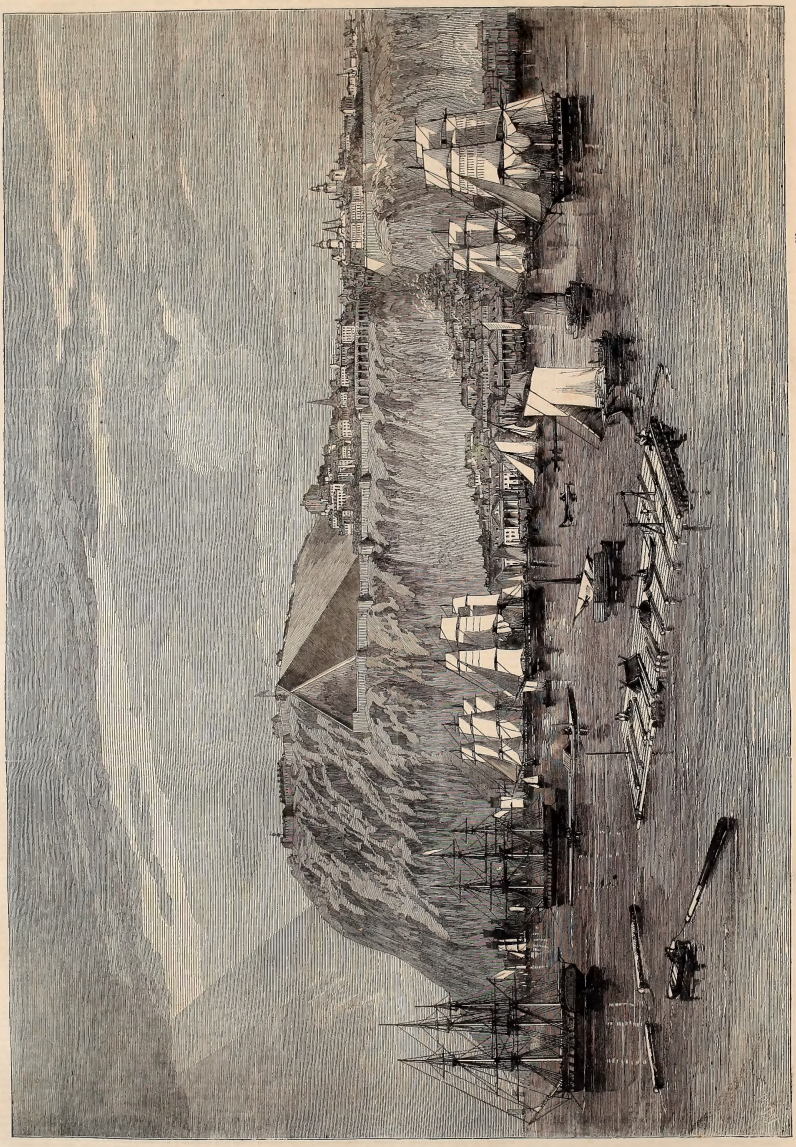
as head and representative of the very ancient and historic house of Maitland of Thirlestane. The Earl of Lauderdale was Hereditary Lieutenant of Scotland and Marshal of the Royal Household in that kingdom. He also held the office of Keeper of the Great Seal of Ireland. His Lordship was unmarried, on the 22nd ult., at his seat, Thirlestane, Berwickshire. He is succeeded by his only surviving brother, the Hon. and Rev. Richard Frederick Maitland, K.C.B. and K.C.M.G., now tenth Earl of Lauderdale, a gallant naval officer, who has seen much service, and who has distinguished for his country's naval services during the war with France. He was wounded in the attack on the Boulogne flotilla, in 1801. He also in the course of the French war, made some very important captures. He was subsequently with Lord Nelson in the Mediterranean, and was present at the Battle of Trafalgar. His Lordship, who was born on the 16th of June, 1785, was unmarried; consequently, his cousin, the Hon. and Rev. Alexander Maitland, Captain in the Royal Navy, Thomas Maitland, C.B., becomes heir-presumptive to the earldom of Lauderdale and the other honours of the family. The present family of Maitland can trace six centuries ago, have been famed in Scotland as literati, statesmen, and warriors. Sir Richard, who was knighted by King Alexander III., was from Maitland, of Lethington, uncle of the first Earl of Lauderdale, was one of the regents after the death of King James VI. Sir John Maitland was the great Duke of Lauderdale, of the Cabal Administration, and the celebrated Secretary of State to Charles II. The present Duke's nephew, Richard, that supported the Scottish Covenant, was created Earl of Lauderdale in the fourth Earl, was outlawed for his adherence to James II. In honour of every generation of the family there can boast of numerous officers of note in the British naval and military service.

VICE-ADMIRAL ISAAC HAWKINS MORRISON.



This gallant Admiral, whose death occurred at Jersey a few days since, at an advanced age, entered the Navy in 1776. In June, 1795, on board the Melampus, 54, and, in April and May, 1796, on board the Diamond, 38, he was employed in the reduction of Martinique and Berbice. As a Lieutenant, which he became in 1804, he was in the Donegal, 74, at the capture of the Spanish ships of the line in the Downs, off Cherbourg, and at the Dardanelles; and was promoted to Commander in 1808. In May, 1811, he was appointed to the Jamaica, 38, and in October following he fought, off the coast of Jamaica, with a very superior force of the enemy's line-of-battle ships, with La Franse, a French frigate of forty-four guns and three hundred men, which surrendered after a resistance of half an hour. In 1812 he was in the North Sea, under Sir Morrison's ship, the Eurotas, of forty-six guns and three hundred and twenty men, and captured the Danish sixty-gun frigate, the Nayaden, the Danish forty-four guns and twelve brass swivels, with a complement of near four hundred men. In 1813 he was in the same roads as Captain the Hon. Keith Stewart, R.N. He was in later years employed as Inspecting Commander in the Coastguard Service, in the south-west of Ireland. He was appointed a Rear-Admiral on the 9th of October, 1849 ; and a Vice-Admiral on the 21st of October, 1856.

ARRIVAL OF THE "GREAT EASTERN" AT MILFORD HAVEN.

The Great Eastern steam-ship arrived at Milford Haven on Sunday evening, at six o'clock, having left New York on the 16th ult. and Halifax at two p.m. on the 19th, thus performing the entire voyage in seven days. There was a great deal of excitement, and her reception was a most enthusiastic one, the officers and men of the Channel fleet being very demonstrative. Her departure from New York attracted no great amount of attention, and during her voyage no incident occurred worthy of particular mention. She made the passage from Sandy Hook to Halifax in forty-five hours, the shortest, we believe, on record, and the weather being calm no assistance was derived from her sails. From the official report it appears that the average speed of the vessel over the whole voyage was nearly fourteen knots an hour. On Saturday last a meeting was held in the grand saloon, when Captain W. Morris, R.N., proposed, and Judge Hastings seconded, the adoption of a congratulatory address to Captain Vine Hall on the successful conclusion of the voyage, to which the gallant Captain returned a suitable reply.

PROGRESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES IN BRITISH NORTH AMERICA.—VIEWS ILLUSTRATING THE PASSAGE OF H.M.S. "STYX," HAVING HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS ON BOARD, FROM HANDSPORT TO ST. JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK.—FROM DRAWINGS BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.

PROGRESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES IN BRITISH NORTH AMERICA.—QUEBEC, CANADA EAST.—FROM A DRAWING BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE PAGE 208.

Relics of the Past.

MANUSCRIPT TREATY BETWEEN HENRY VII. AND THE ABBOT AND CONVENT OF WESTMINSTER.

The superbly-bound volume sketched above is the collection of Indentures entered into by Henry VII. and the Abbot and Convent of Westminster, July 16, 1504, for prayers to be said for himself and family, and for his soul, and the performance of services for their souls after their decease. The copy from which our Engraving was made is believed to have been the Royal copy; that executed by the Sovereign himself, and originally deposited among the costly and sacred contents of the Royal Treasury, a sanctum which now forms part of our Public Record Office. Strictly speaking, the volume consists of four distinct instruments, relating to as many separate obligations, or deeds indispensable for the due fulfilment of the object. These documents extend to above 250 pages, and are composed in a style the most pompous and verbose imaginable. The subject was certainly a sombre one; but, if we may infer that the Monarch's taste was consulted for the diction of these articles, they afford strong confirmation of evidence of his mediocrity and "all" acquaintance. Well knowing how open he lisle was to contention, and harassed as his reign had been by conflicts, tumults, and impostures, he appears to have received on calling in the aid of the Church to support and maintain his throne.

Chantries in which prayers were offered for their endowers became more numerous as the foundation of monasteries declined. Being greatly to the advantage of those institutions, they were ardently fostered by Abbots and Priors, although strenuously opposed by many of the laity. The practice of commending souls to the care of God, indeed, however innocent in the abstract, when carried to the extent to which the belief in purgatory conduced, became so great and crying an evil that in the first year of the very Monarch who has been commented that they were to last "while the world shall endure" it furnished one of the most prominent items in the bill of accusations against monastic institutions.

At the Reformation there were in St. Paul's, London, thirty-five endowed chantries, and fifty-four priests employed to serve therein. Their number throughout the country has never been, perhaps could not be, calculated. The poor "Sir Johns," as these priests were called, were long held in great aversion by the people, and were accounted the most ignorant of their order. Wycliffe had complained that "masings" contributed to the decay of preaching and praying, and the poor were dissatisfied with their expense. Erasmus has drawn a melancholy picture of the scene at the death of an opulent Knight, who, to make certain of his spiritual welfare, tried to accommodate himself to the requirements of the many holy orders.

Nothing, apparently, could be more complete in itself, no arrangement could be framed to insure safe-guards against the usual effects of decay or disuse, than the engagement entered into by means of the document before us.

From the days of the creation of the deed, special prayers were to be daily said in the rig ular services of the monastery for the well-being of the Sovereign and his family; additional services were to be instituted; the anniversary of the monastery itself for the performance of other special services before the "herse," surrounded with 100 tapers, which the King provided till the chapel was erected in which his tomb was to be placed; a far more solemn service was to be performed upon the 11th of February, which was to be an "Anniversary;" sermons were to be preached on every Sunday and on particular days for the same purpose, and on these occasions the high State and civic officials and the heads of the courts of law were expected, and were even paid, to be present. The "Anniversary" was also to be observed at twenty other places; the book itself was to be read once a year in full convent, and in the presence of many official personages; and every Abbot and Prior was strictly enjoined to execute its provisions. All the general and specific details are given for carrying out the Royal intentions, and the commencement of each of the documents contains a full enumerated that they were to last "while the world shall endure" it furnished one of the most prominent items in the bill of accusations against monastic institutions.

At the Reformation there were in St. Paul's, London, thirty-five endowed chantries, and fifty-four priests employed to serve therein. Their number throughout the country has never been, perhaps could not be, calculated. The poor "Sir Johns," as these priests were called, were long held in great aversion by the people, and were accounted the most ignorant of their order. Wycliffe had complained that "masings" contributed to the decay of preaching and praying, and the poor were dissatisfied with their expense. Erasmus has drawn a melancholy picture of the scene at the death of an opulent Knight, who, to make certain of his spiritual welfare, tried to accommodate himself to the requirements of the many holy orders.

Nothing, apparently, could be more complete in itself, no arrangement could be framed to insure safe-guards against the usual effects of decay or disuse, than the engagement entered into by means of the document before us.

From the days of the creation of the deed, special prayers were to be daily said in the rig ular services of the monastery for the well-being of the Sovereign and his family; additional services were to be instituted; the anniversary of the monastery itself for the performance of other special services before the "herse," surrounded with 100 tapers, which the King provided till the chapel was erected in which his tomb was to be placed; a far more solemn service was to be performed upon the 11th of February, which was to be an "Anniversary;" sermons were to be preached on every Sunday and on particular days for the same purpose, and on these occasions the high State and civic officials and the heads of the courts of law were expected, and were even paid, to be present. The "Anniversary" was also to be observed at twenty other places; the book itself was to be read once a year in full convent, and in the presence of many official personages; and every Abbot and Prior was strictly enjoined to execute its provisions. All the general and specific details are given for carrying out the Royal intentions, and the commencement of each of the documents contains a full enumerated that they were to last "while the world shall endure" it furnished one of the most prominent items in the bill of accusations against monastic institutions.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Sumner, and the Bishop of Oxfordshire, in the year 1400, that is exactly 400 years ago :—" Ernestus, Ah the Lord bless you! I never heard there on the subject of Bishop our Lord's Association, in the ninth year of the reign of King Henry the Fourth after the Conquest, Thomas Fryschare a bargain and fine effected with Sibilla, the daughter Sibilla, daughter Sibilla, daughter of John Fryschare (of the late J. F. ?), begotten to the lord, may be enabled to marry herself to whomsoever, if[illegible] to him will, and that the which fine he gives to the lord twenty-six shillings and eightpence."

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

The Cetrus Lumia, with its numerous varieties, is very abundant in Sicily and Calabria. It produces a fruit externally resembling the lemon, but differing in its juice, which contains a delicate and aromatic sugar. From its rind the Italians prepare the well-known Essence of Bergamot, which has a most agreeable but very penetrating odour, somewhat similar to that of bergamot, and which is the base of the well-known Eau de Cologne, and chemical details appear in the Comptes Rendus.

Acajeue or Nut-oil.—M. Peckholt, M. de Paravey recommends for this purpose the Iroqua (Rucou acajeuba), a species of holly which grows abundantly in Brazil, Guadaloupe, Cayenne, &c. The oil is said to be that employed for this purpose in India and Thibet.

Acajeue or Nut-oil.—M. Peckholt, M. de Paravey recommends for this purpose the Iroqua (Rucou acajeuba), a species of holly which grows abundantly in Brazil, Guadaloupe, Cayenne, &c. The oil is said to be that employed for this purpose in India and Thibet.

Academy of Sciences, Paris, Sept. 3.—The Astronomer Royal announced

OUT-DOOR AMUSEMENTS.

SEPTEMBER.

THERE are few days out of the three hundred and sixty-five that are looked forward to with greater avidity and delight than the 1st of this month, when those who have not had the good fortune to enjoy grouse-shooting on the moors of England and Scotland may commence operations in the stubble and turnips against the partridges. What sportsman is there that has not felt thoroughly elated at the thoughts that entered his mind on the 31st of August? With what interest has he visited the kennel to see that Nestor and Joe were ready to take the field, and that his trusty retriever Mentor had recovered from his lameness! With what care has he examined his percussion caps and his powder-flask, his steel charges, and loading-rod! With what satisfaction has he ordered his shooting apparel, and with what satisfaction has he ordered his servant to call him at daybreak, that he may have a tolerable full bag before the meridian sun oppresses himself and his canine companions with intense heat! Then, how delightful to lay by for an awakes on the morning of the 1st and finds the glass slightly risen, and the index pointing as if to "fair," and to hear the early morning shot appear, which is quickly partaken of; and how rapturous is the moment when his two staunch pointers stand mute and motionless and his retriever crouches at his feet! Sometimes, from a superstitious feeling, not to miss the first bird, it is with a slight degree of trepidation that he pulls the trigger; they follow's shot is generally true, and a brace of fine young partridges is his reward.

Yachting may be carried on during this month to a great perfection; and it is an excellent period for trawling or drawing the seine-net. To those Cowes and Ryde yachtsmen who are tired with the usual routine of a "run" to the eastward, or "beat" to the westward, we strongly recommend a day's trawling off Anglesea Ville, or a morning with the seine on the Hampshire coast, near Eaglehurst.

Some of the best toxophilite meetings take place in September, and there are few gatherings more interesting than those in which the archers saw fathers and sons, brothers and arrow has been particularly good this year, and it would seem as if the daughters of our isle were anxious to emulate the deeds of the sterner sex, for certain it is proven with the rifle has been unparalleled. We may here compare the volunteer movement of 1860 to that of 1801, when it will be seen the wonderful improvement has been made within the last half what a wonderful improvement has been made within the last half century. In referring to an old newspaper we find that upon the 12th of August, 1801, the anniversary of the Royal Highness the Prince of Wales' birthday, the proprietors of Ranelagh gave a very elegant ball and supper to what for the different volunteer corps of London. At half-past six o'clock, the target being fixed, the gentlemen were mustered by the roll of a drum, and, according to the men were mustered by the roll of a drum, and, according to the lots drawn for tickets the firing commenced. Out of two hundred and forty-seven who entered their names only four could hit the target." The target, upon the occasion alluded to, was at distance of eighty yards. How surprised, then, would our ancestors have been if they could have witnessed the late practice at Wimbledon Common, when the weapons and the art of using them were as superior to those of bygone days as the brilliancy of gas is to the dim rays of oil—as the performances of the boys at the penny stage-coach, or the Great Eastern, which can nearly 3000 miles across the Atlantic in eleven days, is to the old Dublin and Holyhead packets, which were seven days or sixty miles occupied four and twenty hours! Upon some future occasion we shall refer to archery, ancient and modern, space preventing our entering at present more largely into the subject, except to say before our readers on account of this favourite diversion, as carried on at Hurlingham a hundred years ago. The annual toxophilite meeting at that school, which can boast of the names of a Byron and a Peel among its pupils, has, like Der Mortem at the Haymarket, the play of "Terence" at Westminster, been discontinued—innovations, that are far from pleasing to the old boys of Harrow, but it is useless to dwell upon the past glories of these seats of learning. Let us renew our subject. The announcement of the Harrow boys (which we copy from the statutes for the school) were originally confined to "driving a top, tossing a handball, running, and shooting," the latter amusement being in a manner insisted upon, as all parents were required to furnish their children with "bowstrings, sheaf arrows, and bracers to exercise shooting." The exercise of archery, as the above shows, was enjoined by the founder, John Lyon. The 4th of August was the original anniversary on which six, and in latter years four, boys shot annually for a silver arrow. The first Thursday in July was afterwards substituted, when the competitors were attired in Lincoln green spotted satin—the usual colours were white and green; they also wore green silk sashes and silken caps. He who first struck the centre of the target was proclaimed the victor and carried home the silver arrow, a triumphal procession of boys attending him. The entertainment of the day were concluded with a ball in the school-room, to which the neighbouring gentry were invited.

The last shot ever so contended for in July, 1771, and the one made for the ensuing year, but not used, remained in the possession of the Rev. B. H. Drury, of Harrow. The reasons which induced Dr. Heath, the Head Master, to abolish this ancient custom, are stated to have been the frequent exemptions from the regular business of the school which those who practised the future meeting for the prize claimed as a privilege not to be infringed upon; also an account of the band of profligate and disorderly persons who had sometimes brought into the village from its vicinity to London, and which tended to injure the discipline and morals of the school.

The bowls at present were formerly a very boyish sport, on the left of the London road, entering the village. They were backed by a high brick enclosure with wigwam trees at the slope of the eminence were cut rows of grassy seats gradually descending, worthy, according to Dr. Drury, of a Roman amphitheatre, but the labour of digging for brick earth has entirely altered the whole feature of the place; the knoll itself has disappeared, and the butts of Harrow, like the far-famed Hill of Howth, are now very considerably less—the once favourite spots of these rival schools. The cricket season of 1860 will rank with the most interesting one. In the commencement of the present day, when fast bowling is so much in the ascendancy that the players are obliged to be encased in leather and wickeboxes, instead of olden times, when the ball was slowly delivered. To illustrate the respective systems, we lay before our readers the result of two games which were played a twenty years ago, and which were played in Kent at Lord's. The newspapers of the day thus describe the former :—

"A single wicket match was played at Dartford Brent, on the 25th of July, 1791, and three following days: the Earl of Winchilsea with three gentlemen and seven players of England against Thomas Assheton Smith, Esq., the chaseur of Anglesea, with three gentlemen and seven Hampshire players. England, first innings, 278; Mr. Assheton Smith's, professional, 200 and Colonel Lennox, father of the present Duke of Richmond, 42. The mighty Nimrod was not successful on this occasion, for we find two rounds (Y. to T. A. Smith, Esq. England won this match in a single innings by 68 runs. Richmond, 79 in the first and 128 in the second innings.

"Another match was played at Hornchurch, Essex, August 11, 1791, and the two following days, between the country of Essex and the gentlemen of the Marylebone Club, when the Essex players got 108, and Colonel Lennox 70. The Marylebone Club scored 348, winning by nine runs."

Of modern play we take from a long list a match between the first Eleven of England and the next Fourteen, in which the latter won by eight wickets, their score in the two innings amounting to 189, the highest individual score being 43. In another match, the Marylebone Club and Ground, against Sixteen Clubs, the former got in the first and 69 in the second innings; the latter 29 and 106, the highest number gained by one player being 27.

It is reported that Mr. W. S. Lindsay, M.P., is to sail for the United States early this month, charged with a mission to place before the Government of the United States the views of her Majesty's Government in reference to the navigation laws now in force across the Atlantic, and to open negotiation with our American cousins in reference to other matters affecting the international shipping regulations.

The Western Star (Ireland) inserts the following in its obituary :—"In the neighbourhood of Cong, after a few days' illness, Mr. Patrick Glynn, a person of a respectable farmer, Mr. James Glynn. He was only twenty-two years of age, and was 22 stone in weight, thus gaining 14lb. for every year of his age. His extraordinary height was 6 feet 4 inches. He was beautifully proportioned, and possessed enormous strength. He was humane and gentle in disposition."

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CALIPH.—The important work by Dr. Forbes which was mentioned in our Number of the 4th ult. is now published, and may be procured of Messrs. Allen and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street. We shall, of course, take an early opportunity of noticing it as fully as our limited space will allow. In the mean time we can confidently recommend this work to the attention of all lovers of the game.

PAWN AND TWO.—Your problem is unsound, as Black can play 1. P to Q 4th, and if P—Mr. King, it appears by the papers, is now lecturing to the chess amateurs of Yorkshire. He was to have followed to Mr. John Williams, late captain of the Huddersfield Club, will no doubt reach him.

CHESS.—The following games played by correspondents between Cambridge and Ipswich have come to hand, and are now in process of examination.

CARDIFF v. BRISTOL.—Mr. Fiddes, of Cardiff, in reference to our observations on the present system by which the British Association matches are carried out, has sent us the twelve games already laboured under the impression that they were contesting against the Bristol Club. We have received a letter from Mr. Fiddes, in which he states that Mr. Bird, Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Thompson, stood aloof from the contest, and there was no intention to imply that those on the Bristol side looked upon the match in the same light until they found that they were losing, as the games were played at the rooms of the Bristol Club, and were "between friend and Cardiff; as the system of reference inviting all who liked to take an interest in the games, and to make any suggestions inviting all who liked to take an interest in the games, and to make any suggestions inviting all who liked to take an interest in the games, and to make any suggestions

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

GOING back somewhat in the order of our narrative of the Prince's progress through the British North American colonies, we give a brief account of his visit to St. John's, Newfoundland, as a pendant to the accompanying Illustration—one of four obligingly sent to us by Mr. Delaney, C.E., of St. John's, and all of which we would gladly have inserted had they reached us at an earlier period. The Prince landed here, as has been stated in this Journal, on the 24th of July, amid great enthusiasm, and on the same day received deputations and addresses, and held a levée. On the following day his Royal Highness attended a regatta and State ball. High holiday was held at St. John's during the Prince's two-days' sojourn there, and business was for the time completely at a standstill. The scene of his departure on the 26th—the subject of our Engraving—is thus described by a Newfoundland Journal:—"All were again astir, and excitement was at full height—at an early hour on Thursday—at ten o'clock having been fixed on as the time of the Prince's embarkation. At nine the streets were crowded as thickly as on Thursday morning, and the ladies began to resume their places on the platform at the Government wharf. The morning was as fine as could have been desired, the number of ladies was perhaps greater than that on the morning of the landing, and their gay attire was in ample display. At ten o'clock the ringing of the Roman Catholic Cathedral bells told that his Royal Highness and suite were leaving Government House, and just at this time drew up at the Queen's wharf the carriages with the Bishops, Judges, Councillors, &c., and the public officers of all ranks, civil and military. The French officers arrived from the Scœvola and the guard of honour took their appointed place. When the Prince, with the Earl of St. Germans and his Excellency and Lady Bannerman, entered the carriage at Government House there was a spontaneous and magnificent expansion of the popular feeling for the Heir to the Throne. The horses were no sooner harnessed than a number of fine stalwart fellows came forward from amongst the crowd and insisted on taking the place of the horses and drawing the carriages themselves. His Royal Highness having graciously acceded, the horses were replaced by as many men as could possibly look on, after a smart scramble for by as many men as could possibly look on, after a smart scramble for the honour of places, and were thrown slowly past the Commissariat, the Royal Engineers having graciously acceded, the horses were replaced by the multitude, amid thunders of huzzas. It was a felicitous and demonstrative exhibition—that movement on the part of the people, and the sight it presented was full of beauty and significance. It spoke of loyalty the most devoted—but it told, too, of that deep personal regard which his Royal Highness had won from strangers by the attraction of his amiable manners and bearing. Arrived at the wharf gate, his Royal Highness, accompanied by Lady Bannerman, wharf gate, his Royal Highness, accompanied by Lady Bannerman, and as he stepped on the platform leading to the landing-steps, and as he advanced bowed gracefully to the ladies and gentlemen surrounding him. The Prince then cordially shook hands with the Governor and Lady Bannerman, and with several gentlemen who were near him, and with his party stepped into the boat under Royal salutes from the Ariadne, Flying Fish, and Scœvola. The noble ships then got under way for Halifax, and were soon afterwards but dimly discernible in the distance, and then lost to the admiring gaze which followed them."

THE EMBARKATION OF THE PRINCE OF WALES AT THE QUEEN'S WHARF, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND.

REGATTA AT PLYMOUTH.

THE annual Royal Western Yacht Club of England and the Port of Plymouth Regatta took place on Thursday, the 16th, and Friday, the 17th ult. Although the weather on the day previous was very disconcerting to all concerned, on Thursday morning it cleared up, and the picturesque Sound of Plymouth presented all the appearance of an unusual holiday. A strong W.S.W. wind was blowing, cold for the time of year, but most appropriate for the event. The matches came off with unusual rapidity, producing a corresponding amount of interest amongst the spectators. A Government lighter (Devon), fitted up for the convenience of the committee and decorated with flags, formed a conspicuous object in the centre, while several other vessels equally gay were stationed near. The course was from the Devon, past Scot's quay were stationed near. The course was from the Devon, past Scot's quay, round the Knap, Pentille Point, Droyston, and, after crossing the ground, the Knap, Pentille Point, Droyston, and, after crossing the Sound, run in from the Mew Stone past the end of the Breakwater. The first match was sailed for by vessels belonging to the Royal Yacht Club, and carrying the Admiralty warrant, the prizes being £50, first; £10, second. Those entered were the Audax, 59 tons (J. H. Johnson, Esq.); the Glance, 86 tons (R. A. Duncan, Esq.); and the Arrow, 102 tons (T. Chamberlayne, Esq.). They started at eighteen minutes past eleven o'clock (this is the moment selected for our illustration). The Glance lost her bobstay in the first round, and was compelled to give up. The Arrow, after having been three times round the course, came in at 57m. 14s. past 4, being the winner by a few seconds. The next race was for the Steam-ship Company's Plate of £25, open to vessels trading in the port. The Souvenir, 12 tons (W. Hills, Esq.), and the Quiver, 15 tons (D. Chamberlayn, Esq.), sailed, the former winning by 11m. The Ladies' Plate, given by the town, for pleasure-yachts under 10 tons, was sailed for by the Enigma (J. H. G. Pope, Esq.), Ida (R. Hockings, Esq.), Tormentt (G. Dyer, Esq.), Frolic (T. Y. Gurney, Esq.), Viola (W. Tihlston). The Enigma came in the winner at 4h. 9m. 30s., only 1m. 1s. before the Ida. The rest followed in close succession. After which a sailing match came off by watermen's boats, for prizes of £1 10s., £1, and 15s. Five boats started, and the first prize was won by the Flying Dutchman. This was followed by a race by her Majesty's ships pinnaces. Four boats started. Another pinnace race between boys of H.M.S. Impregnable, which was won by second-class boys. A race contested by Saltash women caused great amusement, and came off in capital style. Two races between four-oared gigs concluded the programme of the first day.

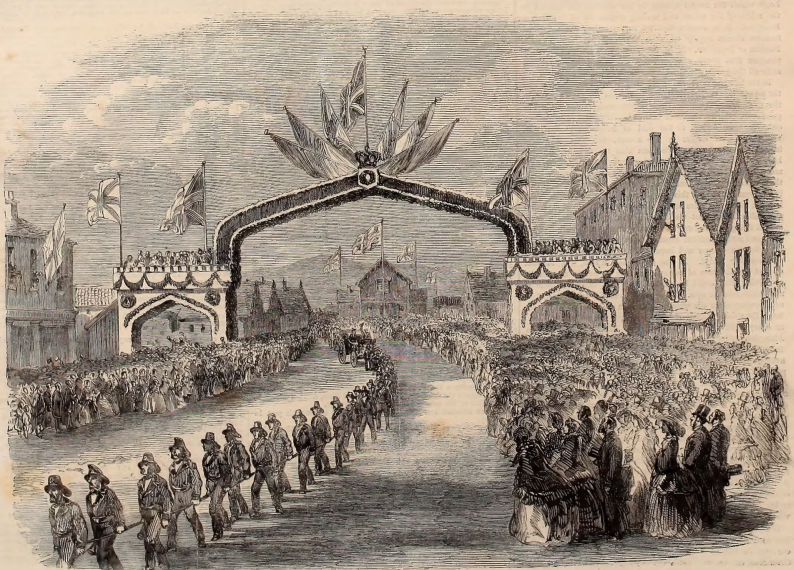
The second day, which was somewhat unequal, commenced with a match for trawlers, open to all England, old register tonnage, half a minute per ton, and no entrance fee. First prize £12; second, £8; third, £1. The Daring came in first, Ventura second, Pride of Devon third. A prize of £80, given by the R.W.Y. Club, open to schooners belonging to a Royal yacht club, and carrying the Admiralty's schooners belonging to a Royal yacht club, and carrying the Admiralty's warrant. The Wildfire 99 tons (T. Turner, Esq.), Gwhenter, 178 tons (T. Bloadwood, Esq.), and the Camilla, 144 tons (H. E. Decie), entered. The Camilla beat the Wildfire by twenty minutes, fifteen minutes being allowed to the latter on account of her inferior tonnage. The Town Plate, value £80, was sailed for by the Arrow, Audax, and Glance, and won by the latter. The Arrow was entered, Audax not sail. A cup, value ten guineas, presented by Mr. Bate, but did not sail. A cup, value ten guineas, presented by Mr. Bate, but did not sail. A cup, value ten guineas, presented by Mr. Bate, was won by Royal Hotel, for pleasure-yachts from ten to twenty tons, was won by Royal Hotel, for pleasure-yachts from ten to twenty tons, was sailed for by the Ida; four sailed. A match for £10 by pleasure-boats came off next: Ida; four sailed. A match for £10 by pleasure-boats came off next: six boats sailed. Seven watermen's boats started in the next match six boats sailed. Seven watermen's boats started in the next match for prizes of £1 10s., £1, 15s., and 10s. A four-oared gig match for for prizes of £1 10s., £1, 15s., and 10s. A four-oared gig match for the merchants of the port; a match for men-of-war pinnaces; also a the merchants of the port; a match for men-of-war pinnaces; also a match for £10, by four-oared gigs, open to all England; a match match for £10, by four-oared gigs, open to all England; a match between the Saltash women in skiffs; another race by four-oared gigs; between the Saltash women in skiffs; another race by four-oared gigs; and a punt race, concluded the regatta festivities, the whole of which and a punt race, concluded the regatta festivities, the whole of which were excellently arranged and well carried out.

PLYMOUTH REGATTA.—START OF YACHTS IN THE FIRST RACE.—FROM A SKETCH BY J. OFFORD, PLYMOUTH.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1860.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1049.—VOL. XXXVII.] SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1860. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE.



THE HARVEST PROSPECTS.

A WEEK ago it would have been a disheartening task to have entered on the consideration of the prospects of the harvest. Now we read in one of our contemporaries that the "accounts from nearly all parts of the country are of the most cheering nature, the fine weather which has been experienced in the metropolis having been pretty general. Farmers, therefore, are beginning to take heart, and in many districts are busily engaged in harvest operations." The main point, says another well-informed journal, to be strenuously pressed on farmers is, "not to be in a hurry. Except on the most forward soils, the wheat can stand well for some time; and, even when it is cut, the mistake of carrying it too soon is that most commonly made in a wet season." We may now venture to discuss this all-important subject, since we are enabled to start from that indispensable point of departure, fine weather.

In the first place, it may not be without interest to refer to some few statistical facts connected with previous years in this, a corn-importing country. Although the harvests were anything but deficient in the years 1858 and 1859, we imported in the former year of wheat and flour 5,343,469 quarters, and in the latter 4,951,871 quarters, which may be estimated at about a fifth of our annual consumption. In the first six months of the present year we imported about 3,000,000 of quarters of corn and flour. In the last two years we received c2,014,923 quarters of corn and 4,226,438 cwts. of flour from France, and 1,397,691 quarters of corn from Prussia, but no flour. Last year we had little corn from the United States, and in the early part of the present year our imports have been principally from Russia, Prussia, and Denmark. Looking to the state of the harvests in different countries, it would appear that our imports this year will be principally derived from America. As regards the crops in that country there is no doubt at all. The harvests both in the United States and Canada are superb. In the Northern and North-western States they are abundant to an unprecedented degree, and in Pennsylvania they are stated to be double that of many previous years. At the present moment the accounts of the crops in Russia and in Prussia are not accurate or precise, but rain is not unfavourable to the soil of those countries; and in the south of Russia, at least, the product is expected to be great. Our expectations from France must be more moderate. In the opinion of the Government of that country the result of the harvest is at least doubtful, or so decided a step as remitting the import duty on all kinds of breadstuffs for a year would not have been adopted. But, nevertheless, recent accounts state that there are highly favourable prospects of the crops in the south of

THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE, FREDERICTON, N.B., THE RESIDENCE OF THE PRINCE OF WALES DURING HIS STAY IN THAT CITY.

THE MEMBERS OF THE FIRE COMPANIES DRAWING THE PRINCE OF WALES THROUGH CARLETON, A SUBURB OF ST. JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 235.

France, and it is said that large orders from this country have been readily accepted. If this be so, there is less probability that France will be competing with us in the markets of Southern Russia and America than was supposed a short time since.

If all that we hear be true there is ample capital in the hands, we will not say of speculators but of dealers in corn, to enable them to purchase largely in every market; and it is tolerably certain that considerable purchases have been made to provide against any exigency that may arise, so far as consumers merely are concerned. Happily for this country, no restrictive or contrivous laws now interfere with the free and unshackled import of corn or any other article of food; and those things have taken their position among ordinary merchandise as the legitimate objects of barter or purchase. As regards the question of consumption, even if we should be compelled to import double or treble the quantity which was required last year, there is every reason to believe that the necessary supply is within our reach. It is true that large import implies a large demand on the money resources of the country, but of late years the purchase of corn has become so much a portion of our trading system that any unusual movement in that direction is not likely to cause any very heavy strain on the Money Market. If, too, our principal imports come from the United States, the mercantile relations between the two countries are of such a nature that additional imports of corn into this country almost necessarily imply increased exports of our manufactures to America, and by consequence so much less a drain upon the precious metals thence, however the case might be as regards other countries. On the whole, it may, we think, be stated that, so far as the food question is a question for the consumer, in the general and more extended sense of the term, there is but little ground for apprehension.

There is, however, another point of view in which the prospects of our commerce are to be looked at, and one which is merely worthy of, but demands, the most serious and anxious consideration. We are not among those, if there be any, who are ready to dissociate the agricultural interests of Great Britain from the interests of the manufacturing, trading, and the ordinary consuming classes, or to do so but for the expectations of a bad harvest with the same terrors as we did, when some preposterous theorists maintained that it was still possible in this country for every rood of land to maintain its man, few of us are either so blind or so selfish as not to recognise the importance, indeed the indispensability, of agricultural success as one of the main elements of our national prosperity. When the gloom and rain of the summer set us all thinking of the effects likely to be produced on the harvest, those who were engaged in other pursuits than those of tilling the earth did not feel almost the same personal interest in

THE REVOLUTION IN NAPLES.

In the Supplement issued with this Number will be found a letter from our Special Artist and Correspondent in Sicily. Here we give some particulars from various sources of the advance of Garibaldi in Southern Italy, which has been a repetition of his successful career in Sicily. His prestige carries everything before it, almost without bloodshed. Within a week of his landing on the south coast of Calabria the town and fort of Reggio fell into his hands after a slight resistance; the whole of the forts bordering the straits of Messina were surrendered without a struggle; two brigades under General Milandis and Brigadier capitulated, after having conducted and surrounded; and the latter officer had reached Monteleone to find there the large Neapolitan force, stationed there to contest his progress, retreating before him. The Royal army melts away at his approach—officers and men being alike disaffected. It is probable that on Garibaldi's arrival at Salerno he will find the story of Monteleone repeated, and that no effectual obstacle will impede his triumphant march upon the capital. The complete breaking up of the vast military force which King Bomba left at the last years of his life in organising, and the uselessness of his fleet to prevent the invasion of a mere handful of volunteers, is one of the most significant events of modern history.

It would seem as though Garibaldi had already surmounted the greatest difficulties of his new enterprise. The enemy have supplied him with all needful resources in the way of arms, ammunition, and money. Not only has he a master of both sides of the Straits, the volunteers from Northern Italy are swelling his army by thousands, without exception, advised his departure from Turin. The Cabinet are taking measures for defending the city, were the Government they should not succumb to Garibaldi. The National Guard garrison every part of the city except the palaces and forts, and declare that they will engage only to preserve public order. The Government, unable to reach the members of the national Parliament, which is now in session, have issued a proclamation calling upon them to assemble, as the Government is powerless to act. There appears to be no thought of preparing to resist Garibaldi; all anxiety was directed to avert a popular outbreak in favour of the city from the hostility of the mercenary and bazaarat.

Thus far the Neapolitan revolution has proceeded without external interference. The Sardinian Government has been unable to arrest the progress of Garibaldi, and were powerless to check the rise of an enterprise which has fed his volunteer force. But at length Count Cavour considers the time has arrived for direct intervention. It is said that Farini was despatched to Paris by the Sardinian Government to obtain a hint that Victor Emmanuel must either put himself at the head of the national movement or be swept away by its tide. The visit of Farini to Turin it was resolved that the berseglion on board the Sardinian ships at Naples should be landed in order to preserve order in the city, and 20,000 men under General La Marmora should be despatched without delay to the Neapolitan capital, and that if they could not beat off or in time destroy the Royal army, they should at least keep the Garibaldinians troops to pass through his dominions.

The position and sentiments of Garibaldi combine reasonable with policy. While there is yet an army of perhaps 20,000 men encamped on the road to Naples, he announces his intention of being in that city on the 8th inst. This startling undertaking is evidently the result of an invader confident of victory; it is rather the dectorous manœuvre of a retiring conqueror. But it is not the part of a man to abandon courage and self-reliance. The King has pledged his word to the foreign representatives and to the National Guard that there shall be no fighting in the city. He has accordingly sent away the troops, some to Salerno, some to Gaeta, in preparation either for battle or flight. Naples is, naturally, favourable to the landing of its new sovereign. Their sympathy with the cause of the invader must be not only unbridled, but it would, of course, be to their interest to do all to trust himself in their midst.

The following telegrams have been received at Mr. Reuter's office :—

NAPLES, Sept. 1 (via Marseilles).—The Ministry tendered, and then withdrew, its resignation. The attempt to form a new Cabinet under the presidency of Prince Cariati has failed. The chiefs of the Liberal party have entered the Royal Palace and demanded from the King the dismissal of Generals d'Ischia and Lanza, and Admiral Marino. Some concessions have been made, it is said that should anarchy ensue a proclamation of Sardinian troops may be expected.

TURIN, Sept. 1.—The Chasseur of to-day published a thrilling telegram from Naples, dated 31st—Garibaldi has arrived at Monteleone. The Royal troops have fraternised with the insurgents, and the Royalist General Ghio has resigned his command, as the army of Calabria declares for Victor Emmanuel. The Ministers of the Neapolitan Government, the Royal troops who had been sent to reinforce the garrison of Monteleone have refused to attack Garibaldi. The same day was announced that the fleet in Syracuse is expected to arrive this evening (Sunday) in Turin.

NAPLES (dated August 31).—The province of Reggio de Lavoro has risen in insurrection. Bands of insurgents have united, and are marching upon Monteleone.

NAPLES, Sept. 2.—The ammunition commission assembled this morning, and received communication of a letter from Garibaldi, in which he says the state of the country requires a definitive solution, he will arrive at Naples about the 8th, and will, at the same time, be at the head of the army and the dictatorship of Two Sicilies. The commission are making preparations for the reception of the liberator. The city will be illuminated on the evening. Two Sardinian vessels with troops arrived here on the morning of the 1st of September.

NAPLES, Sept. 4 (via Genoa).—An insurrection has broken out at Sala, where the Government of King Francis II. maintains his last remaining troops in Terminal zone, under the command of General Tarn, have disembarked at Sapri. Garibaldi has left Sala for Potenza. Lanza has resigned his office, being supported on the right wing by General Cosenz.

MADRID, Sept. 3.—The Epoca says it has learned that the King of Naples, refugee in Spain, in the event of his leaving his States. This offer has been accepted by Queen Isabella II.

TURIN, Sept. 6.—It is positively stated that there are at present not more than three hundred men of the regular troops in the service of the Government at Naples. It is supposed that this number of troops will suffice to maintain order at the time of the departure of the King.

We have now tidings from the English correspondents with Garibaldi brought down to August 26. The following is a detailed account of the capture of Reggio and its fort :—

The object was to get possession of the higher part of the town and of the hills. The attack upon Garibaldi himself was to be made from the land side direction, while Bixio operated against the centre, towards the bridge; and the enemies' right was to be assailed by Garibaldi's left. The Royal troops were resolved from the first not to fight very desperately, or whether they were discouraged by the circumstances, or not, they made but a poor stand even in the centre and on their right. On the left they attempted some resistance, as well they might, for here their position was strong, and opposite to their position until a sufficient reinforcement could be brought up to charge with the bayonet. At the first attempt Garibaldi's troops on the left and the column entered the town, causing before it the Neapolitans, who fled in the direction of the opposite end of the town, towards the bridge. Here they were entered by the main street to the Piazza of the Duomo, cutting off the flight of the Neapolitans who had come from the bridge. Arrived in the Piazza, the latter sent off towards the higher part of the town to the right, and when debouching from the narrow streets into the open space, they were paralysed by the fire which, they fell in with Garibaldi's column. The volunteers pressing on in front, and from the rear, the Neapolitans. The thought they were coming over. The Neapolitans, instead of coming together to make a desperate charge, broke and were taken prisoners by batches of twenty and thirty, while the rest dispersed and made their way towards San Giovanni. Here there was then time in less than two hours from the time the fire first began. The fort alone remained. The house had been utilising on both sides, and there had been some settlers, and perhaps with some personal interest, had the Neapolitan shamans, of which there were not less than seven, shown no sign of Valour. But they had evidently orders not to fire on any town. They merely sent a few shot and shell towards the road while the column was advancing, but immediately after the capture of the town had ceased firing. Which they now display no sign of further hostility, and the fort soon came to another point. Cosenz had evidently ready for a descent on the coast of Calabria from the Faro point at the first notice of the attack on Reggio. Twenty boats full of men were waiting for this movement in the lake, where they escaped the notice of the only Neapolitan steamer which had remained towards the entrance of the Straits, the others being engaged at Reggio. As soon as the first cannon-shots were heard from Reggio sixty of the boats started, and made a rush for the other side, when they were quickly followed by the thirty others. Both the steamer from Reggio and the Neapolitan steamer made a movement to attack, but all they could do was to send shot on to the beach and shatter the empty boats, while the troops they sometimes saw upon the bridges, the families, they had seen to think to think of their own safety, for the fiery batteries began to open. At the first shot the vessels which were towing the boats were cut away, and the boats, with the exception of three or four, were soon on the other side, and pointedly little on the other. Except a big shell which fell in the water, which burst after one of the boats without hitting any one, literally not a single Neapolitan shot ever reached the Calabrian shore. The Neapolitan steamers, after firing a few shots to that they could reach them, turned on fire some bullets on the opposite shore, and then put another distance of two miles. Such was the cannonading that they seem all safe.

While the capture of the last wave of Cosenz was going on at the Faro Garibaldi, having given the Neapolitans out of the town, took measures to blockade the fort on the land side. All the troops were withdrawn from the defence towards the sea, while cooperatively little attention is paid to the land side. These, with the exception of a few shots, fired at the troops as rounded by houses, and only that looking to the sea is free, while on the land where took cover from the fire. All the troops were assembled, by which some of the houses, one of these auxiliary troops began with a few shots, and anything every one of the fort. Some of the shots among those who suffered on this occasion was Garibaldi's son Menotti, who was wounded in the leg by a splinter of stone from a shell. The fort answered with grape and round shot until about eleven a.m., when the Neapolitans hoisted a white flag, and shot until about eleven a.m., when the Neapolitans hoisted a white flag, and the fort, completely composed of good rifle shots, the Neapolitans soon left their guns on the ramparts, and retired into the interior of the fort. Garibaldi, who was instantly reminded by a bullet in the breast, and soon after the white flag appeared on the fort of Reggio.

The terms of surrender were those which were given at Milazzo—the garrison to evacuate all the forts, and to lay down their arms. The terms were not favourable, but it must be recollected that the Neapolitans might soon ten favourable, but it must be recollected that the Neapolitans might soon ten favourable, but it must be recollected that the Neapolitans might soon ten

THE MAGAZINES FOR SEPTEMBER.

THE magazines for the current month will probably be in the nature of handbooks, and will spread over a wide travelling tract. The number of Blackwood will be noted for its article on Sir Robert Peel, founded on Sir Lawrence Peel's "Sketch of the Life and Character" of his eminent relative. On the whole, the estimate which the reviewer takes of Sir Robert as a statesman is fair, and the difficulties of his position are by no means underrated. His private character, too, is justly spoken of—not without appreciation, and yet with a due sense of some defects of temperament which at times interfered with Sir Robert's success as the manager of a party. The other principal articles are "The Romance of Agostini"—pleasant and readable; "King Arthur and his Round Table;" and an historical and legendary notice of "The Tower of London." The paper entitled "The Struggle at Mentana" is whether intended or not, a tribute to the genius of Garibaldi.——In Fraser a new tale, under the title of "Ida Conway," is commenced with spirit. Why a "Manchester Man" should write an article on "Psalms and Hymn Tunes for Congregational Worship" is not very apparent on the face of it; but, at the same time, no reasonable objection can be taken to a gentleman of that city indulging in a luxuriation of that sort, especially when the matter is so well treated, swaying occasionally from "grave to gay, from lively to severe," as it does, and bringing within its compass a mass of hymn and psalm literature. "A Story of 1848-9" is a narrative of events during the revolutionary struggle in Italy in those years, and is interesting from its minute and personal details. Alexander Bain contributes an article such as might be expected from him, headed "The Propensities according to Phrenology Examined." In the continuation of "Gryll Grange" Mr. Peacock shows no falling off in that quaint style so much, sprinkled with learning, earlier the reader so imperceptibly along a narrative which does not rely very much, if at all, on incident. Considering that a volume of "Miscellanies" by Mr. Kingsley are principally reprints from the pages of Fraser itself, a paper devoted to a review of the work is fair, and by no means overdone. Indeed, it may be said that Mr. Kingsley himself may read much of the dissertation with profit, as it warns as much as it praises. "A Conventation at Athens on Local Topics" contains a sketch of the state of Greece, and the influences under which that kingdom exists, which, compressively brief as it is, is full of suggestiveness. The writer of an article in a former number on England and London thirty or forty years ago, and who signs himself "A Man on the Shady Side of Fifty," gives us this month a paper on "France and Paris Thirty and Twenty Years Ago," which is quite as full of personal and local details, touches of habits and manners, modes of living, of feeling, and of opinion as the former paper above alluded to; it is the pleasantest of gossip, although the latter word is only used for want of a better and more expressive one.——The Dublin University takes occasion, in treating in one article of "Wanderings in the North-west of Ireland," to supplement it with another entitled "The Glencolumbkille Tradition Concerning Prince Charles Edward;" which being interpreted means a statement, more or less detailed, of a visit of the young Pretender to the parish of Glencolumbkille, in the county of Donegal, at the time when he was fleeing from the shores of Great Britain with a price set on his head. Amongst the internal evidence given of the actual presence of this scion of a Royal house is a statement of his having cured a scrofulous affection of that process which was known in those times as "touching for the King's evil." Mr. Fitzpatrick's memoir of Lady Morgan affords an opportunity for a paper on Sir Charles as well as on Lady, which is very well done, and in which length is judiciously apportioned to the interest of the subject. The "Italian Representatives" and "Paris Localities," the "Work-a-day World of France," the first of a series of papers on the "History of the Knights of Malta," together with a due infusion of fiction and verse, and a "Political Chronicle," make up a very good number of this serial.

For three or four days after the 24th of last month every third person whom you met in the street, in railways, in omnibuses, or in steamers, seemed to be assisting in a demonstration against the recent Act prohibiting the exhibition of Party Emblems, for in his hand he carried what appeared to be an orange-coloured symbol. A closer view, however, showed that it was the recently-published number of the Cornhill Magazine. It hardly needs, therefore, to say much, if anything, ten days afterwards of a periodical which is in everybody's hands. It may suffice to mention that in addition to the stock papers, as "Framley Parsonage," "Hogarth," the "Roundabout Papers," and so on, there is a very admirable article purporting to come from the pen of a clergyman, and entitled "Thieves and Thieving," which gives as full and in many senses a better and more philosophical view of an extraordinary phase of the social life of London than any the most experienced police official could have produced. The statements with regard to the physical appearance of thieves, born and bred in that fearful guild, are remarkable. The spirit which influences the writer in dealing with the subject, and an idea of the personal appearance of this class of criminals, may be gathered from the following extract:—"The poor helpless children who literally grow up into a criminal career, who have no means of knowing that they are wrong, and who cannot help themselves, have strong claims on the compassion of every lover of his species. Some of them are fine-looking fellows, with bright and piercing eyes, ample foreheads, finely-chiselled lips, clear and winning faces, symmetrical contour, and well-proportioned limbs. When I have seen them dressed in their best attire, looking so well that some of them would be an ornament to any drawing-room, so far as handsome appearance is concerned, my heart has ached to know that there was nothing but a criminal career in prospect for the merry, prattling, and beautiful boy." The article on "The Druses and the Maronites" is appropriate to the moment, and we are told that the Druses are said to have derived their name from Druzi, who was possibly a tailor, or a druze, as they are now called; many Eastern surnames finding their origin in the occupation or calling of the founder of the family. This personage lived in the eleventh century, and preached the divinity of Hakim, a Caliph, whose reign was long and monstrously iniquitous, but who is adored as a god by the Druses, and looked to as their future deliverer. Like the Jews, they are expecting a Messiah, who is to be this said Hakim the Second, and whose advent will be from China, through India, Beloochistan, Persia, and over Central Asia. They are also said to worship a calf, in remembrance both of the Egyptian god Apis, and of the golden calf worshipped by the Israelites; but they conceal the rites of their religion. This tribe, which was powerful in the last century, was decimated sixty years ago by the celebrated Emir Bechir, a great prince among the Maronites, but an unchristian man.

Macmillan contains no less than twelve articles, some of them erudite, some of a light and amusing character, and all marked by a carefulness that amounts to precision. The proverbial philosophy contained in the phrase that history is teaching by example is ably carried out in an article by Mr. T. E. Cliffe Leslie, entitled "The Future of European Festoil in History." The editor gives us a genial lucubration on "The Life and Poetry of Shelley." "Tom Brown at Oxford," is continued. The narrative of a "Commemoration," which deals with that somewhat hackneyed theme with spirit and piquancy, and the current chapters of the story, on the whole, have more of what is coarsely but expressively called "go" in them than some of their more recent predecessors. Mr. George Cupples, by whom we were not long ago astonished and puzzled in a work called "Hinchbridge Haunted," begins a legend in six chapters, headed "Kyte-Jock, and the Weird of Warton Walls," for the explanation of which we must refer our readers to the pages of the magazine itself, only saying that the current chapters are well written, and in a more subdued style than those of the author's fictions which we have hitherto come across. Mr. Henry Kingsley, who is known as a vigorous writer—as instanced in a novel of his published some little time since, the scene of which is laid principally in Australia—contributes a paper on "New Books of Sport and Natural History," being a gossip for September. Mr. Martineau writes on "Volunteering, Past and Present." There is a brief but amusing disquisition by an experienced chaperone, under the head of "Hints on Proposals;" an elaborate narrative of "The Eclipse Expedition to Spain," by Professor Pole, Fellow of the Astronomical Society; and Mr. W. A. Forster deals with "The Budget of 1860." On the whole, a very painstaking specimen of this excellent serial.

"WHAT'S O'CLOCK?" WHAT'S O'CLOCK?"—DRAWN BY GODWIN.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 230.

The Eclectic opens with a religio-doctrinal article under the title of "The Pauline Doctrine." A review nominally of "The Works of Hugh Miller" affords an opportunity of tracing the characteristics of his life and of his writings, and the task is performed with fitness and in a sympathetic tone. It is said that Hugh Miller's love of books and taste for reading were early awakened. His love of books, his passion for reading, was a school in which the progress of his education was rare and continuous, if not rapid. And not less was he an ardent student in the school of Nature. He had a keenly-observant eye for all natural objects. Everything curious and rare excited his interest and aroused his active powers. We must conceive of the boy Hugh Miller, as a true child of Nature, buoyant, healthful, and thoughtful—now at his books—now wandering in the woods, or among the rocks, caves, and shingle of the seashore—now a willing auditor of the shrewd sense and pregnant remarks of his maternal uncles, or of the more aged dispensers of traditionary lore. In such a manner did the youth progress to manhood, and carry on his education, in what he well terms "the best of all schools—the school open to all." In the first chapter of one of Miller's earliest works—the "Scenes and Legends of the North of Scotland"—he says that his "greatest early intellectual benefactors were the philosophic Lord Buchan and an ignorant old woman, who, of all the books ever written, was acquainted with only the Bible." This avowal furnishes a key to the character of his intellect, and gives an intimation of the two diverse, or at least seldom-united, mental tendencies—the literary and the scientific—which, however, were combined in his mind, and were yet to blend with a strong charm in his writings. It was to gratify the one tendency that he hung upon the lips of garrulous old age, and thereby gleaned no unimportant mental pabulum. The stories of the marvellous—these fragments of a once prevalent superstition—these pictures of character and passion blending with the supernatural, and invested with a touching pathos or wild poetry, had a singular charm for the incipient versifier and littérateur. Widely different is our young student's other mental benefactor. Sound sense is Lord Bacon's great characteristic. His philosophy, positive and realistic, is as foreign to marvels and mysteries as to unconformed speculation. "Of Lord Bacon," says Miller, "I never tired;" and that he drew as deeply from the practical wisdom of this great writer shows that Nature had as largely endowed him with the scientific as with the literary faculty. In the precision of the analytic as in the accuracy of the observing and descriptive powers which he afterwards exhibited we have the matured expression of that scientific bias or aptitude which, at this early period, revealed so marked an affinity for the positive teachings of the great inductive philosopher; while in the graphic delineation, poetic charm, and imaginative beauty which so much characterise his writings we have the full evidence of the literary taste or tendency ministered to by the lore of the ignorant old woman. In curious juxtaposition with a dissertation on "Modern Bible Pictures" we have, under the designation of "A Classical and Philosophical Novel," an expurgated version of "The Metamorphoses of Apuleius." The article on "Mount Lebanon and its Recent Scenes" is timely and informing; and every, from another point of view, is "A Run through Killarney," now that the sun has condescended to shine upon the travelling month of September. There is more besides, and of good quality.—Bentley's Miscellany is, as usual, opened by "The Outremancha Correspondence," which is a pleasant and slightly satirical chronicle of the events of each past month; and may be the production of a Frenchman, although the internal evidence is rather the other way. The account given of the Court and some of the social doings of Louis XIV. in the article which is entitled "Madame de Montespan," and which is a continuation of the history of the favourites of the "Grand Monarque"—La Vallière having been disposed of in a previous number—is amusing enough. Some of the anecdotes are characteristic and suggestive. For instance, when Madame de Montespan became the object of the King's attentions she did feel some uneasiness as to "What are we to do, Nanon?" she said, one day, to her attendant; "let us go to our château." The husband either did not, or did not wish, to understand. A few days afterwards she intimated, M. Montespan says, with a blush, that it was still time to go. 'Explain yourself, Madame,' said the Marquis. 'Why, do you not know that you have that which the King is about to give is in my honour?' 'Well,' replied the husband, 'are you not handsome enough to deserve to be feasted?' 'But, if I must explain myself, the King is in love with me.' 'Well, a King's love is not an insult. You know your duty.' 'Yes, I know my duty, but I am afraid.' And thus ended that strange confidential colloquy." The following's good in its way. Madame de Fontanges—another of the ministering (fallen) angels of Louis le Grand—after her dismissal was, whether, as was said, poisoned or broken-hearted, struck down by the fatal blow:—"All she asked was that the King would see her before she died. He did what he never did for La Vallière: he acquiesced. She was dressed for the occasion, although not expected to live from hour to hour. An arm-chair was prepared for Louis XIV. 'A little nearer,' she said, attempting to smile. 'I was waiting for you, to go. You are come, I forget all my sorrow.' The King could not speak, he was terrified with the change in her face. Madame de Fontanges stretched forth her hand, he carried it to his lips, and the tears rolled for once down the Monarch's face. 'Ah!' she said, 'I die happy, since with my last looks I saw the King weep.' These were the last words she uttered: sinking back, she gave up her soul to her Creator in the garb of pomp and vanity. The King, after having kissed the white forehead of his victim—she was only twenty years of age—returned, we are told, to his palace a wiser and a better man. The only proof given, however, is that he left off champagne and took to bordeaux, 'le vin des gentes timides et des estomacs inquiets.'"

The National Magazine, amidst a number of articles, varied and amusing, has Mr. Milner Gibson for its usual Parliamentary sketch by Mr. Ritchie. The President of the Board of Trade is peculiarly well hit off; as, for instance:—" When he sat with the Manchester party, by the side of Cobden and Bright, he looked little like a Manchester man himself. There was about him far more of the air of the country gentleman and scholar; and you would imagine that he had got there merely for a chat, as his light, gay air by no means harmonised with the serious appearance of his colleagues. Mr. Gibson always looks good-tempered and pleasant, and has been, and is now, rather a handsome-looking man; and, not being blessed with large whiskers, has still rather a young and fresh appearance; but, since he has became President of the Board of Trade and one of the Cabinet, he certainly has not improved in appearance. On the night when Lord Palmerston moved his celebrated resolutions I thought Mr. Gibson looked peculiarly uncomfortable and disappointed. No doubt Mr. Gibson went into the Ministry to repeal the paper duties. A reactionary House of Commons, and an innovating House of Lords, however, decided otherwise at the eleventh hour. With brown, curly hair, light complexion, well-shaped features, and blue eyes, Mr. Gibson was as fine a specimen of the Conservative colt as you would wish to see, with the frank and winning manner of the English gentry of the better class. Nothing seemed to put him out; and even the country gentlemen—who regarded him with aversion—who considered him as a traitor to their cause—who remembered how he had been born and bred in their camp, and had now gone over to the enemy—could not find it in their hearts to be very angry with a man who, after all, had been one of themselves. Mr. Gibson's manner is conciliatory. He belongs to the extreme party, without seeming to be extreme. His voice is pleasant; it is not harsh, like Cobden's; or passionate, like Bright's. If you differ with him, you don't feel inclined to quarrel with him. Some men in the House are very apt to excite antagonism by the very sound of their voice. Mr. Bright is an instance, Mr. Newdegate is another; Roebuck makes you feel wasp-ish immediately he is on his legs. It is a pity Mr. Gibson does not speak oftener. Certainly, office has a great tendency to make men dumb." Again, we are told, and truly, that Mr. Gibson generally contrives—at least he did before he was in office—to hit the feeling of the House in his speeches:—"He does not seem particularly in earnest, or particularly extreme. He is not savagely severe, or sublimely eloquent. You do not feel that he is trying to make a great speech, and to be quoted as a second Fox or Burke. Even when he acts the part of the tribune of the people he has the air of a gentleman, and there is good-nature in his voice and a merry twinkle in his eye. As long as democracy rejoices in such a representative, patricians need not shrink from it, or old ladies dream of Mirabeau and Robespierre. No noble Lord need fear the working classes under the leadership of Mr. Gibson. He, by birth, is a gentleman; was brought up at Cambridge; is the owner of a large landed estate; and, if he listens to the manufacturers, and is on good terms with the bugbear of political dissent, and occasionally appears on the platform at St. Martin's Hall, and casts in his lot with Cobden and Bright, it must be remembered that he at least has, even in the eyes of Spooner and Newdegate, a stake in the country, and is of the class who are supposed to be alone qualified for statesmanship and office, and political rank.——The Englishwoman's Journal, in addition to its other characteristic merits, that this month, the peculiar distinction of being, for the first time, printed by female compositors, at the Victoria Press, Great Coram-street.—The monthly number of the Welcome Guest is varied and lively.—The Art-Journal is abreast of its reputation, and that is saying a great deal. The steel engravings are executed with that perfection which is always to be found in this admirable serial. The first is by Graves, A.R.A., from Copley's picture, in the Royal Collection, of "The Royal Princesses—Daughters of George III." Mr. Cousens has dealt very skilfully with what must have been a troublesome subject—namely, Turner's singular picture, in the National Gallery, entitled "Peace—Burial of Wilkie." Mr. Cousens' engraving, however, is before called "Preparing for the Bath" is exquisitely delicate, without any diminution of force and distinctness. The woodcuts in this number of the journal seem to be unusually numerous.

THE ELECTRIC TARGET INVENTED BY LIEUT. CHEVALIER.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 231.

THE BLACK ROCK, OFF THE COAST OF MAYO.
SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 232.

RAGGED SCHOOLS FESTIVAL AT MUSWELL-HILL.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 232.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Sept. 9—14th Sunday after Trinity. William the Conqueror MONDAY, 10—Salmon Fishing ends. [died, 1087.
TUESDAY, 11.—Siege of Delhi commenced, 1857.
WEDNESDAY, 12.—Siege of Vienna, 1683.
THURSDAY, 13.—The Austria lost, 1858.
FRIDAY, 14.—Holy Cross. The Duke of Wellington died, 1852.
SATURDAY, 15.—Hunkisson killed, 1830.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 15, 1860.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
3 0 3 30	3 45 4 15	4 30 5 0	5 15 5 45	6 0 6 30	6 45 7 15	7 30 8 0

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Monday and during the Week (positively the last week of THE OVERLAND ROUTE, and of Mr and Mrs. Charles Kean's Engagement), at Seven, a Comedy, entitled, After Supper; or, WAITING FOR THE OVERLAND MAIL. Preceded by (for the last time) THE OVERLAND ROUTE, A GAME OF SPECULATION. On Thursday and Friday, after THE OVERLAND ROUTE, a New Farce. On Saturday, for the last night of THE OVERLAND ROUTE. On Monday, Sept. 17, Miss Amy Sedgwick.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—On Monday and during the Week (last time), THE WOMAN IN WHITE. Mr. Wilkie Collins and Mr. Pitcher. Hillarius; Miss Agnes Robertson, Miss Swanborough. MR. WOLD AS AN AUTHOR—MR. ROBERTSON AS AN ARTIST—AND MUCH LAR DOING. Concludes with THE WOMAN IN WHITE.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPITHEATRE.—Monday, September 10th, and during the Week to commence with Lord Byron's Spectacle of BLACK EYED SUSAN, or, All in the Downs. Mr. Paul Herring, Mr. Frank Matthews, Mr. Jeffreys Lewis and Mdlle Rosina. Concludes with CRYSTAL PALACE.—CLARA NOVELLO'S FAREWELL CONCERT.—Two Performances, on a large scale, of the CREATION and MESSIAH will take place on the Grand Orchestra on WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY next, the 12th and 13th of September. The Band will comprise the principal performers of the Norwich and Worcester Festivals, the band of the Crystal Palace Company, and numerous members of the fashionable amateur orchestras. The Chorus will comprise members of most of the choral societies in London, including the Sacred Harmonic Society, the Royal Amateur Society, the Vocalists, the Choral Society, Messrs. Hullah's Classes, Mr. Land's Classes, Mr. Martin, Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Tickets of Admission, Half-a-Crown each; Reserved Seats, Five shillings each; and at the Handel Festival, Half-a-Crown each for each day, or a set of Admission and Reserved-Seat Tickets for the two days, 7s. 6d.; may be had at the Crystal Palace, at the Exhibition of the Japanese of the same name in Oxford-street, and forward Reserved Seats by post-office.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—G. W. MARTIN'S PRIZE GLEES and NATIONAL PART-SONGS.—A GRAND PERFORMANCE by a Choir of TWO THOUSAND VOICES will take place in the Great Transept, on THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1860, commencing at Three o'Clock. The programme will include the following new and original Part-Songs:—"Our Song Shall Be of Spring," "Summer Sunset," "Defence, not Defiance," "The Army and Navy." The Bells, The Volunteers, and The Old Church Glee Singers. Conductor, Mr. G. W. Martin. The Band will be the largest force of performers ever heard in the country, and will include Mr. Martin, Admission, Half-a-Crown; Children under Twelve, One Shilling. Reserved Seats, Half-a-Crown extra, may be had at the Crystal Palace, at Exeter Hall, and the usual agents.

WASHINGTON FRIEND'S 5000 MILES in CANADA and the STATES, with his Voyage and Visit to Ireland with the Royal Party, and from the Prince of Wales), including the Falls of Niagara, River St. Lawrence, Thousand Islands, Rapids, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Kenora's Hall, Piccadilly. Daily, 10 to 5. Adm. 1s., Gallery 2s. Stalls at Town and Night o'Clock.

THE SISTERS SOPHIE and ANNIE will have the honour of appearing in their new and original Entertainment, entitled STRIVE MEDLEY, at Hall, St. Marylebone, on Monday Evening next, Sept. 10; at Bishop Stortford, on Tuesday, 11; Gravesend, 12; Musical Director, Mr. W. Cartwright.

CORREGGIO'S ECCE HOMO.—The long-sought Replica of the original Picture in the National Gallery, which has excited such deep interest in the finest painting in this country, is ON VIEW at GARDNER'S GALLERY, 53, Pall-mall. Admission from Nine till Seven.

TOLKIEN'S 25-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, with easy terms of purchase, elegant design, and various woods, 42-octave, is superior to any English or French piano in the price. Twenty-five guinea Model in the trade at this. Illustrated Catalogues gratis.—37, King William-street, London-bridge, E.C.

TOLKIEN'S PIANOS.—Public attention is called to a large assortment of the best Pianofortes in England, at Moderate Prices, Cottage, Semi-Cottage, and Pianette, 84 octaves, with all the latest improvements, some a little used, from 19 to 35 guineas. Every instrument, on easy terms, at 37, King William-street, London-bridge. Pianofortes for Hire. Illustrated Catalogues gratis.

TOLKIEN'S IRON PIANOFORTE.—This Piano, with the double repeating action, brass boring, trichord, check, and all the latest improvements made in the Model Cottage Pianoforte, is the only Pianoforte manufactured capable of resisting the heats and damps of these climates. Model Cottage Pianoforte, 84 octaves, including 25 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues gratis.—37, King William-street, London-bridge, E.C.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97a, Quadrant, Regent-street.—Lessons or carriage attendance by Professor Smart from the Mill Yard daily. Persons of all ages received privately, and taught at any time suiting their convenience. Gentlemen's Sons and Wards carefully trained. Professor Smart continues to Reside on the Premises. Separate rooms for Ladies. Testimonials and Prospectus forwarded Mrs. Smart will attend. For prospectuses, terms, &c., apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

FURNITURE,
WHERE TO BUY, WHAT TO BUY, HOW TO BUY.
T. and S. BRYCE, 31 to 35, City-road.
Goods carriage paid to all parts of the kingdom.
Illustrated Catalogue gratis and post-free.

FURNITURE.—Gratis: a new and elaborately-illustrated CATALOGUE containing over 250 Designs of Bedsteads, Bedding, Bedroom Furniture, Stoves, Fenders, &c., all of which are marked in plain figures at the lowest possible cash prices, by SMITH and CHANCE, 324, 325, 326, Upper Thames-street, Blackfriars-bridge, London, E.C. Only address and number, 324, Upper Thames-street. Orders of 40s. and upwards to be SOLD for 32 guineas, recently sent 89 guineas; dining-room dito, in Spanish mahogany, 50 guineas; ditto, in rosewood, 60 guineas; drawing-room dito, in rosewood, 100 guineas; ditto, in walnut-wood, 120 guineas; bedroom dito, in walnut-wood and marble-top washstands, 10 guineas each suite. The whole of the above are decided bargains.

OLD OAK DINING-ROOM SUITE, in rich velvet, comprising a capital sofa and solid chairs, pair of easy chairs, Dutch bureau cabinet filled with left; pier-glass back, nobly set of telescope dining tables, dinner-waggon, &c. The whole of the above, in the finest condition, for SALE, at a moderate price. Also a Suite of Drawing-room Furniture, in Spanish mahogany and rosewood, for SALE, at Stoke-green, Bognoria.—N.B. Also a noble oak Wrought Bookcase, with four doors to match. Apply as above.

TEA.—MOORE BROTHERS and COMPANY are the only Co-operative Stores willing to supply Families direct with Tea at Wholesale Prices. Best Souchong, guaranteed, 3s. 8d. per lb. Best Dryden Caffee, 1s. 4d.; best Mocha-java, 1s. 6d.; recommended. Best Real India, 1s. 6d., highly recommended.—Moore Brothers and Company, 30, London-bridge, City.

BAKER'S TEA THE BEST EXTANT.—Rich Pekoe Souchong, 3s. 8d. per lb. A five-pound Canister for One Guinea, carriage-free, to any part of England. Price-lists gratis and post-free.—Barkley and Son, Tea Merchants, 103, Tottenham-court-road, W.

COALS.—BEST COALS ONLY.—COCKERELL and CO.'S Price is now 20s. per ton, Best Wallsend, screened coals, as supplied by them to her Majesty. 13, Cornhill; Purfleet Wharf, Belvedere, Blackfriars, &c.; Essex Wharf, Finsbury, E.W.; and Sunderland Wharf, Peckham, S.E.

CARTER'S 40s. COLLECTION of BULBS for FORCING, All First-rated and Picked Roots.
2 Named Roman Hyacinths, in twelve sorts | 1 dozen Tulips, Due Van Thol, scarlet
2 dozen Polyanthus Narcissus, in nine sorts | 1 dozen Gloire, white, rose
2 dozen Single Hyacinths, in twelve sorts | 1 dozen Gloire, yellow, rose
1 dozen Double Hyacinths, in twelve sorts | 1 dozen Duke of York, scarlet and yellow
1 dozen Tulips, Due Van Thol, scarlet and yellow | 1 dozen Late, Bee Flower
1 dozen Late, Rose Flower
Half the above Collection, 20s.
JAMES CARTER and CO., Seedsmen, 237 and 238, High Holborn, W.C.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN AND MIDLAND RAILWAYS.—EXCURSION RACES.—FIRST and SECOND CLASS ordinary DAY TICKETS issued at the EUSTON-SQUARE STATION to DONCASTER, for Tuesday's Race, place as Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th of September, will be available to RETURN by all Trains from that place any day up to and including SATURDAY, September 15.
By Order.

THE ROYAL HOSPITAL FOR INCURABLES, at Putney. The only hospital in the kingdom for the permanent care of incurable patients without limit. Governor—Sir Benjamin Guinness, Bart. Patients are admitted by presentation. Information may be obtained on application to the Sub-Secretary, Mr. FREDERIC ANDREW, at the Hospital, Putney, or at the office, 48, Cornhill, E.C.
10, Poultry, August 28, 1860.

SEALS.—ENGRAVED, TWO SHILLINGS EACH, Plain and Coloured. THE OFFICIAL SEAL of a splendid DESIGNATION, of large compass (4 inches round), presenting the Arms, Crest, Motto, and Supporters. Apply to T. E. Gray and Co., Seven Dials, 2, Monmouth-court, Lisle-street, Leicester-square.

MANILLA-HOUSE SCHOOL, Peckham Rye, Surrey, conducted by the Misses JOHN BOUSFIELD, assisted by resident governesses and a Professor, with other improvements, added. Competent masters are engaged for the accomplishments.

IDIOTCY or INSANITY.—To Noblemen, &c.—A married Medical Gentleman residing in the country, and about retiring from the duties of a large Asylum, wishes to undertake the charge of a family or gentleman mentally afflicted. A superior home, with every possible comfort and attention, will be afforded, and the duty will be performed with the greatest kindness and care. Address, A. B., care of Mr. Rivington, Bookseller, St. Paul's Church-yard, London.

CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER—MEDICAL MAN residing in Jersey is able to provide a COMFORTABLE HOME for an INVALID GENTLEMAN. Good entrance given in London. Address, A. P. care of Mr. Jones, Jersey.

CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER—MEDICAL MAN residing in Jersey is able to provide a COMFORTABLE HOME for an INVALID GENTLEMAN. Good entrance given in London. Address, A. P. care of Mr. Jones, Jersey.

TO BE LET, FURNISHED or UNFURNISHED, Pembroke, the COTTAGE of a Gentleman, containing: dining and drawing-room, with folding doors, and two conservatories opening to the lawn; study, fully situated in its own gardens, with greenhouse, close to the water, with a fine view on the Thames; six bed-rooms, dressing-room, and two servants' rooms. Rent moderate for a small family. Terms: Three guineas per week for the months. The gardens and greenhouse will be kept in good condition. Address, A.B., care of Mr. Wm. Taylor, 14, Adelaide-street, E.C.

DONCASTER RACES.—During the Races an unusually large number of Visitors will be in Doncaster, and as the RACES, of all the Meetings, are fixed on Sale at MESSRS. SMITH and SONS Bookstall at the Doncaster Railway Station.—N.B. The prices will be as usual, and not raised as at the Bookstalls at Newcastle and York.

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—C. B. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 29, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the Royal Academy, have just completed a new and very PERFECT TELESCOPE, which they call the CRYSTAL GLASSES, weighing only four ounces each, containing 12 and 18 lenses, constructed with achromatic glass to a new definition; power of 30 miles, and will show the Moon. They serve every purpose as the Raccatore and at the Opera House. Country sensory and Marine Glasses, Race Glasses, Opera Glasses, Prismatic Field Glasses, Reading and Writing Glasses, Microscopes, Thermometers, Barometers, Compasses, and Night Glasses. The terms for them are powerful and brilliant telescopes for both eyes. The Opera Glasses are made with sliding rack centre-pieces, and are the only glasses which can be extra interocular purposes, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's rings, and the Moon's mountains. Their Field Glasses are unrivalled for distinctness and brilliancy of vision, and are the only glasses which will show objects distinctly in the dark. Their Reading and Writing Glasses are of the most powerful description, and all sizes, with increasing powers, and are secured by her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme Deafness, by which the most delicate whisper is distinctly heard, is forwarded by Conductor. It fits into the ear so as not to be in the least perceptible; the unpleasant sensations from other instruments to be found is entirely obviated. Testimonials from all persons, and evidence from to hear distinctly at church and at public assemblies. Every other sort of hearing instrument.—Messrs. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 20, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly W

SPECTACLES.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at any age to read with ease, and to see clearly at all distances, without the aid of spectacles.—Messrs. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 20, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W., have invented a new principle of vision, derived from the invention is that vision depends upon the rapidity with which the rays of light from Combined pencils are brought to focus at the most minute corruption; can see with these lenses of a much less magnifying power and at a much greater distance than ordinary, to the dangerous effects of further powerful assistance.—20, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

FREDERICK DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker to the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, and to the Admiralty, 34, Strand, and 61, Royal Exchange—No connection with 33, Cockspur-street.

SARL and SONS, 17 and 18, Cornhill, respectfully solicit attention to their Stock of Silver Goods, which, for Variety of Pattern, Novelty of Design, and Moderate Charges, they feel confident cannot be surpassed in the West End Chests. The Silver-plate Department is in the Gallery of the Building, and consists of every description of Table Plate, Dessert Services, Tea Services, Candelabra, Epergnes to display a large and beautiful stock of Argentine Plate, the manufacture of which they have recently much improved, and which they can confidently recommend. Electro-Silvering and Gilding by the Patent Process. Sarl and Sons' Illustrated Catalogue forwarded on application. Purchases and Prices may be had on application.
SARL and SONS, 17 and 18, Cornhill, E.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send Name and County to the Royal Heraldic Studio and Library: in a few days you will receive a correct copy of your Family Arms, Crest, and Motto, in Heraldic Colours, on Vellum, for Framing, for Large Size, 12s. Family Pedigrees, with original grant of Arms, to whom and when granted, from the Records in the British Museum, Heralds' College, &c., &c. "The Manual of Heraldry," 400 Engravings, 3s. 6d. "The Origin of Family Names," by C. CULLETON, Librarian to the Royal Institution, and the Manchester Institute, 35, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), London, W.C. Arms, Crests, &c., Engraved in the Best Style.—Crest on Seals or Rings, 7s.; on Steel Die, 5s.; Initials, 1s. 6d. per Letter. Book Plate, Arms, Crest, and Motto, 10s. 6d. Arms Painted and Quartered. Sketch and Estimate for Engraving Dies, &c. Instructions for the Appointment to the Queen, 35, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), London, W.C.

SOLID GOLD RING (18-carat, Hall-marked), engraved with Crest, 2 guineas; Arms, 5 guineas. Sketch and Estimate for Arms and Crest sent to select from.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), London, W.C.

STAMP YOUR OWN PAPER, with Arms, Crest, Initials, or Name and Address, by means of CULLETON'S PATENT EMBOSSING PRESS, 15s.; Arms, Crest, and Name and Address, 21s. Instructions for Stamp to the Board of Trade, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), London, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS send to the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—Plain Sketch, 2s. 6d.; Name and Crest, 5s.; Coloured Sketch, 5s. 6d., or stamps. Pedigrees of Families, 5l.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile Lincoln's-inn, W.C.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The established office for authority in England, which for many years has furnished Arms, Crests, &c., to the Nobility and Gentry, has REMOVED from 329, High Holborn to 44, Great Queen-street.

CAUTION on HERALDRY.—The Errors committed by Stationers, Jewellers, Engravers, and others, are such that bachelors are represented married, the married widows, and the widows widowers. The proper Arms selected, for their own protection, to consult her Majesty's Heralds, or the Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, who have the Records and Books for reference.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOTS, 56, Cheapside, and 32, Ludgate-street, for the sale of NICOLE'S celebrated Large MUSICAL BOXES, playing from Eight to Twelve Tunes, price 5 guineas to 50 guineas. Snuff-boxes, same tune, 1s. 6d. to 5s. Every description of Musical Box from and Prices gratis and post-free, on application to WALES and M'CULLOCH, as above.

SUPERB GILT DRAWING-ROOM CLOCKS, at £5 5s.; Handsome Dining-room Clocks, 3 guineas.—WALES and M'CULLOCH, 56, Cheapside, and 32, Ludgate-street, E.C.

DR. DE JONGH'S
(Knight of the Order of the Lion of Belgium)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL,
Administered with the greatest success by most of CONSIDERABLE MEDICAL MEN OF THE DAY,
As the only effectual remedy for all forms of SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, WASTING AND ALL SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, RICKETS, INFANTILE WASTING, AND ALL SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS.

Extensive experience, and the constant testimony of numberless eminent medical practitioners, have established the fact that DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is a pure and genuine Oil, and that it is the most efficacious form in which it can be obtained.

Its wholesome, speedy effects, safety, and economy entirely recommend this unrivalled preparation to invalids. NO OTHER OIL CAN POSSIBLY PRODUCE THE SAME BENEFICIAL RESULTS.

Sold only in IMPERIAL Half-pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; capsuled, and labelled with DR. DE JONGH'S Stamp and Signature, WITHOUT WHICH NONE CAN POSSIBLY BE GENUINE, by all Chemists of Repute.

ANSAR, HARFORD, and Co., 77, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.,
CULVERS—SOLE AGENTS FOR PROVINCIAL DISTRICTS.

NAVAL AND MARINE CADETS.—ROYAL NAVAL ESTABLISHMENT, Eastern Parade, Southsea.
MRS. EASTMAN continues to receive Naval Cadets into her House, under the immediate superintendence of the Head Master, Mr. Spackman, and the other masters, so many years with the late Mr. Thomas Eastman, R.N.
In addition to the usual Instruction for Naval Examination, Pupils receive a Classical and General Education, and are fitted for the Universities and Civil Appointments.
Six Gentlemen have passed from this Establishment as Naval Cadets, and more than 200 as Marine Cadets.
Applications to be addressed to Mr. Spackman, the Head Master. Prospectuses and other information may be obtained at Messrs. Smith's Library, 307, Regent-street, W.

NEW BOOKS RECEIVED.

A Manual of Elocution on Paper and Practice. By Thomas Sheridan. Longman and Co.
Antiquarian, Ethnological, and other Researches in New Granada, Ecuador, Peru, and Chili. By E. Squier. Trübner.
Lectures on the Science of Language and Explicit. By Prof. Max Müller, M.A. Trübner.
Elements of Cellanics. By A. Wynter Blyth. Trübner.
Practical Examples of the English and Foreign Funds, Debts, and Exchanges, all Nations; Banks, Railways, Mines, and the principal Joint-Stock Companies. By Frederick Martin. By F. S. Simmonds. Wilson.
Lectures on Physiology, Chemistry, and Botany. By Dr. Lindley. Revised by Dr. G. Owen. Trübner and Co.
Lectures on Surgery. Two volumes. By a Chaplain in H.M. Indian Service. Trübner.
Guide to Moffat, A. and C. Black, Edinburgh.
Guide to the Counties of Essex, Suffolk, and Norfolk. By Edward Mackenzie E. Walford.
Guide to the Mountains, Lakes, and Scenery of Wales. By Edward Mackenzie E. Walford.
Handbook for South Wales, &c. Murray.
Handbook to Paris, Versailles, the Environs, Fontainebleau, Chartres, Rheims, and Dijon. Murray.
Illustrations. By the Rev. J. M. Wilson. Rivingtons.
History, Theory, and Practice of the Electric Telegraph. By Edward Highton. Virtue Brothers and Co.
How We Saw Belgium, the Rhine, the Moselle, and Paris. By Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Newton. Shephard and Co.
Lyrics of Life. By Alexander Smith. Poems. By Catherine F. S. Macready. Chapman and Hall.
Literary Remembrances and Gleanings. By R. W. Procter. Simpkin and Marshall.

NEW BOOKS RECEIVED.

Nelsoniad. An Epic-tion Semi-book. Simpkin and Marshall.
Lectures on Surgery. By a Chaplain in the Indian Service. Trübner and Co.
Guide to the Counties of Essex, Suffolk, and Norfolk. By Edward Mackenzie E. Walford.
Guide to the Mountains, Lakes, and Scenery of Wales. By Edward Mackenzie E. Walford.
Handbook for South Wales, &c. Murray.
Handbook to Paris, Versailles, the Environs, Fontainebleau, Chartres, Rheims, and Dijon. Murray.
Illustrations. By the Rev. J. M. Wilson. Rivingtons.
History, Theory, and Practice of the Electric Telegraph. By Edward Highton. Virtue Brothers and Co.
How We Saw Belgium, the Rhine, the Moselle, and Paris. By Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Newton. Shephard and Co.
Lyrics of Life. By Alexander Smith. Poems. By Catherine F. S. Macready. Chapman and Hall.
Literary Remembrances and Gleanings. By R. W. Procter. Simpkin and Marshall.
Nelsoniad. An Epic-tion Semi-book. Simpkin and Marshall.
Lectures on Surgery. By a Chaplain in the Indian Service. Trübner and Co.
Guide to the Counties of Essex, Suffolk, and Norfolk. By Edward Mackenzie E. Walford.
Guide to the Mountains, Lakes, and Scenery of Wales. By Edward Mackenzie E. Walford.
Handbook for South Wales, &c. Murray.
Handbook to Paris, Versailles, the Environs, Fontainebleau, Chartres, Rheims, and Dijon. Murray.
Illustrations. By the Rev. J. M. Wilson. Rivingtons.
History, Theory, and Practice of the Electric Telegraph. By Edward Highton. Virtue Brothers and Co.
How We Saw Belgium, the Rhine, the Moselle, and Paris. By Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Newton. Shephard and Co.
Lyrics of Life. By Alexander Smith. Poems. By Catherine F. S. Macready. Chapman and Hall.
Literary Remembrances and Gleanings. By R. W. Procter. Simpkin and Marshall.

THE REVIEW AT KNOWSLEY PARK will be fully Illustrated in the ensuing Number of this Journal.

A Two-page MAP OF CANADA, NEW BRUNSWICK, and NOVA SCOTIA, will also be issued with our Number for next week.

Numerous interesting Sketches in connection with the PRINCE OF WALES'S VISIT to BRITISH NORTH AMERICA have been received from our Special Artists, and will be engraved in the forthcoming Numbers of this Journal.

A Four-page MAP OF ITALY and SWITZERLAND, printed in Colours, will be published, Gratis, with this Journal on Saturday, September 22.

A Large PICTURE, PRINTED IN COLOURS, of the METROPOLITAN RIFLE CORPS in HYDE PARK, in their RESPECTIVE COSTUMES, will shortly appear in this Journal.

A carefully-finished VIEW OF THE FALLS OF NIAGARA, from THE TOP OF THE FALLS ON THE AMERICAN SIDE, also PRINTED IN COLOURS, will be given at the same time.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1860.

PEOPLE who are overfond of excitement are expressing themselves almost disgusted with the tameness of Garibaldi's march on Naples. Lady Gay Spanker's pathetic lament over "no rows!" is echoed by those who talked largely of some hard fighting and a desperate stand at last. The Dictator's progress has been practically uninterrupted at any rate he has hitherto encountered no really serious opposition. What wonder! Of the Royalist troops sent against him numbers have declared for him, others have surrendered on terms—which means much the same thing—and the rest have hitherto declined to the tune of "Ha scadna fight for Charlie" sung the wrong way. Garibaldi is advancing, therefore, through a country devoid of enemies and overflowing with friends whose enthusiasm knows no bounds. He writes to his friends in the same quiet-masterful style in which one announces an intended visit to a country friend—I shall be with you about the 8th. But for Naples! all is confusion, anarchy, insurrection—according to some; the better reading probably is that the Neapolitans are merely anticipating the end by a day or two. Nothing seems to have happened which is not entirely natural under the circumstances, and the only wonder is that there has not been more disturbance, and that in a direction exceedingly distasteful to all true believers in the sacredness of the Royal person, no matter what that person's crimes. For the present King Bomba is utterly unpowered, by nature, tradition, or education, to grapple with such a crisis—his conduct forcibly reminds us of one of our police reports which appeared the other day. Some notorious offender, convicted for the twentieth time of a petty crime, created, we were told, a scene in court by strenuous vehement protestations of innocence, by frightful menaces, and frantic appeals to the bystanders for help, and when, at last, the officers approached to remove him, clung to the dock with such pertinacious force that he was with great difficulty detached from it. We have our doubts, however, whether, in spite of the most energetic struggles, the parallel would hold so far as the forcible removal is concerned. Meanwhile, we repeat our last week's question—What next? Prince Murat evinces a desire to have something to say to that question, and receives a rap over the knuckles for doing so. There have been confident rumours of the departure of a considerable Sardinian force, and it is to be observed that Garibaldi still styles himself Dictator for Victor Emmanuel.

Artists are fond of breaking the monotony of too flat and uniform a surface of colour by the introduction of a touch or two of some sufficiently opposite colour; and, if the tint objected to be a brilliant one, of course the touches by which it is broken must be of a more or less dirty tint. A certain M. Duhamel, of the City Council in Montreal, appears to have considered himself an artist or connoisseur of sufficiently enlightened taste to disapprove of the universal brilliancy of colour which has pervaded the Prince's reception in Canada, as well as in our other North American colonies, and to have conceived the idea of introducing some dirt-spots of his own invention, in order to vary the monotony. He did not in a speech too contemptible to be worth quoting further than to say he was incontinently brought on his knees, and made to eat the leek of his own impertinence, his own fellow-citizens playing the part of Fluellen to his Pistol. It scarcely needed Sir Cusack Roney's apologetic letter to enlighten us on such a point. The Canadians, we are not slow in apprehending the truth of the maxim, "Commerce is the cement of peace;" and in looking upon the Prince's inauguration of the stupendous bridge which will open up the resources of their wonderful country, from the furthest West down to the shores of the Atlantic, with far greater interest than all sorts of magnilloquent references to worn-out bygones, in no way available as capital of any sort.

What intelligent Americans south of the St. Lawrence think of the visit of the young Prince may be in some measure be gathered from some exceedingly remarkable comments of the New York press. Standing aloof altogether from European nations as the United States' men do—sedulously and painfully aloof, as their reply about the slave-trade proposal shows—they view all that goes on among us just as a bystander at a game of cricket do, and are better able, of course, to criticise and debate than the players themselves. The conclusion arrived at by the articles alluded to, though obscurely hinted at already by a small portion of our own press, comes, nevertheless, with all the freshness of originality from the lips of those on the spot. In the present seething state of Europe we see the verge of a tremendous conflict in which all the despotic Powers of Europe will be united against England—the principle of tyranny against that of constitutionalism—and recognising in the English Government, as they one in which they can discern any adequate recognition of the natural and inalienable rights of man; and in the Prince of Wales, as heir to the British throne, an exponent of this principle of free government, a confident prospect is held out that in the impending struggle England will find a very eager ally in the young Republic of the West. This is a somewhat novel view of the matter. If, according to their own notion, the British can whip the world, and the Americans the British, what are the two combined destined to effect?

The Prince's progress" which has occupied attention during the week is that of the French Emperor and Empress, who have been visiting that last little parchase of theirs, the Naboth's vineyard, which now forms the south-east corner of France. All, of course, has been joy, if not enthusiasm; the usual number of dreary speeches have been responded to by the usual amount of munificent almsgiving; and the pretty Empress, gliding about the little lake at Annecy in her smart barge amidst the glow of an afternoon sunshine, furnished a very apposite illustration of the universal character of the expedition, which is a pleasure tour. A little incident, however, at Dijon, where a flurried official having apologised to a Cent Garde for treading on his toe, adding that it was unintentional, was graciously informed by the guardsman that he might be pardoned, for that he knew as well as the other that the treading on his toe was a Cent Garde incidentally illustrates rather happily the secret of the general fulsome tone of addresses and congratulations. In England we say, "Some people's corns won't bear treading on."

The last telegram from China, whilst it announces the immediate movement of the expedition, which is to avenge the affair of the Peiho, and to administer to the Celestial Emperor a sharp lesson in the science of modern diplomacy and good faith, furnishes us, at the same time, with a somewhat obscure revelation which has a very suspicious bearing on the proverbial jealousy and coolness of the French in their alliances. A deficiency of a couple of thousand men and the loss of some harness might have furnished very good ground for requesting the British to lead the way, or for borrowing harness from their stores, but it seems an odd pretence for a formal postponement of the expedition setting about its work altogether, and reminds one a little of the dog in the manger. We are well aware by this time—thanks to French newspapers, French prints, and other equally reliable resources—that it was our gallant allies who won the battle in the Crimea, fought it single-handed, and saved our own army to boot; and we doubt not that, but for the timely good sense, or something else, of Baron Gros, we should have found, from the same authentic sources, that the presence of two thousand more French soldiers, and of that harness, was absolutely indispensable to the French troops repeating the same achievements in the East. Meanwhile, we recal the reply of the Iron Duke at Waterloo to the message of a certain foreign officer of exalted rank who refused to allow another certain officer to take precedence of him in the arrangement of a procession: "Tell him to march his men off the ground; we can do without him."

Great pains have been taken to impress on us the real and energy of Fuad Pacha in his mission of pacification. Some 167 executions are reported, and we are assured, with painful earnestness, that the sons and nephews of great men are among the number, and that no respect is paid to rank, but we are not informed why the want of respect stops with the sons and nephews and spares the fathers and uncles. Two of the Pachas have received what seems a very inadequate punishment, and, meanwhile, we have rumours of an expressed determination on the part of the Turks to take two Christian lives for every Mohammedan executed; and we have telegrams announcing further massacres of the Christians in three towns and several villages. Now, Christian men's notion of justice is punishment and prevention, not revenge—still less two lives for one; but what the above significant facts force on our attention is this—that unless the justice promised be administered in such a way, and an example made so terrible as effectually to deter the Mohammedan population in Syria from the very dream of future outrage, there will be little to prevent the departure of the Christian forces from being the signal for a repetition of the Damascus horrors.

THE COURT.

The Court will remain at Balmoral until the close of the ensuing week. On the Tuesday evening last his Serene Highness the Prince and Princess of Leiningen arrived at the Castle, on a visit to her Majesty and the Prince Consort. Lady Churchill succeeded the Lady Harriet Cavendish as Watching to her Majesty.

On Wednesday evening last Majesty rode in the neighbourhood of the Castle in the morning, accompanied by the Princess of Leiningen and Princess Alice. The Prince of Leiningen went out shooting.

The Right Hon. Sidney Herbert left the Castle in the morning, and was received by the Duke of Argyll. The Bishop of Durham arrived at the Castle on the same forenoon, and had the honour to be in attendance on the Queen at dinner, on which occasion the usual oath was administered by Lord Jedburgh, one of her Majesty's Commissioners of Exchequer in Scotland. Mr. Russell had the honour of being invited to dinner. The party also included the Bishop of Edinburgh and Sir James Clark.

On Thursday her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess of Leiningen, Princess Alice, and Prince Arthur, rode to the Falls of the Garrawalt, and then rode to Craig Chuine. The Royal party afterwards rode to Castletown. The Prince Consort went out shooting, and the Prince of Leiningen joined in grouse-shooting.

On Friday evening last Majesty, with the Prince Consort, the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, and Princess Alice, walked in the neighbourhood of the Castle in the morning. Princess Alice, Prince and Princess Leiningen, and Prince Alexander rode to the Falls of Glenshalt. The Prince Consort went out shooting. The Right Hon. Sidney Herbert left the Castle in the morning, and the Hon. Dudley de Ros in attendance on her Majesty.

On Saturday her Majesty and the Prince, accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Leiningen and Princess Alice, attended by the ladies and gentlemen in waiting, walked in the Pinetum immediately adjoining the Castle. The Rev. A. Anderson officiated.

On Sunday her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess of Leiningen, Princesses Alice and Helena, and Prince Arthur, drove to Invercauld and afterwards rode over the Invercauld estate, and the Queen walked in the grounds.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge has been staying during the past week at Gordon Castle, near Fochabers, N.B., on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Richmond.

The Duchess of Sutherland arrived at Stafford House, St. James's, on Tuesday evening, from Paris, and has since gone to join the Duke and family at their residence in Sutherlandshire.

The Marchioness of Abercorn, after visiting the Earl and Countess of Litchfield, at Shugborough Park, Staffordshire, has gone on a visit to the Earl and Countess of Ellesmere, at their seat in the county of Surrey, near Tavistock.

Viscount Maynard is, we are sorry to learn, suffering from severe indisposition on the Continent.

Lord and Lady John Russell and the Hon. Misses Russell will leave Southampton to-day (Saturday) the close of the ensuing week for the south.

The marriage of Lady Arabella Sackville West, youngest daughter of the Earl and Countess Delaware, with Sir Alexander Bannerman, Bart., of Elsick, N.B., will take place on the 18th inst., at Buckhurst Park, Sussex. A large family circle will assemble at Earl Delaware's on the occasion of the nuptials.

A matrimonial alliance is arranged to take place between Colonel the Hon. Percy E. Herbert, brother and heir presumptive to the Earl of Powis, and the Hon. Lucy Charlotte Antrobus, youngest daughter and granddaughter of the Marquis of Lansdowne. Colonel Herbert commands the Montgomeryshire Militia, and is Member for Montgomeryshire.

The marriage of Lord Eustace Cecil, third son of the Marquis of Salisbury, with Miss Gwendoline Talbot, one of the maids of honour to the present, Earl of Elgin, is appointed to take place on the 18th instant.

The Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., and Mrs. Herbert have arrived at Wilton-house, where it will be the duty of the Right Hon. Speaker and Lady Charlotte Denison, at the Duke of Portland's shooting-box.

Lady Caroline Duncombe, the eldest of the late Earl of Feversham's youngest daughter of the Countess Dowager of Jersey, and sister of the late Prince Nicholas Esterhazy—and Lady Clementina Villiers. The lamented deceased, who was in the bloom of womanhood, expired on Tuesday last at Osterley Park, the residence of the Earl and Countess of Jersey. Miss was the youngest of the family of the Countess of Jersey. She was born on the 24th of March, 1841, and on November, 1843, Captain Charles Parke Ibbetson, then of the 11th Hussars.

The mortal remains of the estimable Dowager Countess Cowper were removed on Saturday last from Panshanger, to Hertford Abbey, near Coventry, for interment. The funeral took place on Tuesday last. Earl Cowper, Viscount Melbourne, Lord Ross, Frederick Craven, and other relatives attended on the mournful occasion.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Colonel Haythorne, 1st Royals, has assumed the duties of Adjutant-General of her Majesty's British Forces in India.

The Commander-in-Chief has made the following list the appointment of battery armourers for the field brigades of artillery, whose duty it will be to keep the artillery in repair:—

The Queen has signified her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on Lieutenant Henry Evelyn Wood, 17th Lancers, on account of the gallantry distinguished by him in Kaffirland.

In consequence of the demand for lads for the naval service, many boys have been withdrawn from the Royal School for Naval Shipbuilding. A number of able seamen are now required for vessels fitting out.

It is understood that it is in contemplation on his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales attaining his majority, which will be on the 9th of November, 1862, to give a general brevet to both the Army and Navy, taking in Captains and Lieutenants.

The Secretary of State for War has approved of unexercisable guns being mounted with a view to the economy of the service, and has directed that, generally before the brass arrow, in order to prevent unserviceable guns being employed for field purposes, being mistaken for service guns.

The Governor-General of India has pleased to give the Army and Navy Gazette to allow officers serving in India who may, under instructions from their commanding officers, be ordered to England on duty, to be provided with a contract passage in one of the mail-steamers.

Vice-Admiral the Hon. Sir Frederick William Grey, C.B., Captain Charles Frederick, and Mr. Rossiter, C.B., the Paymaster Secretary or the Admiralty, remain in London to form a board for the disposal of business in the absence of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, who have left town.

The Government has lost no time in proceeding to avail itself of the suggestions of the Royal Commission appointed to report on our naval defences. Portsmouth is now the scene of busy preparation for dispensable fortifications. Contracts have been given out for construction being a chain of forts along the ridge of Portsdown Hill.

NEW ACT OF RIFLE VOLUNTEER CORPS.—On Monday the Act of Parliament, which received the Royal assent at the close of the Session for legalising Rifle Volunteer Corps, came into operation, and, as a matter of practice, was printed. The Act, which is not to apply to Ireland, empowers Lieutenants of counties to provide funds for practice and accommodation, with the consent of the Secretary at War; landholders are empowered to convey lands to be used as rifle grounds; and the Chief Commissioner of Public Works may grant any portion of the Royal parks, &c., for the purposes of the Act, as also may the Commissioners of Woods and Forests. The officers of the Duchies of Lancaster and Cornwall may likewise grant land to rifle corps. Further, the Act provides that corporations, justices, &c., for grant land; and power is given by the statute to stop up footpaths for the purposes of the Act. The Secretary at War is given a veto for the service, safety, and convenience of the public, may be introduced by the regulation of rifle-shooting. Rifle corps may be drilled on by any volunteer rifle corps under the provisions of the Act, which Act is to extend to any rifle corps of which her Majesty has accepted the offer of service.

VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS' MOVEMENTS

As in opening the Session of Parliament her Majesty expressed her gratification at the institution of volunteer rifle corps, so she has closed it by a grace, fail testimony to the progress and efficiency of which she has personally witnessed two such grand and royal instances. At the conclusion on Tuesday week the Royal Commissioners, in the name of the Queen, expressed "the gratification and pride with which she had witnessed the rapid progress in the military efficiency which her volunteer forces have already made, and which is highly honourable to their patriotism."

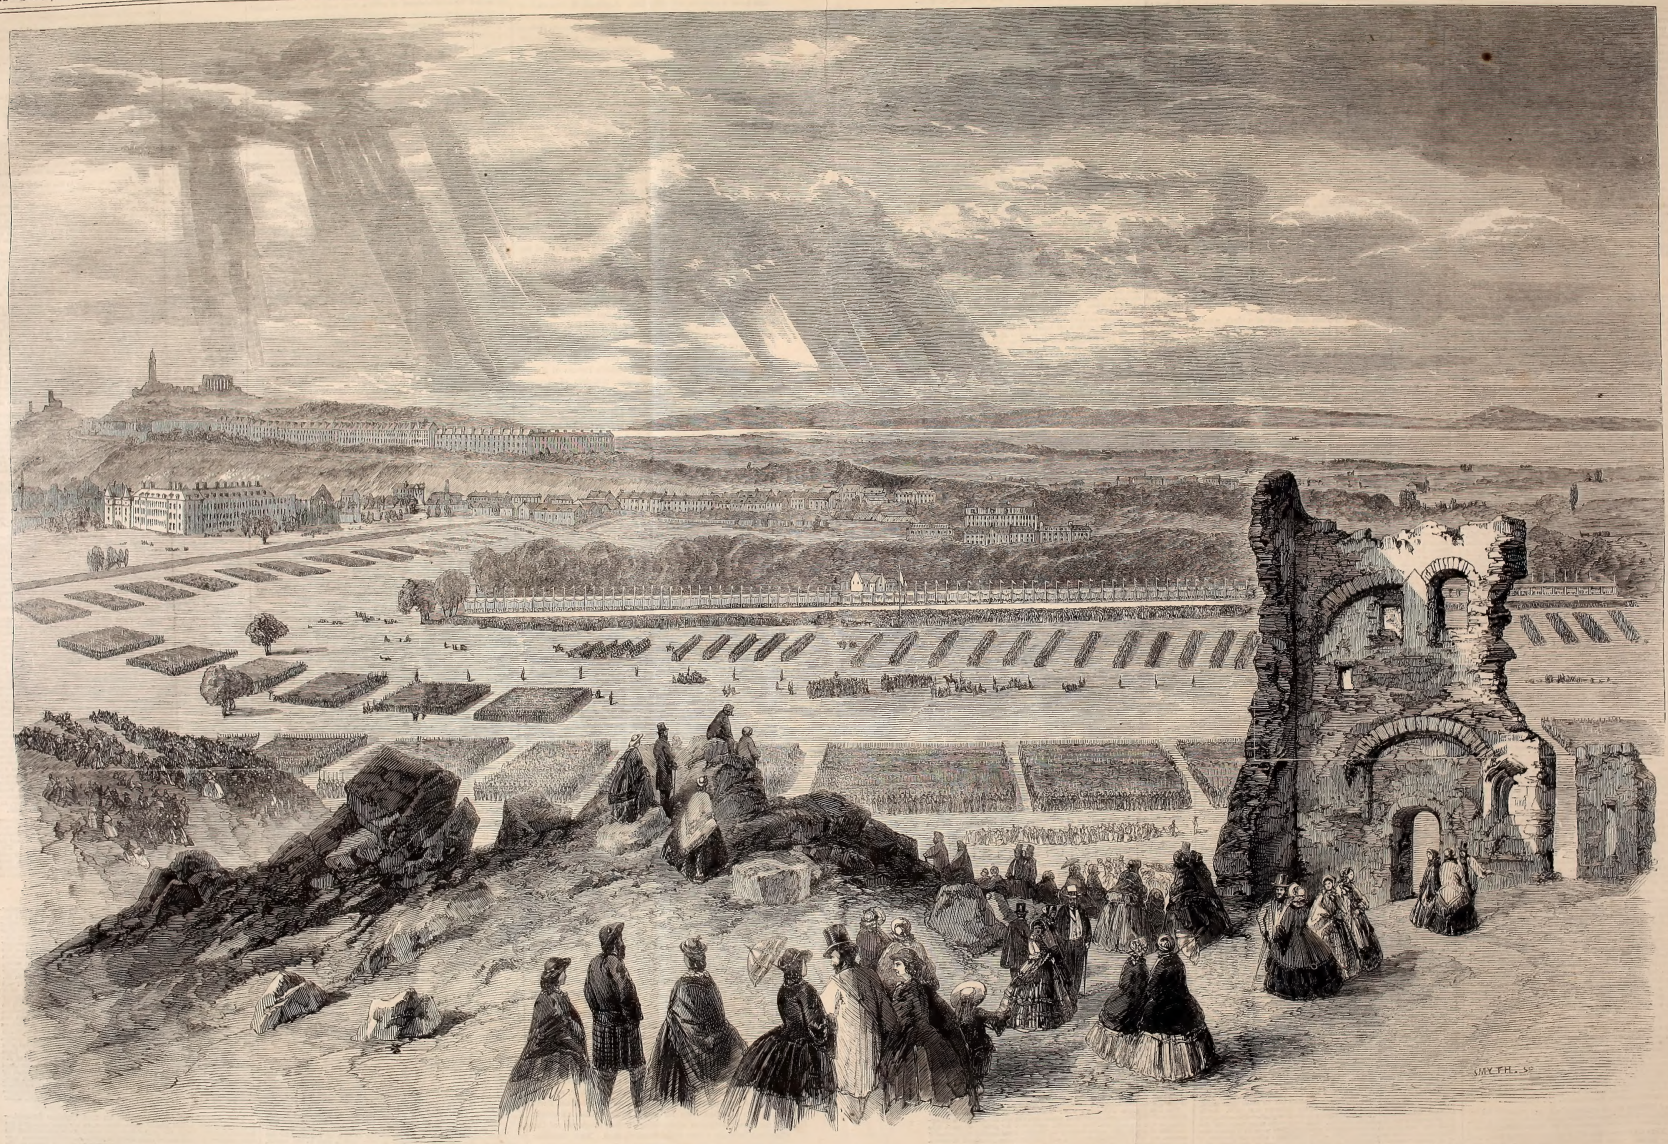
The Duke of Cambridge has issued a general order to the whole of the Army in which he directs all non-commissioned officers and soldiers to salute volunteer officers in uniform. Guards and sentries are to present arms on the occasion of annual parades of volunteers passing their posts.

We give a few particulars of meetings that have recently taken place :—

On Saturday afternoon the members of the London Irish Volunteers marched from the Inns of Court Hotel, and, considering all circumstances, the occasion passed off with the greatest éclat.

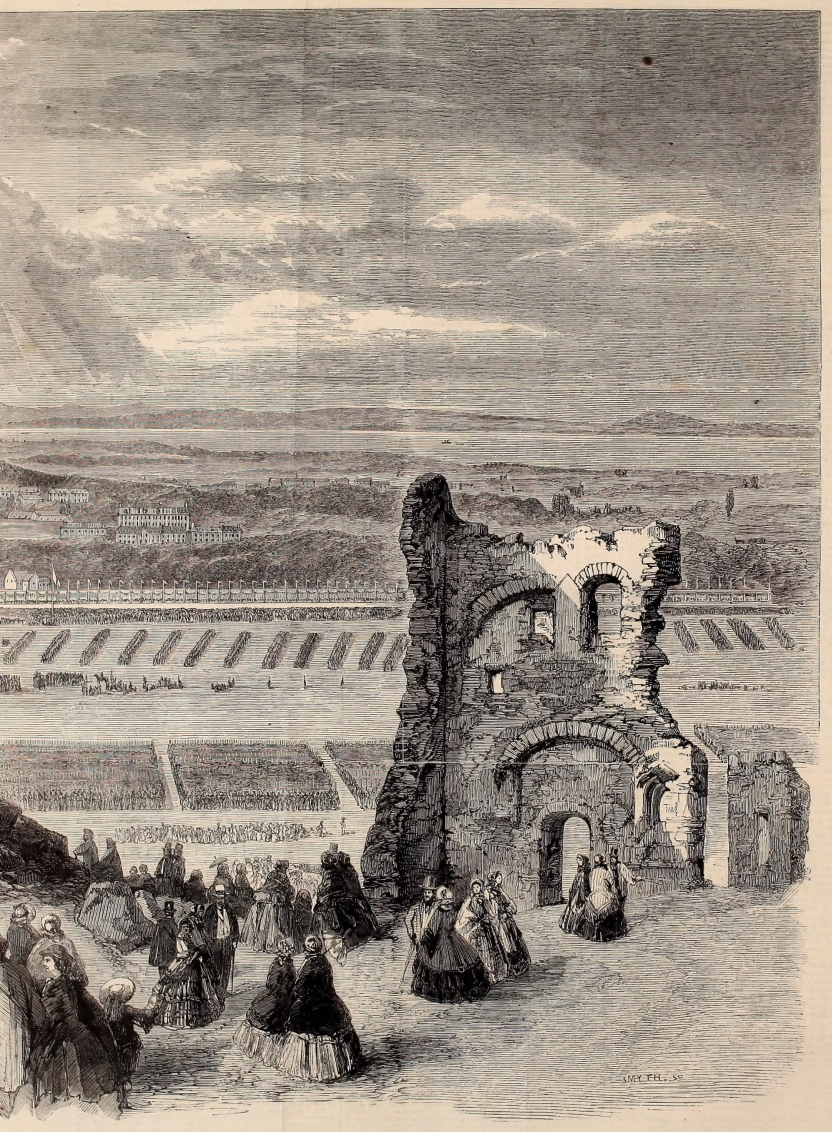
Earl Fitzwilliam, Lord Lieutenant of the West Riding, has expressed his intention to assemble the numerous volunteer corps in his lieutenancy for inspection and review at no distant day.

On Tuesday Lady Ward presented a silver bugle to the Dudley Volunteer Rifle Corps on behalf of Lord Ward of Dudley. The presentation took place in the courtyard at Old Dudley Castle.



Two members of the Woolwich (4th Kent) Rifle Corps—Mr. Herbert Whemes, who won Mr. Ogg's £100 at Wimbledon, and Mr. Muller—were present at the grand rifle match at Cologne, and were both successful in competition for prizes. In the English match Mr. Muller won the first prize, a silver cup, having made 31 points in two shots; and Mr. Whemes the second prize, having made 28 points. Mr. Muller also won the first prize in another match, having hit the centre of a wooden bird placed on a pole.

On Monday a match between the 8th Surrey (Epsom) and the 9th Surrey (Richmond) Volunteer Rifle Corps was shot at, the range of the latter corps, adjoining Richmond Park, six members being present from each corps. The match consisted of seven shots each, at 200 yards, and seven shots each, at 22 points. The ranges fired were 200, 300, 400, and 500 yards; five rounds being fired at each. The highest score was obtained, with 30 points, by Captain Ommaney, who obtained 22 points; and on the Epsom side by Mr. Tozer, who made 18 points.



On Tuesday week the non-commissioned officers of the York Rifle Corps presented Lieutenant Bentley Shuttleworth, the resident of Leonard Hall-house, Esq., Deputy Lieutenant of the North Riding of Yorkshire, for the purpose of presenting belts and pouches manufactured on the premises by Lady Thompson, as an acknowledgment of the distinguished compliment paid to the corps by her providing leave of absence to one of its earliest members, to enable him to become a high example to the ladies of England. There were present the Earl and Countess Fitzwilliam, Lord and Lady Wenlock, Lord Richmond, Major Briggs, and other distinguished personages. In reply to the presentation address, Lieutenant Shuttleworth said that many calculations of time of movement seemed to her, as it did to them, specially to claim the active sympathy of ladies. The Countess Fitzwilliam, in a few words, said she was interested in peace and security. She should be proud to see the corps on the field of battle, and she was sure by the York Corps they would do credit to themselves. The whole of the party afterwards partook of a most sumptuous banquet, over which Leonard Thompson, Esq., presided.

Last Saturday week the Duke of Beaufort marched out the Royal Glamorgan Militia, and the Monmouthshire Militia, under the command of Colonel Morgan, Deputy Lieutenant of the North Riding of Yorkshire, for the purpose of practising belts and pouches manufactured on the premises by Lady Thompson, as an acknowledgment of the distinguished compliment paid to the corps by her providing leave of absence to one of its earliest members, to enable him to become a high example to the ladies of England. There were present the Earl and Countess Fitzwilliam, Lord and Lady Wenlock, Lord Richmond, Major Briggs, and other distinguished personages. In reply to the presentation address, Lieutenant Shuttleworth said that many calculations of time of movement seemed to her, as it did to them, specially to claim the active sympathy of ladies. The Countess Fitzwilliam, in a few words, said she was interested in peace and security. She should be proud to see the corps on the field of battle, and she was sure by the York Corps they would do credit to themselves. The whole of the party afterwards partook of a most sumptuous banquet, over which Leonard Thompson, Esq., presided.

Last Saturday week the Duke of Beaufort marched out the Royal Glamorgan Militia, and the Monmouthshire Militia, under the command of Colonel Morgan, to Llandaff, where, after exhibiting great proficiency in military evolutions, they enjoyed the genial hospitality of the Earl. Thereupon, the whole force marched into the city of Llandaff, and, after the usual complimentary terms, The Inspector-General having left the ground, a square was formed, and the Duke of Beaufort addressed the regiments in a few complimentary remarks.

THE REVIEW BY HER MAJESTY OF RIFLE VOLUNTEERS IN THE QUEEN'S PARK, EDINBURGH.—FROM A DRAWING BY KEELEY HALSWELL, EDINBURGH.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

DINBURGH.—FROM A DRAWING BY KEELEY HALSWELL, EDINBURGH.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE ROYAL VOLUNTEER REVIEW AT EDINBURGH.

THE review by her Majesty of the Scottish Rifle Volunteers in the Queen's Park, Edinburgh, on the 7th ult., was duly chronicled in this Journal. Two illustrations of the review also were given; but, as they contain one or two inaccuracies, we give on pages 222-223 another picture, rigidly accurate in all its details, of this great national event. The review passed off with the greatest possible éclat. The number of troops on the ground was 21,614, the country with the exception of contributing 9000 men. The magnificent amphitheatre formed by Salisbury Crags and Arthur's Seat was crowded with spectators, the estimated number present being 200,000. The volunteers formed in line at half-past three o'clock, and at a quarter to four her Majesty entered the park, attended by a brilliant Staff. The corps of Artillery of a detachment of the 13th Light Dragoons, preceded by the Staff Adjutant, and followed by the usual civil and military officers. Her Majesty, driving in a carriage and four, was accompanied by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Athole, Princess Alice, and Princess Louise. On the right of the Queen's carriage rode the Prince Consort, wearing the order of the Thistle; and upon the left the Duke of Buccleuch, Lord Lieutenant of the county, and Colonel of the Royal Company of Archers, Queen's Body Guard for Scotland, wearing the order of the Garter. A second carriage conveyed Princess Helena, Prince Leopold, Prince Louis, and the Countess of Desart, Lady in Waiting. A third carriage conveyed Lady Augusta Bruce, the Hon. Beatrice Bruce, the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., and Lord James Murray. The Queen, having inspected the whole line, returned to the flagstaff, in the rear of which a covered gallery, 900 feet in length, had been built for the use of the Royal personages. The troops commenced marching past at four o'clock. Nearly two hours were occupied in this movement. At a quarter to six the whole of the various corps reformed in line, and, advancing thirty paces, saluted her Majesty. The Queen left the park amidst the enthusiastic cheers of the multitude assembled, and, on reaching her arrival, by a battery of artillery stationed at the foot of Arthur's Seat.

MUSIC.

At the Crystal Palace, on Tuesday last, there was a great concert and a repetition of classic instrumental music in the splendid of the Tonic Sol-fa Association—a body which has risen to great importance and influence. It was founded in the year 1853; and in the same year it had among the pupils of its classes in singing at once the public to its infant efforts, and to predict its success. This success, however, has far exceeded our anticipations, surprising as they were. That this is the case the following striking facts stated by the association are sufficient to show:—"In the close of 1853 the number of pupils taught during the year was calculated at 2000. By the end of 1856 the number of pupils throughout the kingdom had reached 20,000. By the end of 1858 that number had risen to 50,000, and to 65,000. It is more difficult now to calculate their numbers; but there is no doubt we believe that during the year 1859 that number was greatly under instruction was fully 150,000. During the same year 4500 certificates of progress have been issued to pupils after a personal examination by duly appointed teachers. In the present month there are thirteen publications of the Tonic Sol-fa notation, and twenty-four books published in the Tonic Sol-fa (numbering more than 900 pieces), at the price of one penny each. Eight of these publications have classes of their own, who also appeared in this cheap and facile notation; and the Tonic Sol-fa Choir assisted in increasing every month." To these statistics it may be added that the Tonic Sol-fa system is making its way abroad, and our other colonies and dependencies; and that the association publishes a periodical, the Tonic Sol-fa Reporter, the music conducted by the Rev. Mr. Curwen, and extensively circulated. On Tuesday the whole choir assembled for the prizes offered by the association. There were—the Scottish Choir, 150 voices, trained by Mr. Horsley, of that city; the Staffordshire Potteries Choir, by Mr. Powell and Mr. Lees; the Tunbridge Choir, by Mr. Lee and Mr. Stapleton; the Brighton Choir, by Mr. Bentley; and the West Riding Choir, by Mr. Hemingway. The following gentlemen were the judges were—Mr. John Goss, organist of St. Paul's; Mr. James Turle, organist of Westminster Abbey; Mr. George Hogarth, secretary of the Philharmonic Society; Mr. Charles Lucas, organist of the Royal Academy of Music; and Mr. Thomas Oliphant, late, secretary of the Madrigal Society. The selection began by the performance of a madrigal, for two pieces, the one in the ordinary and the other in the new notation, played before the judges, in order to test their skill in sight-singing; and afterwards each choir sang several pieces selected by themselves. The performances were of surprising excellence in every respect, and were listened to by a large audience with the warmest manifestations of pleasure. These performances took place in the small orchestra, at the back of the building, and a hundred minutes were given in the interval all the choirs, together with many hundred members of the Tonic Sol-fa body, assembled in the great Handel orchestra, and sang an excellent selection of the choicest sacred music which has given so much satisfaction at former meetings of the Tonic Sol-fa association. The whole arrangements were under the direction of the committee of the association, and of Mr. Curwen, by whom it was founded, and to whose unwearied exertions it owes its present prosperity and magnitude.

M. and Mdme. SAINTON, after a season in the Pyrenees, are now at Paris on their homeward way. We find in the Paris journal La Presse Musicale an interesting account of the reception given to M. Sainton and his accomplished spouse in Toulouse, the place of his birth, and shall extract from it a few passages, which will be interesting to our readers. A concert was given in honour of M. Sainton by the Choral Society of Toulouse Lasara, a branch of the Royal Academy Association, which has recently attracted so much attention in England, and is doing something the good people of Exeter Hall have acknowledgments of the honour done him by his fellow-countrymen, the journalist says:—"Dr. M. Sainton's expressions of gratitude Mdme. Sainton (née Miss Dolby) desired to share her part of the attention of the Toulouse Orphonists, which she could not do in a more agreeable manner than by singing to them. She did so in a ballad with charming grace, and sang several English and German pieces in a remarkable style, and with great talent. Quite familiar with the beautiful music of Handel and Haydn, she interprets the masterpieces of these masters with the greatest success. She has not those bursts (éclats) of passion we hear every day on the stage, but she possesses those low notes of our contraltos of the Conservatoire, equivocal sounds which are the delight of the Meyerbeer school. She has pure ease an exceptional organ—a contralto such as existed at the period when Handel wrote the ballad of voice of good extent, and descending without effort to the lowest notes of its compass. She sings this art, with expression, with soul. She gives its due colouring to every phrase; never is she monotonous. Whatever she sings, Mdme. Sainton at once reaches the heart. We have heard her sing many airs of Haydn and Handel, English songs, and have been charmed expressly for her by Loders and Randegger: in every one of these she found means to call forth applause, and she often excites a pleasing emotion by her exquisite felicity in expressing the most touching ideas. She ceases to sing, and we still listen." To this just and graphic picture of our fair countrywoman's talents we have only to subscribe. She is a candid and liberal remarks on the state of vocal music in England, respecting which so much ignorance and prejudice still exist in France.

VIEW OF VICTORIA, VANCOUVER'S ISLAND.—Messrs. Day and Sons have just published, in chromo-lithography, an extremely interesting panoramic view of Victoria, Vancouver's Island, from a sketch by Mr. Thomas, Esq. The size of the drawing is 24½ inches by 8 inches, and the view is taken from the harbour. It highly picturesque, and shows the whole village of Victoria, in close proximity with the Victoria district church, the Hudson Bay Company's Fort Victoria, the Governor's residence, and the Colonial Office, Lord Clive, Treasury, House of Assembly, and other public buildings, extending to the entrance to the harbour. The picture is one which will be appreciated by all who take an interest in our colonial territories in the Far West, and particularly at the present moment.

A portrait of Hobbes of Malmesbury has been recently added to the National Portrait Gallery, together with a portrait of Dr. Donning, Lord Ashburton, by Reynolds—the latter presented by Mr. Thomas Baring, M.P.

The cutter Mara was run down off Hartley, between nine and ten o'clock p.m. on Monday, by the Gravesend screw-steamer from London, and two men were drowned.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The adjourned Glympian games were commenced at Wenlock last week with great éclat.

A large quantity of snow is still to be seen on the Stormont Hills. When the road is clearing it presents a dazzling appearance.

The Hon. G. Windsor Clive was on Tuesday returned for Ludlow without opposition, in the room of Colonel Percy Herbert, who has been appointed Deputy-Lieutenant of Ireland.

Mr. John Laird, Chairman of the Birkenhead Commissioners, has expended the sum of £100,000 on the docks, and paid over to Price trustees £160,000, the purchase-money of Woodside Ferry.

Two watersports were seen at Portsmouth, Wales, last Saturday. They formed part of the fête set at sea, but recalled us to the land, and to the sole of the mountain behind Hardrock.

A monument is about to be raised in Gloucester to Bishop Hooper on the spot where he was burnt. A few years ago the remains of the martyr and others were discovered.

The exhibition of the Birmingham Society of Artists opened for the private view on Wednesday. It contains some fine works, and the proportion of pictures by local artists is unusually large and excellent.

James Stokaley, a young Cambridge shoemaker, has just come into possession of about £100,000 in money, besides landed estates of great value in Norfolk.

Mr. William Mallitt, one of the Registrars of the London Court of Bankruptcy, has decided to order Mr. Charles Pearce, Secretary of the Bristol District Court of Bankruptcy, who is incapacitated by illness from discharging his duties, to retire.

A YOUTHFUL HERO.—The silver medallion presented to William Battery, aged fourteen, of Roystonstreet, Deansgate, Manchester, for his intrepid exertions to rescue life from fire on the evening of November 4, 1859, was received by him at the Society's Office for the Protection of Life from Fire, and not by the Royal Humane Society, as stated in our account of the affair.

FURNACE ACCIDENT.—An accident of a very peculiar character occurred at the Lilleshall Company's Furnaces, Oakengates, on Friday week. It was about to be repeated, and for that purpose three men were engaged in blasting the heavy mass of cinder which had risen up and blown off the mouth of the furnace. The power exploded whilst one poor fellow was running the charge of gun-cotton; and by the time he had reached the ground, he was dead. The will lose his sight; and the third was fearfully lacerated.

THE Bright Star steam-packet, Captain Brown, with a cargo of coals, and Bellringer, in that town, for sailing his pen. A slight wound in his lip and a sprain, the latter very severe, are the worst injuries. Brown, however, on Friday week he died in the hospital. Another extraordinary escape is recorded of a boy named Jones, the Pontnewydd Iron Company, from an absence in the tongue or throat, caused by a fragment of a blade of grass which he had in his mouth.

THE COVENTRY STRIKE is at an end, and many of the operatives are said to have resumed work at reduced wages. The Times reporter on the spot says:—"The masters have succeeded in what they have been to yield, and that they will again seek to decide the question between master and man by the same means as before the strike. They have agreed instead of "by piece"—whenever a favourable opportunity for resorting to a strike occurs."

The exhibition of the Liverpool Academy of Paintings will open on the 15th inst. The collection will include a picture by Millais, "an unusually fine description, and chiefly consist of works by British artists. There is also a picture by Meissonier, "The Reader," the property of the Emperor, the subject of this artist's picture being "Listeners never hear any good of themselves."

AT Upton, a village between Doncaster and Pontefract, a meeting was convened on Monday evening, at the house of the widow Elizabeth Mitchell, a farm-servant, was found dead of a gunshot-wound in her master's house. The deceased, who was but the wife of a collier, had been taken into custody, and, say the report, "he maintains a sullen silence in reference to the circumstances of the case." The inquest on the body was held on Wednesday, and resulted in a verdict of "Wilful murder" against the husband.

A suicide of an extraordinary character was perpetrated at Pirbright, Surrey, on Sunday last. A man named Chobham, and a man named Edward Beresford, labourer, of Chobham. He appears to have left Chobham, and started off in the direction of Pirbright. As he walked along the path which runs by the side of the canal, he was observed by several persons to throw himself into the canal locks, upon the woodwork of which he inserted the following words:—"Edward Beresford, aged 21, Chobham, Surrey, labourer." He had, at that time, apparently been dead for some hours. The deceased had left behind him a widowed husband and two children.

REWARD OF GALLANTRY.—Mr. W. Dash, Commander of her Majesty's cutter Racer, at Kingstown, has been presented by the Royal Humane Society with a handsome testimonial, in the form of a gold Reform Medal, and other important measures, but repudiated the assertion that the past six of the navy and army, he had therefore no fear of the future. It was a time rather rough, with a strong tide running, which rendered this service very hazardous. Lieutenant Le Bert's report to the Commissioners states that Mr. Dash "has frequently proved himself a gallant and humane officer, and Lieutenant Le Bert considers that the conduct of Mr. Dash, R.N., in approval of his heroic conduct on the 11th of June, 1859."

LIBEL AND SLANDER BILL.—THE MOST LIBERTY ACT.—A case of considerable public interest was decided on Monday at the Queen's Bench, Westminster, before Mr. Justice Crompton, sitting with a special jury, in a bench action at Leeds, registered under the Limited Liability Act, has "Cassius" (Mr. Hyde Clarke) as the author of the libel, and "Brutus" in front of the building was displayed the Act of Parliament, while higher up, in large letters, was inscribed the words "Limited Liability Act." The plaintiffs are "Savings Bank, Incorporated by Act." The point tried on Monday was, whether such a corporation can sue for libel. The Limited Liability Act, which enables persons to form companies with limited liability, attaches a penalty to the use, in any notice, advertisement, or other official document, of the words "limited" or "incorporated" unless the company is constituted. The bench decided that it was not a case for the jury, and directed a verdict for the defendant.

OPENING OF THE BIRKENHEAD STREET RAILWAY.—On Thursday week the first line of street railway in Great Britain was formally inaugurated at Birkenhead, in connection with the Mid Cheshire Railway. U.S. The day throughout the town was one of much enthusiasm, and the people turned out in great numbers to witness the opening of this interesting experiment. As early as ten o'clock in the morning vast crowds were congregated in the neighbourhood of Woodside Ferry, the starting point of the street-railway. Among the invited guests were William Duncan, Esq., D.L., Deputy-Lieut. for the County of Chester; Mr. Alderman Cross, Mr. Alderman Roughsedge, J.P., Dublin; Alderman Mackie, J.P., Dublin; H. Lloyd, Esq., Mayor of Birkenhead; and Mr. Alderman Laird, J.P., Birkenhead, whom took part in a trial-trip along the line as far as Birkenhead Park and back to the starting-point. Subsequently the line was thrown open to the public, taking about seventy passengers, and each of which was drawn by two horses with as much apparent ease as though they were drawing a light load of goods, and as smoothly as any first-class railway carriage. Each carriage was fitted with a step on each side, which, when not in use, folds up within the carriage-body, the rails clear of stones, &c., thus rendering the passage of the vehicles safe, although they are constructed on the tram-road principle. The carriages are 20 ft. long, and are on the American workman at Mr. Mala's coach-factory, where a great impetus was given to the trade by Mr. Train, who is the chief promoter of the present undertaking.

MARRIAGES AND BIRTHS.—The report of the Registrar-General of Marriages in Ireland for 1859, which is confined to the marriages of Protestants, has been published. It appears that the number of marriages for the years 1850-54 was 9646; for five years 1855-59 only 9251. The former series had the extraordinary year of 1852 included in it, and therefore this comparison do not indicate an increasing population. It is supposed that the proportion of early marriages is larger in Ireland than in England, as it is in the case of the Protestant part of the population. The proportion of men unable to write the difference is not so great in Ireland. Not very much more than half the Protestant marriages were celebrated in churches, 3686 were in Presbyterian chapels, and the large number of 1488 at the registrar's office—35 per cent of all of which were not solemnised according to the rites of the Established Church. Jews need be scarce in Ireland; for the last fifteen years the marriages have barely averaged one a year.

COALPIT ACCIDENT AND LOSS OF FOUR LIVES.—On Monday four youths met a terrible death in the Bottle Pit at Killhope, in Derbyshire. The pit is worked by a single shaft, the cages in which the colliers are conveyed to their work and the minerals is located to the surface move simultaneously from the top and bottom. Two, when a load is sent from the bottom, are ready to receive them, and the two pass each other, one down the shaft and the other ascending. In order to prevent any collision, the cages are kept in their places by strong wooden cushions, which project from each side of the cages. On Monday, the top "runner," a man named Crosby, had, from inadvertence, left the boys under his charge, and, hearing the usual signal from the bottom of the pit, as if something was passing the shaft, he pulled the cushion out of its place, and the two cages came together in an instant, but the cage had the descended half-way down the shaft. At the last revolution of the engine, the cage with the boys ascended, and it was at that moment that the accident occurred. The fact was that the cage ran on from the bottom was not in its proper place, and the cushion failed to check the cage in its ascent. The poor lads were standing like so much paper. Four of the poor fellows were jammed to the bottom of the cage, and crushed to death. The scene at the pit-mouth was marvellous. A strong iron rod, above an inch in diameter, was doubled up like a thin wire, and the cage, which in a single caught in the iron, and the boys' wards, be hung in the shaft for more than two hours. Hartley was more fortunate than the rest. He was terribly bruised, but not dangerously, although he was a good deal bruised. As soon as possible an attempt was made to get the bodies to the top. The rest of the work—and it was a hard one—was done by men, being protected by the bother. The following is the official account of the accident:—"The bodies were found in the shaft, after going from Manchester home, with about 2700 passengers. The first train, which consisted of thirty-one carriages, and was followed by a train of about thirty-one carriages, one of which was left at Ramsbottom. The latter train left that station at the usual time, and proceeded to Holcombe, where it stopped at the usual platform. There were two guards in charge of this train, and three carriages with breaks of the most approved kind attached—one in the rear and one in the front. The stoppage at Holcombe caused about fourteen of the carriages to come under the platform. Shortly after the departure of the Chester and Birkenhead Company, which had been lent to the Lancashire and Yorkshire Company, the attention of the guards and the engine-driver attached throughout the train, and on examining those of the Birkenhead carriages the broken links were found. The train had not gone far when the front portion of the train carriage backwards, jumped upon the carriage and at once dragged the train with it. Those who were standing prepare to adapt to the front part of the train, was of course unable to apply the break under his charge. The train ran along it with a force that the carriages which were following, but let no unable to prevent the collision, as it occurred in the separation taking place between the front and the rear portion of the train. Other persons are more or less injured—at least ten of this number seriously so—but the collision was the cause of the carriages which led to the collision was caused by the breaking of a coupling-chain which gave way in missing. One of the latter portion of the train broke away, and steps had been taken for its recovery. The inquest was adjourned until Saturday (to-day).

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL INSTITUTION.

Lat. 51° 30′ 26″ N.; Long. 0° 8′ 27″ W.; Height above sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER.			WIND.		RAIN.
	Barometer corrected and reduced to 32°.	Dew Point Temperature.	Humidity. Complete Saturation = 1000.	Ozone. Complete Saturation = 15.	Dry Bulb.	Wet Bulb.	General Direction.	Horizontal Movement.	Fall in Inches and Hundredths.
	Inches.	Deg.	Deg.	Deg.	Deg.	Deg.		Miles.	Inches.
Aug. 29	29·510	57·6	49·7	·74	6	52·7	65·1	SW. W.	169	0·00
30	29·555	57·6	49·7	·74	6	52·5	64·3	SW. SSW.	519	0·02
31	29·720	56·2	48·1	·69	6	52·5	64·1	SW. WSW.	293	0·06
Sept. 1	29·757	56·9	46·1	·62	5	52·4	65·9	SW. WSW.	145	·050
2	29·806	54·4	46·1	·62	5	52·4	65·9	SW. WSW.	145	·050
3	29·695	54·4	46·1	·62	5	47·7	63·1	SSW. NNE.	105	·010
4	29·189	54·7	47·5	·70	6	47·7	63·1	SSW. NNE.	105	·010

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches)	29·510	29·555	29·720	29·757	29·806	29·695	29·189
Temperature of Air	64·0°	61·0°	59·0°	57·0°	57·0°	57·0°	57·0°
Temperature of Evaporation	57·0°	57·0°	57·0°	57·0°	57·0°	57·0°	57·0°
Direction of Wind	SW.	SW.	SW.	SW.	SW.	SW.	SW.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

Vice-Admiral Pechell: The will of Vice-Admiral Sir George Richard Brooke Pechell, M.P., for Brighton, Sussex, late commander-in-chief on the Cape station, Berkeley-square, who died on the 29th of June last, at the age of seventy-two, was proved on the 19th ult. under £70,000, by the oath of Captain, by his relict, the Hon. Katherine Annesbrie Brooke, Lady Pechell, the daughter of the late Lord Rancliffe, and by Sir Samuel Scott, the executors named in the sole executrix. The personalty was sworn under £30,000. Sir George has bequeathed all his property, real and personal, to his wife absolutely. Lady Pechell was married to her Ladyship in 1826, and had issue three children, one son and two daughters, the latter of whom are married. The residence of Sir George, but only on land heir of Sir George having been cut off in the flower of his youth by consumption, the estates devolve upon the testator's brother, Admiral's nearest male present Sir George Samuel Pechell, Bart. This latter gentleman is the present Member for Huntingdon-Colonel for the Royal Marines, and was the first Lieutenant of the distinguished family.

Rev. Canon Repton: The late Edward Repton, Esq., Canon of Westminster (but the junior title, which was held by the late Canon Jeune, Westminster, and Rector of Shorham, Kent, from 1841, died at St. Leonard's-on-Sea, on the 4th ult., leaving a personalty sworn under £14,000. This good and reverend gentleman's will bears date the 28th of May, 1861, and was proved in the London Court of Probate, on the 26th of August, by Joseph Stone Hill, Esq., of Streatham, Surrey, and Montague Bertie Bicknell, Esq., of Chelsea, the executors named in the will. He was possessed of real and personal property—the latter being estimated at £16,000. Mr. Repton leaves the relict, in life, of his property, real and personal, and his pecuniary legacies, amounting to about £1000, which he has bequeathed to his executors, to be distributed by them. The residuary sum to be left absolutely on the death of their mother. He bequeaths the rest of his property to his only son, the Rev. Edward Repton, M.A., Minor Canon of Westminster, and officiating Minister of St. Philip, Regent-street, of which he has been the incumbent since 1851. The testator's executorship has been generously to the Rev. E. Repton, Minister of Grosvenor Chapel, and Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen. The income of the canonry is £1000 per annum.

The late Feargus O'Connor's Will: Although it is five years since the decease of this noted and prominent personage, the late member for Nottingham, his will has only now been brought into court for proof. It bears date the 16th of April, 1846, and is entirely in his own handwriting, but is badly written as to be scarcely deciphered, and the Court was compelled to have a fair copy made from it. This gentleman seems to have possessed but very little personal property. What remains he has bequeathed to his nephew, Arthur, son of his brother, Arthur O'Connor.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

John Herbert Koe, Q.C., the Treasurer of Lincoln's Inn for the present year, and Judge of the County Court Circuit No. 67, died in his residence, Gloucester-place, on Monday morning.

The Murderer in Steeney.—The inquest on the body of Mr. Tinsley, the unfortunate woman who was recently murdered in Stepney, resumed yesterday week. Some fragments of additional evidence were forthcoming, but not in no degree tended to throw light on the authors of the atrocious deed, or even to direct a reasonable amount of suspicion against any particular individual. The jury were bound over in recognizances of £50 each to attend again when required.

Births and Deaths.—Last week the births of 944 boys and 883 girls—in all, 1849 children—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1850-61 the average number was 1456. 1849 deaths in London, which declined to 937 in the week ended August 23, rose to 1016 in the week that ended last Saturday. The public will be, however, comparatively good; for the deaths were fewer by 131 than they would have been under the average rate of mortality as calculated for the end of August.

On Wednesday forenoon a fatal accident happened to a little girl named Bowyer, three years, whose parents reside in Somers-terrace, Bermondsey-street. The deceased and another child were amusing themselves upon a table placed in front of an open window on the second floor. While they were swinging to a clothes line it suddenly broke, and the deceased rolled out of the window, a distance of about twenty feet, and received injuries to the spine and temples, and was instantly killed. The other child was fortunately saved by the mother sitting by it.

A fire broke out on Sunday morning on the premises of Messrs. Pound, Pearce, ropery and fishermen's equipment manufacturers, Cumberland Stairs, Shadwell, which laid in ruins property valued at from £200,000 to £300,000, before succeeding the lives of several persons.—Early yesterday week a serious fire broke out in the premises belonging to the Thames Iron Steam-boat Company (formerly Mare's), at Blackwall. The engine and pile screwdriver, the saw-mills, planing-rooms, and engine-houses were burned down, and the whole of the valuable property adjoining, viz., the Thames Iron Tavern, and Nos. 4 and 5, Orchard-place, were also much damaged by fire and water.

Homes for Young Women.—The Association for—the Christian and Domestic Improvement of Young Women was formed to provide for them, on a moderate basis, a home during the time of their search for home, for the many young women who, whether employed or seeking employment in London, are often in a position of great temptation and painful isolation. The association has been in operation for some years, and a recent prospectus states that it has now opened four Homes:—No. 1, Great Ormond-street, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square; the West London, in Great Marlborough-street; the Pimlico Home, in Churton-street, Pimlico; and the Kensington, Blackfriars. In these houses respectable young women may obtain a safe temporary residence at very moderate rates. In the Great Ormond-street establishment the rent of board and lodging is only five shillings a week. Combined with these homes are two registry offices, one for the supply of servants, the other for the engagement of governesses, by means of Bible classes. The society wishes to extend its operations through other districts of London, and appeals to readers as strong appeal to the support of the Christian public. The Earl of Shaftesbury is president of the society, and the council of management includes the names of the Countess of Guildford, the Countess of Dudley, and the Hon. Mrs. A. Hankey, with the bankers of the association, Messrs. Coutts and Co.

Desperate conflict with Burglars.—Police-officer Sterling, while on duty in Church-road, Barnes, on Wednesday morning, two o'clock, saw two young men, who had been loitering about the mill of Mr. Lee, enter a back in which there were two horses and a waggon. He sent for assistance, when Sergeant Payne speedily arrived. Shortly after the latter had left the spot four of the men came out, when Sergeant Payne, finding he was short-handed, called up William Coates, a waterman, and a young man named Thomas Brown, overpowered them and removed the boat a little way down the river, and returned in time to find that a signal had already been given by some of the gang to the men in custody. Four of the burglars rushed into the Thames, speedily followed by Sergeant Payne, who succeeded in capturing one of the men. He was then rushed from the water on to Pheasants Wharf, and was there aided by constable Sterling, and a stiff struggle ensued before they succeeded in overpowering him. He was, however, followed by constable Baker, and on his coming up with him a desperate struggle took place, when the man drew a knife and attempted to stab Baker, but the latter received the blow on the head with a life-preserver. Georgy, 201 B, then came up in time enough to see him overpowered by the superior brawniness. He followed the burglar, however, who attempted to escape across the wharf, and, being active and powerful, and in the prime of life, and constables, they succeeded in capturing him, after he had sealed two or three walls eight feet high. Two other men were captured, and the whole number is supposed to be drowned. Constable Baker is now in hospital, with cut rents and bruises of the head.

Strange Delusions.—George Alexander Nicholls has been apprehended because for a length of time he has annoyed the Royal family, and he is now brought safe to Bow-street. He has addressed letters to the Queen Christ, and that he was born in North's Ark. He has sent presents to the Princess Alice, professing to be herself, and has written to her as such. Brought before the Westminster magistrate, he said:—"I am not insane; but I am in injured man. I've been robbed, and I've been robbed of all I possess, and now they want to call me insane. I've written to Lord Shaftesbury; I've written to the Queen, asking for justice, and I can get no upon court. I don't want to be shut out from everybody, and let alone with those who will be by anything against me. I've been in prison for an hour to try me. I don't admit that I'm insane. I'm to same as say one here; for here are two magistrates, clergymen, gentlemen, and myself. I am not—that I cannot discourse upon in a rational manner, and yet I'm called insane. I have always observed that you was to commit me to prison for unfortunate gentleman's mind, but before he could do anything the men in the Princess Alice, a medical gentleman, declared me insane, and I am both one mentality." Mr. Nicholls—Subject to this. I am not going to be insane. I am not going to be committed to prison. I've been robbed of my property, and I've been robbed of my character. I've written to the Queen and Brought before the Westminster magistrate, he said:—"I'm am not insane; but I'm an injured man. I've been robbed of all I possess, and now they want to call me insane. I've written to Lord Shaftesbury; I've written to the Queen, asking for justice, and I can get no upon court. I don't want to be shut out from everybody, and let alone with those who will be by anything against me. I've been in prison for an hour to try me. I don't admit that I'm insane. I'm to same as say one here; for here are two magistrates, clergymen, gentlemen, and myself. I am not—that I cannot discourse upon in a rational manner, and yet I'm called insane. I have always observed that you was to commit me to prison for unfortunate gentleman's mind, but before he could do anything the men in the Princess Alice, a medical gentleman, declared me insane, and I am both one mentality." Mr. Nicholls—Subject to this. I am not going to be insane. I am not going to be committed to prison. I've been robbed of my property, and I've been robbed of my character. I've written to the Queen and to Sir Richard Mayne [police commissioner], and I've written to Lord Shaftesbury, and I've written to the Queen, asking for justice, and can get no upon court. I don't want to be shut out from everybody, and let alone with those who will be by anything against me. I've been in prison for an hour to try me. I don't admit that I'm insane. I'm to same as say one here; for here are two magistrates, clergymen, gentlemen, and myself. I am not—that I cannot discourse upon in a rational manner, and yet I'm called insane. I have always observed that you was to commit me to prison for unfortunate gentleman's mind, but before he could do anything the men in the Princess Alice, a medical gentleman, declared me insane, and I am both one mentality.

THE STEREORAMA AT CREMORNE GARDENS.—PANORAMA OF THE ROUTE TO ITALY, VIA THE ST. GOTHARD PASS.

MADONNA DEL SASSO. MAGADINO, ON THE LAGO MAGGIORE. VILLAGE OF AIROLO. SNOW CAVERN NEAR THE DEVIL'S BRIDGE.

THE DEVIL'S BRIDGE. AMSTAG. FLUELLEN. BAY OF URI, LAKE OF LUCERNE.

THE GORGE OF SALLENCHES, SAVOY.

THE GORGE OF SALLENCHES, ITS VILLAGE AND BRIDGE.

In a mountainous country like Savoy the gorges and passes are, of course, very frequent; they, as well as the glaciers, form a series of picturesque attractions which stop the traveller on his way to Switzerland, and before he has yet reached the more imposing scenery in the neighbourhood of Mont Blanc. The Gorge of Sallenches, of which we give an Illustration, is one of those passes situated near the Alpine chain that will form the new frontier of France in the event of the neutrality of the two districts of Chablais and Faucigny being continued. Near at hand is Chamouni, whose delightful valley has so often furnished a theme of admiration to tourists in search of the beauties of Nature.

The small village of Sallenches, which forms the subject of our second Engraving, is situated at a short distance from the pass. It is twenty-eight miles from Annecy, and contains upwards of 1500 inhabitants. There is a fine view from the pretty little bridge called the Pont des Chèvres. This Savoyard village has been destroyed three times by fire—in 1519, 1763, and in 1840; but, phœnix-like, it has re-sprung up each time with fresh vigour, and is at present prosperous, doing a respectable trade in cottons, cattle, mules, &c. The inhabitants lead a frugal and quiet life; as their wants are few, their means of existence are the more easily assured.

By telegram we learn that their Majesties the Emperor and Empress of the French, in their progress through the new departments of Savoy and Nice, reached Sallenches on Saturday last, and that they were enthusiastically greeted by numerous inhabitants of the mountains scattered in groups along the road.

THE STEREORAMA AT CREMORNE GARENS.

In addition to the already numerous pictorial, structural, and other attractions of Cremorne Gardens, the enterprising proprietor has recently brought to completion a novel artistic work, which he denominates the "Stereorama." This name is adopted on account of the attempt made to accomplish by means of painting and modelling the peculiar effects produced by the stereoscopic glasses, and more particularly that appearance of relief and solidity in objects which painting alone cannot thoroughly realise. In short, it is a combination of painting for the more distant panorama with the most structural formation for the objects in the foreground, producing a result which so nearly approaches reality as almost to mystify the sense.

Messrs. Grieve and Telbin, the eminent artists who have produced this truly magnificent and interesting work, have already, as our readers are aware, achieved many wonderful scenic effects on the stage with the aid of ingeniously-contrived set-pieces. But here they have always operated with the consciousness that they are to be seen only at a certain distance, which, the poet tells us, "lends enchantment to the view." In the Stereorama, on the contrary, the spectator is in close proximity to the objects in the foreground, so that he might almost pluck a leaf from a tree, or a blade of grass from the mountain path at his feet, and the highest degree of finish and exactness has therefore to be bestowed upon all that comes within this range; whilst, at the same time, an eye must be kept for its general keeping with the more distant portions of the panorama. In all these respects, no less than in the intrinsic beauty of the several parts of their performance, Messrs. Grieve and Telbin have proved themselves eminently successful, a pictorial creation being the result which, for grandeur of subject, truthfulness of effect, richness of colour, and variety of effect cannot well be surpassed within the same compass. When we add that real water is brought to their aid at the rate of nine hundred gallons a minute to supply the mimic torrent issuing beneath the Devil's Bridge, and thence, winding and flowing through various channels in the foreground, turning mills, &c., the reader may imagine for himself the impression upon his senses which a visit to the Stereorama is calculated to produce.

THE VILLAGE AND BRIDGE OF SALLENCHES.

The building in which the Stereorama is shown measures some 120 feet across, and is 50 feet high. Within this area, with a circumference of about 300 feet, and a total surface of canvas of 18,000 feet, the entire illusionary space being filled in with modelling work, the artists represent the grander and more picturesque features of the stupendous scenery which presents itself to the traveller between Lake Lucerne and the Lago Maggiore; in fact, the romantic route into Italy over the Alps through the famous St. Gothard pass. The Stereorama will give some idea of the materials by which, with, as the grand solitude of the little bay of Uri, in the Lake of Lucerne; the picturesque little village of Armenty; the savage grandeur of the Devil's Pass, with the Snow Cavern adjoining; then after passing the little village, the opening upon the noble vista of the Lago Maggiore, and the journey terminating at the grand romantic groups of the Madonna del Sasso, situate on a commanding rocky eminence, the sides of which are clothed with groves of orange and lemon, and studded here and there with little chapels, peeping out from trellised vine. The external panorama over, the spectator now enters a representation of the interior of the Chapel of Madonna del Sasso during the performance of religious worship, rendered with great solemnity of effect.

Too high praise cannot be bestowed upon Messrs. Grieve and Telbin for their successful accomplishment of this truly remarkable work.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

WITH the exception of a small meeting at Bridgewater on Friday there is nothing, save Doncaster and its stirring four days, on the list for next week. Parasite, who, it is said, Mr. Parr has in vain essayed to buy back at about every one of the meetings he has run in, is the Champagne Stakes on Tuesday, with Wize, Prudence, Virgilius, Gentlemen, &c. Vespasian-Sandcastle and Bonnie Scotland are in the Filly Stakes, and Mr. Merry seems likely to walk over for the Sapling Stakes with Rokeboston or Dundee. The latter, in his dead heat on York, got much the worst of the ground; and his Doncaster position has rather improved since he made such a wondrous display of gameness. Kleber is also said to be the best performer amongst the seven nominations for the Municipal, which will be run, as usual, on the St. Leger line. Sweetmeat is the Scarborough favourite, and The Wizard in the Zetland Stakes on Thursday; Dundee, Folkestone, and Dictator (who is hardly likely to come), in the Eglinton Stakes; and Gardener, Dragoon, Inisma, and Alnwick in the Cup on Friday. On Friday Saltcar will, it is thought, go for the Cup, with or without a St. Leger engagement; but as he has not been seen in public since his exhibition, is not likely to oppose him. The Wizard, in spite of his 5th, extra weight, is said to have no trouble in the Doncaster Stakes. The Don Stakes contain but nine as well as Hugh Cameron, Lady Masham's, and Buccaneer's; and Stockade and Contadina are in the Park Hill.

It is expected that John Scott "will start the whole fleet" for the St. Leger, and that Mr. Merry's nominations will be at last ridden by Cujus Regnavi or The Rap. Wells has been engaged to ride The Wizard, with Charlton and Flatman on Sweetmeat, and Aldcroft on Tom Bowling, unless Lord Clarendon can be induced to give him up to Custance. There is some talk of Luke Snowden for St. Albans, who seems a doubtful winner, as he never is "winding up" he had in the spring. Umpire (Rowlison) represents Newmarket and America combined, and his backers, who will be found at the Rein Deer, after her Stockton

NEW BOOKS.

NOTICE—THE NEW NOVEL.
The day is published, in 3 vols. 31s.

LADY AUBREY; or, What Shall I Do?
By the Author of "Rosy Day."
SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO., 66, Conduit-street, Hanover-square.

Just out, crown 8vo, price 6s., cloth,

ITALY IN TRANSITION: Public Scenes and Private Studies in the Spring of 1865. Translated by Official Documents from the Royal Archives of the Rescript Legislative Assembly. By Count CESARE BALBO.
LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, and CO., 65, Cornhill.

ILLUMINATED by OWEN JONES and LEWIS WARREN: PALESTINE AND THE PERI, from the Lalla Rookh of Thomas Moore. The work will consist of 24 royal 4to pages, and it is intended to form the most elegant and splendid gift-book of the coming season which has yet proceeded from the art of chromo-lithography. Price, bound in cloth, £2 2s.; in morocco, £3 3s. Specimens may be seen at the office of Messrs. Day and Son, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

NEW SERIAL.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD, Conducted by CHARLES DICKENS, To commence in No. 25, Office, 122, Fleet-street, London.

New Boy's Book—Price 1s., with 700 Engravings, pp. 448, gilt,

THE ILLUSTRATED BOY'S OWN TREASURY. "Just right book for boys ever produced."
Bell's Life. "Full of interest."

This day, price 1s., with Map and Illustrations, demy 8vo,

HEALTH RESORTS OF BRITAIN; and How to Profit by Them. By SPENCER THOMSON, M.D.
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, fcap 8vo, boards, fancy wrapper, price 2s.,

THE DIARY OF A JUDGE. Compiled from the Notebook of a recently-deceased Judge.
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

On Sept. 1, Illustrations by M'Connell, Kenny Meadows, H. G. Hine, and T. Macquoid. Price 2s., fcap 8vo, ornamental boards,

MISS BROWN.
By ROBERT B. BROUGH.
Just out, price 2s., ornamental cover,
MARSTON LYNCH. By R. B. BROUGH.
Just out, price 2s., ornamental cover,
ULP THE MINSTREL. By R. B. BROUGH.
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, price 3s., fcap 8vo, fancy boards,

JOHN SELDOM'S DOWN; or, the Confessions of a Thief. Written by Himself. Revised by Thomas Littledale Holt, Esq., Editor of the "Morning Chronicle."
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

NEW NOVELS.

UNDER A CLOUD. By FREDERICK and JAMES GREENWOOD. 3 vols. post 8vo. This day.
THE RADDLEMORE PEERAGE: Who Was It on Who Were It. By GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA. 2 vols. post 8vo.
CAMP LIFE. By MAJOR SALA. 1 vol. 10s. 6d.
London: G. D. SMART, King William-street, Charing-cross.

A MANUAL OF ILLUMINATION, By J. W. BRADLEY, B.A., assisted by T. GOODWYN, A. and Two Lithographic Illustrations. Price 1s.—WINSOR and NEWTON, Manufacturers to the Queen, 38, 39, and 40, Rathbone-place, Oxford-street.

Price 1s.; postage-free, 1s. 2d. Second Edition, Illuminated Wrapper,

HINTS ON ILLUMINATING; with an Essay on the Art of Illuminating in Gold, &c., and Lithographic Illustrations from old and new MSS. By H. M. LUCKEN.
London: J. BARNARD and SON, 336, Oxford-street.

Price 8s. 6d., postage-free 8s. 8d., cloth gilt,

THE ART OF ILLUMINATING; A Guide to Beginners, with Lithographic Illustrations and Wood Engravings, by A. H. HAY, Author of "Letters to the Royal Family."
London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

Price 6s. 6d.; postage-free, 6s. 10d., decorately bound and gilt, with Examples in Gold and Colours, and Book of Patterns, by Thomas Smith,

MISSAL PAINTING AND ILLUMINATING: A Practical Manual.
With an Historical Introduction by L. JEWITT, F.S.A.
J. JACKSON, 172, Fleet-street. Sh. (three doors from Chancery-lane).

THE HISTORY OF A SHIP (3s., post-free, 3s. 2d.), with FIVE PLATES TO BE COLOURED.
A thorough boy's book, crammed with excellent engravings. It will form a perfect gift-book.—Denmark.
London: GELDARDINE, City Press, 117, 118, Aldersgate-street.

Just published, price 1s. 6d.; sent free for 18 stamps,

AN UNCOMMON BOOK.—THE WILL OF GOD IN THINGS AS REVEALED IN THE SCRIPTURES. GODS WAY OF PRODUCING HEALTH AND HAPPINESS IN MAN.
London: MR. OWEN, 39, Regent's Park-road, N.W.

DR. HUNT on VOICE and SPEECH.—Just published, 8vo, 1s. 6d., post-free, 1s. 8d., A MANUAL OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF VOICE AND SPEECH applied to the Art of Public Speaking and Reading. By JAMES HUNT, Ph.D., F.S.A., F.R.G.S., &c.
London: LONGMAN, Green, Longman, Roberts, and Co.

IMPORTANT TO INVALIDS. Now ready, price 1s.,
SYDENHAM: its Climate and Palace. By Dr. SCHOLEFIELD, Author of "Health and Life," &c.

EPILEPSY: its Cause and Cure. By Dr. J. DUFFEY, M.D. Post-paid for seven stamps, direct from the Author, 79, Great-queen-street, Oxford-street, W.

In 6d. or thirty-two stamps, Fourth Edition,

CORPULENCY, and its new Self-dietary Cure. By DR. MOORE, M.R.C.S.
A SAID M. EVANS, 42, Duchess-street, Pimlico, S.W.

Now ready, price 1s., post-free for 13 stamps,

GABRIEL'S TREATISE on the LOSS and only EFFECTUAL MODE of RESTORING the TESTES entirely and permanently, with Illustrations and Cases. Also, on Nervous Debility, Impotence, Sterility, Both with and without Organic Stricture, which, besides being professions in all other respects, acted in point of moderation, and consequently, as well as for the first advantage they offer to those who, residing abroad or in the country, cannot personally attend in London, are the only ones which the Author has ever published. The work, which is a large book, does not require no springs, wires, or metals; while for accuracy of fit, and increased comfort, it is unrivalled. Should surveillant, from any change or absorption of the gums, the loss of teeth or stumps, can at any time be supplied on the same principle, without the necessity of ease, or the removal of any of the parts), and is, therefore, on especially the best materials, which are warranted to remain pure and sweet, even but being made entirely of gold, it is self-cleansing, while the expense is not increased in proportion. Inspection by the medical profession and the nobility is respectfully solicited at the Author's Residence (Established Fifteen Years), 110, Regent-street (near the Quadrant); 33 and 34, Lodgate-hill, Ludgate-circus; and 4, Exchange-street, Manchester.
GABRIEL'S CELEBRATED KNAKEL for Front Teeth, the only permanent Stopping which does not discolour or injure the Teeth.

For obvious reasons, it is necessary particularly to notice the name, 110, Regent-street, and 33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, as numerous base assuage under the name of the fashionable Gabriel.

THE AQUARIUM—LLOYD'S DESCRIPTIVE and PRICED LIST, with practical instructions for Tank Management, 24 pages, and 101 Engravings, post-free for 21 stamps.—Apply direct to W. Alford Lloyd, Portland-road, Regent's Park, London, W.

5000 CHURCH SERVICES, ELEGANTLY MOUNTED, from 6s. 6d.
300 PRAYER-BOOKS, from 1s. 6d.
300 POCKET BIBLES and PSALMS, 1s. 6d. to 3 guineas.
PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

WEDDING STATIONERY,—Patterns free by post.
The newest and most fashionable designs.
PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

PARKINS AND GOTTO.

PAPER and ENVELOPE MAKERS, For the cheapest & best, OXFORD-STREET.
Sample of Paper and Envelopes sent by return of post for 6 stamps.
Sample of Paper and Envelopes sent post-free for four stamps.

THE SOCIETY OF ARTS PRIZE WRITING-CASE, manufactured by PARKINS and GOTTO, fitted with Paper, Envelopes, Blotting-book, Pen-case, &c., can be had of all Stationers. The Inland Registered Letter-case, with stamps for 2 stamps by Parkins and Gotto, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S LIST OF NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC.
BY W. VINCENT WALLACE.
Chorus of Dervishes, from Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens," 3s.
The Maid of Athens, Romance, 3s.
The Volunteer Rifles' March, 3s.
Home where my love-lies dreaming, 3s.
Fantasia on Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens," 3s.
Fantasia on Beethoven's "Adelaide," 3s.
Fantasia on Mozart's "Non piu andrai," and "Willie, we love be missed you," 3s.
Good news from home, varied, 3s.

BY J. L. ROECKEL.
The elf in Cheriboom, melody transcribed, 3s.
The Canzonetta, melody transcribed, 3s.
Bathing Belle waltz, melody transcribed, 3s.
Bathing Belle polka, melody transcribed, 3s.
Le Bassador, Quadrille Celebre, illustrated, 3s.
BY BRINLEY RICHARDS.
The Plough Boy, English melody, transcribed, 3s.
The Bonnie Lassie, Scotch melody, transcribed, 3s.
The gipsy's Warning, "Wer reitet so spat durch Nacht und Wind?" the Rustic's Due, transcribed, 3s.
Le Bassador, Quadrille Celebre, illustrated, 3s.
Warblings at Eve, Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.

BY G. F. WEST.
Festivals on Wye's Banks, Quadrille, illustrated, 3s.
Ah! che la morte! "Il Trovatore," transcribed, 3s.
Home sweet Home! "Sonnambula," transcribed, 3s.
Robert, toi que j'aime! "Robert le Diable," transcribed, 3s.
Ah! mon fils! "Prophete," transcribed, 3s.
Copie adresse! "Norma," transcribed, 3s.
BY W. HUTCHINS CALLCOTT.
The Holy Family—Ah! sweet be thy rest, and, ah! sweet be thy rest, 4s.
The Adoration—Ist, 2nd, and 3rd series; each, solo 3s., duet 4s.
Rondo Pastorale, "Hail to the Lord's Anointed," 3s.
Sweet Spirit, hear my prayer, or evening hymn, 3s.
Two Airs de Ballet (from Beethoven's "Martini"), each, 2s.
Grand Triumphal March from "Athalie," 4s.
N.B. A Catalogue of 3000 Pianoforte Works, just issued, Gratis and Postage-free on application.
London: ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street, W., Publishers to her Majesty.

BALFE'S NEW SONG, "SLEEP, MY BEAUTY," the poetry by Mrs. ARTHUR HALL. Words by TENNYSON. Published this day, price 2s. 6d.
London: ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

THE BLACKSMITH'S SON. New Song. Composed by J. L. HATTON, and sung with immense success by Mr. Sautley. Price 2s. 6d. net.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

WINNING THE GLOVES. New Comic Ballad. Composed by CHARLES COOTE. Price 2s. 6d. Written by J. E. CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d. post-free. "This is the best comic ballad we have heard."—Musical World.
London: ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

OVER THE MOUNTAIN—OVER THE SEA, (Song of the Spirit of Air). Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER Price 2s. 6d. net. Just published.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

THE RANELAGH POLKA (just published), Composed by J. RIVIERE. "Will be as favourite, in the assembly Ranelagh and the officers and members of the South Middlesex Rifle Corps."—Sun. Price 2s. net. Solo and Duet.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

O DOUBTING HEART!—New Song by JOHN HULLAH, published in two keys (in E and C). Price 2s. net. "Mr. Hullah's song is a thoroughly good one."—Athenæum.
ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

VOLUNTEER SONG, "Every Man join his Band-ready," composed by ARTHUR HILLS, and sung nightly by Mr. Winn (Leader) at the Royal Ball Concert with immense applause. Price 2s. net. Just published.
ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

SANTA LUCIA. By WILHELM GANZ. A brilliant piano transcription of this popular air.
London: ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS' SONGS and CHORUSES, with Piano Accompaniments, post 4to, nine books, 9s. each; or the complete set, in one vol., 42s. Also, in one book, gilt edges and cloth, 42s. each, or, each in 4 books, 10s. 6d. each. Christy's Minstrels' Song Book, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Banjo Instructor, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Concertina Instructor, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Tambourine Instructor, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Bones and Triangle Instructor, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Bones Instructor, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Jig Book, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Stump Speech, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Burlesque Opera, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Joke Book, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Comic Songs, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Sentimental Songs, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Dance Music, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Ethiopian Melodies, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Plantation Melodies, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Original Melodies, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Negro Melodies, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Comic Songs, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Sentimental Songs, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Dance Music, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Ethiopian Melodies, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Plantation Melodies, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Original Melodies, 1s. 6d. Christy's Minstrels' Negro Melodies, 1s. 6d.
CHEAPEST MUSIC REPOSITORY in ENGLAND—All the New Music Half-price and post-free, on receipt of stamps or P.O.O. Catalogues of Pianofortes and Harmoniums gratis and post-free. Apply to CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, 201, Regent-street, W.

D'ALCORN'S CIRCULATING MUSIC LIBRARY.—Subscriptions, One Guinea per annum, in town or country. Prospectus, one stamp.—D'ALCORN, 6, Ratcliffe-place, Oxford-street.

THE GAME OF CROQUET.—Price, with reports of the Game of the Season, in box 5s., superfine, 6s.; polished boxwood, 8s.; all full Fancy Repositories.—Manufactured and sold by JOHN JAQUES and SON, Hatton-garden. Caution: Observe each set bears the manufacturers' name.

MICROSCOPES.—AMADIO'S NEW ACHROMATIC MICROSCOPE, with 4 lenses, 21 in. high, £1 12s. 6d.
Amadio's New Lens Amadio, of Theobaldstreet, and are sold by all Opticians. Catalogues forwarded on application, especially to Mansfield Works, No. 385.
J. AMADIO'S ACHROMATIC MICROSCOPE, packed in mahogany case, with lens screen, condenser, glasses, and two slides, will show the circulation of the blood, £2 2s.
Just published, price 1s., post-free for 13 stamps, Descriptive Catalogue, containing the names of 1000 microscopic objects, post-free for 13 stamps.
A LARGE ASSORTMENT of ACHROMATIC TELESCOPES and FIELD GLASSES.

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 11, Cornhill, and 14, Regent-street, Manufacturers to the Royal Family, First-class Patent Detached Lever Watches, with all the improvements in the movement and action, especially adapted for all climates, combining extreme accuracy and durability.

	£ s. d.
Patent Lever Watches, in Hunting Cases, jewelled	11 11 0
Ditto, with richly-engraved cases	12 12 0
Ditto, with extra jewelled action, in four holes	14 14 0
GOLD WATCHES—SIZE FOR GENTLEMEN.
Patent Lever Watches, in Hunting Cases, jewelled	15 15 0
Ditto, with extra jewelled action, in four holes	16 16 0
Ditto, jewelled in 8 holes, and gold balance	17 17 0
Every Watch skilfully examined, and 3 years' warranty given.
List of prices, with remarks on watches, grain and post-free.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the BEST.—The Prize Medal Pattern Moderator Lamps, Glass Reservoirs, Moderator Table Lamps, from 6s. 6d. each. Lamps cleaned, repaired, and exchanged. Lamps for India, Glass Shades, Globes, Chimneys, and Wicks. Lamps made to any pattern. Illustrations sent free.—GARDNERS, 453, Strand, opposite Somerset House.

CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors in Ordinary to her Majesty, invite attention to their Pickles, Sauces, Condiments, and Table Delicacies, which, for purity, are prepared with the most scrupulous attention to wholesomeness and excellence. They have for many years enjoyed the high honour of supplying her Majesty with their Manufactures. To be obtained of all respectable Dealers in Town and Country. Soho-square and Purveyors, 21, Wellington-street, London, E.C.

ROYAL ALBION EXTRA Refined POWDER STARCH, prepared expressly for the finest laundry purposes. It imparts a delightful fragrance to the linen, and produces a beautiful gloss. Sold by the chandlers of all respectable grocers. Indian Warehousemen, Gilman, Clement-lane, City. Wholesale, Jones and Sons, Finsbury-square, and Bishopsgate-street Within. Sole Agent for Lowestoft—Lowestoft. ALEXANDER FOTHERINGHAM, Agent.

EXTRAORDINARY MERIT must belong to that which IS ALWAYS IN EVERY ONE,
And such is the case with the
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH.

TO FAMILIES.
INDIAN CORN FLOUR.—This justly-esteemed Farinaceous Food to be had of MATTHEW HARRIS and SON, 2, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C., and 2, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, W., in 6d. packets. Kingsford and Sons, and other qualities, 1d.

THE LAST COPIES of ROBERTS'S HOLY LAND, EGYPT, &c., will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOUTHGATE and BARRETT. Particulars of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

THE LAST COPIES of the GRAMMAR OF ORNAMENT, by OWEN JONES, will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOUTHGATE and BARRETT. Particulars of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

THE LAST COPIES of the TREASURY of BOTANY, Part XXIII., Exchange Museum, by REDFORD and ROBINSON, will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOUTHGATE and BARRETT. Particulars of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

THE TITLES of the ART TREASURES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOUTHGATE and WARDO and BARRETT. Particulars of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

TO BE LET for £21 (cost £35), a Gentleman's Second Hand Lever Hunting Watch, by Frodsham, with chronometer balance, duplex escapement, and Arnold's detached escapement. Perfect as new and warranted. May be seen at WALES and MCCULLOCH'S, 56, Ludgate-street.

NOTICE TO LADIES.—KING and CO. respectfully beg to announce that, in consequence of their present premises having been required for the new railway, they have removed to more commodious premises, where they choose prefer the patronage of their former friends, and can with every confidence assure them that goods 15 per cent lower than any other house.
KING and CO., 243, Regent-street, London.

PATTERNS of SILKS, &c., Post-free. By writing for Patterns to ALLEN and HANBURY, resident
Four Queens' Hotel, or abroad
Cannon-street,
to prepaid applications.
Address, King and Co., 243, Regent-street, London.

Patterns sent post-free.
BLACK SILKS and FAMILY MOURNING Skirts made up without charge.
Good Silks, £1 1s. the Full Dress.
Rich Silks, £1 10s. Full Dress.
Gros Royals, £2 2s. the Full Dress.
Widows' Silks, £2 2s. the Full Dress.
Broché Silks, £2 2s. the Full Dress.
Moire Antiques, £2 10s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Glacé Silks, £2 10s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Ottoman Poult de Soies, £2 10s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Black Crapes, Paramattas, French Merinoes, and every article requisite for Family Mourning at the most reasonable prices.
Patterns post-free. Address
KING and CO., 243, Regent-street, London.

Patterns post-free.
NEW AUTUMN SILKS at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Rich Glacé Silks, £1 5s. the Full Dress.
Rich Silks, £1 10s. the Full Dress.
Plaid Silks, £1 12s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Jacquard Silks, £1 15s. the Full Dress.
Plain Poult de Soies, £1 17s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Checked Poult de Soies, £2 2s. the Full Dress.
Gros de Florence, £2 2s. the Full Dress.
Broché Faconné Silks, £2 17s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Tartan Checked Poult de Soies, £2 10s. the Full Dress.
Brocaded Bengaline, £2 10s. the Full Dress.
Patterns sent post-free. Address to King and Co., Regent-st., London.

FOR'S HALF-GUINEA JACKETS, in all Cloth or Cheviot, with Velvet collar and cuffs. All sizes kept ready. Same as last year for the shooting season.

FOR'S Celebrated Guinea Jacket, in Cloth and Cashmere, beautifully fitting, and elegantly embroidered. Price One Guinea, Worth Two.

FOR'S ZOUAVE JACKETS, for DINNER or EVENING WEAR, in rich Velvet and Cashmere, embroidered with gold. Worn open from the throat à la Zouave, displaying a fine Shirt front. Price One Guinea. Worth Two Guineas.

FOR'S FRENCH VELVET JACKET, Braided and Embroidered. The shapes are most becoming, and adapted for every age and figure. Price One Guinea.

FOR'S ZOUAVE JACKETS, of richly-braided Cashmere, in Black, Blue, and Red. Black as well as every colour. Choice of infantism. By far the largest and cheapest stock in London.

FOR'S JACKET-ROOMS contains the largest assortment in all the fashionable shapes—some splendid Braided Velvet Jackets, richly Embroidered in Gold, Guipure, and Jet. Observe the address, 41, Regent-street.

FOR'S DEVONSHIRE GREY, a new and lovely colour, in cashlin, for mantles, jackets, &c., for the present season. Patterns free.—FOR'S, Manufacturers, Victoria Tower Yard, Mantle Rooms, 42, Oxford-street, London.

DURE'S EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS in the Fashionable Shapes of Bonnets, Hats, and Caps, have given such universal satisfaction, that a further reduced price is made in them for the present season. Ladies are respectfully invited to the following list of prices, which are unchangeable, and advantageous to the purchaser on this occasion.

Bonnets, in Velvet (material), with width, 1st to 11th, per yard 1s. 10 Hats and Caps, in Velvet (material), with width, 1st to 11th, per yard 1s.

A large variety of Diamond Silk Robes will be offered at Seven Guineas, worth Twelve Guineas.

N.B. Patterns forwarded to the country postage-free.

DURE, 76, Oxford-street, corner of Hanway-street.

Sept. 1865. 62, Holborn-hill, Farringdon-street, E.C.

MANTLE CLOTHS, Autumn, 1865.—Beautiful Checked Cloths, suitable for the present season, at very low prices.

Black Checked Cloths . . .	from 1s. 11½d. per yard.
Black Striped Cloths . . .	2s. 3d.
Brown Checkettes . . .	2s. 3d.
Black Matelasse . . .	2s. 6d.

All qualities equally cheap. Patterns free.
CHARLES WILLIAM WOOLLEY, Manufacturer, 111, Hatton-garden, London, E.C.

AUTUMN COSTUME. SEWELL and CO. respectfully invite Ladies to inspect their first delivery of Costumes, Mantles, and Jackets.
COMPTON HOUSE, consisting of
New Spring Silks, Checked and Striped Grenadines,
Fancy Barèges, Muslins, Lace, and Drapery.
Silks of every description, and the largest and best assortment of the richest Moire Antiques, at 2½ guineas.
and Moire Francaise, at 3½ guineas.
Linsey Woolseys (Registered), commencing
at 1s. 11d. per yard.
Shawls, Cloaks, and Paletots in all the new shapes.
Evening and Ball Dresses in Tulle, Grenadine,
Tarlatan, and other textures, at very moderate prices.
Compton House, Cathedral-yard.

THOMSON'S PATENT CROWN SKIRTS, combining in grace, elegance, lightness, and durability the latest Parisian designs, are now the favourite wear of the Empress Eugenie, and all the leading Court circles throughout Europe. Each Skirt bears the Royal Arms, Crown, and Name.

AT PETER ROBINSON'S
IS FAMILY and GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE.
A Perfect Fit and best Economy in Purchase, both of goods made up or the materials sent out in the House. Goods sent to the country free of charge, with Dressmaker if necessary.
Dressmaking to any extent at moderate charges.

MOURNING MANTLES and BONNETS, the Newest and Prettiest Shapes, and the Largest Stock in London to select from,
at the most moderate prices.

BLACK SILKS UNUSUALLY CHEAP.
PETER ROBINSON invites attention to his Superb Stock of Black Silks, which are unequalled for their excellence of quality, pricing very moderate, and for their extensive assortment.

BLACK SILK SKIRTS,
elegantly Trimmed, with or without crape.
Ready for Immediate Wear.
Address, PETER ROBINSON'S Family Mourning Warehouse,
103, 105, Oxford-street.

CHEAP NEW AUTUMN SILKS.
Fichús, Stripes, and Checks at 41 5s. 9d.
Rich Glacé Silks, at £1 7s. 9d., £1 10s. 6d., and £1 15s. 6d.
A large variety of Rich Broché Silks, at £1 15s. 6d., £1 17s. 6d., £2 2s., £2 5s., £2 10s., £2 15s., £3 3s., and £3 10s. Rich Street Silks, at £1 17s. 9d.; Brocades, at £1 19s. 6d.
Patterns post-free. Also, a Large Assortment of Rich Silks, Moire Antiques, &c., &c.

SUMMER DRESSES.
Beautiful Muslins now in. 9d. the Full Dress, usual price 18s. 6d.
Rich Flounced Barèges, 1s. 6d. the Full Dress, usual price 2s. 6d.
Striped Grenadines, usual price 2s., now 1s. 6d.
Broché Barège Anglaise, 4s. the Full Dress, usual price 15s. 9d.
Rich Silk Figured Grenadines, 5s. 6d. the Full Dress, usual price 18s.
An immense variety of Patterns post-free.

THICKSET CHENILLE NETS, 2s. 11d.; 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d.
Rich Silk Mixed Nets, 10s. 6d.
White Cotton Nets, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 3s., and 4s. each.

CHENILLE NETS, IN ALL COLOURS,
with silk darn three stitches, 2s. 6d.
With silk darn two stitches, 2s. 11d.
Gold or Silver Nets, 3s. 6d.; with Ornaments, 5s. 6d.

SILK VELVET WAISTBANDS,
Head with silk and gilt clasp, 1s. 6d.
Best Quality, 2s. 6d.
Two extra stamps required for Patterns.

FOR ALL THE ABOVE
Address
PETER ROBINSON,
103, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, Oxford-street, W.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT.
Established 1841.

LADIES' WEDDING OUTFITS,
sent home free of carriage.
Descriptive List of Contents, with Prices, sent free by post.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 49, Greenhorn-street, London, E.C.

Short post-free, Descriptive Lists of
COMPLETE SETS OF BABY LINEN, which are sent home
throughout the United Kingdom free of carriage.
UNDERCLOTHING FOR BOYS' SCHOOLS, AND THE LIKE COLOURS for Ladies and Children of all ages.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT.
Established 1841.

BABIES' BASSINETS,
Furnished and Trimmed and Furnished
ready for use, and sent home free of carriage.
Descriptive List sent free by post.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 49, Greenhorn-street, London, E.C.

H. J. and D. NICOLL'S Establishments for Gentlemanly and Moderate-priced Clothing, 114, Regent-street, Cornhill, and 22, Cockspur-street.

THE CAPE PALETOT, INVERNESS CAPE, or SLEEVED CAPE, used in private life, as well as for Volunteer Corps.
H. J. and D. NICOLL, 114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, W.; 22, Cornhill, &c.; 22, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross.

CLOTHING for YOUTH.—The KNICKERBOCKER, the Highland Dress, Ladies' Travelling Costume, Yachting Costume, and all the New Styles for the Autumn and Winter Season, are kept in Stock, and Made to Measure for the remainder of this season at WARWICK HOUSE, 187 and 188, Regent-street. The Autumn Arrangements for this season will be ready to the rear of the old establishment.

VISITORS to the SEASIDE and TOURISTS will find a choice assortment in the Overland Portmanteau, fastened by one or more buckles, with Dressing-case and Writing-desk complete, Gladstone Bags, Travelling-bags, Hat-cases, Carpet-bags, Rugs, Shawl-straps, Waterproof Sheets, and Coats, and for Gentlemen seeking a kind of Half-dress Morning Coat, a fine Tweed Jacket, with Velvet collar, is recommended. Every article marked and cut somewhat as a Riding-coat, and is getting into general use.

DO YOU WISH YOUR CHILDREN WELL DRESSED? Then visit the Juvenile Outfitting Establishment, 74, and 75, Cheapside. The largest Stock of INFANTS and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING in London. Every Article of the Newest and Prettiest Fashion. Juvenile Dress-hats.
The KNICKERBOCKER SUIT, complete, from 18s.
The CAMBRIDGE SUIT, with Trousers, from 21s.
D. Nicholson and Co., 74 and 75, St. Paul's-churchyard.

ELEGANT PRESENTS
for Holidays, Birthdays, and Weddings.
Ivory Tablet Dressing-cases, 2s. 6d.
Ivory Tablet Work-boxes, 2s. 6d.
Ivory Tablet Envelope-cases, 2s. 6d.
Ivory Tablet Blotting-books, 2s. 6d.
Ivory Tablet Needle-cases, 2s. 6d.
Ivory Tablet Book-slides, 2s. 6d.
Ivory Tablet Purses, 2s. 6d.
Ivory Tablet Pocket-books, 2s. 6d.
Jewel-cases and Key-boxes.
Ivory Tablet Memorandums.
Tablet-slides and Tee-trays.
Illustrated Catalogues sent free by post.
Parkins and Gotto, Manufacturers, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

MECHI and BAZIN'S DESPATCH-BOX and DRESSING-BAG MANUFACTORY, 4, Leadenhall-street, contains every different form and size, fitted with real Bramah and Chubb locks, and with the best and most complete fittings. Also, at 112, 256, Regent-street, Dressing-cases, Travelling-bags, Writing-cases, Portfolios, Blotting-books, Envelope-cases, Tea-trays, Writing-desks, Work Luncheon-baskets, Sporting Knives, Wine and Spirit Flasks, Tourists' Knives, &c. Illustrated Catalogues free.

ALLEN'S GUINEA PORTMANTEAU.
ALLEN'S GUINEA DRESSING-CASE (solid leather),
Fitted with Ivory and Plated Ware,
Greatly admired and guaranteed to be good.
J. W. ALLEN, 22, Servants'-friend Warehouse, 29, Strand, London.
Catalogues post-free.

PARKINS AND GOTTO'S
TRAVELLING BAGS, DRESSING-CASES, and WRITING-CASES,
24 and 25, Oxford-street.

TOURISTS, TRAVELLERS, and VISITORS to the SEASIDE will find this application of both cooling and refreshing to the face and skin. It allays all heat, irritation, and unpleasant sensations after long rides, and discolourations, and produces a healthy purity and delicacy of complexion. Sold at 20, Hatton-garden, and 123, Regent-street.
ROWLANDS' KALYDOR
Ask for "ROWLANDS' KALYDOR."

GREY HAIR.—LE BRUN'S PERUVIAN HAIR-STAINING POMADE is permanent and void without trouble. Sold at 67, Grey's-inn-lane, London, and by Perfumers of Patent Medicine Vendors, in bottles, 3s. and 5s.; by post 54 extra.

TEETH! TEETH!!—Natural Appearance, Economy, and Durability are guaranteed by Mr. MOSELY'S improvements in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH. They support the lips and render both remaining, require no springs, wires, or ligatures, and are fixed without the slightest pain. Mr. Mosely's Treatise on the Teeth, Gums, &c., post-free, 2 stamps. At 3 establishments free. 18, New Burlington-street (corner of Regent-street). Observe particularly name and address.

NEW MUSIC.

D'ALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLE, as played by the Prize Gallicians Orchestra at the Pavilion Promenade Concerts, and the most favourite of "Moore's Melodies" Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ, as played by the Prize Gallicians Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival. Founded on the charming song of "Kathleen Mavourneen." The Waltz of the Season. Beautifully Illustrated. 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERTS GARIBALDI GALOP, as played by the Prize Gallicians Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival. Splendidly Illustrated with a Portrait of this great Chief by BRANDARD. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S NELLY GRAY VALSE, with Portrait of Nelly Gray. Now at last published. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERTS PRINCE OF WALES or ST. JAMES'S GALOP. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated with Portrait in Colours of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by BAXTER. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERTS CAMPBELL MINSTRELS' QUADRILLES. The best, most melodious, Nelly Gray and other Popular Negro Melodies. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. Full directions. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERTS NEW MUSIC for ORCHESTRA. Just published. Victoria Regina Valse; Quadrille, Lutine Valse, Trouveres Marches, Kathleen Mavourneen Valse, Nelly Gray Valse, Garibaldi Galop, Prince of Wales Galop, Nelly Gray Quadrille, Campbell Minstrels Quadrille, Sir Rigby Duncan Polka, Brin ge Rouge Quadrille, and Attila (Verdi) Quadrille, price 2s. each, small Orchestra, 3s. Catalogues of this and Chappell's works may be had gratis and postage-free on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FASHIONABLE DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing Air Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas, Galops, Mazurkas, Schottisches, &c., by CHARLES COTE, Strauss, Lanner, Labitzky, &c. Edited by FRANZ NAVA. Net price, 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S STANDARD DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing one hundred Country Dances, Hornpipes, Reels, Jigs, Highland Flings, Strathspeys, Cotillons, Spanish Dances, &c. Newly arranged by FRANZ NAVA. Net price, 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, a brilliant Fantasia on this favourite Air by the above popular Composer. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. Portuguese Love Song. Composed by the Hon. NORTON. Transcribed for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' NELLY GRAY, the popular tune, as sung by Campbell's Minstrels, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and shortest of all Instruction Books, containing preliminary Exercises, Scales, easier, circuitous, and a great variety of the most popular themes in progressive lessons. Sixty pages, full music size, price 3s., post-free.

N.B. A List of Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NEW OPERATIC FANTASIAS, Just published.

KUHE'S DIAMANS DE LA COURONNE, 3s. 6d.
KUHE'S Fra Diavolo and LE PROPHETE, each 4s.
KUHE'S DON GIOVANNI, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE JUVENILE ALBUM.—Just published, A SELECTION of FAVOURITE MELODIES Arranged for the PIANOFORTE by F. W. BERGER. In Two Books, each containing Nos. 1. Nelly Gray Valse (D'Albert) 9. Trovatore Polka Mazurka (D'Albert)
2. Garibaldi Galop (D'Albert)
3. Robert ist gut (Abbe)
4. Campbell Reel Song
5. Yeager Hymn
6. Nelly Gray Polka
7. Nelly Gray (D'Albert)
8. Bal Costo
9. Du bis treue
10. Brinley Varsovienne (D'Albert)
11. Ball Scene
12. Carnival of Venice
13. Lilium (D'Albert)
14. This Flower, dear Maid
15. Nelly Gray Quadrille
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

PRINCE GALITZIN'S SURPRISE POLKA and HEREEN VALSE, as performed at the Floral Hall and at the Pavilion Festival, are published at CHAPPELL and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

THE BELLRINGER. Sung by Mr. Sanley. The Words of this beautiful Song, by Mrs. Crawshay, have been created such a sensation at the Monday Popular Concerts, &c., &c., as now ready. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHEAP WORKS for various INSTRUMENTS.

VIOLIN. Price 1s. 6d. each. PIANOFORTE.
Chappell's 100 Dances. Chappell's 100 Dances.
Second Violin Tutor 1s. 6d. Chappell's 100 Popular Songs.
Bass Tutor 1s. 6d. Chappell's 100 Popular Duets.
Violoncello Tutor 1s. 6d. Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
Chappell's Operatic Airs.
Chappell's Vocal Duets. CORNET-A-PISTON.
Also, 100 Scotch, 100 Irish, and Chappell's 100 Sacred Melodies.
100 Christy Minstrel Melodies. Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
ENGLISH CONCERTINA. Also, 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs. FLUTE.
Also, 100 Scotch, 100 Irish, and Chappell's 100 Sacred Melodies.
100 Christy Minstrel Melodies. Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
GUITAR. GERMAN CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Popular Songs. Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
Guitar Accompaniments to books Songs, and Dance Music.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S POPULAR INSTRUCTION BOOKS. Price 1s. 6d. each.
Violin. Harmonium.
Flute. Concertina.
Violoncello. Cornet.
English Concertina. Flageolet.
German Concertina. Guitar.
Flageolet. Tambourine.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S BRASS BAND JOURNAL. Edited by WIPPERNICUTUS (Royal Medium). Terms of subscription, 10s. per annum, payable in advance, single copies, 1s. each. The Journal is complete for a term of 9, 12, 18, or more performers. Contains Marches, Operatic Selections, Set Pieces, Dance Music, &c., &c., and is specially adapted to Amateur Bands. Bills of the Months, containing lists of contents, and terms for new readers, forwarded on receipt of Stamp. Lectures, Subscribers' names received at CHAPPELL and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

A FANTASIA FROM LURLINE, for Pianoforte and Violoncello, and PIANO, by S. SMART, on the Airs from "Lurline," for Concertina solo, by Joseph Warren, 3s. 6d. each. A Concertina Concertante, with Septuor, may be had gratis and post-free.
WILKINSON and Co., 20, Cundit-street, Regent-street, W.

MUSIC HALF PRICE and Postage-free.—All Full-priced Music forwarded to any part of the kingdom on receipt of Stamps or Post-office Order for half the amount of the marked price. Purchases and Exchanges invited to call at 192, Regent-street. OETZMANN & Co., 33, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.

ALL MUSIC at HALF the MARKED PRICE. A NEW and ENLARGED CATALOGUE just published, gratis and Post-free. Pettman-square, W. Country orders per return of post. Payment taken in postage-stamps.

NEW MUSIC.

PICTORIAL PIANOFORTE PIECES, Notre Dame, by Berger.
A Maiden's Prayer, by Badarzewska.
Lucrezia, by Nordmann.
Nathalie, by Nordmann.
Grand Polka Militaire, by Nordmann.
Grand Fantasia, by Nordmann.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

POPULAR SONGS.
Beauty Show, by Lindsay.
The Skipper and his Boy, by Gabriel.
Cupid's Darts, by Glover.
Marguerite, by Balfe.
The Lover's Lute, by Jerrold.
It was a Fair Day, by Hatton.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LAURENT'S NEW WALTZES.
Lads Ragtag, on Irish Airs.
Shamrock Leaves, on Irish Airs.
Bluegown Waltz, on Scotch Airs.
Bonia Lucia Waltz.
Les Fleurs des Champs, on "They are so rare."
Donna Julia Waltz, illustrated.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

AN EVENING WITH MEYERBEER (published this day). Melange for the Pianoforte, by Nordmann, containing Selections from Robert le Diable, Robert le Diable, Les Huguenots, Ein, Ein, Ein, Ein, &c. Each 4s.
AN EVENING WITH BALFE, solo and duet.
AN EVENING WITH WALLACE, solo and duet.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE MAZURKAS of CHOPIN, edited by J. W. DAVISON, complete in Two Volumes, music size (150 pages), with Critical and Biographical Preface by the Editor, and Portrait of Chopin. Price 12s. each, or bound in cloth and gilt, 15s. each.
"The Athenæum" of July 28 says—"This is a very handsome edition of Chopin's Mazurkas, clear, and not dear, and the type is good. A careful preface by Mr. Davison serves as Overture to these Mazurkas, which, as a set of pianoforte pieces, is unequalled and will remain so."
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTE MUSIC.
Madame Oury's Sainte Cecile. 3s.
Madame Oury's Fleur de Lys. 3s.
Aschers Operatic Quadrilles. 4s.
Leopold de Meyer's Reverie de Naples. 4s.
Kuhe's Diamans. 3s. 6d.
Brinley Richards' Shadow Air (Dinorah). 3s.
Brinley Richards' Nelly Gray Waltz. 4s.
Aschers Operatic Waltzes. 4s.
Gollmick's Dripping Well. 3s.
De Kruger's Mountaineer. 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE BALLROOM MUSIC-BOOK. Price 3s., expressly bound in crimson cloth, gilt edges, containing 50 Waltzes,
50 Polkas,
10 Galops,
12 Quadrilles (complete),
2 Schottisches,
2 Varsovianas.
By all the most popular Composers of the day, forming the most extensive and cheapest collection of dance music ever published.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

COMPLETION of DINORAH in Shilling Parts.—Now ready, the Opera "Dinorah" complete, for Voice and Pianoforte, with Italian and English words, in Part 12, price 1s. Any of the handsomely-bound Volumes of the Shilling Opera Series will be discontinued in the present month subscribers should send immediately orders to complete their sets.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

100 OPERATIC GEMS for PIANOFORTE. Price 3s., expressly bound in crimson cloth, gilt edges, containing 100 pieces from all the newest operas, arranged for Pianoforte, by Nordmann, Brinley Richards, Osborne, and other eminent masters.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY and SONS' SHILLING MUSIC. ELEMENTARY WORKS.
Boosey's Shilling Instructor for the Violin.
Boosey's 24 Short and Progressive Duets for Violin. 24 pages. 1s.
Czerny Etude de la Velocite, in 3 books, in each; or, complete, 3s. 6d.
Czerny's 101 Exercises. In 2 books, in each; or, complete, 3s.
Czerny's 50 Exercises. In 2 books, in each; or, complete, 3s.
Berini's Celebrated Studies. In 2 books, in each; or, complete, 3s.
Boosey's 100 Exercises, Studies, and Extracts, for the Violin. Selected from the works of the great masters. 1s.
Boosey's Shilling Violin Tutor. 24 pages.
Boosey's Shilling Violoncello Tutor. 24 pages.
Boosey's 24 Lessons and 24 Progressive Duets for Flute. 1s.
Boosey's Shilling Contrabasso Tutor. 24 pages.
Boosey's Shilling Concertina Tutor. 24 pages.
Boosey's Shilling Harmonium Tutor. 24 pages, large size.
Boosey's Shilling Cornet-a-Piston Tutor. 24 pages.
Koch's Operatic or Orchestral Studies for the Violin. 2s. 6d.
Fiorillo's 36 Capriccios or Studies for the Violin. 1s. 6d.
Kreutzer's 40 Studies or Caprices for the Violin. 1s. 6d.

Be Berini's 4 Airs for the Violin, with Variations, complete. 1s.
Boosey 100 Country Dances. Second Series. Lumley, and Labitzky. 1s.
Boosey 100 Dances. Second Series. 1s.
Boosey 100 Dances. Third Series. 1s.
Boosey 100 Reels, Country and other Dances. 1s.
Boosey's Shilling Book of Waltzes. 1s.
Boosey's Shilling Book of Polkas, Mazurkas, and Schottisches. 1s.
Boosey 100 Standard Overtures for the Violin. 1s.
Boosey's Shilling Book of Overtures for the Violin. In each—1. La Sonnambula, Bellini. 2. Lurline, Balfe. 3. Zauberflote, Mozart. 4. Fra Diavolo, Auber. 5. Norma, Bellini. 6. Don Giovanni, Mozart. 7. Rienzi, Wagner. 8. Jessonda, Spohr. 9. Euryanthe, Weber. 10. Le Domino Noir, Auber. 11. Le Postillon de Lonjumeau, Adam. 12. Le Pre aux Clercs, Herold. 13. Martha, Flotow. 14. Le Prophete, Meyerbeer. 15. La Gazza Ladra, Rossini. 16. Il Barbiere, Rossini. 17. Il Matrimonio Segreto, Cimarosa. 18. Le Nozze di Figaro, Mozart. 19. Tancredi, Rossini. 20. Semiramide, Rossini. 21. Il Turco in Italia, Rossini. 22. Guillaume Tell, Rossini. 23. Diana. 24. Der Freischutz, Weber. 25. Oberon, Weber. 26. Le Pre aux Clercs, Herold. 27. Euryanthe, Weber. 28. Le Prophete, Meyerbeer. 29. La Gazza Ladra, Rossini. 30. Il Barbiere, Rossini. 31. Il Matrimonio Segreto, Cimarosa. 32. Semiramide, Rossini. 33. Il Turco in Italia, Rossini. 34. Guillaume Tell, Rossini. 35. Diana. 36. Der Freischutz, Weber. 37. Oberon, Weber. 38. Le Postillon de Lonjumeau, Adam. 39. Martha, Flotow. 40. Le Domino Noir, Auber. 41. Fra Diavolo, Auber. 42. Don Giovanni, Mozart. 43. Norma, Bellini. 44. Jessonda, Spohr. 45. Rienzi, Wagner. 46. Tancredi, Rossini. 47. Il Barbiere, Rossini. 48. Le Nozze di Figaro, Mozart. 49. Semiramide, Rossini. 50. Il Turco in Italia, Rossini. 51. Guillaume Tell, Rossini. 52. Diana. 53. Der Freischutz, Weber. 54. Oberon, Weber. 55. Le Postillon de Lonjumeau, Adam. 56. Martha, Flotow. 57. Le Prophete, Meyerbeer. 58. La Gazza Ladra, Rossini. 59. Il Barbiere, Rossini. 60. Le Nozze di Figaro, Mozart. 61. Semiramide, Rossini. 62. Il Turco in Italia, Rossini. 63. Guillaume Tell, Rossini. 64. Diana. 65. Der Freischutz, Weber. 66. Oberon, Weber. 67. Le Postillon de Lonjumeau, Adam. 68. Martha, Flotow. 69. Le Prophete, Meyerbeer. 70. La Gazza Ladra, Rossini. 71. Il Barbiere, Rossini. 72. Le Nozze di Figaro, Mozart. 73. Semiramide, Rossini. 74. Il Turco in Italia, Rossini. 75. Guillaume Tell, Rossini. 76. Diana. 77. Der Freischutz, Weber. 78. Oberon, Weber. 79. Le Postillon de Lonjumeau, Adam. 80. Martha, Flotow. 81. Le Prophete, Meyerbeer. 82. La Gazza Ladra, Rossini. 83. Il Barbiere, Rossini. 84. Le Nozze di Figaro, Mozart. 85. Semiramide, Rossini. 86. Il Turco in Italia, Rossini. 87. Guillaume Tell, Rossini. 88. Diana. 89. Der Freischutz, Weber. 90. Oberon, Weber. 91. Le Postillon de Lonjumeau, Adam. 92. Martha, Flotow. 93. Le Prophete, Meyerbeer. 94. La Gazza Ladra, Rossini. 95. Il Barbiere, Rossini. 96. Le Nozze di Figaro, Mozart. 97. Semiramide, Rossini. 98. Il Turco in Italia, Rossini. 99. Guillaume Tell, Rossini. 100. Diana.

BOOSEYS' MUSICAL CABINET. A NEW SERIES OF POPULAR STANDARD BOOKS.
No. 1. Twenty Songs by Mendelssohn ... ... 1s.
2. Twenty Songs by Balfe ... ... 1s.
3. Fourteen Songs by Verdi ... ... 1s.
4. Twenty-Six Songs by Popular Minstrels ... ... 1s.
5. Fifty Nursery Songs ... ... 1s.
6. Twelve Sets of Quadrilles ... ... 1s.
7. Twelve Sets of Waltzes ... ... 1s.
8. Twenty-Six Operatic Gems by Verdi, for Piano ... 1s.
All the Songs are printed with Pianoforte Accompaniments, and Words throughout under the Notes.
The Polkas and Galops are published with their Trios and Second Parts complete.

TO THE TRADE.
Prospectuses, Specimen Pages, and Terms forwarded by return of application to BOOSEY and SONS, 28, Holles-street.

SPEED THEE, MY BARK. Duet for equal Voices. Written by Miss Dolby. Composed by Virginia Gabriel. Price 3s. 6d. post free.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

WILLIAMS'S 100 DANCES FOR THE VIOLIN. WILLIAMS'S 100 Popular Songs for the Violin. WILLIAMS'S 100 Popular Airs for the Violin.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

MERRILY OVER THE SNOW (Key of C). By A. MCGLENNON. Also, in Key of A, for Contralto or Tenor.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

THE QUEEN OF THE SEA. The popular Ballad. By A. SCHLOESSER. Price 2s. 6d.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

THE UNIVERSAL CIRCULATING MUSICAL LIBRARY is the largest in England. The classified Catalogue, containing the Works of the Ancient and Modern Masters, English, and Foreign, is now ready, and will be forwarded, gratis and postpaid, to any applicant. Two Guineas, which also entitles Subscribers to three Tickets for the Concerts of the Musical Society of London, per annum, at 26, Sackville-street, and 51, Gresham-street, and 2, Tottenham-court-road. Prospectuses on application.

NEW SONG.—THE BEAUTIFUL EARTH FOR HER. Composed by S. GLOVER. Price 3s. 6d. The extraordinary success of the "Songs of the Seasons," sung by Mr. Sims Reeves, has induced the "Songs of the Flowers," by "The beautiful earth for her," is not published. It is one of the most happy effusions that Mr. Glover has found for some time; both words and music are charming.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—OLD FRIENDS AND OTHER THINGS. Composed by VINCENT WALLACE. Price 3s. 6d. This is the last production of the distinguished Composer, and is published immediately after the performance of his New Fancy Concert, at which it was sung by the composer with his usual success.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—THE DREAM OF OTHER DAYS. Written by CHARLES MACKAY. Dresselor Grande. Price 3s. 6d. Colonel Bruce has published several songs, but "The Dream of other days" will eclipse them all. Mdlle. Parepa is singing it with the most distinguished success.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

COOTE'S QUEEN OF THE HARVEST WALTZ. This Edition of this popular set now ready. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s. Solo or Duet.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

DOWN BY THE SEA.—New Song by J. W. CHERRY. Price 3s. 6d. "Likely to become the most popular Song of the Year."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SNOW-WHITE BLOSSOMS. New Ballad. Written by CHARLES MACKAY. Sung at the London and Provincial Concerts with immense success; also by the Christy Minstrels. Price 3s. Illustrated in Colours, 4s. Keeps in-doors. May be had with or without Chorus, price 3s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

KUHE'S FOUR LES ATTRAITS, A new Fantasia on Meyerbeer's Le Nozze de Sabin by this popular Composer. Price 4s. net, post-free.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

CHRISTY MINSTRELS' NEWEST SONGS, as sung by them on their present provincial tour. Price 3s. each, post-free:—
"Evangeline." Solo and quartet.
"The Lowlands of Holland." Solo and quartet.
"Nix in the Woods." Solo and quartet.
"Darling Willie." Ballad.
"Sweet Lily Dale." "Sweetest Ballad."
Published only by METZLER and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

GARIBALDI POLKA. By T. BROWNE. As Performed with great success at the Floral Hall Concerts. Illustrated with Portrait of Garibaldi. Price 3s. net.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

DANSOMME MEHUL'S SANTA LUCIA. "An effective and not difficult arrangement for Pianoforte of this popular air."—Vide Review.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

ABRAHAM. Oratorio. By B. MOLIQUE. The full Score, in one volume, which is to be performed at the forthcoming Festival of the Sacred Harmonic Society, is now published by subscription. Price £2 2s., to subscribers who send in their names before the 15th of September. The Pianoforte Score, with the Words, is also ready. Vocal Parts and Orchestral Parts will be ready the day after the Festival.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

DA LIEG ICH UNTER DEN BAUMEN (Oh! tell me, my heart).
Mendelssohn's celebrated Song, by Miss Hildas. Collay and Jenny Meyer. Sent free for 17 stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Regent-street, London.

O REST IN THE LORD.—Mendelssohn's celebrated air from "Elijah." Transcribed for the Pianoforte solo by GEORGE FREDERICK WEST. Price 3s. net.
EWER and Co., 97, Regent-street, London.

EWER and CO.'S UNIVERSAL CIRCULATING MUSICAL LIBRARY is now fully open for the issue of Subscription Tickets, which entitle the holders to the following services. This Library, which embraces every branch of musical literature in the most complete form, is conducted on liberal, and extensive in extension. Terms of subscription, Two Guineas per annum, or One Guinea per half-year. Subscribers are entitled to three Tickets, which, in addition to the privilege of exchanging Books, entitles them to purchase Music at a discount of 25 per cent. Subscribers with four guineas' worth, which may be exchanged twice a month. At the end of the subscription they will be presented with one guinea's worth of music. The printed catalogue, price 6s., now ready. Terms for the Concerts of the Musical Society of London, which are conducted by EWER and Co., Mistresses to her Majesty, 97, Regent-street London.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price Fifty Guineas.—This instrument has (unlike the ordinary Cottage Pianoforte) a complete Iron Frame, Trichord Compass of Seven Octaves, with Grecian Bass, and every perfection of touch and workmanship. It is a most powerful pianoforte, and is recommended for its great durability, as it will stand any climate. The touch is most full, and rich; and the power equal to that of a Grand Pianoforte. The case is of solid rosewood, with carved and fretted work, the touch elastic, and the repetition very rapid. Every Pianoforte is warranted for five years. Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street, opposite the Public Rooms. This new profession, and merchants, to the Foreign Model, feeling assured that the Cottage Pianoforte manufactured has failed to meet the wants of the climate, and that every instrument will be warranted, for five years, CHAPPELL and Co. will have pleasure in supplying the New Model Pianoforte.

HARMONIUMS at CHAPPELL'S.—The HARMONIUM by ALEXANDRE is the only instrument of the kind which possesses the power of sustaining the sound; the tone is but slightly affected by changes of weather, and is also calculated for the Church, Chapel, Concert-room, or Drawing-room. Full descriptive lists on application.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE PATENT DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 60 guineas. Illustrated Lists and Testimonials forwarded on application. Attention to CHAPPELL and Co., New Bond-street; or 15, George-street, Hanover-square.

TO PURCHASERS of PIANOFORTES.—The Public are invited to visit WILKINSON'S NEW and IMPROVED PIANOFORTES for Sale by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ERARD, &c., &c., at 192, Regent-street. Lists, new Testimonials of every description.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, nearly equal to new, and now, at greatly reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and Co. have for SALE, Secondhand, at the Corner of Conduit-street, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE, 14s. per month. Two guineas. The full compass, trichord, and warranted not to get out of order. Pianofortes taken in exchange, or purchased if approved. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 43, Moorgate-street.

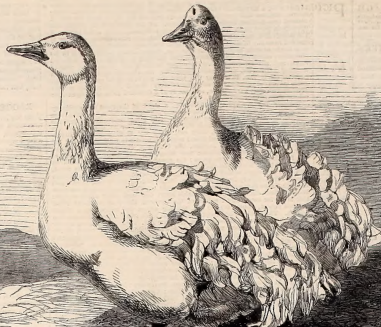
FRODSHAM and BAKER, 31, Gracechurch-street, City, established 1830, Chronometer-makers to the Admiralty, Observatories, Railways, Steamers, Merchants, Dealers, Dugies and Lever Watches, of the most improved construction, at moderate prices. Illustrated Lists forwarded.

NEW INVENTION.—Any boat, plate, dish, &c., is converted into a steam-boat by FARKER'S Steam-Engine Model. Price 5s. Sent to any part of the kingdom for 66, railway free.—J. F. PARKER, Inventor, 4, Lilford-road, Camberwell.

F. AND C. OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, W., Manufacturers of Glass Chandeliers, Table Glass, Wash Lights and Mantelpiece Lustres, Globes, Shades, Gas Fittings, Ornamental and Foreign, suitable for Presents. Show Rooms, Export, and Furnishing Orders promptly executed. Manufactory, Broad-street, Birmingham. Established 1807.

PATENT CRYSTAL WINDOW-BARS, for shop and domestic windows; Artistic ornamentation, showing the Trade Mark and Name engraved thereon. Pauly Manufactory, Birmingham.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, with all the recent Improvements, Fireproof Doors and Boxes, Cash and Deed Boxes. Complete List of Sizes and Prices sent on application. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.



ROYAL ASYLUM for ORPHAN and other CHILDREN of CLERGYMEN, CLERKS, and SCHOOLMASTERS. Candidates may now be nominated for the next Ballot-poll.
Subscriptions gratefully received by Messrs. Spencer, St. Evremonde-street; or by the Rev. J. E. JACKSON, Secretary.
S. E. JACKSON, Secretary.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 1, King William-street, London. Established 1834. Assurances on every description of property effected on the most liberal terms.
Prospectuses and every information undertaken on the most liberal terms.
Prospectuses and every information undertaken on the most liberal terms.
Prospectuses and every information undertaken

THE POULTRY SHOW AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

THE summer show of poultry and pigeons at the Crystal Palace commenced on Saturday week, and continued open on the following Monday and Tuesday. The show was held in the north wing, and the pens were most conveniently arranged. Of rabbits alone there were 108 pens; whilst the poultry were exhibited in a proportionate degree. The pigeons also appeared to great advantage, and in more than usual variety as to form and class. The whole of the poultry were the produce of the present year, with the exception of a class called "extra stock." The fact that so large a collection of poultry was the result of less than a year's growth was one of the most interesting points in the exhibition; and, judging from the unusual dimensions of some of the specimens, it was really difficult to believe that this rule had been in every case closely adhered to.

Amongst the geese there were two curious specimens from Sebastopol, exhibited by Mr. T. H. D. Bayly, of Ickwell House, Biggleswade. These birds are somewhat smaller than those of this country as a mature size, but but they are of the purest white and the most perfect form, whilst the more conspicuous portion of their plumage is of a curly nature, affording a very striking contrast to the feathers of the ordinary English goose. The feathers on the back are curved and frilled upwards; the secondary feathers of the wings are elongated and twisted, also the tail coverts. These geese were sent to Mr. Bayly by his uncle, John Harvey, Esq., who had been cruising in the Black Sea before he went to Tyre, where, as our readers may remember, his yacht, the Cheyenore, was of great service in defending the town from the Druses. Lord Dufferin brought them to England in his yacht from Sebastopol. They are the only pair of the kind in this country. Their weight when sent to the Crystal Palace was eleven pounds each. They are of precisely the same habits as our English geese. These geese were, without doubt, the most curious and singular of the novelties of the show, and as such they figure in the accompany Engraving.

SEBASTOPOL GEESE AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE POULTRY SHOW.

Of the Dorking fowls, both white and coloured, the most successful was a group of one cock and two pullets sent by Capt. Beardmore, R.A., of Farcham, Hants. The Cochin China fowls of every sort, from the pure white to the cinnamon and buff, were conspicuous for their shape and proportions; whilst the game fowl of various kinds presented many specimens which indicated that great pains have been taken in the superintendence of the breed during the last few years. Every description of fowl of superior breed was shown in the collection. One of the principal rules established by the judges was strictly followed—viz., the necessity for observing, as essential to the gaining of a prize, high condition, quality, beauty of plumage, purity of race, and uniformity in the markings, combs, and other characteristics, contradistinguished from the mere consideration of weight.

The pigeons and rabbits indicated an advance on former years, and certainly the least observant eye must have detected beauties amongst them which are not often to be seen in either of the races. The pigeons were really remarkable for their size and development, whilst the rabbits betrayed such strong evidence of care and skill in the rearing that one was led to wonder how it is that these little favourites of the schoolboy do not occupy a larger share of attention than at present in the ordinary farmyard.

On the whole, the collection of this summer may be regarded as evincing great care and discrimination on the part of the exhibitors, and a corresponding amount of skill and discretion on the part of those to whose judgment and management the matter was successfully intrusted.

BREAKFAST-HUNTING IN A SICILIAN VILLAGE.

OUR special Artist and Correspondent in Sicily, in his account of "A March through Sicily with the Centre Column of the National Army," which appeared in the Number of this Journal for August 4, writes as follows regarding the incident illustrated below:—"At six a.m., June 24, we made our entry into Roccapalumba, amidst an assemblage of rusty-looking priests, ragged peasantry, tawny-skinned urchins in a state of nature, pigs with their litters, fluttering broods of cackling capons, and barking dogs. Having heard from our Quartermaster, who had preceded us, that there was absolutely nothing to be obtained in the village in the shape of eatables, that the reply of 'Niente mangiari' was everywhere the same, a council of war was immediately called, composed of the Captain and Lieutenant of the Swiss company, an officer of artillery, and myself. The 'finding' was that the wants of nature were paramount and must be administered to; that a writ of habeas corpus be at once issued against all fat pullets and capons found at large; and that, if necessary, arms should be used in the capture. It was further resolved that, as certain members of this honourable court had other duties to perform, a certain Rosario Vicetelly should be deputed to make the arrests, and that the artillery officer's revolver should be bestowed upon him as a token of office, wherewith his authority in this matter should be made to be respected and subscribed to by all those whom those presents might concern. That morning was a day of mourning on many dunghoaps, and it will be commemorated in the pages of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS under the title of 'Break-fasthunting at Roccapalumba.'" It would seem, at the first glance at the Illustration, from the apparently reckless firing of our Artist, that other than feathered bipeds run risk of being shot on this marauding expedition; although, judging from the trophies strung to his girdle and the victims falling fast around him, he is as good at his pistol as at his pencil, and ample materials for a breakfast à la fourchette were doubtless quickly obtained. How far the Roccapalumbians approved of this lawless onslaught on their poultry is a matter into which we will not enter. Their looks of wild terror and gestures of imploring entreaty to abstain show that they have but little hope of being paid for their barn-door favourites. It may be that they were duly recompensed for their losses, though no mention is made of the fact by our Correspondent. We fear, however, that the saying "Everything is fair in love and war" held too much of the marauders for them even to think of doing this act of common honesty. Besides, were they not engaged in freeing the inhabitants from a grinding tyranny?

CHEVALIER'S ELECTRIC TARGET.

AMIDST the great and constant changes which are daily taking place around us, few are greater or more necessary than those introduced into modern firearms and their use by regular troops and volunteers. In former times the rule for regular troops was to fire breast-high, with little or no attempt at aiming; and, as a necessary result of such a system, the killed and wounded in an engagement in those days, and even quite lately, bore an exceedingly small proportion to the expenditure of powder and ball. For instance, at the battle of Vittoria, in 1815, nearly 4,000,000 rounds of ball-cartridge were consumed, and out of 90,000 men only 8000 were killed and wounded, showing that only one musket shot in 459 took effect! besides which there were 6570 rounds of artillery used in the fight. In 1851 our men at the Cape actually expended 80,000 ball-cartridges in killing and wounding twenty-five Kaffirs! It is stated that the French in the Crimea expended 25,000,000 ball-cartridges without having put 25,000 Russians hors de combat! These few facts show the necessity of improvement in the construction of firearms and in their use also, for although they were faulty in construction, yet being in the hands of bad marksmen prevented even what little good they had being of any service. Great improvements having been made in the construction of fire-arms, it only now remains to devise some mode by which they may be rendered perfectly useful. And although a soldier may be thoroughly proficient in his manual and platoon exercises, and understand and go through all the evolutions of the British Army with accuracy, all these acquirements are comparatively useless unless he be a good shot. His duty is to kill his enemy; and to attain this object he must devote much of his time to target practice. Too much attention is paid to uniform, what colour and cut they should be, whether a plume or a tuft should be worn, and so forth. All this is splitting hairs and waste of valuable time. Look at Garibaldi: he is satisfied with a red shirt and a wide-awake. Let our soldiers (regulars and volunteers) devote more of their time to target practice and they will shortly become the champion shots of the world. The necessity of this practice cannot be too deeply impressed on the minds of all who take an interest in the efficiency of our soldiers.

BREAKFAST-HUNTING AT ROCCAPALUMBA, A SICILIAN VILLAGE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

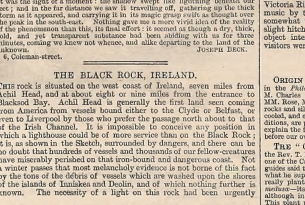
Until lately the system of target practice was very defective, expensive, inexpedient, and attended with much danger; it was, in fact, so very unsatisfactory in every point of the word that few took any interest in it. The electric target invented by Lieutenant Chevalier, of the 1st West India Regiment, removes many of the objections common to the old system, and renders target practice an agreeable and healthful change from the other military duties of peace-time. This system has been in use for some months at Walham Green, the head-quarters of the South Middlesex Volunteers, commanded by Lord Ranelagh, where its simplicity and the ready accuracy of record have elicited the most unqualified approval of both officers and men belonging to the fine Corps.



Annexed is a brief account of some of the principal features of Chevalier's self-recording target:—"The target to be fired at may be of any size, and composed of iron, steel, or other material; the surface is divided into "a central division, or bull-s-eye, and any convenient number of concentric rings. At the rear, or place of firing, a small indicator, on the face of which are two needles, is set up. This indicator is moved from the rear by means of the use of two small electric wires. Each of the divisions of the target is in a state of insulation from a galvanic battery until hit, when immediately a circuit is made, and a current of electricity is transmitted which traverses the wire corresponding with the division hit, and it instantly causes one of the needles on the indicator to deflect and point which part of the target has been hit. Thus no markers, iron mantelets, poles, flags, &c., are required, and every one sees, by merely looking at the indicator, which part of the target has been struck. Practice may be carried on with great rapidity, and without having to cease firing occasioned to recover the target. The volunteer fires one shot, hits it at once known: hence, should the needle point to 'outer top,' the individual who fired knows that his shot struck exactly in the will, therefore, aim lower next shot."

Our Illustration represents the electric target in use by Lord Ranelagh at the head of the corps at Walham Green—his Lordship standing by the side of the indicator, resting his hand upon it, one of the needles of which is seen to be at "bull's eye" in the distance. The position of the bullet is instantly known by the deflection of a needle on the face of the indicator.

REMARKABLE FACULÆ AND SPOTS SEEN ON THE SUN ON THE 19TH AND 20TH OF JULY.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

IN your Number of Saturday, August 25, in describing the phenomena visible on the sun's disc, the total eclipse in Spain, I pointed out the probable connection between the luminous prominences and the faculæ or bright markings of the sun. I have now to submit to my readers to have an opportunity of seeing a remarkable group of faculæ and spots which came conspicuously into view on the 19th and 20th of July, the two days immediately succeeding the eclipse. The drawing from which the accompanying Engraving is taken was made by Mr. George Williams, at his observatory at Liverpool, by means of a telescope of four inches aperture, which was made to project a magnified image of the sun, on a screen attached to the telescope. My colleague, Mr. Cooke, and I observed this mass of faculæ as early as the 18th of July, at 3h. p.m.; he observed the two widest of the spots within the faculæ with accuracy at his observatory at Redhill, and found that they covered an area ranging from a position angle 114° to that of 125°. The surrounding faculæ extended through a space of 70° and were grouped in position with some of the brilliant prominences which were visible during the eclipse. The bill sloped rapidly to the south; on the brow was a beautiful vineyard; among which was a pavilion, but beyond the town, with its ancient church and castle, whilst in the distance the Pyrenees, some cultivated almost to the summit, and others covered with forest trees. The whole scene appeared as a theatre set in the universe almost impassable chain. The position was all the south of the land, if the weather should hold fair, I anticipated a grand display.

THE SUN, AS SEEN FROM LIVERPOOL, JULY 19, 1860.

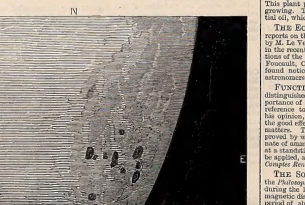
The morning of the eclipse was fine, and I was not a little afraid of a shower of rain at close of day, but it was not till after the eclipse was passed that the sun showed itself; but from this time the sky rapidly improved, and when the eclipse we had hardly a cloud in the sky.

We provided a substantial lunch, and ordered our hostess to bring up a cock and hen and chicken, which might serve the effect produced on them by the eclipse. After lunch we read about the 2nd Napoleon Royal's interview with great pomp, and the Emperor's reception by the people, and surprising despite the admonition of one of our party, that Napoleon is now reigning during the eclipse, and that all is going on smoothly. Nevertheless we observed that there was but little occasion for the sun's assistance to time, so if the time failed; and as we were all busily engaged making our final preparations, arranging for notes, adjusting our instruments, and putting the finishing touches to our sketching (one using a little umbrella to facilitate arrangement which, forgotten beforehand, sprung up like magic. The first contact behaved most regularly, and almost acted as our faithful servants should, to the drilling of our worthy friends their masters the engineers, Messrs. Preston and Wray, Messrs. Cooke, the eminent Optician of York, our traveller, Mr. Roberts and my assistant, Mr. Walter Beck, constituted our party.



I had turned my whole attention to ascertaining by my telescope whether the light of the corona was polarized or not, and for this purpose I placed a piece of tourmaline in the focus of the tube by the side of the Huyghenian eyepiece; on this glass I had a number of circular crystals of salicine, and over the eyepiece I placed a Nicol's prism. I selected the crystals of salicine as the most sensitive and one whose colour is brought out most prominently by polarised light.

An exclamation burst from all at about 1.0 "It's begun!" and soon the limb of the moon showed itself. Our view of the horizon was perfect, and after a while the appearance of objects began slightly to change. The sky in the west was supposed to lose much of its blue, our shadows became much sharper, and we remembers disappeared. About fifteen minutes before totality lamps were lit for observing the power of the light of the corona, and all of us kept steadily to our several instruments. Shouts from the town showed that the natives, too, knew that the end was the change. The cock looked about him, the chickens still pecked, and his hen under his wing and full fast asleep: the dog continued still incensed in the north-west, presuming the appearance as of a heavy storm in the distance. The shadow was approaching. Leaping my eye at the eclipse, the thin cusp of the sun shone still with dazzling brightness. I searched the dark disc of the moon, and also the neighbourhood of the sun for polarised light, but was unable to detect any. I also looked carefully for Baily's Beads on the lower edge of the approaching limb of the moon (with a Huyghen's eyepiece). Two large irregularities showed themselves: and as this portion of the sun's disc is still the light from the sun, I noticed two distinct beads, but no others. At the time of total obscuration the corona burst forth. The rays extending in a diameter nearly equal to that of the moon's disc, and one decidedly twice its diameter, and curving away as it receded from it. The polarisation of light was very strong, surpassing that seen in the heavens at 90 deg. from the sun, though much resembling it in its character, and giving the impression that the light of the corona is reflected light, and not self-luminous. Its colour, without the polariscope, was of dazzling brightness, very much resembling phosphoric colour. Its vines of a yellow-green; the country around us had assumed an unnatural hue, the distant hills, reflecting the colour of the sky, and the stood out as though bathed in deep indigo. We seemed beneath a vast indigo canopy lifted slightly by the horizon, the horizon itself was of a pale orange, through whose rich vault Venus and Jupiter together, with some of the most brilliant stars, appeared with undoubted lustre, and from which also we were able to see far away, at all points of the compass, the gorgeous tints of an autumn sunset, glowing orange and, shading off as we looked to a bright orange. The chickens had crept beneath the hen's wings; the butterflies had all disappeared, a cool breeze crept over our faces. The dog was quiet as a mouse, and yet we stood as though enchanted, drinking in as much of the gorgeous draught as we could. The whole appearance is too momentous, and all would be reckoned in the history of the past. A short rose, "Here it comes!" and a loud tumult towards the light gave the word. The shout had already left it; the tints of sunshine shone gently on its rugged slopes. It was the sight of a catastrophe. It was the sight of a mighty work in contact; and in the far distance we saw it travelling off, gathering up the thick mass as it approached, and carrying off in its magic wake the benighted cone the peak in the south-east. Nothing gave us a more vivid idea of the reality of the phenomenon than the sudden effect. It seemed as though a dry thick cold, and yet transparent substance had been shifting with as for three minutes, causing us to know not whence, and also departing to the East of the darkness.

6, Coleman-street. JOSEPH BECK.

THE BLACK ROCK, IRELAND.

THIS rock is situated on the west coast of Ireland, seven miles from Achil Head, and at about eight or nine miles from the entrance to Blacksod Bay. Achil Head is generally the first land of which mariners from America from vessels bound either to the Clyde or Belfast, or even to Liverpool for those who prefer the passage north about to the west of the Irish Channel. It is impossible to conceive any position in which a lighthouse could be of more service than on the Black Rock; it is, as shown in the Sketch, surrounded by dangers, and there can be no doubt that hundreds of vessels and thousands of our fellow-creatures have mistakenly perished on the inhospitable Connaught coast. Only in a winter passes that most melancholy evidence is not borne of this fact by the tons of the débris of vessels which are washed upon the shores of the islands of Achil and Inishkea, and by the still more melancholy number of bodies which are cast ashore. The vicinity of Achil is also remarkable for the number of wrecks which have occurred there. Many of these have been caused by the want of a lighthouse, but many also by the dangerous character of the coast, and the fact that the land is very low, and that the sea breaks over it in heavy gales. Many of the wrecks which have occurred there have been of vessels of large tonnage, and have been totally lost. Many of the crews have been saved by the exertions of the coastguard, but many have perished. The Black Rock is a dangerous rock, and is covered at high water. It is situated about a mile and a half from the shore, and is about a mile from the nearest island. The Rock is about 100 feet in length, and 50 feet in breadth. The lighthouse is to be built upon it, and will be 100 feet in height. The light will be a fixed white light, and will be visible at a distance of fifteen miles. The lighthouse will be built of granite, and will be a handsome structure. The contract for the erection of the lighthouse has been taken by Messrs. Grendon, of Drogheda, and the works are now in progress. The engineer-in-chief is Alexander Mitchell, Esq., C.E., of Dublin, and the resident engineer is Mr. Thomas Jones, C.E., of Westport. The Rock is the property of the Marquis of Sligo, and the lighthouse is being erected by the Commissioners of Irish Lights.

THE BLACK ROCK, IRELAND.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

ORIGIN OF GRAINE.—This interesting question is discussed in the Philosophical Magazine by a paper by the eminent entomologist M. Charles St. Claire-Deville, with especial reference to the researches of M. Roe, Minister Plenipotentiary to Naples. The various circumstances which rocks and siliceous minerals acquire when they are melted and then rapidly cooled, and especially the property which sugar acquires under these conditions, are particularly adverted to. M. Deville says that before seeking to explain the formation of the crystals of sugar of grape for what takes place before our own eyes in the solidifying lava of eruptive volcanoes.

THE "ARRAN PEBBLE."—A local paper has the object of search of the Rev. T. Leeve while riding on the promontory of Jaudrot, in Corriehyra, one of the Canary Isles. While looking at some loose grey stones, one of the guides said to him, "Look, Señor, turquois!" On examination he found that what he supposed to be mineralised stones covered with grey lichen to be really pebbles. After examining them closely, he came to the conclusion—in which Mr. Bowers in a letter explaining the family to which it belonged, although in appearance quite unlike the pebble of the great mineral species. This plant possesses the property of catching fire and burning even while growing. This would seem to indicate the presence of inflammable resinous matter. The plant is known as Isoberon.—Transactions of Natural History.

THE ECLIPSE OF JULY 18.—Some of the valuable and interesting reports on this subject forwarded to the French Minister of Public Instruction by M. Le Verrier, the Astronomer Royal of France, have been published in the recent numbers of L'Institut. They contain a résumé of the observations of the great astronomer himself and his distinguished colleagues—MM. Foucault, Chacornac, Villarceau, and others. In the same journal will be found notices of the observations of many minor astronomers, including foreign astronomers, such as Plantamour, Faye, Feuttrach, Lamont, and others.

FUNCTIONS OF POTASH IN VEGETATION.—M. G. Ville, the distinguished botanical physiologist, in a paper on "Experiments on the portance of the agents which concur in vegetable production (with especial reference to the fertilisation of the farm and other arid soils), expresses his opinion, founded on experiment, that potash is the regulating agent of the good effects of ammonia in vegetation by the use of these and similar manures. That the nature of the latter does not affect the result M. Ville has proved by weighing the produce of wheat, oats, and lime, all ammoniac carbonate of potash, and urea. In the absence of potash, vegetation was almost at a standstill, but became active on its application. Potash, therefore, must be applied, as well as the phosphates, &c., to render agriculture remunerative. Comptes Rendus.

THE SOLAR SPOTS AND THE WEATHER.—Mr. R. P. Greg, in the Philosophical Magazine, compares variations in the cold and wet weather during the last eleven months may not be occasioned in some way by solar magnetic influence. Schwabe has said to have proved that there is a non-said period of about eleven years from maximum to maximum; General Sabine asserts that this period synchronises with a physical cause of terrestrial cycles; and M. Wolfe, of Berne, has shown that years remarkable for abundance of solar spots have also been remarkable for a decline in autumn heat. The great auroral display in September last occurred about the time for the return of the maximum of solar spots. Sir John Herschel has also referred to a great meteorological disturbance; as in England and Northern Europe much more than the average amount of cold and wet seasons have prevailed since then, and in North America and India there has been more than an average amount of drought and heat. All these facts appear to point to some general terrestrial cycle to the subject.

THE GREAT METEORITE is figured and described by Professor E. B. Andrews and others in the American Journal of Science. About fifteen minutes before one on the morning of the 20th of last month a meteor in the west Virginia were alarmed by a noise resembling the firing of heavy cannon and the explosion of a steam boiler. Concord, in Ohio, felt three successive shocks, amounting, in collective weight, to about 700lb., were obtained. The largest, weighing about 300lb., fell in a field about 12 miles from Concord, and was found to be 3·417, and its composition—silica, 31·25; protoxide of iron, 29·04; and smaller quantities of protoxide of manganese, lime, soda, sulphur, and water, with traces of chromium and phosphorus. The article contains interesting details of the phenomena accompanying the fall of meteorites.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE MOON UPON THE WEATHER has been investigated by Professor Marcet, of Geneva, who has worked upon the meteorological tables kept at the Great St. Bernard Hospice. His calculation that rain given the results in tables in the same journal. During the last sixty years (1,714 days), the number of days of observation amounted 2630 (nights and days—that is, from rainy to fine weather, or fine weather to rainy. Of these 2630 changes, 1,320 happened at new moon, and 1,310 at full moon—the difference being only following the full moon and 107 on that following the new moon. It is hence concluded that the influence of the moon upon the weather exists on the day of the full moon 8·9:11; at new moon, 9·12; the day after full moon, 9·43; the day after new moon, 9·46. The conclusion is drawn that the greatest number of days of rain and the quantity of water which falls the professor regards as positive. Further observations, however, he states that, of the 1,714 changes of weather, the barometer prophesied 1340 times correctly. This approaches nearly to the proportion of 4 to 5, or 80 per cent.

M. ANDRE M. C. DUMERIL, the eminent French naturalist, died on the 14th ult., at his residence, Amelot, on Saturday, January 14, 1779, after a diligent course of study, he became a teacher of anatomy at Rouen; and in 1801 obtained the professorship of medicine at the Ecole de Medecine, and passed for him the friendship of his great master Cuvier, whom he had the honour of assisting in his researches; and in the publication of his celebrated "Lectures on Comparative Anatomy;" and whom he eventually succeeded in the chair of Natural History in the Institution of Strasbourg. Alexandre Brongniart being his colleague. In 1802 Dumeril became a coadjutor of Lacepede, and published, in conjunction with him, taking the instruction relating to serpents and fishes. He fulfilled his arduous educational duties for fifty years, and his lectures on the Natural History of Reptiles and Insects and his memoirs for reptiles. In 1816 he was elected a member of the French Academy, and in 1825 succeeded Lacepede as professor of the museum in his "Erpétologie," in 6 vols. 8vo, a general history of reptiles; and his "Entomologie Analytique," in 1 vol. 8vo, published in the Collection of Suites à Buffon, a latter work is a most elaborate one on the structure, habits, and classification of insects, especially those of Europe. It contains the fruit of sixty years of the industrious life of its gifted author. He also contributed papers to the annals of the Museum of Natural History, Paris. M. Dumeril is said to have been devoted to his friends, affectionate to his colleagues, paternal to his pupils, and benevolent to all, and to have been venerated and loved by all who knew him. He enjoyed good health till a few days before his death, which took place after a short illness. When he felt his end approaching he announced it, as he would have done any other truth, calmly tendering himself to his family and friends. Three of his five illustrious associates in the anatomical and zoological section of the French Academy, MM. Milne Edwards, Geoffroy St. Hilaire, and Valenciennes, accompanied his body to the grave.

Dr. Livingstone's friends will learn with satisfaction that he writes from the lower part of the Zambesi, on March 27, "All well."

"WHAT'S O'CLOCK?" "WHAT'S O'CLOCK?" BY GODWIN.

IN this little Sketch, so unpretending in character, yet so charming for its very simplicity, Mr. Godwin embodies an allegory of the fleet course of time and the changes wrought in its progress. The scene is an ancient thickly-wooded churchyard. The principal group is that of two children blowing the downy petals from off the dandelion, according to the old accredited fashion with youth, to ascertain the hour of the day, each atom as it falls serving but to illustrate the ever-increasing ravages of time amongst our fellows. On the opposite side an infant at its pumkin hood's side is gathering flowers, whilst in front the aged gravedigger, with one foot in the yawning pit, tells of life's decay and that "bourne from which no traveller returns"—suggestive theme oft told, but never yet told out.

RAGGED SCHOOLS FESTIVAL AT MUSWELL-HILL.

THIS festival, originated in the year 1856, and attending as they do numerous children belonging to the various ragged schools of the metropolis, by a committee of gentlemen, supporters of the ragged-school movement, was celebrated on Thursday week in the Duchy Farmwood Estate, the use of which was kindly given for the occasion by the Muswell-hill Land Company. By twelve o'clock 1,200 children, consisting of representatives of Hoxton; Richmond-street, Walworth; Hoe Anchor, Bermondsey; Union-walk, Kingsland; St. Mary Free School, Shadwell; Trinity Chapel, Leather-lane; Marygold-street, Walworth; Sun-row, Islington; Hertford-street, Bermondsey; Railway Arch; Derby-street; and various other schools, had assembled on the grounds, where they quickly engaged in the sports provided for them. They were accompanied by the bands of the Coldstream Guards, the Victoria Rifles, and the fife and drum bands of the East London and Whitechapel Shoeblack Brigades. Mr. John Masterman, banker, the Messrs. Rhodes, late proprietors of the estate, and the leading gentry and clergy of the vicinity, honoured the festivities with their presence. In the course of the day the entertainment was varied by the performance of a selection of popular music by the Coldstream Guards and Victoria Rifle bands, and by the use of an appropriate selection of vocal music by the Vocal Association of England. Notwithstanding the somewhat unpropitious state of the weather, with the exception of a slight hitch in the commencement, the festival achieved the object intended by the benevolent promoters. More than 10,000 visitors were admitted to the grounds in the course of the day.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

ORIGIN OF GRAINE.—This interesting question is discussed in the Philosophical Magazine by a paper by the eminent entomologist M. Charles St. Claire-Deville, with especial reference to the researches of MM. Roe, Minister Plenipotentiary to Naples. The various circumstances which rocks and siliceous minerals acquire when they are melted and then rapidly cooled, and especially the property which sugar acquires under these conditions, are particularly adverted to. M. Deville says that before seeking to explain the formation of the crystals of sugar of grape for what takes place before our own eyes in the solidifying lava of eruptive volcanoes.

THE "ARRAN PEBBLE."—A local paper has the object of search of the Rev. T. Leeve while riding on the promontory of Jaudrot, in Corriehyra, one of the Canary Isles. While looking at some loose grey stones, one of the guides said to him, "Look, Señor, turquois!" On examination he found that what he supposed to be mineralised stones covered with grey lichen to be really pebbles. After examining them closely, he came to the conclusion—in which Mr. Bowers in a letter explaining the family to which it belonged, although in appearance quite unlike the pebble of the great mineral species. This plant possesses the property of catching fire and burning even while growing. This would seem to indicate the presence of inflammable resinous matter. The plant is known as Isoberon.—Transactions of Natural History.

THE ECLIPSE OF JULY 18.—Some of the valuable and interesting reports on this subject forwarded to the French Minister of Public Instruction by M. Le Verrier, the Astronomer Royal of France, have been published in the recent numbers of L'Institut. They contain a résumé of the observations of the great astronomer himself and his distinguished colleagues—MM. Foucault, Chacornac, Villarceau, and others. In the same journal will be found notices of the observations of many minor astronomers, including foreign astronomers, such as Plantamour, Faye, Feuttrach, Lamont, and others.

FUNCTIONS OF POTASH IN VEGETATION.—M. G. Ville, the distinguished botanical physiologist, in a paper on "Experiments on the portance of the agents which concur in vegetable production (with especial reference to the fertilisation of the farm and other arid soils), expresses his opinion, founded on experiment, that potash is the regulating agent of the good effects of ammonia in vegetation by the use of these and similar manures. That the nature of the latter does not affect the result M. Ville has proved by weighing the produce of wheat, oats, and lime, all ammoniac carbonate of potash, and urea. In the absence of potash, vegetation was almost at a standstill, but became active on its application. Potash, therefore, must be applied, as well as the phosphates, &c., to render agriculture remunerative. Comptes Rendus.

THE SOLAR SPOTS AND THE WEATHER.—Mr. R. P. Greg, in the Philosophical Magazine, compares variations in the cold and wet weather during the last eleven months may not be occasioned in some way by solar magnetic influence. Schwabe has said to have proved that there is a non-said period of about eleven years from maximum to maximum; General Sabine asserts that this period synchronises with a physical cause of terrestrial cycles; and M. Wolfe, of Berne, has shown that years remarkable for abundance of solar spots have also been remarkable for a decline in autumn heat. The great auroral display in September last occurred about the time for the return of the maximum of solar spots. Sir John Herschel has also referred to a great meteorological disturbance; as in England and Northern Europe much more than the average amount of cold and wet seasons have prevailed since then, and in North America and India there has been more than an average amount of drought and heat. All these facts appear to point to some general terrestrial cycle to the subject.

THE GREAT METEORITE is figured and described by Professor E. B. Andrews and others in the American Journal of Science. About fifteen minutes before one on the morning of the 20th of last month a meteor in the west Virginia were alarmed by a noise resembling the firing of heavy cannon and the explosion of a steam boiler. Concord, in Ohio, felt three successive shocks, amounting, in collective weight, to about 700lb., were obtained. The largest, weighing about 300lb., fell in a field about 12 miles from Concord, and was found to be 3·417, and its composition—silica, 31·25; protoxide of iron, 29·04; and smaller quantities of protoxide of manganese, lime, soda, sulphur, and water, with traces of chromium and phosphorus. The article contains interesting details of the phenomena accompanying the fall of meteorites.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE MOON UPON THE WEATHER has been investigated by Professor Marcet, of Geneva, who has worked upon the meteorological tables kept at the Great St. Bernard Hospice. His calculation that rain given the results in tables in the same journal. During the last sixty years (1,714 days), the number of days of observation amounted 2630 (nights and days—that is, from rainy to fine weather, or fine weather to rainy. Of these 2630 changes, 1,320 happened at new moon, and 1,310 at full moon—the difference being only following the full moon and 107 on that following the new moon. It is hence concluded that the influence of the moon upon the weather exists on the day of the full moon 8·9:11; at new moon, 9·12; the day after full moon, 9·43; the day after new moon, 9·46. The conclusion is drawn that the greatest number of days of rain and the quantity of water which falls the professor regards as positive. Further observations, however, he states that, of the 1,714 changes of weather, the barometer prophesied 1340 times correctly. This approaches nearly to the proportion of 4 to 5, or 80 per cent.

M. ANDRE M. C. DUMERIL, the eminent French naturalist, died on the 14th ult., at his residence, Amelot, on Saturday, January 14, 1779, after a diligent course of study, he became a teacher of anatomy at Rouen; and in 1801 obtained the professorship of medicine at the Ecole de Medecine, passed for him the friendship of his great master Cuvier, whom he had the honour of assisting in his researches; and in the publication of his celebrated "Lectures on Comparative Anatomy;" and whom he eventually succeeded in the chair of Natural History in the Institution of Strasbourg. Alexandre Brongniart being his colleague. In 1802 Dumeril became a coadjutor of Lacepede, and published, in conjunction with him, taking the instruction relating to serpents and fishes. He fulfilled his arduous educational duties for fifty years, and his lectures on the Natural History of Reptiles and Insects and his memoirs for reptiles. In 1816 he was elected a member of the French Academy, and in 1825 succeeded Lacepede as professor of the museum in his "Erpétologie," in 6 vols. 8vo, a general history of reptiles; and his "Entomologie Analytique," in 1 vol. 8vo, published in the Collection of Suites à Buffon, a latter work is a most elaborate one on the structure, habits, and classification of insects, especially those of Europe. It contains the fruit of sixty years of the industrious life of its gifted author. He also contributed papers to the annals of the Museum of Natural History, Paris. M. Dumeril is said to have been devoted to his friends, affectionate to his colleagues, paternal to his pupils, and benevolent to all, and to have been venerated and loved by all who knew him. He enjoyed good health till a few days before his death, which took place after a short illness. When he felt his end approaching he announced it, as he would have done any other truth, calmly tendering himself to his family and friends. Three of his five illustrious associates in the anatomical and zoological section of the French Academy, MM. Milne Edwards, Geoffroy St. Hilaire, and Valenciennes, accompanied his body to the grave.

Dr. Livingstone's friends will learn with satisfaction that he writes from the lower part of the Zambesi, on March 27, "All well."

THE REVOLUTION IN SICILY.

(From our Special Artist and Correspondent.)

MESSINA, August 20.

My last parcel to you contained the remainder of the Sketches of Palazzolo and an account of the battle, gleaned from various Staff officers and from my own experience of the field. But to give anything like a correct notion of the fight it almost impossible, as the ground on which the engagement took place is the most unequal, and in many instances, without even a mattress beneath them. I do not say that this wretched state of things was from wilful neglect on the part of the municipal staff; but this I do say, that I was present in many instances from the ignorance of those appointed to fill positions they were utterly incompetent for. Under all these trying circumstances I never heard one poor sufferer give a single murmur: they bore their ills patiently, proud almost of the scars they received for the good cause. Passing by the door of one of these temporary ambulances, I was beckoned in by a wrinkled old dame, whose whole manner betrayed the greatest anxiety and trepidation. On my entering in answer to her invitation, the first object that attracted my attention was the prostrate form of a man, lying on his face on the clay floor without so much as a rag to cover his nakedness. Myriads of flies swarmed about him, and settled in black patches on a huge clotted wound on the cranium, and touched their fill at a purple bullet-hole in the side. Horrified and disgusted at what I saw, I countenanced shouting the woman, in my limited Sicilian, to what I supposed to be her neglect of the unfortunate to creature intrusted to her care. She assured me that, when he was brought in for cottage, a surgeon strapped his head and bandaged the wound in the side, and left him as carefully laid on a bed—to which she pointed, and which was covered with blood stains. She further stated that, as soon as the surgeon left, the wounded man tore away the dressings and rolled from the mattress to the spot where he was now lying, and that she had no water to give him, and to induce him to swallow anything, had been unavailing. She also informed me that he was one of the "shirts" who had escaped from Palermo with the Neapolitan troops, and that he was with Bosco's division from Messina to reinforce Melazzo; and that it was evidently his intention to refuse all succour, and to die in very spite of those who would assist him. Taking to every appearance the moment to be passing, I, with their help, replaced the undoubtedly dying man on the bed, and, turning away in search of a surgeon, I had scarcely got three paces from the door when a shriek from the woman brought me back. With a supreme effort of resolution the dying man had hunself to his feet, and, tottering forwards a few steps, had fallen dead.

Madame Mario has now taken charge of the hospital at Barcelona, and matters under her superintendence are improving. She has also another lady here, the Countess Della Torre, who proposes to form a field ambulance corps, and give assistance to the wounded under the fire of the enemy.

Seven days after the battle I left Melazzo for Messina, with a portion of the General's Staff. Garibaldi had preceded us by about twelve hours, taking with him all the horses and carriages to be procured in the town, so that we had to perform the journey on foot—a matter of thirty miles—in an open boat. We started at midnight, and, as there was a good breeze from the land, the broad lateen-sail was hoisted, and we bowled along at a spanking pace till daylight. About midnight our board was an aldermanic Captain of the Staff, who did not enjoy the most warlike reputation, though on more than one occasion during the campaign he had been in command a battuta de cuisine with considerable success. Now, we perhaps ran somewhat too close to the Sicilian cruisers watching the coast, but we generally looked upon it as a very slight, though one or two wags in the boat made the most of the presumed danger for the amusement of the rest. Once or twice, three or four times during the night we all of us declared we could see a huge black mass coming down upon us out of the darkness, keeping our companion in suspense, who was very obviously in a most nervous state of alarm—"not that he in reality cared for the entire Bourbon navy, but that by being taken prisoner he would no longer be able to fight for the furtherance of Italy." Not being aware that Messina had already been entered by our advanced guard, and that the Convention had been entered into between Medici and the commander of the citadel not to fire on either side, we had proposed to land at the Faro Point, intending to find the General there. We must look at dawn, however, spoke us, and gave us the news of the truce: so we sailed on into the harbour of Messina, and landed on the Marina, amid the applauding shouts of some hundred or so of Sicilian lazzaroni. On our way we had passed and met the Dictator, who had got on before us, and he very courteously came out and engaged me to dine with him that evening at his table. After our meal we had a long talk and a walk through the town, which presented a very different appearance to that which I passed through it last May. Instead of desolate streets, with closed shops and scarcely a person moving about, there were tricolour flags from every balcony, and a half mad, perspiring crowd in every thoroughfare. Some more energetic than others had procured ladders, and were engaged in obliterating in the principal street the words "Strada Ferdinande," substituting in their place those of "Vittorio Emanuele." Again, round the statues of the Bourbons, were erected scaffolds, preparatory to their pursuit on the inanimate blocks of marble. Verily, there is much in the Sicilian character that fills their would-be friends with contempt for them.

At five I attended my feet beneath the General's mahogany, and had for my immediate neighbour Father Gavazzi, a very different-looking personage from the famous orator known to the English public by his lectures at the Princess' concert-room. Instead of the close-shaved face, the reverend padre had adopted the prevailing fashion by letting his beard grow, and a thick crop of black stubbles gave great promise of its future excellence. In lieu of the dark majestic flowing robe with which he was wont to drape himself so effectively, he wore a red shirt; and, to complete the transformation, a souvenir of his visit to America, in the shape of a bloodthirsty-looking bowie-knife, together with a Colt's revolver was thrust in a belt that had to have a reef or two let out of it before the repast was half finished. The reverend father evidently intends for a time to shelve theories and take to practical argument in the dominions pro tem. of Francesco Secondo. Dinner with the General himself is a most simple affair. A little soup, a cut of a solid joint, a small portion of fruit, and a glass of water, suffice his frugal taste. Wine he never touches, and the only luxury he allows himself is cigars of a very mild kind. Dinner was scarcely over when an immense crowd gathered round head-quarters, and began to shout "Viva Garibaldi!" accompanied by the clapping of hands and brandishing of hats—the universal English threats. Each moment the clamour grew louder, yet the General remained impassive, and showed not the slightest inclination to indulge the multitude by appearing before them. At last, at the solicitation of the Intendante and one or two of his Staff, he stepped on to the balcony, which was a signal for the mass below to grow about, and, with hats off, and upturned faces, and otherwise to testify the intoxication of delight they felt at their General's presence. When silence was obtained the Dictator, leaning forward in the dusk, ran over characteristic positions, addressed the people in some-what the following manner. I do not pretend to a literal translation, but simply give the substance of his discourse:—"If there is one thing more than another distasteful to me, it is playing the comedian, and making an exhibition of myself, rather as a man of many words, but rather trust to deeds than set speeches. Yet, Messinese, I would tell you that my work has scarcely commenced, though, thanks to God and my heroes, fairly may be said to be free. But, mark me, Sicilians! the first act of a great drama has hardly been played out. Remember, I say that the actors' parts have been filled by a company foreign to the soil, and that the scenes of the other occasions have carried for yourselves a reputation before Europe, for not Italy alone, but let every one know who is not, that your arms took round the national flag, and help me to achieve the liberty of Rome on the one hand, and that of Venice on the other, and the right of freedom in this long-misgoverned island." Of course, the enthusiasm caused by these words was immense; but I have every reason to believe that the Messinese generally are heartily sick of the revives there and then shouted. This outburst of feeling cost very little in the manner of money; it, at all events, did not, like Napoleon's ten biscuit for a block of iced cream at the Café Naova cleared the numerous tenants from their thrones, and otherwise restored the exhausted frames of this sympathetic people. The rest of the evening was passed by the brave Messinese, who can always find sufficient money for the theatre, in the Piedmontese officials, and soldiers of Central Italy, whose blood mustered the parched hills of Aspromonte, and in the streets of Palermo, Melazzo, and the Calabrian wards at Molazzo, and all for a race who only look upon them now as fair game for extortion. Father Gavazzi has tried his eloquence with them on more than one occasion, and I am afraid he has not been a few necessaries for the hospitals, without which the sick and wounded could not be properly attended to.

There is one man here of whom I could write chapters and chapters, and that is Colonel Forbes Leith, Garibaldi's Scotch Englishman, who now, however, divides the fame with a band of his countrymen, who, though as any Britain ever sent from her shores. Undoubtedly, most of your readers remember Colonel Leith in certain of the Italian volunteer daily papers, extraordinary accounts of the manners and customs of this so-described condottiere. Mr. Forbes Leith, however, has taken exception on Garibaldi's force by stating that he was a keen sportsman, and not at the shooting season was not then on in England, he had thought it an excellent opportunity to enjoy himself among the hills of the Vallerine in anticipation of the grouse months on our northern moors. On this occasion, however, and only to be referred to appeased by "the blood of a German man." The same gentleman also told us that he had killed a man in a duel (all foreigners in Italy fight a bearded monster" (he must have been a Wehhman) a notch on his pistol-stock—whereupon I produced the pistol, and showed him where the dead man's epitaph. Now, I have not only seen this famous rifle, which is a double-barrelled deer-stalking one, but I have also had it in my hands many times, and I can safely say, on my word of honour, it defaces it anywhere. With regard to the narrow character attributed to the Colonel, I can only reply that I have found him most amiable to contradict the assertion, and do so most emphatically, by declaring that in my judgment the eamgaign I have passed with a more sociable or agreeable companion, and one evidently much better informed on most subjects than his would-be historians. He is a linguist, and, I believe, speaks five or six tongues, and is attached to Garibaldi, who is just as fond of him. His friendship for the Italian hero dates from 1859, and he himself justly considers a soldier, and there is not a man in our army who has not a thorough esteem for the genius of Garibaldi. Colonel Leith is, to say, for though many writers have blanched his sir and whitened his hair, he is not by any one amongst us who bears himself more proudly or steps with a lighter tread. Speaking of the knack of coining fame by puffing, reminds me Colonel Peard when in full marching order. Of Colonel Dunne and Major Winkfield, I have nothing to say, as they have never been in the notes that accompanied my sketches of those sent a week or two since. Major Lennard and Captain Dowling, late of the Royal Artillery, are two of the most valuable officers I have to take service in our camp.

The various sketches I have sent you from the Faro Point will have served to give your readers a tolerable notion of the position of the forces of Garibaldi and the Neapolitans. On the first day of the arrival of Garibaldi after our arrival at Messina was to establish himself firmly on the tongue of land that here narrows the straits to not more than a mile and a half in breadth, and to have his guns and mortars and landing batteries to check the too near approach of the Neapolitan gunboats. This accomplished, I left word for him, and, as I said in my note of the 15th, I should be off with the first dawn. Three Piedmontese, commonly shoved off another boat into the water while attempting to spread the alarm. The Neapolitans were so ably and promptly served that they succeeded in reaching the opposite shore, but, owing to the darkness of the night, missed their way, and, instead of landing at which they were to surprise the fortress, they missed their way, and the enemy having received ample approach gave the alarm, and Missouri and his party were compelled to make their way back. The Neapolitan preceding nights other bodies of troops were kept prepared to embark, and were actually on board when the order for the attack was countermanded was lost for the time. The Neapolitan frigates "smelt a rat," and, with the gunboats, kept a strict watch over the narrow channel of Scylla and Torre di Cavallo. Well, this state of things continued for a week or more, the monotony only relieved by the forts and frigates blazing away at a flight at some of the small craft in sight, and blazing away merrily for half an hour together without seeing what they were firing at. At last I got weary of this sort of thing, and into a boat with my traps and sitting huddled up for two or three hours, managed to get a berth on board, under the impression that we were really, this time, going to leave. Well, we did get under weigh at two o'clock in the morning, and, with a fine breeze from the land disappeared, with two or three of his Staff, in the most mysterious manner, and that not a soul knew where he had gone to. For my part, as soon as I heard of his absence, I immediately started for Messina, had a warm bath on arriving, and got in between the sheets, where I "cauliked" away for twelve hours straight off. Three days ago the General turned up with poor Türy, who fancies he is sufficiently recovered from his wounds, but who is by no means himself yet. Half an hour or so after their arrival they drove together through the town and took the road to Catania. No one thought much of this, as it was simply looked upon as a morning drive; but, when Türr came back in the evening alone, inventive minds were set forming conclusions as to the new destination of our chief. This occurred on the 18th; and two days later (to-day) we heard that Garibaldi had crossed from Jardinio into Calabria, at two o'clock on the morning of the 19th, with three thousand men, while the Neapolitans were busily engaged watching for us opposite the Faro. Is not this one of the General's usual tricks? It appears that the Dictator had been all this time at Palermo, arranging this master-stroke. He had got together some five transports, in which he embarked the soldiers giving them a rendezvous at Jardino. One of the vessels, the finest we have, the Torre del Greco, was run ashore, and, when the demonstration had been safely effected, some Neapolitan frigates came down and totally destroyed the unfortunate vessel before they found out their mistake.

But I am anticipating events. Prior to the General's return from Palermo we had served out 40 rounds of advanced posts on the campo here. The campo is a large champ d'avene or flat, separated from the town, and on the outskirts of this we have our chain of sentries, while the Neapolitans' chain were some twenty paces further back. The first affair began soon after midnight, the whole town being roused by a tremendous continued discharge of rifles. Of course every one was immediately on the qui vive, as it was at first imagined a sortie was being attempted by the garrison.

The streets were in a few minutes thronged with officers and men hastening to their various posts, and shouting as they rushed by. "Light your lanterns!" the request was rapidly obeyed by the trembling and bewildered inhabitants, and soon the thoroughfares looked like the illuminations of some one of the saints' festivities of the Marsala affair

"THE VILLAGE SMITHY," BY LEWIS, IN THE CRYSTAL PALACE PICTURE GALLERY.

There is no corner of the principality, and there are few parts of the United Kingdom, in which there is so great a variety of landscape scenery of the highest order as the neighbourhood of Bettws-y-Coed: it is the district from which David Cox drew those lessons that enabled him to found a new school of art, and which he annually visited to the last year of his life, and from which still proceed those numerous Welsh scenes of wood, rock, and water, that abound in our public exhibitions, and have obtained for it, in certain art-circles, the name of "The Studio." To this neighbourhood, hitherto frequented principally by artists and fishermen, this railway will afford ready access, opening out new sources of pleasure and delight to that greatly-increasing section of our countrymen and countrywomen who annually traverse land and ocean in search of the picturesque and the beautiful.

"THE VILLAGE SMITHY." BY LEWIS.

THIS is just of the class of subject in which Mr. Lewis is always so much at home—a scene of ordinary every-day industry, with a little humorous incident of domestic life. The smithy, with all its appropriate furnishings, is painted with nice detail and commendable accuracy, and in a happy harmony of colour. In the foreground is a pleasant little scene between the postboy and a young girl for whom he has a letter, the purport of which, by his smirking face, he fancies himself to be aware of; whilst the young lady, in her eager anxiety to obtain it, seems to sanction the suggestion. This clever picture, admirably painted in every part, we recently had the pleasure of seeing in the Fine-Art Department of the Crystal Palace.

"THE HARVEST MOON." BY E. WARREN.

MR. E. WARREN'S little picture of "The Harvest Moon," which we engrave, is a striking example of powerful chiaroscuro and intensity of impasto, which have seldom been surpassed in water-colour painting. It was justly admired in the Exhibition of the New Water-colour Society. The moon is seen struggling, but struggling with obvious supremacy, through a thick cluster of clouds, its rays dimly illumining the picturesque homestead in the foreground. On one side we see the newly-stacked corn; on the other some sheep are penned. The lights through the farmhouse windows give additional life and animation to the scene. Altogether the picture is a most effective one, and its truth to nature will be recognised by all who have had experience of rural life.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT CARLETON, ST. JOHN, N.B.

CARLETON is a suburb of St. John, New Brunswick, and the Prince took ship here on the 16th of August, after having visited Fredericton. We gather from the St. John Weekly Freeman's account of his Royal Highness's reception at Carleton a few particulars relating to the incident illustrated on the first page of our present Number:—"About four o'clock the roar of artillery, gun answering gun along the heights, and cheer responding to cheer, announced that the Prince had landed. The progress from Indiantown was necessarily slow. The multitudes crowded round the carriages of the Royal party, or preceded them a little, and the numbers grew greater at every pace. At the city line on the Carleton side the two Carleton fire companies were in waiting, and, having previously obtained the consent of the Prince, they unharnessed the horses, attached a rope to the carriage, and, each company taking a side, they drew him through Carleton, having first stopped a few moments to allow the scene to be photographed. When the first shot announcing the arrival of the Prince was heard, the firemen volunteers returned to their posts, and again formed in line. The first symptom of the near approach was the arrival of numberless vehicles in rapid succession from many quarters. Then bands of more active or more excited pedestrians began to make their appearance, sunburnt and dusty. Now Captain Dunn's artillery, with guns and caissons, hurry down and pass along the wharf, now Captain Adams's company rush along with their guns, as if the safety or the credit of the city depended on their dispatch, and Colonel Robertson galloped at high speed through the lines. Then the cheers grew louder, the advancing crowd grew more dense and dark, the cloud of dust thicker and more palpable. The Mayor and Corporation, with their officers, passed on, and then the uniforms of the firemen were seen gleaming through the dust, and the bright sun flashed from the bayonets, and in a moment the Prince was seen, drawn by the firemen, guarded on each side by a company of artillery, and followed by his suite in carriages, and the volunteers in full marching order, full of enthusiasm and covered thick with dust. The multitude, now thronging around in all directions, seemed absolutely countless, and we can make no attempt to compute their number. The Prince and his suite passed down the wharf, through the line of firemen, and visited the sawmill of the Hon. John Robertson, whose men were all drawn up to receive him. He then returned to the wharf, and passed through a guard of regulars to the fleet.

"From the water the scene surpassed anything in the whole demonstration. The wharves and buildings, timber piles, housetops, and cliffs on the Carleton side were black with people. On the city side the steamers Emperor and Eastern City at their wharves, the wharves themselves, Prince William-street and the housetops on both sides, Reed's Point, the Pavilion, the Ballast Wharf, and every available spot and place were apparently dense masses of people. On the water there were numberless small boats gliding about, the three steamers covered with passengers, the ferry-boat passing with its crowds, the vessels all dressed in gayest colours. To all this the city seemed to form a most appropriate background, and, take it for all and all, it was such a sight as few of those who witnessed it will ever see equalled. The Prince and his suite seemed to enjoy it thoroughly. They stood on one of the paddle-boxes the whole time the Styx remained in the harbour, and the Prince acknowledged every cheer from the steamers or from the shore."

THE SUSPENSION BRIDGE OVER THE RIVER ST. JOHN, N.B., VISITED BY THE PRINCE OF WALES ON THE 7TH OF AUGUST, WITH A VIEW OF THE CITY OF ST. JOHN.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY C. FLOOD.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT QUEBEC.

ACCOUNTS just received from America describe the loyalty and enthusiasm with which the Prince of Wales has been welcomed at Quebec, where the French Canadians seem to have vied with their countrymen of British descent in giving their princely visitor a cordial reception. His Royal Highness landed at Quebec on Saturday afternoon, the 18th of August. The usual address was presented on his landing, after which a procession was formed, which escorted him to the Government House. The illumination in the evening was very fine. On the 19th the Prince attended Divine service at the English Cathedral. The special correspondent of the New York Herald, under date of Quebec, the 20th, says:—"The weather yesterday was superb, and the excitement great. The centre of attraction was the English Cathedral, where the Prince attended morning service. The church was crammed with people, who were admitted only by ticket. During the afternoon the Prince visited the Plains of Abraham, Wolfe's Monument, and vicinity, and the Governor-General's residence at Catarqui. Mr. Bartlett, Secretary of State, and Mr. Sprague, both of Rhode Island, presented an invitation to Governor Williams for the Prince to visit Providence. The Duke replied that the programme of the Prince's visit to the United States was not yet decided on, but that he would consult Lord Lyons, in whose charge every thing was left, to-day or to-morrow, and arrange the programme. He had the Prince wanted to see as much as possible of the United States and its various cities; they would also like to go west and see the prairies. It was probable they might go to Chicago. The Prince, who is much interested in mechanics, wants to see the manufacturing towns. The Rhode Island delegation returned home this afternoon, and will receive the Prince's answer by letter. In spite of the rain the Prince and suite of four persons paid a visit to the Chaudière Falls on the opposite side of the river. He drove to the landing, crossed in a special ferry-boat, and rode on horseback to the Falls, where a fine collation had been provided. The rain had swelled the Falls, which made a beautiful appearance. He returned late in the evening. The Prince takes up his official residence at Parliament House to-morrow morning. The 17th Regiment act as a guard of honour. A salute will be fired from the Levés.

In the evening three balls will be given—one of them by the city. There will be a display of fireworks and illumination. White kid gloves are fearfully high in price on account of the ball. The registration dress is all black except gloves, shirts, &c. There are a great many people here from Montreal and the United States. A delegation from Ottawa city has offered the Prince a procession, ball, and a parade of lumbermen in fifty bark canoes. The Prince does not mind bad weather, as he thinks it "English." A Quebec telegram of the 21st says:—"The Prince has taken up his residence in the Parliament House, an imposing pile which was recently given in that Journal. At the levée both of the Speakers were knighted."

The above correspondent at Quebec informs us that thieves have been plying their vocation there with great success. He writes on the 20th ult. as follows:—"All night, as a matter of course, the streets were crowded, and the light-fingered gentry, who visit us every year from New York in considerable numbers, must have made a splendid harvest, if all the complaints I have to hear be true. Their pressmen, however, would be less annoying if they made the streets the only places for the exercise of their skilful vocation. Unfortunately, they have penetrated the hotels. In the hotel located in this city the gentlemen's back rooms were skilfully opened the other night, and a clean sweep made of all money and watches. Among the sufferers is the artist of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, who lost a considerable amount of money; while on the same night in the same hotel the correspondent of the New York Tribune lost a valuable gold watch and chain, and £31. On Sunday, the 19th, the Prince rested, and attended Divine service in the Cathedral. Here, however, the same game was played, as during thieves must have been present, for money and watches to the value of more than £500 were taken from various members of the congregation."

His Royal Highness left Quebec on the 22nd ult.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT MONTREAL.

The Prince arrived on the evening of the 23rd ult. at Three Rivers. Here his Royal Highness was received by the local authorities, the Government officials, and numbers of citizens, who presented an address. The town was illuminated. The Prince reached Montreal on the 24th, but, owing to unfavourable weather, did not land until the next morning. He was met on the wharf by the Mayor and Corporation, the members of the Government, the superior military officers, the Commander of the Forces, attended by a numerous Staff, and the Anglican and Roman Bishops and clergy, &c. A guard of honour and escort were furnished by the volunteer corps. An immense crowd, at least 40,000 persons were present. After receiving and replying to the addresses of the Mayor and City Council, the Prince drove in procession through the principal streets to the exhibition, which was opened with great éclat. His reception was most enthusiastic, and the line of route was beautifully decorated. His Royal Highness proceeded in the afternoon to lay the corner-stone of the Victoria Bridge. A considerable number were invited to the ceremony, among which the Prince partook of luncheon at the buildings of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, situated to the south of the bridge, by the manager of the Forces, which was specially fitted up for himself and suite. The city was illuminated in the evening, and a magnificent display of fireworks took place on the Victoria Bridge.

HOW TO MAKE THE NEW COINAGE THE MEANS OF INTRODUCING DECIMAL CALCULATIONS: A PROPOSITION.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

As the present appears to be the most favourable opportunity that has ever occurred for the introduction of a decimal currency, I beg to offer, for the consideration of those most interested in the proposed measure, the following plan.

The new copper coinage is nearly ready for circulation. Peace, halfpence, and farthings will be issued, each of rather less value than those now in use. To introduce the decimal system, it is only necessary to reduce the value of the halfpenny to the 100th part of a penny, and that can be done at present, and to issue one new coin of the value of ten farthings, and the whole matter will be accomplished. The amount of metal required for coining, or interfering with them in any way except to render them more simple and less liable to wear, would be trifling.

The alteration would not even necessitate new account-books, as accounts would still be kept in pounds, and, as ten of the new coins (which I will for the same decimal would be equal to one florin, they would stand thus—pounds, florins, shillings, pence, instead of pounds, shillings, pence, farthings. The florin would be mostly indicated by merely pointing of the figures to the right hand—thus, 1.2.6, 1.2.6 would represent 1 pound, 2 florins, 6 pence, 1 farthing. All dealings have always been represented as fractional parts of a pound, so they may still be, only the fractional parts of a decimal in the decimal coinage, thus, 5, 7, 1 florin, 7 pence, 1 farthing, represent nine pounds, eight florins, seven decimes, three farthings. By this method the whole of the coins in use might be retained without disturbance, and in the end, their relative value to the pound being still the same, the only variation in men would be confined to the most insignificant coin, the farthing.

I should, however, recommend that, to avoid confusion, and to simplify and facilitate the reception of the decimal currency, the old halfpenny and the penny pieces be at once called in, and, as soon as convenient, the crown and half-crown piece also; the loss of which per annum would be trifling to the state and therefore might be advantageously introduced; the current coins would then be all of a uniform length out of the decimal character, and would stand as follows:—

Farthings, of which four would still represent one penny, and ten one decime.

Decimes, of which ten would represent one florin.

Florins, of which ten would represent one pound.

The shilling would still represent half a florin, and the sixpence the quarter florin. The latter piece could be altogether superseded by a new coin of similar decimal character so much the better, and there might be of the respective value of two and five decimes, which would prove absolutely substitutes for florin coins; the one being named the half florin, the other the double decime. Both the decime and double decime should be of silver.

The advantages of the introduction of this system of accounts are not easily realised. The calculation of the most trifling all extensions and subtractions cannot be estimated; but, when the simplicity of the mode of converting any amount of the present denomination into or from the decimal is likewise taken into consideration, it will readily be conceived that the saving in the number of clerks employed in banks, and the counting-houses of the mercantile world, of stationery used in them, will be quite sufficient to justify me in saying that it would be enormously great; if not quite, so equivalent to the whole amount of the excise duty upon paper.

A DECIMAL FRACTION.

THE DARIEN CANAL.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

NEWTON PORTER, Longford, Ireland, Aug 29.

I observe in your Parliamentary Report for the 24th inst. that Lord Palmerston, in answer to a question on the subject by Mr. Brady, replied that there was no intention on the part of Government to enter into the question of the Isthmus of Darien, but that, on the contrary, the British, French, and American Governments have very recently declined to take any steps towards that isthmus. His Lordship, however, stated, "that the officer in charge of the expedition of 1854 got as far as Caledonia Bay, but that the project was impracticable."

Having been engaged on the expedition as Surgeon of H.M.S. Espiegle, and having on several occasions accompanied Commander Parsons, of her Majesty's surveying-vessel Gorgon, on his survey, I beg to refer to that of which Lord Lyveden has spoken—namely, that, after the officer in charge had left for England, in April, 1854, Commander Parsons proceeded to the coast, with the boarder from Panama and made the bearings of the valley, which the engineers had failed to discover, and left it down in the Gulf of Darien, Chiriqui Harbour and Caledonia Bay, to the Admiralty in September, 1854, and to be laid at Mr. Bates's, the chartseller, 16, Cockspur-street.

The writer has personal evidence of the existence of which looks towards the north-west end of Lionardi Islands, in Caledonia Bay, and completely overlooks the whole of the practicability of the Canal; for, with the exception of about three miles, which are crossed by the Chucunaque and the Cordillera, through appearing as a backbone, from a distance, is really dissected, opposite Caledonia Bay, by a valley, all impracticability, or even difficulty, disappears; and the statement of the existence of a valley in that position, published by Lord Lyveden in 1852 as the result of the engineers' examinations in 1849, 1850, 1851, and 1852, is proved to be true.

Having myself, subsequently to the valley, and having visited Dr. Collun's original statement, which led to the organisation of the expedition, and always found him to be strictly accurate, I have no hesitation in saying that the opinion I long since expressed, that, if Dr. Collun had been permitted to guide the exploring party, the result of the exploring expedition would have been completely successful. WILLIAM M'DERMOTT.

Count Oscar de la Cluna, pianist to the Queen of Spain, charged with converting a pianoforte, the property of Messrs. Holderness, pianoforte manufacturers, of Oxford-street, to his own use, and who was taken into custody at the Merchants' Hotel, Oldham-street, Manchester, has been committed for trial.

An explosion of firedamp recently took place in one of the pits of the company of the Chateauneuf-la-Mulatte at Charbeck, killed six persons, and seriously injured others, one of them mortally.

Relics of the Past.

REGULATIONS PRESCRIBED BY HENRY VIII. TO THE CHAMBERLAIN AND STEWARD OF THE HOUSEHOLD OF THE INFANT PRINCE OF WALES AFTERWARDS EDWARD VI.

THE subjoined extracts from an unpublished document in the National Record Office will, every curious reader of the internal economy of the Regal household in the time of Henry VIII. The document in question contains the most minute and precise directions drawn up by the King himself, for the guidance of Sir William Sydney, Principle Chamberlain, and Sir John Cornwallis, the Steward of Prince Edward's establishment, for the preservation of his Grace from "all practises and evyll Enterprises which might be devised against him." These remarkable instructions are without date, but they were evidently framed during the infancy of the Prince, and probably refer to his residence at Eltham :—

"Item, that no forges heighnes for the specyall trust his grace hath conceyed of his trustye servaunt Sir William Sydney knyght, hathe constrayned hym to be chamberlayn to the said prynces grace and hath counsiled and appointed to hym as well to have the keeping, oversight, rule and cure of his Majesties said sonne and the hall remayne over the Jewell, the prince grace, And forese that all dangiers and adversaries of malytious persons and causel harmes (if ny be) be shalbe vigilantly for seen and provyded for by such good order observed in his Grace household, as maye be to his Majesties honour and assured suertie of the prince grace's person, our moost noble and moost precyous Jewell, for the which good order in the said Household he sayd Sir John Cornwalles (Chamberlayn) Stewarde together with Fytzchamberlayn and Comptroller shall allways Joyne to gether.

"Item, that no man have his lettres of preferment from the kynges Majestie, in the said prynces grace household, but the same be signed and yet nevertheles to suffre no suche persone to obtruse his grace buy only kysse his hand, and yet that no personage under the degre of a knyght, be admytted to the presence of his grace, but in the presence Chamberlain, vicechamberlain, and Comptroller or one of them at the least to be ever present And to see a reverent askaye taken in due order ere any suche persons shall be admytted to his grace hand.

"Item, that they shall at all tymes cause good, sufficyent, and Iudge assayes of all kyrdes of bred, meates and dyrekes, mulke, egges and buttre prepared for his grace mouthe, and of wyne and drynke, and all thinges that may touch his person or myysyttede to him in any wise before he receyve it, by suche persones, Iurye, ryarnent, appeard whiche never belonging to his person, to be purely washed, and clensed, and kept brushed, and reserved clenely by the officers and persones appointed for their offices, and nevertheless to be ever in their presence having no office ther, in such wise as no daungier may followe thereof, And that the said officers and persones be charged not to be taken a morsel as shall appertayn, and that the chamberlayn vicchamberlayne or one of them shal be dayly at the makyng redye of the prynes as well at yonge dynner as supper, to the entent to see the premisses be affoursayd.

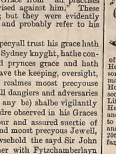
"Item, that whatsoever mete stuff, apparell or rayment shall be brought of newe, to and for his graces bodye, be it wollen, lynen, Sylke, or other, that the same, shalbe purely brushed, made cleane, and kept as the use and custome requyres, and that in the presens of the Chamberlayne, vicechamberlayne or Comptroller.

"Item, that no manner other persones or officers in the house shal have access to the said prynces chamber but onely such as be appointed to the same, And that other which be appointed to bring in wood, make the fyres and other offices ther as the pages of the chamber, and children of the Revelles, shall not presume to be present and advoyde out of the same, till the tyme they shalbe called for the office of Spark. And that the Chamberlayn, Steward, and officers shall not resort to any infect or corrupt places, and that also they shalbe clene and whole persones without diseases.

"Item, that for the more suertie and dangier of pestilence and contagious diseases, that might chaunce or happen in the princes house, that the Chamberlayn, Steward, and officers shall not resort to London or to some infect and contagious places, his Majesties and prynces said house remayning in any suche suspected place, but in suche privie chamber, non of the offices that have any office abouth his graces person, or in his howsholde, shall resort to London or to any other of Spark. And that the Chamberlayn, Steward, and officers, for some necessary thinges have licence so to do, yet nevertheles they shall not presume to come in the princes house, nor in his graces presence or to come neer him for so many dayes as by the said Chamberlayne and Steward shalbe thought convenyent, and if by chaunce any servaunt happen to be infected, that he be removed, and waste or delave of time to be removyd out of the house.

"Item, that the Chamberlayn, Steward, and other servaunts of his graces in the howsholl, aswell of keichyn, butte, pantre, Ewery, woodyard, cellor, Buttrye, Spicerye, Confectionery, pastrye, and other offices of the hall, have under them, as it is enfourmed, sundry boyes, pages and servaunts, which, without any respect goo to and fro, and be not at all tymes redye to attend upon the said offices, whereby many inconvenyences have chaunced, and myght hereafter chaunce, Therfor the kinges gratious pleasure is that, for the consequent thinges at Christmas next, they shalbe removed from having any suche servaunts, boye or page, and not one be admytted within the howse.

"Item, that no manner of provision shalbe taken as no infection maye ryse from the poore people, sore wounded, or other infectious persones that gate for almes, And for that purpose, ther shalbe a place a far of appointed for the same, where the said poore people shall receyve their sieye and tary for the Almes to be distributed ther by the Almoners—and after that distribution made, the said poore people to be by a clerke Roll by the Mayestres hand to be signed.



"Item, that no manner of person within the princes howsholde shalbe sworn that they shall not serve the prynces grace with Anye maner meate, drynk, fyer, coyers or other thing whatsoever it be for his own person but suche as they shall serve owne with his own offices, as his own person, sufferyng non other to medyll therwith, and before the howsholl shall no sooner take the prynces grace dynner, supper, or other Cowyng and harying charge of the same, take and Cause to be taken large mayns from tyme to tyme, as the Case shall require, and that the Chamberlayne for the Chambre and the Stewarde for the howsholl shall cause newly to be sworn all the princes servauntis At thyer first entry, of what Condycyon degree or estat so ever they be of, for the dew observaycyon of thayr offycys and dewtyes as appertayneth."

WEDDING RINGS WORN ON THE THUMB. — A Correspondent informs us that in the reign of George I. the wedding-ring, though placed, in the ceremony of marriage) on the fourth finger, was worn on the thumb.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE COUNTESS OF CRAVEN.

The Right Hon. Louisa Countess Dowager of Craven was the daughter of Mr. John Brunton, a comedian of repute, and manager of the Bath theatre. She was born in 1804, and the education of her fine person she made a very successful use of, as a dancer at Drury-lane, the Opera-house, and other London theatres. Lady Craven, however, though highly respected, and that not short, for she was married, on the 8th January, 1825, to Major-General William Craven, Colonel of the First Earl of Craven, by whom (who died on the 27th ult., as one of the family seats, Hamstead Marshall, Berks.

MRS. YATES.

Strange to say, just three days after the demise of the sensible and lamented Lady Craven has occurred the death of her sister, Mrs. Yates, at Mrs. Bruton, and who for more than a generation was a favorite actress. This lady, Elizabeth Brunton, better known as Mrs. Yates, was born in 1797, and made her first appearance at Covent Garden Theatre, on the 13th of September, 1817, and continued to play leading parts in comedy until 1851, when she finally retired to the Adelphi Theatre, where she remained for the season of the Adelphi Theatre, who died in 1842. At the Adelphi Theatre Mrs. Yates was extremely popular as the representative of domestic drama, in many of which her acting was unrivalled. She was much beloved and esteemed in private life. Mrs. Yates died on the 30th ult., at her residence in Euston Town, and leaves an only son.

MAJOR-GENERAL HENRY F. LOCKYER, C.B., K.H.

Major-General Henry Frederick Lockyer, C.B., late commanding the forces in Ceylon, whose death has recently occurred on board the Bijou steamship, on his way home from Alexandria, having been compelled to leave Ceylon on account of impaired health, was a scion of the old Devonshire family of Lockyer, and was the fifth son of Thomas Lockyer, Esq., of Bovisand House, Devon; he was born in 1795, and commenced his military career, in March, 1811, as Ensign in the 71st Regiment, and was at that regiment throughout the remainder of the Peninsular War, and shared in the glory of the battles of Vittoria, Nivelle, Nive, Orthez, and Toulouse (severely wounded), and Toulouse. His afterwards removed to the 97th Regiment, and served in Canada from 1825 to 1829, in the Leeward Islands in 1841, and a Colonel in 1851. He was with the 3rd Buffs in New South Wales and India. In 1854 he was appointed to the Army in New Zealand, and in 1855, at the head of a brigade at Chobham camp. In May, 1854, he accompanied his regiment to Malta, and proceeded on the Staff to Varna, the British Contingent destined to act in conjunction with the French force for the protection of Turkey. He was present at the siege and capture of Kertch in the Crimea, and was placed in command of the second brigade of the Third Division of the Army of the Crimea. He was in the front trench and spring of 1854 and 1855. On leaving the Crimea he proceeded, in August, 1855, to Ceylon in command of the 97th Regiment, where, for his services in the Peninsula he received the silver war medal and three clasps: for Nivelle, Nive, and Toulouse; and the Sebastopol. He was made, in 1857, a Knight of the Hanoverian Guelphic Order; and in 1850 was made a companion of the Bath. He was the husband of Captain John Russell, and his wife, was the first Earl of Craven, by whom (who died on the 27th ult., as one of the family seats, Hamstead Marshall, Berks.

COLONEL HAMILTON.

Colonel William Henry Hamilton, who was a distinguished military leader under Bolivar in the war of independence in Columbia, was descended from that branch of the Hamilton family which settled in Ireland in the early part of the reign of James, and of which more than one member fought for the Stuarts at the battle of the Boyne. The subject of this notice was born in 1788, and his family early settled in the north of Ireland, and enjoyed the friendship of the late Earl of Belfast (Chichester), and the present Earl, through the family of Colonel William Henry Hamilton, the subject of this notice, that he employed him when very youthful in the service of his government. He was a passenger with the young Hamilton led to a severance between him and his Lordship. Hamilton obtained a commission in the 7th Fusiliers, and was low Tempis, and was called to the Bar; but his politics again stopped his progress. He had married a daughter of Captain John Russell, and his wife, was the first Earl of Craven, by whom (who died on the 27th ult., as one of the family seats, Hamstead Marshall, Berks.

well-known partisan in the troubled times in Ireland of 1798. This alliance brought Hamilton into connection with Thomas Russell and all the leading men of the insurrection. He joined them, was arrested, and suffered a long imprisonment. He was then 1798 to 1802 a state prisoner, and when liberated he attached himself to the press, and became editor of the Belfast Commercial Chronicle, which in this day our readers published in Ireland: in this paper Hamilton never ceased to do battle in behalf of the Irish people, and in 1811 was tried for a prosecuted by Lord Belfast for a libel. General Devereux made him a soldier again. Hamilton obtained a commission in the service of Columbia, and from that time he gave him a hearty welcome. Hamilton, while Envoy, lived at Baltimore, and wrote to the Irish people, and he was selected to settle the claims of Columbia for the return from the Columbian Government. He might have done so, but affairs at Paris interposed to prevent it. He returned in 1826, and has died not far from Bogota. His only son, Major-Johnston Hamilton, formerly Deputy Commissary-General in the Portuguese service, has been appointed assistant to the department of our Indian Government in the scientific exploration to the Red Sea, at cost of £1000 per annum. Major Hamilton, C.B., K.H. He also served in the Burmese War with the 88th brigade, as ordnance officer in charge of Artillery to Ava, Prome, Rangoon, &c. He was also in the second expedition to China in 1842 and 1843, where, in a night attack on Hong-Kong, he received a severe gun-shot sight spear wound, and of them carrying away a portion of the fore scalp. Major Hamilton has received the India medal for, and is high in the Staff of her Majesty's Indian Army.

THE NEW DIVORCE ACT.—The new Divorce Act has been passed, by which many important and beneficial though important alterations have been made. The Judge Ordinary may now exercise the powers which, by the Act, were vested in a full Court. He may try a full Court as the assistance of one of the other Judges, or he may direct a matter to be heard by the full Court, or may refer any part of the full Court to one of the House of Lords. The Judges are to regulate the sittings of the full Court. Every case for the opinion of the Judges shall be stated by the Court, if it shall see fit, to direct all necessary papers in the matter to be sent to her Majesty's Proctor. Any person may intervene by the Queen's Proctor, under instruct counsel to argue before the Court any question in relation to such matter, and if such person, or any attorney or solicitor employed, has fully argued; and her Majesty's Proctor shall be entitled to charge and be reimbursed the costs of such intervention by the party so charged. In regard to the settlement of property in cases of divorce or judicial separation the Act provides that settlements which were void as against creditors by important amendment has been made by the new law as to decrees for divorce. Every decree for divorce shall, in the first instance, be a decree nisi, and shall not to be made absolute for at least three months. During the interval any person may show cause why the decree should not be made absolute by sufficient, her Majesty's Proctor may intervene, and retain counsel; he may produce evidence, and may call witnesses in the matter of the said decree nisi, and may also intervene in the same manner as in the first instance. Bastardy proceedings are to be taken by the mother of the illegitimate child, and not by the parish, as heretofore.

TO PREVENT ROT IN DWELLING-HOUSES.—Make two or more openings in the external walls, and put gratings on them to keep out vermin, from below the basement floor. Insert a tile pipe into the firewall, with one end open to the space below the floor, and carry the pipe up the centre of the firewall, as close as possible to the firebox, and out at the chimney-pot. The air in the pipe will be rarefied, being in close contact with the firebox, thus causing a continuous upward flow, sweeping the space below the floor of all the foul air, which, in my opinion, is the chief cause of dry-rot. The whole of the apartments in the house may be ventilated by means of this pipe, by inserting a valve in the bottom of the side, with a valve in it, to prevent down-draught. I have adopted this style for myself in my present house, because I know of no better.—Builder.

LITERATURE AND ART.

THE fine weather has come at last. We are promised a genial, sunny September. People who went out of town too early, and nothing but tempests during their trip, and have come back too soon, regret that they didn't wait for the 1ste of St. Partridge ere they took their holiday. Artists, however, begin to brighten up at the reappearance of Phœbus. Hitherto the chief results of sketching tours have been confined to sketches of "rainy fringes" and "mist effects"; but, now that Nature and Nature's sun are beginning to supply the colouring matter, our aquarellistes may hope to return home to Kensington—artists don't live in Soho or Fitzrgalia nowadays—with their portfolios full of the rich brown harvests and blue that Gainsborough loved so well to paint. We have heard, ere now, the years distinguished by the names of the artists whose mark their meteorological characteristics have most resembled. Thus we have had "Cooke" years—cool, grey, crisp, yet pleasant; "Creswick" years—showery, yet sunny; possibly "Lee" years—vigorous and verdant, or bouldersh and boisterous; "Linnell" years—mellow and golden. Last summer was a "Hook" one—warm, sparkling, pastoral, jocund; and this "Leigh, this has been a "Constable" year. "Gif me mein ombrella," old Mr. Fuseli used to say, on the private-view day at Somerset House; "I am going to see Meister Constable's highpers."

In town or out of town, however, literature and art are very quiet. There is decidedly a dearth in inventiveness. Dramatists—never very prolific—are falling back on old successes or new adaptations. Clever Mr. Alec Bourciault, of "London Assurance" and "Vampire" fame, comes from America with a new play for the New Adelphi. "Colleen Bawn" is to work wonders at the Strand; but it, we believe, but an adaptation from poor Gerald Griffin's capital novel of "The Collegians."

The Art-Union award of premiums for the bests series of outlines illustrating Tennyson's "Idylls of the King" has been made. A foreign gentleman, Paolo Boito, of Edinburgh, whose sympathy seems to exist between Italy and Scotland, and the "Glasgow Lassies" wonderfully enthusiastic about Garibaldi—carries off the first prize of one hundred guineas, but honorary premiums of twenty guineas each are adjudged to Messrs. Alexander Bowan and Mr. Harold Copping. For the thirty-guinea sculpture premium Mr. Thomas Duckett is the fortunate competitor.

Talking of Alfred Tennyson—he not afraid, ye purists; we are not about to give currency to rumours that the laureate is writing a three-volume novel for the Cornhill, or that he is to succeed poor Sir Henry Ward as Governor of Madras, or that he is "Habitans in sicco" of the Times, or that he has written an ode on the Red Sea Telegraph, claiming for his fee the strands of that unsuccessful cable (why didn't they insulate it with indiarubber?) to new-string his harmonious lyre withal—Laureate of Alfred Tennyson, Esq., is gallantry alike secures us to record that Tennyson's exquisite lyric "For ever and for ever" has been as exquisitely set to music by Mrs. W. Blanchard Jerrold. Since the era of the Anne into the garden, Maud," our great English poet has been fortunate in his musical interpreters, among whom we are glad to see one so accomplished as Mrs. Jerrold.

Monuments, monuments, and still more monuments. Is this world one large Walhalla? or, worse, is England one huge Père-la-chaise? Some friends of the relatives of Captain Cook, the great circumnavigator, propose to erect a monument to his memory. James Cook (he was originally pressed into the Navy, by-the-bye, as a boy) has a name and a great one; but isn't it rather late in the day to call for subscriptions for a monument to him? May not some living heroes be deprived of their well-earned marble honours by him drawing the stream of hero-worshipping munificence? If Cook, why not Sherard Osborne, Dumpier, Frobisher, Chancellor, Willoughbie, and later illustrious navigators—Gardiner, Parry, Back, Davies, and Ross—have monuments? One is to be erected to the memory of Sir John Franklin—a monument decent will be established by this persistence in "immarmorising" people. A new sculptured trophy to Captain Cook will provoke unseamly remembrance of that venal chairman of the South Seas who, when Hermann Melville visited "Typee" and "Omoo," used to exhibit himself at a dollar a head to whaling captains as the original cannibal who had eaten Captain Cook's great toe.

The contemplated memorial of the late Alfred Welby Pugin promises a far more sensible perpetuation of a gifted man's fame. A committee, presided over by Mr. Beresford Hope, intend to apply the funds received from subscriptions to the endowment of a scholarship in connection with fellowship. The Palladio in petto, however, is to travel in England—to study "Lincolnshire's steepled fens" and the freemasonic glories of Salisbury and Winchester, York and Durham. A fitting tribute is this to the great Gothic revivalist Pugin. An earnest, workmanlike man. His working man was A. W. P., although he had his little strangenesses and wilfulness. People used to call him a crotchetty man because he once caused to be affixed to a boarding round one of his edifices he was constructing, and which, according to the wags, ran thus—

Hoe ædificium ye heere to be hadde, nathlesse thatte itha ber anese business.

Nobody save Pugin and his clerk of the works could make out the inscription, and people who had no kind of business on the premises were continually knocking at the hoarding for admission.

We hope the winter sun in the land collected for the widow and family of the late Robert Brough will produce a handsome little sum of a thousand pounds. The exertions of Messrs. Tallyford, Hollingshead, Buckingham, Byron, and the amateurs who have cooperated with them, are worthy of all praise. The members have heard that the benefits at Manchester and Liverpool were eminently successful. Every tory in a reactionary point of view; and it is now, we believe, determined to repeat the musical performances in those great cities, and to extend them to the principle towns in Scotland,

Mr. Froude, the historian, and the Times reviewers, do not exactly agree touching the character of poor Anne Boleyn, the second wife of the reign of Henry VIII. The reviewer estimates the unhappy Queen at "2,000 a year," which, divided into these enormous statistics as a mere casuist, supplied by a certain Bishop of Exeter to the Lord Chancellor, and by the thereupon drawing Henry's horoscope, and finding that he was born under the combination of Mars and Venus, "with oblique operations of Saturn, signifying cruelty," perpended that the Bishop of Exeter's figures were of the most Draconian correctness.

There were eleven hundred and fifty-nine columns of Parliamentary debates published in the Times during the past Session, sumptuous about three hundred pounds a year. Their work is now of a very different nature to that which existed a few days when Woodfall sat in the gallery in mental fear of the Sergeant-at-Arms, ate two boiled eggs, listened to the debates, went home, drank two pots of porter, and wrote out his reports from memory. The system of short "turns" has somewhat that these "galleries" are overpaid as from four to six pounds a week? and shortly after the twenty-fifth instant, when a new volume of the publications of this eminent divine is to be published, it would be perhaps useless to indulge in too many anticipations about the about it "to-morrow"—as the French advertiser said he would tell the acquaintance who asked him where he was going to dine that day—or, rather, we will be duly communicative next week.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

ANTENOR.—If the account of the late Madame Bourdin, quoted from an Italian newspaper by Dr. Forbes in his "History of Chess," be true, she was a well-skilled player by Mr. Twisleton and Mr. Mongredien, wonderful as they were, are quite eclipsed. The account is as follows:—"Bellary.—A Brahmin has lately been exhibiting at Bellary extraordinary powers of memory. He will play at chess with seven antagonists at once, without seeing the boards. Moreover, he will play at the same time a large number of arithmetical notices of the plays, and give proof of a truly wonderful memory. He has also the power of performing the most difficult feats of chess and one of cards without looking at the boards. While thus engaged, various (a) Tamul, Telegue, Mahratta, Hindostani, Persian, and Canarese, were dictated to him, the sentences being of a most complicated character. He repeated them in the order of their order. The Brahmin undertook for three days were, at the same time, exhibited to a full tea-room, and several small pebbles were thrown at his back. The above complete display of memory and skill took place in the presence of a large number of persons, and, as it was stated, was to be repeated in the course of a few days. The Brahmin is a young man, and has never received any education beyond that which he has received in his native village. He is a Hindoo, and has never left his native village. He is a Hindoo, and has never left his native village. He is a Hindoo, and has never left

CUTTING THE FIRST SOD OF THE CONWAY AND LLANRWST RAILWAY.—SEE PAGE 237.

"THE HARVEST MOON," BY E. WARREN, FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE NEW WATER-COLOUR SOCIETY.—SEE PAGE 236.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1860.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1050.—VOL. XXXVII.] SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1860. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

ITALY.

THE entry of Garibaldi into Naples bore with it all the grandeur of simplicity. The effects of that triumphal ride through the capital of the last of the Bourbons who will cumber the soil of Italy were solely moral, and borrowed no weight and importance from material splendour or gaudy decorations stretching across the streets. No conquering army marched, rank after rank, to the sound of martial music through the thoroughfares of a subdued city. A plain man in a red shirt, surrounded by a few serviceable and service-worn officers who composed his staff, passed along, no doubt amidst the blessings and the gratulations of a disenthralled people. At the magic of a name a numerous and well-organised army which had been petted by its Royal master, at the expense of every other class of his subjects, and on which he relied as an inalienable body guard, melted away in a moment; and the King, who had already ceased to bear the title of Ruler of the Two Sicilies, disappeared, as if down a trapdoor, as soon as certain intelligence reached him that Garibaldi in person was within ten miles of his capital. Something has been said tauntingly of the pusillanimity which prevented a King striking one blow at least in defence of his kingdom. Even if he could have done so—if he had had the means and the agents for a contest with Garibaldi, or a struggle with the Neapolitan people—it would have, and must have, resulted only in a useless and ineffectual waste of blood. But the truth seems to be, that, like our own James II., Francis of Naples was left alone to choose his course. Without counsellors, without soldiers, without a cause, and without an approving conscience even to sustain him in any moral efforts which he might have made to stem the tide which was setting so strongly against him, there was nothing left for him but flight, and, by securing his personal safety, he has removed a serious difficulty in the way of Garibaldi; and, perhaps, spared the world the spectacle of a King not merely dethroned but paying the forfeit of his life, for duties unfulfilled and regal opportunities shamefully and deliberately abused. Let him pass from the scene, unscathed in person, and fall into that oblivion which ought to be the heritage of monarchs who have played the fool and something more with the duties which have been cast upon them, and which they were weak enough and blind enough to dissociate from their rights.

Amidst all the admiration and all the sympathy which is felt for Garibaldi there must—or at least there ought to—mingle anxiety for him in the critical and delicate position in which he is now placed. It is not too much to say that the Dictator of Southern Italy is at this moment the pivot on which all, or nearly all, the general policy of Europe turns. The soundness and the reality of the abstract doctrine of non-interference in the affairs of Italy must ere long be tested. Every step, every movement, of Garibaldi will tend to bring that question to an issue. As far as can be seen at present, the fate and the disposition of the kingdom of the Two Sicilies are entirely in his hands. At present no one seems inclined to interpose between him and any arrangements he may think fit to make, although his designs appear to point to the annexation of the territory which he has won in this latter case so bloodlessly, and therefore not the less gloriously, to that kingdom of Italy which is to pass under the sceptre of Victor Emmanuel. It is not to be supposed that any of the Continental States—France not excluded—can look with indifference on the establishment of a realm of such territorial extent as that which will be comprehended within the dominions of the Sovereign of Italy, even supposing that the progress of Garibaldi should be stayed at the point to which it has now reached. The enlargement of the regal proportions of the Monarch of Sardinia can hardly be viewed with complacency, even by his right trusty ally and fellow-soldier the Ruler of France, and must as certainly be contemplated with envy, distrust, and even apprehension by that Power to the expulsion of which from so large a portion of her Italian territories Victor Emmanuel has contributed so little material and an immense amount of moral assistance. Already we see symptoms of preparation for meeting the new state of things which is arising in Italy; and we repeat that everything now seems to depend on the next step which will be taken by Garibaldi.

STREET RAILWAY-CARRIAGE, PATENTED BY G. F. TRAIN, RUNNING AT BIRKENHEAD.—SEE PAGE 249.

NAPLES, FROM THE CASTEL DEL CARMINE.—FROM A DRAWING BY S. READ.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 256.

There is something more than ominous in the declaration that Austria and Russia are once more in accord. The Czar, with all his so-called liberal tendencies, cannot be presumed to look with indifference on the establishment of a new and a large constitutional kingdom in Europe. The appearance of Kossuth on the scene, however, for the moment, physically remote from the land towards which all his hopes and aspirations tend, is not without its significance, and the alarm of Austria for Hungary has again found a sympathetic feeling in Russia. If the agreement, the concordat, the understanding—whatever it may be—between these two Powers means anything, it means that again Russia undertakes the tranquillity of Hungary, so as to leave Austria free to play out her game on her Italian frontier. It is believed that the compact between Russia and Austria is complete and intelligible. That part of the dominions of this latter Power which remains to her in Italy is doubtlessly guaranteed to her; and who can say how far she may receive support, even if indirect, in any attempt which she make to recover the territory which she has lost? Now, as ever, everything seriously depends on the course which France will take. A good deal is already to be presaged. It is a certainty that the Emperor has stated objections to the movement of Sardinia towards the insurgent districts of the Pope's dominions; and it is said confidently that the garrison of French troops in Rome is to be raised to 30,000 men, and General Goyon returns to the command, carrying with him, of course, the local experience which he has acquired of the requisite military arrangements for the defence of that city.

Everything seems to portend interference on the part of the four great Continental Powers with the march of the liberator on the dominions of the Pope. A collision between the forces either of the King of Sardinia or of Garibaldi with the Papal troops under Lamoricière would probably be found a sufficient pretext for the pouring of the army of Austria beyond the confines of her famous quadrilateral. Supposing one of Garibaldi's magic-like movements upon Rome itself, would not the French garrison be bound to resist him, and thus the contest of 1848 would be renewed, with the difference only of the position of the attackers and defenders? How would the Emperor of the French take the fact of a battle between his own troops and that of the free army of Italy? Could he or would he leave the issue to be decided between his small corps d'armée in Rome and the hosts of Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi? It is a question which way you will, and it will appear that the entrance of the liberating invader into the dominions of the Pope will be the signal for the flooding of Central Italy with the armed bands of despotism from more quarters than one. Surely, then, it is not unreasonable that the boldest hearts should look on the present view at least with apprehension the prospect which is before them. It is but common prudence that dictates serious and anxious expectation with respect to the very next movement of Garibaldi in the south and Victor Emmanuel in the north. It is an event in Italy of unquestionable doubt which bids the most sanguine of those who wish well to the cause of Italy desire that some pause should take place in the onward career of the great chief to whom Providence has intrusted the grand task of freeing and consolidating the liberties of that country. We are unable to yield the belief that the time for this grand achievement is at hand, although it may be permitted to question whether the exact moment for its completion has arrived. Even a check now, and, still more, a regular contest, with the most unequal forces may tend to postpone for years and to commit to the issue of another struggle hereafter the accomplishment of the regeneration of a land which is destined once more to play a great part in the history of the world. Six months, and the organisation of that portion of Italy which is now free will be won from the grasp of autocratic power may be sufficient to put the game thoroughly into the hands of those who are seeking with so much zeal, and hitherto with so much success, the disenthralment of the Italian people in every sense. A mistake, a false step, and all that has been gained may be undone, and all have to be done over again. The real friends of Italy and of liberty cannot, we think, do otherwise than counsel prudence. Let the zealous and gifted agent of this magnificent movement only consent to wait and hope, and peace and honour in it will not have to wait or to hope for very long.

DEATH OF THE RIGHT HON. JAMES WILSON.—A telegram was received at the India Office on Tuesday announcing the death of the Right Hon. James Wilson. The event occurred at Calcutta on the 11th of August. The disorder is believed to have been cholera. The funeral took place on the following day.

One of the learned Judges attended at chambers on Wednesday, and attends to-day (Saturday) to take the business of the common law courts. The vacation number of the Common Pleas sat on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, and will sit on Saturday (to-day) for taxing costs.

Mr. Langdon, of the Bull Inn, Exeter, assisted by other gentlemen, has succeeded in obtaining £200 for Rebecca Gass. An account in the Sherwin Insurance Office has been purchased, and the champion wrestler will receive £21 10s. per annum.

"THE GREAT EASTERN" could transport ten thousand men of all arms, a body complete in itself, and ready for immediate action or quick advance, three hundred miles in twenty-four hours. From where she now lies she could reinforce Gibraltar to that extent in little more than four days. Putting aside the horses, she could throw a still larger force into Calcutta in between five and six weeks. She would have little to fear from enemies. With the heels of every ship afloat, she could run down small squadrons or distance formidable ones. Indeed, though not encumbered for fighting, the sheer size of all the ships now existing is equal to the task of keeping, not, indeed, a continuous lookout, but a continuous look-out over a large area. She might be considered dangerous; and it would be a national sin, as well as a national shame, should she become the property of any other naval Power.—Post.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Prince Imperial on Sunday visited the Jardin d'Acclimation in the Bois de Boulogne, accompanied by the Countess de Brancion, his Sub-Governante, and M. Bachon, his Equerry. The Prince walked for an hour and a half in the garden, and was much pleased at looking at the different animals, most of which he saw for the first time. A great number of persons, who happened to be in the gardens, and when the Prince left to return to Saint Cloud he was received with warm acclamations.

The Princess Clotilde has arrived in Paris from her short excursion in the Channel. Prince Napoleon has left Cubia in the screw-steamer Prince Jerome for the coasts of England and Scotland.

The Journal de Monaco announces that the treaty between France and that principality is concluded, but that diplomatic exigencies prevent the publication of the document which places the principality of Monaco under the protection of France.

There is to be a national fête, or shooting competition, at Vincennes on the 30th of September, open to all comers. There will be a grand prize of 10,000f.

The Scientific Congress of France, numbering five hundred and fifty members, opened on Sunday at the Hôtel de Ville. The Emperor has sent a message of welcome.

The recent subscription for by Dublin enthusiasts was presented to Marshal M'Mahon, Duke of Magenta, at the camp at Châlons on Sunday. The address read to the General on the occasion described as "a tribute of affection to the generous sympathy of the gallant warrior who has once more identified the hereditary chivalry of Erin with the glory of Imperial France." The rest of the ceremony was couched in the same strain; and not a word about England in it. The General replied that when he should die he would leave the magnificent sword to his eldest son, Patrick.

THE IMPERIAL TOUR.

Their Imperial Majesties continue their route of visits with undiminished enthusiasm. Arriving at Marseilles on Monday, about noon, the streets of Marseilles was reached on Sunday. At ten the Emperor and Empress attended mass at Notre Dame de la Garde. At two the Emperor reviewed the troops in the Cannebière. The Constitutionnel, official journal, "reviewed all Marseilles, for the whole city was present: the masses were in motion from early morning. By eight o'clock, persons waved their handkerchiefs; everybody clapped their hands; the masts and yards of the innumerable ships which crowd the port of Marseilles were furnished with their full complement of men. The Emperor then rode on horseback to the palace which the city has presented to him, the Pharo, overlooking in a magnificent bay. 'Vive l'Impératrice!' 'Vive la Mère du Prince Impérial!' 'Vive Majesties have arrived at the Pharo, the Municipal Council, at the head of the Messagries Impériales, and went to Friol, to be present at the exciting spectacle of blasting one of the quarries whence the enormous blocks of stone are hewn which were to protect the Pharo from the assaults of the sea. Their Majesties afterwards inspected the new public buildings of the town. At night the most magnificent fête and illuminations took place. One hundred thousand guests of all classes were entertained at the Cannebière by invitation of the municipal authorities. A banquet was given to his Majesty the Mayor of the Marseilles Chamber of Commerce the Emperor delivered the following speech:—

Gentlemen,—The banquet offered by the Chamber of Commerce gives me the happy opportunity of publicly thanking the city of Marseilles for the warm reception it has given to the Empress and myself. The unanimous demonstrations of attachment which we received since the commencement of our journey touch me deeply, but do not make me more proud; for my only merit has been to have had faith in Providence, and confidence in the energy and good sense of the French people. It is this intimate union between people and sovereign which enables us to gain strength in times of trial and from the assaults of the sea. Their Majesties afterwards inspected the new public buildings of the town. At night the most magnificent fête and illuminations took place. One hundred thousand guests of all classes were entertained at the Cannebière by invitation of the municipal authorities. A banquet was given to his Majesty the Mayor of the Marseilles Chamber of Commerce the Emperor delivered the following speech:—

Gentlemen,—The banquet offered by the Chamber of Commerce gives me the happy opportunity of publicly thanking the city of Marseilles for the warm reception it has given to the Empress and myself. The unanimous demonstrations of attachment which we received since the commencement of our journey touch me deeply, but do not make me more proud; for my only merit has been to have had faith in Providence, and confidence in the energy and good sense of the French people. It is this intimate union between people and sovereign which enables us to gain strength in times of trial and from the assaults of the sea. Their Majesties afterwards inspected the new industrial works it was adjourned until the conclusion of the discussion of the budget. In a debate on the budget for public worship the President of the Chamber of Commerce (M. Maugez) proposed a revision of the Concordat, and that the placing of all Christian confessions on an equal footing should become a principle of the Constitution. It was resolved to insert two additional paragraphs in the report of the committee of twenty-one, in accordance with M. Maugez's motion—viz., to abolish the difference between the positions of the confessions as constituted by the subsidy at present granted to the Catholic Church and schools of public instruction, and in general to settle all questions respecting the religious conditions.

According to the correspondent of the Times, an official telegram from St. Petersburg, received in Vienna on Saturday last, declares that the Emperor Alexander and his Government desire a perfect reconciliation with Austria. Arrangements for a meeting of the two Emperors will consequently be made without further delay; and "measures will be taken for putting an end to the present state of things, which can no longer tolerable." Of course the terms of reconciliation are not yet known; but some rumours assert that Austria has promised to support the Russian policy in the East.

"Personal and positive information," says the Patrie, "enables us to announce that an interview will take place at Warsaw, in the early part of October, between the Emperors of Russia and Austria, and the Prince Regent of Prussia."

Great prominence is given by Le Nord to a statement for the correctness of which it vouches. It asserts that an arrangement has recently been agreed upon between England, Austria, and Prussia, of which the object is to prevent any sinister intervention of France by force of arms in Italy or elsewhere, and also any forcible extension of France, either by conquest or negotiation. According to a telegram from Vienna, however, this statement of the Nord is totally unfounded.

GERMANY.

A telegraphic despatch, dated Coburg, the 4th inst., says:—"The general meeting of the National Union have unanimously adopted as their proposition of the first member of the neutral power to Prussia, and the convocation of a German Parliament."

HOLLAND.

The legislative session of the States of Holland was closed on the 7th by a speech from the Minister of the Interior.

SWEDEN.

The King of Sweden has returned to Stockholm from his visit to Norway. His Majesty immediately dissolved the Regency established during his absence, and took in hand the administration of the affairs of the Government.

GREECE.

News received from Damascus states that Fuad Pacha had not incorporated the 6000 prisoners into the army, but he had sent 300 of them to the galleys. Fuad Pacha gave 120 Mussulman houses to the homeless Christians. It is asserted, however, that he made no distinction and threw rubish at these Christians, they were obliged, after the first night, to camp in the citadel, where, to the number of about 1000, they were exposed to the burning sun, and destitute of everything. The large indemnity imposed on the city had excited threats and great agitation. It was asserted that numerous arrests were made, and that the Druses, on account of not having received their pay. The French army is still encamped at Beyrout. Bashibozuk pirate against the Christians are in circulation.

UNITED STATES.

The excitement in Texas relative to the abolitionists was increasing. The town of Mount Vernon was reported to have been destroyed by incendiaries.

Mr. Breckinridge, emulating his competitor, Mr. Douglas, has written a letter announcing his purpose to advocate his cause "on the stump." The other Presidential candidates, Lincoln and Mr. Bell, have thus far remained at home, wisely abstaining from speechmaking, but, perhaps, they will yet be compelled to "stump" it to meet the demands of their friends. Meantime Mr. Douglas, having concluded his tour at the north, is "stumping" Virginia and the south, where his prospects are said to be encouraging. Governor Letcher has ordered the militia forces with those of Messrs. Bell and Everett.

Governor Wise of Massachusetts has withdrawn from politics to become the president of the Illinois Central Railroad Company.

General Banks has declined to become a candidate for Vice-presidency, and urges a union of the Conservatives and the Union men against Lincoln.

CHINA.

The news from Shanghai is to the 17th of July, and the Taku forts, at the mouth of the Peiho, were to be attacked on the 20th by the allied troops near wealthy, and Lord Elgin and Baron Gros had arrived in the Gulf of Pechelı. The rebel Chinese had held all their conquests, and received foreigners cordially. Trade was dull at Shanghai. Canton is tranquil.

AUSTRALIA.

Our Melbourne advices are to the 25th of July. From the Herald of that date we extract the following summary of news:—No material change, and no striking improvement, has taken place. Many leading affairs of the colony since the date of our previous monthly summary. The two Houses of the Legislature are still engaged in the interminable and fruitless discussion about the land question, and no single bill on that subject introduced by the present Ministry has been passed to and by the Legislative Council and the Governor. The Assembly—the House being utterly averse to passing it in the shape insisted upon by the other. A House Bill has just been passed by the Lower House, of which the most conspicuous feature is that it makes desertion for five consecutive years, by either husband or wife, a legal ground of separation. This Bill, however, on account of the pressure of other claims, will have to be reserved for the Royal assent. A bill for giving workmen a lien on the work in which they are employed and for wages, have been fully paid up has also been passed. A bill for promoting and extending the sale of colonial beer has been carried out in the Assembly by a small majority. Other minor measures are at present in various stages of progress, or of decadence; but they are exclusively of a local character. A new gold-field was reported to have been or was to having been discovered at the head of the Goulburn River, and the locality of the reported discovery is known as Bowyer, but we have seen nothing as yet of it. Mr. Haines has resigned the office of Premier, on account of the pressure of his private affairs, and Mr. Service has undertaken to form a Ministry.

The Queen's Birthday was solemnized in Melbourne on the 8th inst., and on the 9th inst. the Parliament was prorogued by the Governor, Sir Henry Barkly, in person. The Governor, in his speech, congratulated the Legislature on the prosperity of the country, and on the fact that the Land Question had been settled. He also announced that the Government had determined to establish a Mint in the colony, and that the Royal Assent had been given to the Bill for the Naturalization of Aliens. The Governor then prorogued the Parliament until the 30th of October next.

The Sydney Chamber of Commerce has petitioned the Government to abolish the duties on tea, sugar, and coffee, and to impose a duty of 10 per cent on all articles now free, with the exception of breadstuffs, and to apply the proceeds to the reduction of the public debt.

The Victorian Government has received a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Cardwell, in which he declines to interfere with the Chinese question, and says that the Victorian Government must deal with it as they think best.

NEW ZEALAND.

The Governor of New Zealand has issued a proclamation declaring that the Province of Taranaki is in a state of rebellion, and that martial law is established there. The Governor has also issued a proclamation declaring that the Province of Auckland is in a state of rebellion, and that martial law is established there. The Governor has also issued a proclamation declaring that the Province of Auckland is in a state of rebellion, and that martial law is established there.

THE NEAPOLITAN REVOLUTION.

GARIBALDI entered Naples yesterday week, and proclaimed Victor Emmanuel King of Italy. Francis II. had previously withdrawn to Gaeta. The utter disorganisation, cowardice, and disaffection of the Neapolitan troops, by which he could alone have enabled Garibaldi to advance with so little opposition from the extreme point of Calabria to Naples, are strikingly manifested by the accounts of the Dictator's march as they successively arrive. The Prince of Monte Corvino Filiguoli was ferociously murdered by his own soldiers, who accused him of selling them at so much a head, and who subsequently dispersed. In the neighbourhood of Castellamare 1000 men, with their officers, were assailed by General Ghio after General Viale had abandoned them on the news of Brigandi's assassination, appear to have disbanded themselves, as it was found down their entire line of march. Ghio's brigade is said to have gone over in a body to Garibaldi. As there seems no reason to believe that the troops in the rear would have shown a more trustworthy than these pusillanimous regiments, it is not astonishing that Francis II. should have abandoned all hope of making a last stand in the city of his capital.

TRIUMPHAL ENTRY OF GARIBALDI INTO NAPLES.

The Daily Telegraph correspondent writes from Naples on the 7th inst. as follows:—

This morning, at twelve o'clock, Giuseppe Garibaldi entered Naples. With the exception of the Royal Palace, I do not know a city in which such a scene was history, and would require the pen of a Macaulay to do it justice. I was on my way to the palace, which was crowded with the Royal Guard, but was actually on route for the capital; and, in company with some two hundred Bersaglieri, I entered the palace by a private door. Once within the walls of his arrival was, in one hour it was known all over the city, and all the disaffected regiments in Naples were ordered to the palace, whence he was expected to arrive by special train from Vietri (Salerno). As we passed the Largo di Castello we encountered the scum of the population (lazzaroni, lobed ones)—we fell in with the first detachment of National Guards and enlisted volontari, proceeding to the railway station, mounted on the carriages of all the leading Liberals, the Committato, and several of the foreign Military Officers in the service of M. Persano. Garibaldi was to be honour, as decoy of Napoleon, to the hero of the day. Many ladies were in the waiting-rooms, which was crowded with the Royal Guard in magnificent in plain clothes and all sorts of uniforms.

After waiting about an hour the train was heard and the scream of an arriving train. "He is come!" The train steams in. In the first carriage, standing on the step, is a gigantic figure in a red shirt, with a cape, and a broad-brimmed hat on his shoulders. Cheeries and cheers increase. Suddenly all is hushed again, and we see Garibaldi in the act of taking off his hat and bowing to the people from Salerno. At last he does come. The enthusiasm is overpowering. Surrounded by his staff and soldiers, some of Aspromonte fame, he was the solid and travel-stained costumes of an irregular army on campaign, comes forward. Large but handsome features, and he is fine, and the deep determination of his extraordinary forehead. A face that might serve as a model for the original of a Napoleonic conception. Some one near me said that it was the low tone of the most unsoldierly voice I have ever heard. Long grisly curls hang from his head, and his beard is of the same hue. His hands are red as the shoulders, like the "pancake" of the South American, and grey trousers. He stands up in the carriage, and as he is on a level with the crowd he shakes many thin cavets, and processes to take possession of his new equipage. Garibaldi entered the carriage, followed by Colonel Missori, Colonel Ghio, Persano in other carriages, and some few on horseback; the cortege consisted of about twenty vehicles. Garibaldi stood up in the carriage with his hat in his hand, and the picturesque dress sate off their bright and the sparseness of their build. Cheering, shouting, and enthusiasm accompanied the procession to Naples. Along the crowded Marinelli, the head-quarters of lazzaroni, now converted into Garibaldi's camp, and the Strada di Toledo, and finally to the Largo del Castello, the Strada di Toledo, and finally to the Palazzo della Città di Napoli, the residence of Garibaldi. Garibaldi, on his arrival at the Palazzo, the centre makes its way, and Garibaldi enters into what was once the palace of the Bourbons. The apartments are all carpeted and furnished in the most splendid manner, and the windows open and Garibaldi appears on the balcony, and addresses the people. The people, as he advances above to the centre of the balcony that extends along the palace, and the cheering is renewed. Garibaldi is a fine speaker, and he seems to have a little exhausted their powers; so he stands there alone, leaning on his sword, and looks down upon the people in the square and surrounding streets. A grand study of Garibaldi as he stood silently speculating, perhaps, over the future, and as he looked on that, though not his own, yet his work. Garibaldi told it was impossible to distinguish what he said, though it was easy to perceive that he was addressing the people. He spoke for about a quarter of an hour, the letter of the Baron Genie, it was time to re-enter the palace and Garibaldi, with his staff, retired from the balcony. The people in the Dictator's name, and retreated.

The entry of Garibaldi into Naples was the first leading to the suite of apartments in which the General had his reception. Here he received the Ministers of the Provisional Government, who had thrown themselves at his disposal, the corps diplomatique, and the Municipality. Each of these in succession was introduced into the presence of Garibaldi, and presented to him by the Baron Genie, the Chief of his personal Staff towards Garibaldi was evident to-day at the station at Vietri, when the General found him in the crowd, and embraced him before allow to enter Naples. Very few accompanied him, and no troops, but 25,000 men are on the road to Naples. The Royal Guard will march to-day to the trocca at Capua, and will drive them before him like sheep, as the influence of his presence and the fame of his achievements are so much greater than that of his own men. His marching is a miracle; eighteen days ago he landed eighteen thousand men in Sicily, and now he is master of Naples.

What most struck me in the appearance of this extraordinary man was his extraordinary calm at a time when the excitement was so great. It is the feeling of the moment, and when Italian enthusiasm was at its greatest pitch, Garibaldi remained unmoved. Immediately on his arrival at the palace he carried from the train; when he entered the carriage and first heard the cheers of the people, he stood up, and when he left it he was the last to be watched by thousands; and in the palace, as he talked with his adherents, he preserved the same calm, and was apparently unmoved by all this. It was easy to see that there was no thought of self in that quiet brow and pensive attitude. He looks very well indeed, and as he stood on the step was taken on his shoulders the affairs of a kingdom. When he speaks or when he smiles, he has a most pleasing expression. Garibaldi's own handwriting and his lighting yesterday and being saluted by to-day, and when an English lady presented him with a bouquet of flowers, he smiled, and as he walked across saw the elderly, melancholy looking man you have just seen in repose.

Letters received from Naples on the 8th inst. state that the Sardinian flag was flying from all the forts. Before Garibaldi's entry into Naples the Sardinian Admiral had threatened to fire upon any Neapolitan vessel which should attempt to proceed to Gaeta. Garibaldi had found an immense quantity of war material and 80,000,000 francs in the treasury. "To Rome" has been inscribed on the cathedral by Father Gavazzi, the people shouting "Hurrah for Victor Emmanuel! Hurrah for Garibaldi!" The people were armed, and even with pikes and sticks. General Garibaldi occupies the palace. The Papal Nuncio, the great part of the Ambassadors, and Count Trapani, brother of the King, have left Naples. Garibaldi has appointed Signor Ulloa, brother of General Ulloa, as his Prime Minister, and had issued proclamations. After the flight of the King a great fire took place in the public funds.

The King of Sardinia has issued a decree authorising the soldiers and sailors of the Neapolitan troops to wear the Sardinian medal that there been honoured with medals or decorations for civic courage or philanthropy or distinguished personal bravery, to which decorations they enjoy the pensions as before. This decree is one of those stipulated in the treaty of peace.

The famous rope-walker Blondin has addressed a proposition to the Duke of Newcastle, offering to make Prince of Wales walk on a rope, barrow over a nightrope to be stretched across the Falls of Niagara. The proposition is to be submitted to the Council, and, if approved, will take place during the passage Mr. Blondin thinks would amply the a truly inspiring entrance into the Domains of the American Republic.

A RUSSIAN MAN-OF-WAR BLOWN UP IN THE GULF OF FINLAND.—A correspondent of the Standard writes from St. Petersburg on the 5th inst. as follows:—"I have this moment learned the melancholy news that a Russian man-of-war, which returned some days ago from the Baltic, has blown up in the Gulf of Finland, very near Revel. Unfortunately, it appears that of the number on board only a thirtieth part were rescued from perishing in the waves, and taken on board the vessel which accompanied it. This Russian vessel of war then destroyed by an explosion of gunpowder—a calamity which only a few years since in the imperial dockyard of Archangel, in the White Sea.

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams were received at Mr. Reuter's office yesterday (Friday):—

PARIS, TUESDAY.—Turin, Sept. 13.—General Cialdini has entered Farre, making 300 prisoners. The official Piedmontese Gazette publishes a Royal decree appointing General Fanti Commander-in-Chief of the two corps-d'armée which have been mobilised.

PARIS, THURSDAY Evening.—General Lamoricière has concentrated his army, numbering 60,000 men, at Ancona. It is asserted that his lines of defence will be attacked by 45,000 Sardinians from Umbria.

The same journal announces that the King of Naples left Gaeta on the 12th inst., on board a Spanish frigate, for Sevilla.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The new Bishop of Durham was yesterday week installed with the customary formality in the cathedral of his diocese.

The Bishop of Chichester consecrated the new church recently erected in St. Stephen's district, Portsmouth, on Tuesday week. The church will afford accommodation for about 600 persons.

The Rev. John Coleridge Patteson, son of Mr. Justice Patteson, has been nominated Bishop of the Islands of the Pacific, acting under the direction of the Bishop of New Zealand. He will exercise episcopal supervision over seventy or eighty islands of the Pacific not under the British Crown.

The Bishop of Bangor commenced the primary visitation of his diocese at Dolgelly yesterday (Friday). In the course of his tour Mr Lordship will visit the towns of Carnarvon, Bangor, Anon, and Ruthin.

The Very Rev. Francis Close, Dean of the Diocesan Training College, Chester, has been conferred upon the Rev. Jonathan Bates, M.A., Fellow of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, formerly Second Master of Colchester Grammar School.

Arrangements are in progress for the erection of a new bishoprics in Australia, to be called Perth, and be, like probably, at Goulburn. The Bishop of Sydney, writing home on the subject, states that the church funds there have increased in value to a very considerable sum, that a suitable endowment and a proper cathedral may be secured.

The Dean and Chapter of Ely have appointed the Hon. and Rev. Samuel Waldegrave to the bishopric of Carlisle, in accordance with her Majesty's congé d'élire recently issued. The usual form of consecration will take place in York Minster, probably during the present month.

Dr. Baring, Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, has announced his intention of holding an ordination of his candidates for priest's orders to the following arrangement:—Sept. 24, St. Augustine; Bristol; 29, Gloucester Cathedral; 30, Berkeley; 27, Sunday; 28, Malmesbury; 29, Chippenham; October 1, Cricklade; 2, Winchcombe; 3, Campden; 4, Stow-on-the-Wold; 5, Leamington; 6, Warwick.

TESTIMONIALS TO CLERGYMEN.—Several of the county magistrates and gentry, assembled last week at the Swan Inn, Great Torrington, to present a testimonial, consisting of a purse containing £131, to the Rev. Frederic Bagshawe, Rector of Great Torrington, for the very able manner in which he has fulfilled the solemn duties of Chaplain at the New Baller Prison, Dartmoor.—Last Wednesday week the Rev. Robert Fisher, Curate of Littlebourne, by the congregation, consisting of the Rev. John Cuney, Holy Trinity, Church, Shaw.—The Rev. A. C. B. Cave has received a handsome silver inkstand from the poor of the parish of Bishopsbourne, Canterbury, on the occasion of his living.—A handsome quarto Bible has been given by the teachers and children in the Sunday-school, Wesleyan Chapel, Wednesbury, to the Rev. C. Haggard on his resigning the curacy.—The Rev. John Aldous, Incumbent of Holy Trinity, Bradford, has received a handsome testimonial in token of jobs on the completion of his seventh year of ministry in that parish.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—Rectories: Rev. E. Gorton, to Ellenhall, Staffordshire.—Rev. H. James Prime, to Hever.—Rev. H. Enwright, to Thelnetham, Suffolk: Rev. C. Thwp, to Nympsfield, Gloucestershire.—Rev. J. Wilson, to Haverton Hill.—The Perpetual Curacy: Rev. W. T. Dixon, to Chiltern Dunny, Somerset; Rev. T. J. Hughes, to Llanrug, Flintshire.—Rev. Charles Hamilton, Chaplain to the Forces.—Chaplaincy: The Rev. John Aldous, Incumbent of Holy Trinity, Wicker, Sheffield, to the Vicar's Chaplaincy.—Rev. Thomas Bradley, to the Chaplaincy of the Parish of Newcastle, New South Wales, Australasia. Perpetual Curacies: Rev. W. G. Cockeley, to the Perpetual Curacy of Cheddington, Bucks.—Rev. Benjamin Westbrooke, to the Perpetual Curacy of Holy Trinity, Wicker, Sheffield, to the Vicar's Chaplaincy.—Rev. J. W. Osman, to St. George's, Wolverhampton.—Rev. Thomas Bradley, to Christ Church, Chesham; Rev. A. Stykeman Berridge, to St. Luke's, King's-cross, London.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

Lord Vaux.—The will of Lieutenant-General the Right Hon. Arthur Mervyn Vaux, Baron Vaux of Harrowden, in the county of Northampton, was proved in her Majesty's Court of Probate on the 1st of the present month by the oaths of Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Vaux, the son. The personalty was sworn under £10,000. His Lordship has left the whole of his property, real and personal, to his son, Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Vaux, and to the second Marquis of Downshire. The will bears date the 12th day of July, 1858, and was executed in the presence of Mr. Wm. Greenwood and Mr. Edward Bell, the age of sixty-one, and was the second son of the said Marquis. Lord Vaux was born in 1797, married in 1824 Lady Anne Hill, daughter of the first Marquis of Downshire, by Anne Lucy Cecil Hill, D.C., K.T.S., daughter of Arthur, the said Marquis.

Lord Carteret.—Charles Carteret, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor of the Island of Jersey, who died in London on the 10th inst., at the advanced age of the 81st of May, 1866, has been proved in London on the 18th of this month. The executors are Montagu Chas. Carteret, Esq., the son, and Lord Carteret, the brother. The testator has left his property to his son absolutely. The Major-General had, moreover, a pension of property was sworn under £12,000. The Major-General had, moreover, a pension of £1,000 per annum out of the consolidated fund. He was born on the 19th of May, 1785, and was the son of the daughter of the late Hon. and Very Rev. William Carteret, Dean of Bristol, and Bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh, and was married in 1814 between his two sons, the elder taking two-thirds and the younger the remainder. By the will of the late Lieutenant-Governor of Jersey, he appears to have highly esteemed. These decorative weapons he has bequeathed to his son, and also the testator's gold watch and trinkets to each. The family of this gallant officer is highly distinguished in rank, as well as in martial and literary attainments.

Major-General Frederick Thomas Buller, of St. Albans's-place, Pall-mall, and Downton Castle, Ludlow, Shropshire, died on the 31st ult., at the age of 63 June last, at the age of sixty-one; and during a residence in Austria made his will, dated the 17th of August, 1865, which was proved under £40,000 personalty by the oaths of his brother, the Rev. W. Buller, whom he appointed sole executor. The terms of the will are very brief, and the whole of his own landed property is inherited by two witnesses, one a French soldier and the other a native of Austria.

Viscount Palmerston honoured Mr. John Watkins on Friday night with several sittings at his photographic establishment in Parliament-street. Among the distinguished personages recently visited Mr. Watkins' studio, and sat to him for portraits, are the Duchess of Wellington, Lord Stanley of Alderley, the Earl of Eglinton, Dowager, Countess, and Governor; Viscount Duty, Ranelagh, and Valdetari; Lord and Lady Overstone; Lord and Lady Lyttelton; Lord Lovaine; Sir Thomas Lloyd Wallingham; the Speaker of the House of Commons, the Right Hon. J. E. Denison, M.P.; the Solicitor-General, Mr. W. M. Kenny, M.P.; and Sir David Brewster.

THE SHEFFIELD CUTLERS' FEAST took place on Thursday week, when the Master Cutler, Mr. Hunter, jun., entertained 200 guests to a banquet. He was honoured with the presence of the Duke of Rutland, Earl Fitzwilliam, Lord Wharncliffe, Lord Houghton, Lord Feversham, &c., and there were no fewer than seven Mayors present—the Lord Mayor of London, Sheffield, Leeds, Bradford, Barnsley, Rotherham, Doncaster, Hull, Leeds, and Bradford, and many other gentlemen of high civil and military standing. The volunteer movement was a prominent topic in the speeches. The toast of "Responding to the toast of "The House of Commons" gave utterance to a strong feeling in favour of the reform of the House of Commons. Mr. Roebuck, Mr. Osborne Morgan, and Mr. Lowe would have been present but the House was up.

Mr. Lowe has been pressed to the Home Office, but he has declined. He stated these members of Parliament who had been pressed to take office of the Ministry declined to accept office. Mr. Lowe referred to the progress of the success of the volunteer movement, and spoke of the check which it would be met by the Government proposal to reduce the capitation grant from the four which ambitious foreign rulers were calculated to engage for.

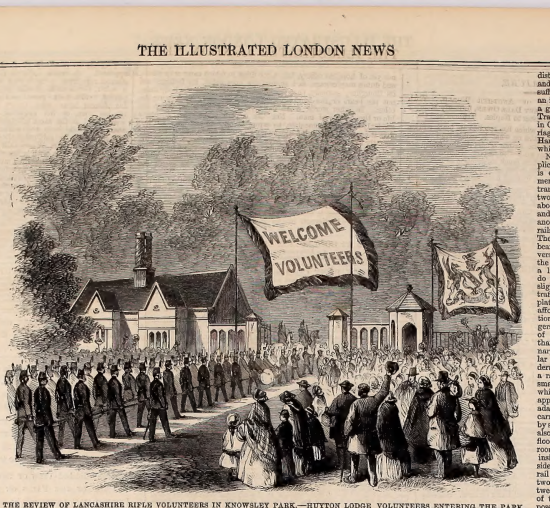
THE NEW TITHES ACT.—The several Acts of Parliament for the commutation of tithes in England and Wales were finally extended by the statute 23 and 24 Vic., c. 93. According to the new law, corn rents may be local Acts may be converted into rent-charges, which rent-charges are to be apportioned by the Commissioners, with power to appeal to a court of law. Tithes commuted for a sum or rate per load of cattle may be converted into a rent-charge. Whenever a sum or rate per head shall be in arrear for seven months by reason of inadequacy of the property on which such stock, goods, or chattels belonging to the person in respect of whom cattle or stock such sum or rate may be due, or by reason of the absence or default of such person, the landowners have power to take the distraint or of corn returns, and to levy the distress and sale in the manner by law may now for the purpose of any award of rent-charge in lieu of corn rents.

LITERATURE.

FOOTFALLS ON THE BOUNDARY OF ANOTHER WORLD. With Narrative Illustrations. By ROBERT DALE OWEN, formerly Member of Congress, and American Minister to Naples. Trübner and Co.

This is an English issue of a work which has reached its tenth edition in America. It is, in brief, a treatise on what is called spiritualism. The tone and spirit adopted by the author render it impossible not to approach the consideration of his work with respect. There is so much earnestness of feeling, coupled with so much moderation of individual assertion, that, whatever may be the result of the perusal of the book on the conclusions, no one would be inclined to treat it lightly, or in any other than a serious point of view. The groundwork of the disquisition is indicated in a statement which Mr. Owen makes in the preface to this edition of his book, and which is, in effect, that the classes of phenomena grouped together therein are presented, not as beyond nature, but as in harmony with it—not as exceptional breaking upon the uniformity of a great system, but as an integral and necessary portion of that system—not as violating or transcending the general laws which we see regulating the universe, but as occurring in strictest conformity with those laws, and especially with a portion of them—the ultramundane—which we have not been in the habit of studying, here eminently sooner they may be deserving of careful study. Put forth as miracles, ultramundane phenomena are justly rejected as incredible, as inconsistent with the progress of our present knowledge, and at variance with the teachings of modern science. But when presented as classes of natural occurrences—unexplained, indeed, governed by laws yet unknown or obscurely discerned, but as merely embraced in the ordered economy of the world, as the storm or the sunshine—the aspect of the question changes. The inquiry is no longer whether God, to meet a special emergency, suspends from time to time one or other of his laws, but only whether we have hitherto overlooked a portion of these laws, that portion which serves to connect the next phase of our existence with the present. Nothing can be more plausible, we had almost said more specious, than this process. There is a modesty, even a humility, in this assertion, which also pervades the whole book, which at the outset disarms special antagonism. We are prepared to observe fairly how the writer proposes to show whether occasional interferences from another world in this are a reality or a delusion, and to make out that the inquiry is of a practical nature. This is the more important because we are informed that spiritualism—that is, the belief in the occasional appearance, or influence on human affairs, of disembodied spirits, is held by three millions of people in America, and in Europe by at least a million.[1] Again, it is urged that those who are classed in the denomination of Bible Christians are especially debarred from rejecting this doctrine curtly and without examination, for that which has been may be, and the Scriptures teach that such intercourse did exist in earlier days, and they nowhere declare that it was thereforth to cease for ever. Still further we are assured that the claims of the subject to the notice of the clergy and of other public teachers are not founded alone on the fact that this heresy (if heresy it be) has penetrated to every rank and class of society, and how infrequences more or less the opinions and the conduct of millions throughout the civilised world. These claims, it is said, reach further still. They derive from the necessity of the case. The question as to investigation or no investigation is one of time only. Once mooted and seized upon by popular sympathy, a matter like this must be probed to the bottom. There is nothing else for it. We can get rid of it on no other terms. As regards the spiritual pretensions, either they are a pernicious delusion, to be detected or exploded, as by carefully-prosecuted researches every delusion can be, or else an important reality beyond any that crosses our daily path.

With these statements we are very much disposed to agree. The question is how far Mr. Owen has succeeded in attaining this very desirable end. It is not because he starts with the predisposition of a believer that he has been successful in proving his case, that because he has, with every possible care and research, brought to bear on the discussion a mass of authority of original and illustrations. Instances of the effects of delusion and hallucination are not things of to-day; they are numerous and well-authenticated, and many of them unexplainable on any known natural law. It is in this respect that we think that the present volume fails. So long as the author is arguing his earnest yet reverential tone, and the logical powers which he exhibits, are calculated to carry the reader along with him. Few of us will venture to deny that there are "things in heaven and earth that are not dreamt of in our philosophy." We do not gainsay the assertion that "no human experience is unalterable." We admit that modern investigation has discovered and utilised agencies in the abstract as wonderful, as incomprehensible, and as nearly miraculous, in the ordinary sense of that term, as those so-called manifestations which we are here called on to accept as proofs of the existence of the system which Mr. Owen advocates.



No doubt there is value in the attack which is here brought to bear on materialism and in the emphatic assertion of the doctrine of a future state, although it would seem that this is mixed up with the doctrine of an intermediate state between death and the final disposition of the soul. Mr. Owen lays it down broadly that the theory that departed friends may visit us and watch over us here involves two postulates—first, that when death prostrates the body the spirit remains, non-slumbering in the grave beside mouldering flesh and bone, but enters at once upon a new and active phase of life—not a state of ineffable bliss, nor yet of hopeless misery, but a condition in which cares may affect, and duties may engage, and sympathies may enlist, its feelings and its thoughts; secondly, that the death-change reaches the body only, not the heart or the mind—discarding the one, not transforming the other. In other words, death destroys not, in any sense, either the life or the identity of man. Nor does it permit the spirit, an angel suddenly become immaculate, to aspire at once to heaven. Far less does it condemn that spirit, solemnly instantly debarred, to sink irredemptively into hell. "All this," says Mr. Owen, "may sound heterodox, but is it irrational?" No wonder that with these views he answers Luther (of course misquoted) reforming the lesson without consideration, when, finding Purgatory an abuse, to make radical work, he swept out Hades along with it.

We trust that we have, while endeavouring to state with all fairness the gist of Mr. Owen's argument, indicated that the effect on our own mind has not been merely unsatisfactory and inconclusive, but wholly misled and has not been merely unsatisfactory and inconclusive, but wholly misled has not been merely unsatisfactory and inconclusive, but wholly misled has not been merely unsatisfactory and inconclusive, but wholly misled is the youngest of the French Marshals. He was born in 1809, and, having terminated his education at the Military School of St. Cyr, was named Sub-Lieutenant in 1828, and shortly afterwards proceeded to that still greater military school, Algeria, the cradle of so many French officers of genius. We will not follow him through his numerous African campaigns, to which he owed his rapid promotion and several advances in the Legion of Honour, nor will we stop to enumerate the number of his wounds and the list of his triumphs received and accomplished in the French colony from which he was recalled to France in the beginning of 1850, when he attached himself to the fortunes of Louis Napoleon, who named Canrobert Brigadier-General, appointed him one of his Aides-de-Camp, and gave him an important command in Paris, where he was employed in the suppression of the insurrection after the famous coup-d'état of the 2nd of December.

In March, 1854, when the Russian war broke out, General Canrobert took the command of the first division of the French army, the division that suffered so terribly in the Dobrudja. He afterwards aided most powerfully in the Crimean expedition, and sustained the first shock with the Russians in the brilliant fight at the Alma, one of the most glorious souvenirs for the allied armies. He was wounded during the battle, but remained on the field throughout the day. Two days afterwards the command in chief of the French army in the Crimea was remitted to him by Marshal St. Arnaud, who had long been suffering and was aware of his approaching end. The new Commander immediately marched on Sebastopol, constructed several batteries, and opened fire on the 17th of October; but, finding it impossible to carry the place by a coup de main, he, in concert with Lord Raglan, commenced the gigantic works which led to its complete investment. However, some disagreement having arisen between Lord Raglan and Canrobert as to the plan of attack, the brave soldier resigned his command-in-chief to General Pelissier, and returned to his former post at the head of the first division.

For his services in the Crimea Canrobert received the baton of Marshal of France, which entitles him to a seat in the Senate, and he is also a Grand Cross of the Legion of Honour. Those who witnessed the return of the French troops to Paris after the termination of the Crimean war will recollect the enthusiasm of his countrymen, practically demonstrated by the showers of bouquets and the ringing shouts of applause which greeted the new Marshal of France on his passage along the Boulevards at the head of his weather-beaten but glory-covered division.

THE REVIEW OF LANCASHIRE RIFLE VOLUNTEERS IN KNOWSLEY PARK.—HUTTON LODGE VOLUNTEERS ENTERING THE PARK. SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 237.

STREET RAILWAYS.

BIRKENHEAD witnessed on the 30th ult. the inauguration of an undertaking which in this country wears all the aspect of novelty. In New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and the chief towns of the United States, street railways—the chemin de fer Americain of the French, but better known in England under the designation of horse tramways—have for some years been established. To the success of the experiment in those places in which it has been tried, the testimony of not only the most eminent American engineers, but of intelligent travellers from all parts of the world, has been unhesitatingly borne. Encouraged by that success, attempts have from time to time been made, in vain, to introduce the system into our own metropolis, in the hope of thus remedying the serious inconvenience in its main thoroughfares which is daily caused by an overgrown traffic. It remained for a citizen of the United States to infuse renewed hope into the supporters of the scheme. To Mr. G. F. Train, of Boston, the introduction into England of street railways is mainly to be attributed. But five short months have elapsed since he laid the proposals on the subject before the Commissioners of Birkenhead. Two months later found those proposals accepted. The 30th ult. saw them carried into practical effect. Nor was the undertaking inaugurated with a success at all inferior to the expedition with which the necessary works had been completed. The line of rails—which has been laid down under the superintendence of Mr. Pallet, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Samuel, of London, extends from the Woodside Ferry, the landing-place at Birkenhead, just opposite the centre of Liverpool, by the Shore-road, through Argyle and Conway streets, and so on to the entrance to Birkenhead Park. The whole distance is little more than a mile and a quarter; it is, however, quite sufficient to enable those who take an interest in the subject to form a good idea of the merits of Mr. Train's experiment. A junction in Conway-street enables the carriages to return from the park by Hamilton-street to the point from which they originally started.

Nothing can well be less complicated than the machinery which is employed for the accomplishment of this double journey. The tramway itself consists simply of two iron plates, each being raised about an inch on the outer side, and running parallel to one another, as in the case of the rails on an ordinary railroad. They are fixed upon longitudinal bearers, which rest upon transverse sleepers, and are so let into the street as to run completely on a level with its surface. They do not, therefore, interfere in the slightest degree with the ordinary traffic. To ply on these iron plates, carriages capable each of affording abundant accommodation to from fifty to sixty passengers have been built by Mr. Main, of Birkenhead. They are more than double the size of an ordinary omnibus, are somewhat similar in shape, and are provided underneath with wheels like those of a railway carriage, but somewhat smaller in size. The plan upon which they are constructed would appear to be exceedingly well adapted to street traffic. Each carriage is twenty-four feet long by seven feet wide, seven feet being also the height of the interior from floor to roof. It furnishes sitting room for twenty-four persons inside and for as many more outside, for whose protection a handrail runs round the top. A space of two or three feet intervenes between the passengers on each side of the interior, and this it is proposed to turn to account by allowing passengers to stand there in the event of all the seats being attached, being run beneath the roof for their convenience. A small platform at each end of each carriage, raised about a foot and a half from the ground, and separated from the horses—which may be yoked to either end—by a contrivance somewhat resembling the splashboard of a hansom cab, affords the means of ready ingress and egress to the new conveyance, on the decoration of which, as well as on their adaptation to the comfort and security of passengers, great pains have evidently been bestowed.

In the construction of the new carriages the important question of ventilation has not been neglected. Each has its sliding windows, with "louvres," to prevent a draught. Each is provided also with a driver and conductor, both of whom have it in their power to control, by means of a patent break, the machinery by which the progress of the carriages is stopped or retarded.

Such is the system of street conveyance which on the 30th ult. began its career at Birkenhead. As a mere spectacle its inauguration possessed no particular attraction. Shortly before ten o'clock two of the new carriages were drawn out from the depôt in Canning-street and placed upon the line. At eleven two horses were yoked to each, and they proceeded on their way well freighted with passengers, gliding along the rails at the rate of about four miles an hour—a rate of speed which might without difficulty be increased to six or seven miles an here—smoothly and uninterruptedly, turning one or two extremely sharp curves with the utmost facility, and landing their passengers at their several destinations in security. They continued throughout the day to ply for hire with a success which must have gladdened the hearts of the proprietors, and their progress was, at different points along the route, watched by some hundreds of spectators.

THE REVIEW OF LANCASHIRE RIFLE VOLUNTEERS IN KNOWSLEY PARK,—THE EARL AND COUNTESS OF DERBY LEAVING KNOWSLEY HALL FOR THE REVIEW.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 237.

To those who witnessed the actual working of the scheme none of its features appeared so prominent as the improvement, so far as increased accommodation is concerned, which it has introduced. Travelling by one of Mr. Train's carriages, as contrasted with one of our ordinary omnibuses, is like quitting a steamer and embarking on a commodious and well-ventilated apartment. On the score of cheapness, it may be added, the new system possesses a decided advantage over that which at present prevails in this country; while, so far as the question of security to passengers is involved, it will be sufficient to state that no fewer than 40,000 of persons who travel by the railways of New York and Brooklyn in 1858 only twelve met with accidents.

At a grand dejeûner which Mr. Train gave in the course of the day he received the congratulations of his friends on the success which had just attended his success to which the indefatigable exertions of Mr. Peniston, the secretary to the undertaking, to no small extent contributed.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Sept. 16.—15th Sunday after Trinity. New Moon, 6h. 5m., a.m.
MONDAY.—Lambeth Fair. Runaway Colt, 1851.
TUESDAY, 18.—Prior died, 1721.
WEDNESDAY, 19.—Battle of Poictiers, 1356.
THURSDAY, 20.—Battle of the Alma, 1854.
FRIDAY, 21.—Matins. Inauguration of the Statue to Sir Isaac Newton
SATURDAY, 22.—Lord Deanman died, 1854. [at Grantham, 1858.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 22, 1860.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
7 29	8 11	8 54	9 37	10 20	11 3	11 47

ROYAL ENGLISH OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, under the Management of Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. W. Harrison, will OPEN for the FIRST SEASON on MONDAY, Oct. 1.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Miss Amy Sedgwick being unable to appear on Monday next, in consequence of an accident, her engagements are postponed until Monday, September 24; therefore, on Monday, September 17, and during the Week, will be performed, positively for the last Six Nights, when it must be withdrawn, the Comedy of OLD HEADS AND YOUNG HEARTS. Doors open at Half-past Seven. To conclude with the FARCE of LOVE, LAW, AND PHYSIC.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—Second week of Mr. Dion Boucicault's new and successful Drama, which will be performed during the Week, at 7.30, by Mr. WEBSTER, MR. AN ACTRESS—Miss Agnes Robertson; and MUSIC HATH CHARMS. Commence at Seven.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Last Nights of MADEMOISELLE ANGOT THE YOUNG BEAUTIFUL. To be succeeded by an incomparable routine of Circus Novelties and Novelties. Commence at Seven.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—FLOWER SHOW.—The GREAT AUTUMNAL SHOW OF DAHLIAS, ASTERS, ROSES, and other Autumn Flowers, Gladiolus, Phlox, &c., &c., and Fruit, will be held on WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY (Children's Day), the 19th and 20th inst. Open at Nine. Admission, Wednesday, 2s. 6d.; Children, One Shilling. Thursday, One Shilling; Children Sixpence. Season Tickets free.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Arrangements for the Week ending on SATURDAY, Sept. 22.—Monday, open as a Display of Fine Fountains and other Works of Water Illustrations. Tuesday, Great Concert of Sacred Music. Wednesday and Thursday, Great Flower and Fruit Show. Admission, Wednesday, Half-a-Crown; Thursday, One Shilling; on Monday, Half-a-Crown; on Saturday, Half-a-Crown. Doors open Daily, Ten to Six. Half-price, Sixpence. Season Tickets available for admission to the Gardens gratuitously by ticket. Half-a-Guinea Season Tickets, available till April 30, 1861, now ready.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—CLARA NOVELLO'S FAREWELL TOUR.—Two Performances, on a large scale, of THE CREATION and MESSIAH will take place in the Crystal Palace, on WEDNESDAY, the 19th inst., and SATURDAY, the 22nd inst., when Madame Clara Novello, the principal performers of the Norwich and Worcester Festivals, the band of the Crystal Palace, and a Chorus of 2,000 Voices, selected from Provincial and Metropolitan Choirs, will sustain the principal parts. Conductor, Mr. Costa. Tickets, 5s. and 2s. 6d. per book.—METROPOLITAN STEAM BLEACHING AND DYEING COMPANY.

THE SISTERS SOPHIE and ANNIE will have the honour of appearing in their new and highly-successful Entertainment, entitled HERR DOCUS, at the Royal Gallery of Illustration, 14, Regent-street, Waterloo-place, on Wednesday, 19, Morning Dresses, 3s. 6d. Curtis.

KINGSTON FRIENDLY SOCIETY HOLDS its CANADA and the UNITED STATES, on the 19th inst. Dinner to be served by Mr. Bellamy, at Two o'clock precisely. Tickets, 5s. each. Steamers will leave Hungerford Bridge, &c., which has already delighted 48,370 persons, on TUESDAY, the 18th inst. Tickets, 1s. each. Steamers will leave at Three and Eight o'clock.

EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, entirely Redecorated.—LE WIS commence on Monday Evening, October 1, 1860. HAMILTON'S EXPEDITIONS TO THE CONTINENT AND BACK IN TWO HOURS, on every Evening, with Views of Paris, Fontainebleau, Versailles, Fontainebleau, Rouen, Boulogne, Amiens, Abbeville, Calais, Dover, Ostend, Brussels, Waterloo, Antwerp, Rotterdam, Cologne, Coblentz, Bingen, Heidelberg, Strasburg, Basle, Berne, Lucerne, Geneva, Chamouni, Mont Blanc, Turin, Milan, Venice, Verona, Mantua, Florence, Rome, Naples, Pompeii, Vesuvius, Genoa, Nice, Marseilles, Lyons, Dijon, Avignon, Arles, Nismes, Pont du Gard, Montpellier, Cette, Toulouse, Carcassonne, Bordeaux, Pau, Biarritz, Bayonne, Madrid, Escurial, Toledo, Seville, Cadiz, Gibraltar, Malaga, Granada, Alhambra, Valencia, Barcelona, Perpignan, Narbonne, Carcassonne, Toulouse, Bordeaux, Tours, Orleans, Fontainebleau, Paris, Boulogne, Folkestone, Canterbury, Rochester, Chatham, Gravesend, Blackwall, Greenwich, Deptford, Woolwich, Erith, Crayford, Dartford, Purfleet, Grays, Tilbury Fort, Gravesend, Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Folkestone, Boulogne, Paris, Fontainebleau, Versailles

Irish Channel attained a speed of four-and-twenty miles an hour. We recommend to their Lordships' notice the eulogies pronounced in France on the last product of the French dockyards. La Gloire is the new class of fregate blindee with which, it is said, Napoleon III. means to supersede the ancien regime of line-of-battle ships altogether. The French press are in raptures about her performances, the weight of her armament, and the invulnerable nature of her armour. Half a dozen such ships are, it seems, to sail fourfamily into Cherbourg and bring the fortifications about our ears. Very pretty bombast, perhaps; but why do we always allow our clever neighbours to get the start of us in our peculiar department? La Gloire is ready to form part of the Emperor's escort to Algeria. The Warrior was announced to be ready for commission at Christmas. The fire at the works will retard her completion is, of course, no fault of "my Lords;" but, had the original compact not been interrupted, we should still have been six months behind our French friends.

THE COURT.

The Court returns from Balmoral to Holyrood this day (Saturday), and on Monday evening the Queen will resume her journey southward, under arrangements which will permit of her Majesty's meeting at Carlisle the Lancashire and Yorkshire Volunteers. The route taken will be over the Deeside Railway from Aboyne to Aberdeen, crossing the Scottish North British line will be traversed to the city of Perth, where the Scottish Central Railway commences, and runs forward to the Larbert junction, at which point the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway is entered upon—this line completing the journey to Waverley-bridge station in the city of Edinburgh. From Waverley the Royal party will travel over the North British Railway to St. Margaret's station, where her Majesty will alight, and proceed in her own carriages to the royal residence of Holyrood, crossing the route will be over the North British Railway from St Margaret's station to Berwick, where the journey will be resumed, and continued thenceforward on to the border city of Carlisle, is entered upon. At Carlisle the London and North Western line commences, and upon it the Queen and party nearly two hundred miles to the Bushbury junction of the West Midland Railway, over which the royal train will go to the city of Worcester, and the Great Western Railway at Wolverhampton, from which place to Basingstoke the narrow gauge of the South Western Railway Company will be used. From Basingstoke to Gosport her Majesty will, as usual, travel over the South-Western Railway.

The incidents of the last few days at Balmoral are thus chronicled by authority:—On Tuesday at night the Queen and the Prince Consort went by the Lee to the foot of the Geldie, and proceeded thence on ponies by Glen Tilnie to Blair-a-gowrie, and crossing by the ferry at the Spittal of Glenshee, where the Royal party passed the night at the hotel. On the following morning the Queen left Castle Grant, and drove to the Strathspey Railway, where they took their places up Glen Avon to Loch Builg, and returned to Balmoral by the usual route.

On Thursday afternoon her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by Princesses Alice, Helena, and Louise, and Princess Mary of Cambridge, drove to Bronnie Castle to witness the Highland games. The Queen was received by the Marquis of Fraphaven, Earl of Seafield, and Strathspey. At the conclusion of the games her Majesty returned to Balmoral. In the evening the choir of Crathie had the honour of performing before the Queen.

On Friday at night her Majesty, accompanied by Princesses Helena and Louise, and Princess Mary, drove to the Invercauld Arms Hotel, and slept there. The Prince Consort went out deer-stalking. Her Majesty grew a bad night's rest.

On Saturday the Queen was joined by Princess Alice, who had been met by Lady Caithness, drove to Aberarder, and then took over Colonakin, and returned to Balmoral. The Invercauld Arms Hotel was crowded with deer-stalking. The Belgian Minister and Madame and Miss Van de Weyer, and Dr. Robertson, had the honour of dining with the Royal party. Sir Charles Wood, secretary of State, arrived at the castle, and succeeded the Duke of Argyll in the office of Privy Seal.

On Sunday her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by Princess Alice, and attended by the gentlemen in waiting, walked to the parish church for service in the parish church of Crathie. The Rev. A. Anderson officiated. There was no addition to the Royal dinner party.

On Monday her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Alice and Prince Arthur, took a drive to the Linn of Quoich, a square of which Princess Alice laid the foundation by a visit at Invercauld. The Prince Consort went out deer-stalking. Colonel Sir John Burgoyne, Bart., Major Teesdale, and Mr. and Mrs. Clark had the honour of joining the Royal dinner party.

ARRANGEMENTS OF THE COURT.

It is the Queen's intention to embark on the afternoon of the 22nd inst. at Gravesend, for Antwerp. Her Majesty and the Prince Consort will be accompanied by Princess Alice, and attended by a limited suite. The Royal party will land in the morning of the 23rd, and proceed at once by Frankfort to Coburg, where they will be met by the Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia and their son Prince Henry.

The Queen's stay at Coburg, which will probably be from ten to fourteen days, will be entirely of a private character, as the object of the visit is the reunion.

On the return to Baghard her Majesty will stop two nights at Osborne with the Prince Regent and Princess of Prussia, and a similar time with the King of the Belgians at Laeken.

Lord John Russell will be in attendance upon her Majesty as Secretary of State.

Their Imperial Highnesses the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, Princess Marie, the Princess Serge and Serge of Romanoffski, and Count Strogonoff, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Leuchtenberg, have left Charlotte's Hotel for Dover, on their way to the Continent. Previously to their departure the Imperial party visited the Crystal Palace, honoured his Excellency the Russian Minister and the Baroness Bromow with their company at dinner.

The Countess de Neuilly (the ex-Queen Marie Amélie of France) and the children of the Duke de Nemours have gone to Admiral Sir Augustus Clifford's seat at Ryde, Isle of Wight, Claremont. A letter says that the Duke de Chartres has joined the ex-Queen.

His Excellency Count Persigny arrived in town on Sunday from Paris.

His Excellency Count d'Apponyi left the Austrian Legation on Sunday for Vienna, via Hungary. The Countess has gone to the Isle of Wight.

His Excellency the Netherlands Minister has left town for the Continent, on leave of absence for some weeks.

Earl Granville, Lord President of the Council, left Paris on the 6th inst. for Calais, by route Earl was accompanied by Lord Frederick Cavendish, second son of the Duke of Devonshire.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston left town on Saturday for Broadlands, Hants.

Lord and Lady Aveland and the Hon. Misses Heathcote have arrived at Normanton Park for the season.

A PICTURE OF VENICE.—A city of marble, did I say ?—nay, rather a golden city paved with emeralds. For truly every pinnacle and turret glanced and gleamed overhead with gold, or bossed with jasper, while the tinselled sea drew in deep breathing, to and fro, its edges of green wave, barred with white foam. Verily as he lay at the bottom of the sea, even the most of power and war; pure as her pillars of alabaster stood her mothers and brethren; from foot to brow all noble, exalted in heart, and fair in form, the glassship of sea-stained armour shot angrily under their blood-red mantle-folds. Fearless, faithful, impenetrable—unsurpassable—the princes of the thrones of her throne. In hope and honour, lulled by flowing of wave around their isles and the sound, and the gentle motion of their ripples made of majestic change, as by her side. A wonderful piece of world. Rather itself a world. It lay rising like a great mist, or cloud, out of the sea, and was first seen from where it must have, inland or later, appeared to me as a long, low, blue mountain, with a few trees standing dark upon it, and a group of towers and pinnacles, whose extent edge widened through either. A world from which all ignoble thought, petty thoughts were banished, with all the mere common and poor elements of life. No business, no turmoil, in those tremulous streets, that filled, or fell, beneath the moon's rippled mesh of majestic change, as fluttering silence. No weak walls could rise above them; no low-roofed cottage, nor straw-built shed. Only the strength of the rock-pillars and the clearness of stones most precious. And around them, far as the eye could reach, still the soft moving of stainless waters, proudly pure; as not the flower, no matter the form nor the thistle, could grow in the glancing fields. Internal strength of Alps, dreamlike, vanishing in high procession beyond the Venetian shore; blue lines of gradual hills, poised in the golden west. Above few winds and fiery clouds ranging at their will; brightness out of the north, and calm from the south, and the stars of the evening and the morning close in its limitless light of arched heaven and circling sea.—Ruskin's "Modern Painters," vol. v.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The customary half-yearly muster of the brigade of Guards is appointed for the 5th of November.

The Dundee Courier is informed that the Government are in treaty with Lord Panmure for a site for a permanent encampment at Monikie.

The Shipping Gazette states that a proclamation will shortly be issued announcing the eligibility of officers of the steamtle marine for honorary rank in the Royal Naval Reserve.

A 40-pounder Armstrong gun, accompanied with a new description of sweet carriage, has been received at Portsmouth, and mounted on experimental platform on board the Hercules gun-boat, lately in the Gosport gunnery ship at the port.

Colonel Lord Elphinstone, C.B., late of the 2nd Dragoons, died a few days since at Stratgefford House, in the county of Down, Ireland, in the 61st year of his age. His lordship commanded the cavalry at the battle of Waterloo, and was present with his regiment at most of the engagements of the Peninsular campaign.

The 16th Regiment, Colonel G. J. Peacock, consisting of fifty officers and noncommissioned officers, and 805 privates, and the 2nd battalion of the Rifle Brigade, Colonel Augustus Cornelius Leith, consisting of fifty officers and six companies of the latter corps have left for garrison duty at Deal and Walmer.

A general regimental order has been issued abrogating the conditions previously made to the effect that the Royal Horse Artillery and the Royal Regiment of Royal Artillery, and authorising the Paymaster of each brigade of Royal Artillery to receive cash, who are to receive 6d. per day in addition to their usual pay.

The Hon. James Lyon Browne, late Lieutenant-Colonel of the 21st Regiment, died on Wednesday, at Harrogate, in his thirty-eighth year. The gallant deceased was the eldest son of Lord Kilmaine. His commissions bear date as follows:—Ensign, 1839; Lieutenant, 1841; Lieutenant, Nov. 8, 1844; Captain, Dec. 22, 1848; Major, Dec. 29, 1854; and Lieutenant-Colonel, August 24, 1855.

We understand (says the Army and Navy Gazette) that the commission appointed to inquire into the conduct of the late campaign have recommended that each portion should be allotted to the particular force which was present during the operations. The Queen's Indian medal will be divided among those engaged in the siege and capture of that city, the Punjaub medal among those under Sir Colin Campbell, and the Persian medal to those who were present with Sir James Outram. The Commission has yet been received respecting the largest prize of all, that belonging to the brave and devoted army of Lucknow, but we have much reason to suppose that Sir Hugh Rose's army, who shared largely in those operations, will receive the lion's share of the prize money. Should the amount be pressed on opinion that the subalterns' share should be increased, seeing that in the Commander-in-Chief's army the subalterns' share was only one-fifth hitherto perceived. We may add that Lord Clyde and his Staff will not participate in the prize money, as they receive honorary rewards for services in different prizes for general distribution has been stipulated by the Commission.

A Parliamentary paper just issued enables us to form some idea of the number of troops which will be required to be sent from time to time to the European force in India over the Indian Government. Altogether 10,233 men were despatched to India during the year 1859, and 10,000 will be sent to the East India Company. 119 of those re-enlisted on the spot for service in India; the remainder will be required to be sent out from time to time. This sum does not include the expense incurred during the months from the different stations to the port of embarkation, and the cost of the recruiting establishment. This is the item is estimated at £50,000, and it is calculated that the cost of the 10,000 men will be £1,000,000, and the total cost will be £1,050,000. The fresh bounty demanded by the men would have amounted to about £50,000.

The buildings which have been in progress for some time past at Shoeburyness, for the purpose of testing the strength of the iron plates used on the Thames, and at the same time to be used in the trials of the various experiments proposed to be made with Armstrong guns, are completed, and have been at length completed by Messrs. Kirk and Parr, the Government contractors at Woolwich. The buildings consist of a strong brick wall, the walls, formed of granite, being eight feet in thickness, walls to give increased resistance to the shot, and to ensure, in case of a breach being effected, these walls are again faced with wrought iron ten inches in thickness. Between the walls and the iron plates is placed a mass of solid concrete two guns, and, as a series of important experiments will shortly be commenced with the Government guns, a number of the Armstrong guns, and the embrasures are so constructed that the guns may be fired during the experiments either singly or in broadside. The whole of the works are so arranged that should the newly-constructed fort be found to answer the expectations expressed by Government, the whole of the experiments, with the exception of the guns, will be erected in the neighbourhood of the dockyards at Portsmouth, Chatham, and Pembroke, for the protection of those ports.

THE BRITISH ARMY.—The following statement of the establishments of the British Army, Regular and Militia, and the number actually set to understanding at the present time:—Royal Horse Artillery, 2272; three regiments of Life Guards, 1,500; Royal Horse Guards, 1,000; Royal Artillery, 20,659; Coast Brigade, 965; Royal Engineers, 2,897; Military Train, 1,965; Foot Guards (two battalions of 4th regiment), 1,000; Line, 91,000; Army List, 149; Army Hospital Corps, 661; Commissariat Staff Corps, 284; Welsh Militia Regiment, 600; Militia Artillery, 4,000; Militia, 120,000. The forces there are in India and China:—Horse Artillery, 941; Cavalry of the Line, 5,000; Royal Artillery, 6,000; Engineers, 1,000; Line, 57,000; Indian Staff Corps, 57; Total, 80,256. There are three regiments of negroes in the West Indies, numbering 2,000; Malta, 2,000; Ionian Islands, 2,000; Canada, 2,000. The Gold Coast Corps consists of negroes, and numbers 312. The force at home consists of Cavalry of the Household Brigade, 1,500; Cavalry (regiments of Dragoon Guards and Dragoons, 10,135; Military Train, 1666—in all 11,791. Infantry—Foot Guards (three battalions of 4th each, 3,000; Infantry of the Line (regiments of 800 each, 21,200; Coast Brigade, 965; total to these Artillery and Engineers (per last estimate strength of the regiments), 20,659; total, 51,000, will we have a total at home of 51,566, irrespective of depôts. It must be borne in mind, however, that the above is the strength of every regiment. Scotland, Aldersey, Jersey, Guernsey, and Wales shooting a large proportion.

REVIEW OF THE CHANNEL FLEET.—The Lords of the Admiralty on board the Victoria and Albert yacht reviewed the Channel Fleet off Milford Haven. There were present the Royal Albert, Edgar, Immortalité, Mars, Trafalgar, Hogue, Ariadne, Cressy, Conqueror, Hero, and Sealark. The manœuvre, forming in double line, was executed with great precision. The ships were then ordered to prepare for anchoring for the fleet to make sail under easy canvas, after which the order was given for them to anchor in the bay. The weather throughout the forenoon portion of the day was then made by the whole getting under orders to make all sail and to form in line ahead. Less than three hours were taken. Order was also given to make for the nearest port, on which the fleet bore up for Milford Haven, and in the afternoon anchored in the bay. The fleet presented an extensive exhibition not only as the appearance of it is at best, but also of the rapidity and precision with which the various evolutions were performed. The whole of the Channel Fleet left Milford Haven on Tuesday, the 11th inst., for a prolonged cruise.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

The Secretary for War has issued a circular to the Lords-Lieutenant of Middlesex—and no doubt a similar communication has been made to her Majesty's representatives in the other counties of Great Britain—to adopt measures for arranging the Volunteer Review in the autumn of the present year.

The members of the 3rd (Tenterden) Kent Rifle Corps have commenced ball practice. On the 28th inst. they assembled at Hurstmonceaux, and fired at a target some rifle by Mrs. Wright, of Lansdowne, which is to be competed for.

A handsome silver cup, presented by the officers of the Volunteer corps, have signified their intention to be present at the great volunteer review on Dundee moor on the 19th inst., and that the total number expected to be present is about 5000.

A meeting of influential residents has been held at Horsemonden, Kent, for the purpose of forming a volunteer rifle corps for that parish. A number of subscriptions were announced, and a committee was made to collect others.

The successful little corps, the 1st Surrey Juvenile Rifles, which has enrolled upwards of 200 boys, are to have a review and inspection on Monday.

The great Cheshire rifle prize meeting is advertised to be held on the 19th and 20th inst., at Broxton-common.

Viscount Bridport inspected a second portion of the Woolwich Volunteers last Wednesday, the 5th inst. His Lordship addressed the men in satisfactory terms on their general appearance.

The provisional committee of the proposed Wiltshire Rifle Association proposes to institute an annual shooting-match, to be held, if practicable, at the same quarter of the year as the meeting at Wimbledon.

In Suffolk the number of companies is gradually increasing.

The Volunteer movement continues to progress in Essex. A proposal has been made for the formation of a second company at Colchester. There will soon be a sufficient number to constitute a battalion.

The 3rd Durham (Gateshead) Artillery Volunteers are now making steady and satisfactory progress in their drill.

Steps have been taken for the formation of a rifle corps in the district of Queenshead, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

The establishment of the 19th Surrey (Camberwell) Rifles, about 450, commanded by Major Hoopell, accompanied by their own band and the drum and fife band of the Scots Fusilier Guards, marched to Streatham Common last Saturday afternoon, where they went through various manœuvres and fired several volleys.

The "Newton Review" rifle contest is to be held at Southport on the 25th, 26th, 27th, and 28th instant. There have been some additions to the already excellent list of prizes. Mr. Robert Barnes, not satisfied with his liberal gift of £50 as a prize to be shot for by the volunteers of the Manchester, Salford, and Ashton-under-Lyne districts, has added thereto £20 for a second and £10 for a third prize. Mr. Joseph Whitworth gives one of his £25 rifles to be shot for by "all comers." The range is to be 500 yards; any description of rifle may be used, and any position adopted. Seventy will be received after the 18th.

The members of the Colchester Corps of Rifle Volunteers assembled on Thursday week for drill and to show their skill as marksmen. Lady Georgiana Gilstrap made the offer of a silver cup as a prize. Mr. Taylor won the prize, which was presented by the lady donor.

A case of interest to volunteers was decided by the Woolwich police magistrate on Tuesday. A member of the Royal Arsenal Volunteer Corps was summoned by Captain Boxall, R.A., for absence from the 8 o'clock parade of active service, which he had refused to pay. The defaulter had been employed in the Arsenal, but was not so employed at the time. He had not resigned, but the latter was spoiled by being perforated by bayonet thrusts, and he still belonged to the corps, and, however, he was not bound to attend the parade. He had, because to belong to the regiment, the remedy against him would have been by Courts Martial, under the 57th sec. of the Volunteer Act. The penalty in doubt the amount of the crown due.

The arrangements for the review of the several volunteer corps in the county of York have at last been completed, and it is fixed to take place on Thursday next, the 20th inst., at York. In the 1st Division it was originally proposed to review the West Riding volunteers on the occasion, but consultations have since taken place, and it has been decided that the West Riding, and the north of England generally, was not to be deprived of the whole of the county. The several corps will assemble in the morning, and a sham fight will be gone through, after which they will be present.

An interesting scene was witnessed last week at the shooting-hall of Hoffman House, where the Westminster Rifle Volunteers were regaled by their Captain, Frederick Saunders, Esq. After dinner the usual toasts were given, and the evening was spent in singing by a glee party.

Mr. G. W. Martin is organising a choir of several hundred volunteers for the purpose of performing the national anthem at the Crystal Palace on the 29th inst.

On Monday, by the invitation of Hugh Taylor, Esq., M.P., the 1st Northumberland Volunteers assembled for a grand demonstration in the grounds of Backworth Hall, Earsdon, where a review was held on the following day, and numerous visitors from a distance did honour to the occasion. The corps was reviewed by Captain Hall, R.N., C.B., of the Coast Guard, and as the evolutions the gallant volunteers were regaled by their generous host with right royal fare and hospitality.

A volunteer fête on a most extensive scale, in aid of the funds of the 26th Rifle Volunteers, took place in the park of the Right Hon. Joseph Wilson, Bart., at Old Charlton. The amusements were carried out in a most satisfactory manner, and the day was enlivened by the presence of the whole of the Royal Artillery band, two volunteer bands, and the Woolwich Campanalogian band. The amusements were of a varied character, and kept up a great excitement. The first contest in connection with the Southport Volunteer Rifle Association commenced on Tuesday, on the extensive ground of the Southport Corps, Bangs, 400 yards. The first prize (£15) was won by Lieutenant Wood, and the second (£10) by Lieutenant Hamilton, of the 1st Lancashire. The third (£5) was won by Sergeant-Major Greaves, and the second (£5) by Ensign Parker, the fourth (£3) by Lieutenant Hamilton, and the fifth (£2) by Private Pate (a Whitworth rifle) was won by Ensign Radcliffe (2nd Blackburn), the second Lancashire Rifles, at 500 yards, Bangs 100 yards. The first prize (£5 5s.) was won by Adjutant Hanlon, the second prize (£2 2s.) by Captain Sergeant.

PRESENTATION OF SILVER BUGLES, COLOURS, ETC.—On Thursday week the members of the 1st Surrey Rifles presented with a set of very silver bugles, valued at forty guineas, by the lady of the Hon. and Rev. Richard Cavendish Lygon, Vicar of Lambeth. The presentation took place in Saturday-hall, Mr. Kirwood presented, on behalf of the sisters of the officers, a very large and handsome regimental silk colour and Rifle Volunteer motto. On the same day the officers and members of the fifth company of the 2nd Regiment of Middlesex Rifle Volunteers were treated to a dinner at the Bricklayers' Arms, Greenwood, and partook of an excellent dinner, given by Captain Hadfield. After the dinner Captain Hadfield presented the corps with a handsome bugle. Lieutenant Reid, on behalf of the company, then presented to Colour-Sergeant Burbridge a handsome gold watch and chain. Lieutenant Reid, who acted as chairman, in the course of the evening, and in addition to the officers of the company, and a number of ladies and gentlemen, were present on the occasion.

—It is proposed to present a handsome testimonial of respect to the Ivory Volunteer Corps, to hold a review on a small scale on Radcliffe Race-course. Invitations will, it is stated, be sent to all the corps of the neighbouring town.

Unusually high tides may be expected on Saturday (to-day) and Sunday next, the sun and moon being both very near the equator, and the moon in perigee.

A circular from the Home Office to the police throughout the country notifies that in future all persons finding gold, silver, or copper coins, ornaments, or articles of the value of 10l. and upwards, will be liable on delivering them up to the Government. Where persons refuse or neglect to deliver them up, they will be liable to summary conviction before a justice for such refusal or neglect, and information forwarded to him.

DISAFFECTION AMONG THE SEEKS IN ABYSSINIA.—Some remarkable facts respecting the disparity of sexes in this colony are disclosed in the Census of 1859. Sir Henry Barkly, the Governor, in noticing those facts, says it is despatch—"that they have been most carefully compiled, considering in this respect took place between 1854 and 1857, yet that the effective disproportion of the sexes is even more than twice as great as it then appeared, the fact of there being 163 males to every 100 females in the entire population of the colony, and 180 to every 100 females in the adult population, is more than 31 per cent. Such numerical preponderance of the male sex being not only without parallel in the case of any country of twenty years of age and upwards, but of all countries in which statistics have been collected. Even the average of marriage for men to twenty-one, and lower to fifteen for females, there was nearly one male to every female above the age of fifteen. Even this comparison, however, fails to convey a full sense of the evil as to affect the great mid-fields, when the proportion of males is considered men to, to that to be found in the nearer towns, as 61 to 39 or, to state the case in another form, there were to be found in the country districts upwards of more than 29 to 1. There are, moreover, 8000 married men chiefly in the leading districts of the colony, and only 5000 wives. This is a large disparity, during the agitation of the land question, that this state of things is artificial, unable to be effectually remedied by ordinary legislative or executive purposes for the miner's right itself sanctions a certain area for residence) it is not this view to be seen that the Government which manifests a testamentary disposition on the part of the gold-diggers, despite the unsettled natures of their pursuits, to encourage the immigration of females, by the fact that only nine per cent of the women on the gold-fields above twenty are unmarried while in Cape Town the proportion who under this head was as nearly two-and-a-half per cent, thirty per cent of the girls between fifteen and twenty are unmarried.

AN INDIAN VILLAGE.—I had really driven out some twelve miles on a hot day to see an Indian village absent as characteristic of the Hurons as those of the Iroquois. Unfortunately, the most characteristic feature of the chief's daughter was then being celebrated at his house, and kindly offered to receive me there. I found the usual something of the English parsonage, and one in which I should as soon have thought of intending as in any private residence in Canada, and the chief himself a most excellent French tv enter. The chief who welcomed me was dressed in a plain substantial suit of black cloth, and the only Indian ornament I observed was the ring on a mark of his dignity, he wore something like a beech-bowl tomtrunk on his head. Encouraged by the genuine hospitality of the reception, I asked to be found hope that at the marriage of the chief's daughter I must see something characteristic of the Indian manners. I was told that there would be much music, wives, daughters, and "young men of the tribe," were engaged in practising. This was enough for me. I had seen quite enough of savage life. A morning's be set apart at Montreal for the exhibition of Indian games before the Prince. I shouldn't be in the least surprised now if I find that these Indian games consist of cricket, cows, or athletics. Perhaps his Royal Highness had heard what these "Indians" were really like; perhaps, he was too much tortured after the ball of the previous night; at all events, he did not visit the "Hurons;" a matter of small importance, as I was informed that many of the gentlemen whom I saw in evening dress at the levée were clad in all the tribes.—Letter from Quebec to The Times.

THE REVIEW OF LANCASHIRE RIFLE VOLUNTEERS IN KNOWSLEY PARK.—FROM A DRAWING BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE SUPPLEMENT PAGE 237.

GAETA.

GARIBALDI enters Naples and the King withdraws to Gaeta. Such is the present aspect of affairs in Southern Italy. The young King, yielding to the advice of his most prudent friends, has retired to Gaeta, where he will add to the advantage of a Royal residence, and of a strong military position, that of remaining master of a part of his States, and approaching nearer to the only ally he has preserved—the Pope—whose Government has at its disposal 25,000 men, pretty well organised, it is said, by General Lamoricière.

Gaeta, a fortified town of 14,000 inhabitants, including its three suburbs, is situated in the Terra di Lavoro, of which the administrative capital is Caserta, between Capua and Naples. It consists of irregular works, rising in terraces one above the other, on a rocky headland of the Mediterranean coast. On the land side the narrow approach is closed by strong batteries; a fort commands the harbour, and at the extremity of this point there is the old tower called Rolando's. Gaeta was besieged in 1800 by the French, and in 1815 by the Austrians. Very strong by nature, this position is rendered yet stronger by the configuration of the surrounding locality. For any one master of Gaeta, and having a sufficient number of troops at his disposal, it is easy to defend San Germano on the north-east and Capua on the south-east, and these three points form a triangular district, in which the last efforts of the Bourbon monarchy will possibly be concentrated. San Germano and Capua are both situated about ten leagues from Gaeta; San Germano, on the Fiume-Rapido, is at the foot of Mount Cassino, the summit of which is crowned by the ancient and vast abbey of the same name. This position may be used as a military retreat, and can easily be defended. Capua, on the Volturno, possesses an arsenal, a military hospital, and 8000 inhabitants. The Volturno is crossed there by means of a stone bridge, and on the right bank of the river there is a strong tête-de-pont. A strong casemate has been constructed to the east of the town. Capua lies, as is well known, halfway between Naples and Gaeta. It is from that point that the King will reach his last asylum. Doubtless he would leave behind him, at this intermediate station, a sufficient number of troops to defend it, if the war now being waged by him were a regular war; but he is rather a spectator than an actor in the scene. The situation of the King is controlled by unexpected events; and, if he merely intends waiting for events, he will perhaps do nothing more than concentrate his forces in Gaeta. This we shall soon learn by news from the Two Sicilies.

THE TOWN AND CASTLE OF GAETA.—FROM A DRAWING BY S. READ.—SEE PENULTIMATE PAGE.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS AT QUEBEC.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

QUEBEC, August 25.

We are making history in Canada, and it is the business of the great journals of the world to record it. Many of your large houses, as the colonists into the same enthusiasm as the colonists into the report of the Royal celebration. They may fail to see the full force and beauty of many of our municipal addresses and speeches, and they may be partially indifferent to features of some of our most brilliant local displays; but the intelligent Englishman cannot be uninterested spectators of an event which proclaims to the world the sympathies of the four millions of people who inhabit British power and maintain a British system of government over half the continent of North America—a large proportion of these four millions being neither Englishmen by birth nor education, yet clinging to the British throne with an attachment which might put even your home loyalty to the touch.

What we have done so far with the Prince may be briefly summarized. In the beautiful Bay of Gaspé, which lies on the south shore of the Gulf, decorated and surrounded by highland crowds are covered with the primitive forests. The Prince was tendered on board his own vessel, the Hero, a formal welcome to the province by the Governor-General, who, with his Ministers in their official costume, having done proper obeisance, subsequently had the honour of shaking hands with the Prince and his suite. Our local reporters, poring, as they generally do, American fashion, into every corner, hovering about in search of an item, have, I am sorry to say, to complain about this remarkable event in Canadian ministerial history. Eleven of our chief political notabilities, however, were there. How they looked at the Royal table—how they felt in their novel uniform—how they acted and spoke—it is out of our province to record. Let us tell you, however, they include amongst them men who would, intellectually, do no discredit to any position which Royalty might assign to them. Attorney-General Cartier, for instance, is most unmistakably the direct descendant of Jacques Cartier, and, no doubt, can by this time play the cavalier.

The next morning found us at Pictou, in Nova Scotia. For a hundred miles along the north shore of the river the scenery is wild and mountainous, and you approach the mouth of the Saguenay with sentiments of romance, and you have the first of that incomparable street which extends over three hundred miles along both banks of the St. Lawrence, and is hardly a principle house in which, from Cape Rosier to Montreal, you find two parallel rows of white Percoh Canadian cottages, each one with a narrow strip of garden in front, and from ten miles to the wilderness in the background, and, as it chances you with its picturesqueness, reminds you that here is the true home of the old French régime, regulating the equal subdivision of property among children.

Why the Prince was dragged away from the contemplation of this river view and from the sight of civilisation to go up the Saguenay I cannot pretend to explain. His Royal Highness was tired, and was before encountering the hospitalities of Quebec. There are one or two points of the Saguenay scenery worth seeing. Cape Trinity and Eternity present two bold fronts, rising perpendicularly 1,500 feet, and from both rolls a river which at this point boasts a depth of 600 fathoms. Each spike of rock is surmounted with the relics of a cross, as when under the directions of an experienced Canadian, to attract a salmon to his favourite pool. They should have erected something to gratify the trip. But it may be here stated that the scenery, as a whole, is overrated, and travellers need not rush in crowds from England merely to go up the mouth of the Saguenay to see these two points.

The arrival at Quebec was rendered dingy and uncomfortable by an easterly storm of rain, and Quebec is the last place where any such drawback is to be permitted. Its site is perfect, and all the measures they can get if they are to make a decent appearance. And when the Prince, having manfully stood the Corporation address at the Landing Wharf, was driven through the narrow, muddy streets, with only the frowning rock, it needed, I must say, all the drapery, the extemporised decorations, and the gay flags and the gay colours of the national societies to make the exhibition at all cheering. How even the people were there in crowds, and the rain had not damped their loyalty. They pushed, literally pushed, the police on each side of the procession, extending over two miles to the extreme western limits of the city, and the Prince had to acknowledge the cheers of the party for the day; and, if you ask the reason why, I cannot say. The Governor-General's Ministry are not stinted from similar feeling here. It is a small but respectable country house, the property of a retired merchant of Quebec. No doubt it was good enough for the Prince's accommodation, but in the first place, the people should have had a palace within the walls expressly for the Royal visitor and suite; and, in the next place, everybody should be as much out of the streets as they can get if they are to make a decent appearance. And when the Prince, having manfully stood the Corporation address at the Landing Wharf, was driven through the narrow, muddy streets, with only the frowning rock, it needed, I must say, all the drapery, the extemporised decorations, and the gay flags and the gay colours of the national societies to make the exhibition at all cheering. How even the people were there in crowds, and the rain had not damped their loyalty. They pushed, literally pushed the police on each side of the procession, extending over two miles to the extreme western limits of the city, and the Prince had to acknowledge the cheers of the party for the day; and, if you ask the reason why, I cannot say. The Governor-General's Ministry are not stinted from similar feeling here. It is a small but respectable country house, the property of a retired merchant of Quebec. No doubt it was good enough for the Prince's accommodation, but in the first place, the people should have had a palace within the walls expressly for the Royal visitor and suite; and, in the next place, everybody should be as much out of the streets as they can get if they are to make a decent appearance. And when the Prince, having manfully stood the Corporation address at the Landing Wharf, was driven through the narrow, muddy streets, with only the frowning rock, it needed, I must say, all the drapery, the extemporised decorations, and the gay flags and the gay colours of the national societies to make the exhibition at all cheering. How even the people were there in crowds, and the rain had not damped their loyalty. They pushed, literally pushed the police on each side of the procession, extending over two miles to the extreme western limits of the city, and the Prince had to acknowledge the cheers of the party for the day; and, if you ask the reason why, I cannot say. The Governor-General's Ministry are not stinted from similar feeling here. It is a small but respectable country house, the property of a retired merchant of Quebec. No doubt it was good enough for the Prince's accommodation, but in the first place, the people should have had a palace within the walls expressly for the Royal visitor and suite; and, in the next place, everybody should be as much out of the streets as possible; and, naturally, the Governor's arrangement was unpopular. I am not going to enter into the merits of the case. Royal State reasons for the course pursued. These reasons the people are ignorant of, and therefore, in the first of their loyalty, they complain. Then the afternoon and night, Sunday and Monday were all spent in this exclusive manner, whereby three days were shorn from the public out of this day's visit to the city for Quebec. The 18th was the day of arrival; on the 23rd the Royal party took their departure for Montreal. In the meantime we had one grand State ball on Wednesday evening, the 22nd, when the province assembled to greet the Prince fifty members of the Legislative Council and one hundred and fifty members of the Legislative Assembly from all parts of the province. From these addresses were received in the Parliament Building, and to these gentlemen was reserved the honour of knighthood. Then followed the grand levée, where upwards of a thousand citizens were presented. Later in the day came a State luncheon, at which the members of Parliament were entertained. In the evening there followed the grand ball—a citizens affair—rather well arranged for the public. Your readers are aware of the Prince's fondness for dancing, and from what I have seen I can hardly suppose any of the Queen's balls were more exaggerated in point of pleasure and lovely partners for one evening! Think of four four a.m. as an hour for departure! Still it pleases our people immensely, and therefore it must be right. Every one is anxious to have the Royal visitor's affability, and hundreds of stories pass from mouth to mouth, the repetition of which would hardly be suitable in a public journal.

The great feature of the second public ceremony here was the visit to Laval University, an institution holding a Royal charter for nearly fifty years, presided over by the Roman Catholic authorities, but open to all the Queen's subjects. Here the whole of the Roman Catholic Bishops (the Archbishop being absent in the district of Upper and Lower Canada) had assembled, gorgeously attired in their purple robes, to offer a loyal address, which was read in French and English. Following this came an address from the University. Both were couched in terms of strong devotion. The Prince's reply was given to both at once, and read only in English. After this the Prince, with the Duke of Leuxine Nova, and received a beautiful address, which was read by one of the lady professors, and was suitably replied to. The departure for Montreal took place early on Thursday, the 23rd. There was a grand display, as at the reception. But the feeling was general that we had barely seen enough of the Royal visitor.

THE PRINCE AT MONTREAL.

The Prince, as already noticed, landed at Montreal on Saturday morning, the 25th ultimo, and was received with the most enthusiastic demonstrations of loyalty by about 100,000 persons. On occasion was probably the most striking ever witnessed in Canada. The streets were beautifully decorated, and the procession which accompanied his Royal Highness from the wharf after the presentation of an address from the Mayor embodied all the civic societies, the clergy, the fire brigade, the regular military, and the volunteers, not only of the city, but of distant places. One military company from Boston took part, in the procession. The procession proceeded immediately to the Crystal Palace, which was formally opened by the Prince; after which he rode in an open car to the Victoria Bridge, which he completed by laying the cornerstone. The New York Herald's correspondent says—"The approach to the bridge was lined with seats, to which persons were admitted only by ticket. Inside the allotment were seats for the higher classes, covered with red cloth, while the gallery above was reserved for the families of the legislators. A scaffold was erected for the Prince near the corner-stone, which was slightly raised, together with an apparatus for lowering the stone. Two rows of invited guests came first. The Prince and suite having ascended the platform, the builder of the bridge handed him a silver trowel, the handle of which represented a Canadian beaver, and which was connected with the stone by a golden chain. Underneath. On one side of the stone is an inscription commemorative of the completion of the Victoria Bridge by the Prince; on the reverse a representation of the bridge. 'An Englishman' is the inscription given in this portion of the Irish Oil. The mortar having been placed under the stone by the masons, the Prince was then requested to apply the trowel to the mortar on the stone in fine style. The stone was then slowly lowered, and the Prince gave it three taps with the trowel. The ceremony being completed, cheers and salutes thundered out upon the air. The Prince then entered the car, proceeded to the centre arch of the bridge, and there rose and took them position on the St. Lambert's, returning in time for the dejeuner. The dejeuner was in the Victoria Tubular Bridge, and was attended by about 1,000. A thousand people were feasted. The Prince occupied a seat at a raised table, with the Duke of Newcastle, Governor-General Sir Edmund Head—"The Queen," "The Prince Consort, and "The Prince of Wales," all of which were received with immense cheering. The Prince then proposed "Canada," which was in a most felicitous manner—"The Governor-General of Canada,' and "The Prosperity of the Grand Trunk Railway." The toasts were received with enthusiastic cheering, during which the Prince bowed. On retiring, the Prince walked about inspecting the works, guarded by his suite. Soon afterwards he entered the carriage in waiting to his quarters."

On Sunday, the 26th, the Prince attended Divine service at the English Cathedral, proceeding there on foot to which the city, so that an unseemly crowd was avoided.

On Monday the Prince visited a variety of Indian gauns on the cricket-ground, and was much amused. There were several thousands of spectators, including the Boston Foxliers, whose band played "God save the Queen," later on in the afternoon. The Prince and Apollo (the men conversing). Later in the day the Prince held a levée, which was very numerously attended, and at which many presentations were made. Included in the presentations were thirty-nine Americans. During the day arrangements were concluded with the New York committee, who presented the following address :—

"To his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales:—May it please your Royal Highness to accept from the citizens of New York, who have ventured to request your acceptance of a hall upon the occasion of your visit to our city, a memorial of their loyal and respectful regard. We feel that we can only depend and mutual admiration for throughout our land for the public and private relations of the United States, and we trust that your Royal Highness will yourself as the heir to the throne of a great country, united to our own by so many ties of kindred, institutions, language, commerce, and religion and principle, you will accept the invitation which we respectfully tender to you."

The invitation was accepted, and the ball was fixed for October 12. The ball at Montreal was given on the 27th, and was a very splendid affair. It was held in a building erected for the special purpose, and was attended by the Governor-General, the Prince of Canada, Lord Elgin, the Duke of Newcastle, Lord Lyons, the Earl of Mulgrave, the Earl of St. Germans, Lady Franklin, Sir Fenwick Williams, the Marquis and Marchioness of Normanby, Lord Alfred Paget, and Lord Burghley. The ball opened the ball with Mrs. John Young. He danced very dance but one—Perpendicular—and was loudly applauded for his skill in the dance. The supper-tables were supplied with fountains of champagne and claret, and the ball broke up at daybreak.

On Tuesday, the 28th, the Prince and suite proceeded by train to Dickson's Landing, up the St. Lawrence, returning by boat, running in the night, and reaching Montreal in time for the ball given in the evening. The musical festival given in his honour was a great success. One hundred and fifty performers took part in it, and all the musical persons were in attendance, and the performance lasted five hours. The Prince was greeted with great enthusiasm. Lady Franklin was present.

On the 29th his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales reviewed the troops in garrison at Montreal, and left for Ottawa.

On the 30th the Prince paid a visit to St. Hyacinth, Sherbrooke, and other places, and in the evening returned to Montreal, and left Montreal in the evening. At Sherbrooke he created the greatest enthusiasm among the people by remitting the sentence of a naval court-martial on a midshipman, which he had come to Canada for the purpose of restoring him to his former rank of signal midshipman, which he held on board Her Majesty's ship Hero, in which the Prince came out.

The New York Herald has the following editorial remarks:—"The Canadian reception given to the Prince of Wales has been on the whole a thorough exhibition to the silly stories started some time since that the French Canadians entertained no feeling of loyalty to the heir of England's throne. The enthusiasm with which the Prince of Wales has received a right Royal welcome, and the event has demonstrated the fervent loyalty of the people of Canada. The impression which will follow him when he departs from Canada. His speech to the workmen of the Grand Trunk Railroad must contribute to brighten his popularity, and the manner in which he has received the Duke of Newcastle ring in it of the sentiments upon which the progress of the age is founded. Canada, in the enjoyment of the visit of the Prince of Wales, opens to all the same prospect of success to genius combined with honesty of purpose. The Prince, in his visit to Canada, will have the pleasure of the enjoyment of the social pleasures of all classes alike, Albert Edward will carry back from this country a feeling of personal respect and regard for the people of Canada which will be lasting, and which will tend to draw still closer the fraternal bonds between the two nations."

THE PRINCE AT OTTAWA.

On the 31st the Prince left Ottawa. The passage up the Ottawa River is reported to have been very pleasant, in spite of occasional showers. Every village along the banks of the river was decorated, and the Prince was received with enthusiasm at each place of honour. At the mouth of Gatineau River, two miles below the city of Ottawa, his Royal Highness left the boat as was received by troops with flags and banners, and crowded with passengers. He was also met by the novel sight of a flotilla of 150 bark canoes, manned by 1200 Indian braves, who crossed up in front, and escorted him to the city as an aquatic procession. Two thousand persons were assembled at the landing-place, and the Prince, on his appearance, was enthusiastically became wonderful. The Mayor presented an address; but a sudden shower coming on, the Prince retired to the Mayor's house. The Prince entered the town in a close carriage, escorted by volunteer cavalry; the streets were decorated and beautiful arches erected. On the 1st instant his Royal Highness laid the corner-stone of the Parliament Building at Ottawa. The weather was fine, and immense crowds were present.

The programme of the Prince's movements has been changed so following:—Leaves Ottawa for Kingston on Tuesday, the 4th of September, the Prince will leave that evening for Chicago, remaining there one day, thence, by way of the great prairies, to St. Louis and Cincinnati. Thence to Niagara Falls, where he arrives on the 10th, and a half at Baltimore, a day in Philadelphia, and three or four days in New York. Thence to Boston, where he is placed to a proposed visit, and thence to Portland, from which port he will take his farewell of the United States. The fleet will not go to New York, but will rendezvous at Portland.

THE HEART OF MIDLOTHIAN.—On Wednesday week the keystone which had marked the site of the old market cross at the north upwards of a century ago, was deposited to mark the site of "the Old Tolbooth." The stone is chosen by Sir Walter Scott as the "Heart of Midlothian." A glass jar, containing a set of Nelson's tinted views of modern Edinburgh, the newspapers, and coins of the day, was placed in a perpendicular cavity in the stone by Mr. James Sinclair, Albany Herald, in the presence of several old residents and municipal gentlemen. Mr. Sinclair briefly explained the nature of the document and deposit on the property, and said that the cavity was not to be opened for a century, but was bequeathing to the other cities and, of social-wild celebrity. These places were then given as the stone was lowered to its resting-place. Mr. Murray (of Messrs. Dalyniple and Forrest's) has preserved since the time of the demolition of the old-alitre part of the foundation-stone; and Mr. Peter Muir, of the Archers' Hall, has also a piece of the stone. The first-mentioned gentleman will whole the lock, the key, and both have taken to Abbotsford by Sir Walter Scott.—Edinburgh Courant.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The Great Eastern will be placed on the gridiron at Neptune, Millwall Haven, to-day (Saturday).

The annual meeting of the Manchester and Liverpool Agricultural Society was held at Bolton on Wednesday, and was in every respect most successful. Lord Derby presided at the usual dinner in connection with the show, and was supported, among others, by Lord Stanley, M.P.

The local papers record the interesting fact that a man of 102 years old, named Dillon, was amongst the muliest transactors of business at the late horse fair at Castleblayney. Dillon is described as looking about seventy-five or eighty.

The first public distribution of prizes and certificates awarded by the Society of Arts to students resident in Dublin and its suburbs took place on Monday evening at Wavertharpton. Lord Lyttelton presided, and delivered C. G. Mercier, of Dublin, among the successful.

A poacher convicted at Derby the other day has, in twenty-eight years, spent forty-one months in gaol, and the magistrates who sentenced him to that term of imprisonment said they had been informed that the man had inflicted on the county and its ratepayers a penalty of £1,000! The sentence was, £1 43; thirty-five convictions, £24 10s.; total cost, £167 10s.

The Lancaster Guardian says it is rumoured that a new line of railway will be constructed from Lancaster to Skipton. The proposed new line will south Stanhope on the Stockton and Darlington, Barnard Castle on the South Durham, Richmond on the North Eastern, and join the Midland line at Skipton.

Mr. Peter Taylor, the Member for Exeter, having signified his intention of shortly retiring from the representation of this city, two candidates for the seat have already appeared—namely, Mr. Arthur Seymour and Major Porter, R.E. The former comes forward on Liberal principles, and the latter is a Conservative and a member of Lord Derby's party.

The velvet-weavers of Kettering, having received notice from the masters of a reduction of price, met last week, and refused to take any more work for the present. The masters were requested to attend, and that they had been compelled to resort to the reduction on account of the admission of foreign goods duty free.

Henry Fenton, a youth about eighteen, was charged before the Birmingham magistrates on Monday week with altering the figures in a Post Office order for 6s., making the order to represent £6 16s., and appropriating the difference to his own use. He pleaded guilty, and, after several other charges of a similar nature against the prisoner, who was committed.

The grand autumn exhibition of the Brighton and Sussex Floricultural and Horticultural Society took place at the Pavilion, Brighton, on Wednesday and Thursday last. The numerous exhibitors, and the liberally supported, most of the elite being present. There was an average display of flowers, and a fine collection of fruit, particularly the extra display of grapes, during the unfavourableness of the season, a choice show of fruit could not fairly be expected. The Amateurs' Premium Guards and Mr. Gaines' Elms were in attendance, and alternately enlivened the company with a pleasing selection of airs.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE LABOURING CLASSES.—The annual meeting of the Dorchester Town Council was held on Monday week for the improvement of the Condition of the Labouring Classes was held at the Townhall, Dorchester, the Mayor presiding in the chair. Two very gratifying evidence that it is extending its useful operations and diffusing a healthy influence among the classes it has embraced in the seven years which have respectively Dorchester, Weymouth, Upwey, Ashmiton, Buckland, Portway, Wooley, Maiden Newton, Bridport, and Lyme.

EXPLOSION IN A GUNPOWDER-MILL, AND LOSS OF SIX LIVES.—On Monday morning last, at eight o'clock, a fearful explosion took place at the Elliott Gunpowder-Mills, situated about three miles from Hounslow Cross, in Aerybushe, by which dreadful calamity six human beings were instantly killed. Two of the unfortunate men were and have been identified. One of the bodies was found in the millrace, and another in the middle of the river, and a third was picked up in a mangled state from the bank. The latter was burnt and disfigured as not to be recognised. Some fragments were found on the road leading to the works, and scattered over the fields, a distance of thirty miles from Hounslow.

A NORTHERN'S MAJORITY.—A series of festivities, extending over a week, in celebration of the majority of the Marquis of Bowmont, eldest son of the Duke of Roxburghe, has just taken place in the town of Kelso and its neighbourhood. The proceedings, which commenced during the anniversary of the birth of the noble Marquis, was, of course, the principal day of the festivities. Every one seemed to be holiday-making in the old town and the neighbourhood, within the beautiful grounds around Floors Castle. The whole of the tenantry, and a large public school, in the vicinity of the castle, were entertained at dinner, along with personal friends and connexions of the family, were invited to a magnificent dinner, which was given in a spacious pavilion erected for the occasion. Subsequent entertainments were given by his Grace's orders to the children at the Roxburghe School, and to the old people and pensioners of the town. The gardeners and the inhabitants of Kelso seemed to have vied in the effort to welcome the young nobleman to his native place, and to express to the Roxburghe family the whole proceedings, which were most successful throughout, were marked by an enthusiasm and unanimity of the greatest possible degree.

MINERS' DEMONSTRATION AT AYR.—Some days ago the mining population of the counties of Lanark, Renfrew, and Ayr had a pleasure excursion to Bonnie Prince Charlie's Monument, on the Ayr and Prestwick Act with reference to their trade. The miners, with their wives and sweethearts, &c., were conveyed from Ayr, Kilmarnock, Galston, Newmilns, and Stewarton to the Low Green. Thence they proceeded, with bands playing and colours flying, to the monument, where they were met by a vast concourse, and the number of excursionists could not have been less than from 4000 to 5000. Having reached the monument, the miners had assembled on the park pole were sung, and the many interesting spots rendered famous by the national bard were visited. Among the latter was Alloway Kirk, and the "auld brig" and the whole re-formed into marching order, and proceeded through the town, preceded by a riverhead, and headed by the Ayr and Prestwick band. Addresses were delivered on subjects connected with the trade, particularly advocating the eight hours' movement. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Burt. The proceedings at the Green had terminated, the party again marched through the town, and returned to their several homes. The Ayr and Prestwick Act the National Anthem was performed, and the whole went off per fail to their several destinations. The weather was fine, and the whole affair will ever visibit Ayr, and we rejoice to be able to add that it was both sober and orderly in demeanour.—Ayr Advertiser.

AN ABSCONDING DEBTOR CHASED AND CAUGHT.—On Saturday an application was made to Mr. Commissioner Phillips, in the Bankruptcy Court, Basinghall-street, by Mr. Lewis Wood. It was opposed, was about to quit from Bristol in the steamer for New Zealand, when a telegraphic message was received from Bristol to the effect that a warrant having been granted, the bankrupt was arrested on board the steamer, and that the police officer had not entered in before the object of their search. They remained on board till Saturday morning, when the bankrupt's luggage was received from London requesting the messenger to depart immediately for Gravesend, where two gentlemen would meet him with a warrant. The officer at once executed the debtor had left for New Zealand in the Morning Star. Other telegraphic messages were then immediately started from Gravesend by the fastest express at 3.55, reached Paddington at 6.8, and Gravesend at 8.30 p.m. He was met by the gentlemen with the warrant, and the chase started at once for Canterbury; and thence posted to Deal, where they arrived at 9.7 p.m. At 9.15 the Morning Star was signalled coming round the North Foreland. The messenger at once engaged a four-oared cutter, and boarded her at 10.30 p.m. At 11 p.m. the bankrupt was taken into custody, and was not aware of the object of their search. They remained on board till Saturday morning, when the bankrupt's luggage was received from London requesting the messenger to depart immediately for Gravesend, where two gentlemen would meet him with a warrant. The officer at once executed the debtor had left for New Zealand in the Morning Star. Other telegraphic messages were then immediately started from London

LITERATURE AND ART.

NATURAL effects are to be expected from natural causes. After the storm, rain; after Madam Xantippe's fury, a flood of tears; after mild weather, the sweets of spring. After the Session of Parliament, and the paunch, a cracking headache. After the Session of Parliament, and the inauguration of London to the Continent or the watering-places, we may always anticipate a dearth of intelligence in the newspapers. When the swallows fly away the canards come in. Parliament being up, and the window-blinds of Belgravia down, our contemporaries—there being positively nothing valuable to record beyond a revolution twice a week or so, in Italy—begin to fill their yawning columns with wonderful stories about nothing particular, or with accounts more or less apocryphal. This is the season for enormous gooseberries" and "showers of frogs." Her Majesty can't visit her Highland retreat without some penny-a-liner finding out that the Queen and her party stayed three days in strict incognito at the Macglincandle Hotel, Whistlebinkie; and an ingenious French purveyor of Nouvelles à la main has actually been enabled to concoct a twelve-line paragraph from the fact of the Empress Eugenie, when at Grenoble, having gone to church at six o'clock in the morning.

The clubs being mostly given up to the ruthless hands of the white washers, the smoky rooms also adorned for the season, and town-talk in general being at the zero (happily) bright, these dreadful dearths of news are to comment on literature have—at their wits' end for something to talk about—resuscitated Lord Macaulay's New Zealander. Formerly it used to be about the antiquity of "Junius," and the claims of Bowyer or Tompion to the laurels of old stat nominis umbra were gravely weighed every September. But the "obis savage" who, in A.D. 1860, is sir on the broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's, is quite equal "Junius" as a literary makeweight. The Times, in a recent review of Lord Macaulay's miscellaneous writings, has been content to consider the New Zealander as the original property of our great essayist. But in the last volume of the two volumes recently published, has no doubt whatever about 'Lord Macaulay's aboriginal invention. He made his first bow to the public in the review of the "Wallingford" and Mill History. "Our friend the Edinburgh Review," says the Quarterly Magazine in 1824. He cropped up again in the article on Mill, in 1829. He was again manifest in the famous passage anent Mrs. Austen's translation of Bossuet's Funeral Oration on Bossuet. Pope's "Bronze Babbage Macaulay" invented the New Zealander. Forthwith, and in [hot haste, somebody writes to the Times claiming the New Zealander as the literary goods and chattels of Percy Bysshe Shelley, who, in 1818, and in the Antipodes of "Peter Bell the Third" to T. Moore, speaks of a "transatlantic traveller who is to "weigh everything in the scales of a new system of criticism," and is to visit London when that metropolis shall be "the habitation of bittern," and the piers of Waterloo -bridge "the nucleus of islets of reeds and osiers." In our humble op inion a prior claim might be put in for at least a dozen writers more. Lord Byron in Childe Harold may also have a special claim to the property, we could turn up a passage parallel to Macaulay in "The Ruins of Empires;" and certainly the New Zealander offers many points of resemblance to a certain Horace in the "Satires" of Mr. Lowell.

That unhappy Guards' Memorial in Wat erloo-place continues by provoke hostile criticisms. Irritated by the hoarding and the shed progress of the work, the fastidious public have declared that the groups of the work, the fastidious public have declared that the crossed bayonets cut in the granite pedestal as likenesses of "skewers," and the vertical canons as "pegpans." Surely it would be a little more in accordance with justice and generosity to wait until the monument was completed and could be seen as a whole. Poverty is good to 'laugh at a bad statue, but not to turn it prematurely to scorn. Le ridicule tue. The Parisians began to ridicule M. Schlesinger's picturesque equestrian statue of Prince Eugene Beauharnais of Leuchtenberg, calling it "Le Sire de Trambloisy," the hero of a well-known comic song. The Government, in a huff, pulled the statue down; and Paris has that which has since been acknowledged as a very handsome work of art.

A new English church has been consecrated at Chamounix, and the first monumental tablet that decks its walls is to the memory of Albert Smith. True, it was in London that he died; but he must not be the less regarded as one of the "martyrs of Mont Blanc." That endless ascent at the Egyptian Hall killed him. We trust that many more tablets will be found to be erected in the course of Chamounix to the memory of English travellers who have lost their lives in attempting to climb the Monarch of Mountains. We are great admirers of pluck and endurance, but we think that we have seen quite enough of the Col du Géant, the Grands Mulets, and the Mur de la Cote.

Rumour—we trust that in this case one per cent. at least of her hundred tongues is telling the truth—ascribes to Mr. Charles Dickens' active preparation for the appearance of a new serial in the old familiar green cover. Society has been too long yearning for these delightful monthly periodicals; and the prospect of the commencement of a traveller fail to console us for the absence of a novel from Mr. Dickens's pen. With greater semblance of certainty Mr. Thackeray is said to have in contemplation a magazine quite new to him. Sir Walter Augusta whom Dr. Johnson remembered as a "stately lady in black velvet and diamonds," and whom Lord Byron hit for the evil. In the Cornhill or Franklin Passenger" shows signs of having to a long and, unless the editor chooses to launch George V. now reigning in Hanover in his catalogue of Monarchs of the House of Brunswick, we cannot look for a successor to the "Four Georges." Why does not Mr. Thackeray follow suit with a series on the nine Louis? "The Last Louis of France"? For instance, Louis XV., the "well-beloved;" Louis XVI., the "scapegoat;" Louis XVII., "the lamb;" Louis XVIII. "the pig." A most interesting sequence, we think. Du reste, new blood will shortly be infused into the Cornhill, and those who are apt to grow weary of dull verbosity will be glad to learn that the seemingly interminable "Hogarth" is soon to be concluded in the forthcoming October number of this admirable magazine.

The literary amateurs who have been so bravely building up the Borough Memorial Fund will revisit Manchester on the 24th and Liverpool on the 25th instant. For one last season more the slides may be found at fault, and the second welcome of the amateurs will, we have reason to believe, be even more enthusiastic and successful than the first.

M. Dumesy, the celebrated astronomer, and one of the first Napoleon's savants, has just died at an advanced age. There are just now no less than three vacancies in the French Academie des Sciences. On the other hand, M. Jules Janin has made the edition of Horace to which we recently adverted the basis for a claim to be admitted to one of the forty fauteuils of the academy of sciences—the Académie of Bossuet, and Marmontel, and Montesquieu. M. Janin has been assiduously canvassing for the much-coveted arm-chair; but we are afraid that his juvenile novel, "L'Ane Mort et la Femme Guillotinée," will stand as fatally in his way among the electors as did the "Oda" of Piron, and that for the fenillétoniste there will have to be paraphrased the epitaph which the wit wrote for himself :—

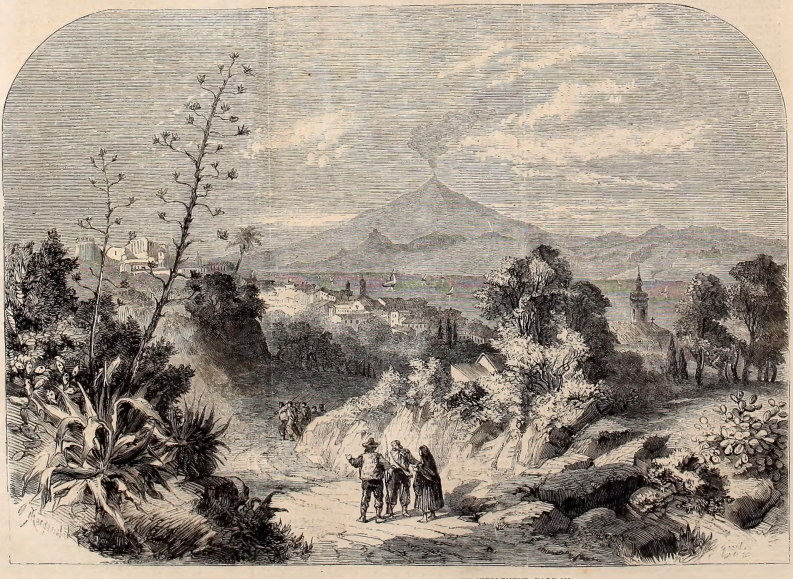
Ci gît (Janin) qui ne fit rien ;
Pas même Académicien.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE race for the St. Leger, which has enrolled Thormanby by the side of Daniel O'Rourke, Ellington, Blink Bonny, and a score of others as a defeated "blue ribbon," has occupied the entire attention of the racing world during the past week. Doncaster has had a most splendid meeting, and the take is even beyond that of 1857, when the sum of £41 4s. 6d. was the coveted four thousand. As compared with 1859, the increase will be fully £800. The race meetings begin next week as follows:—Chesterfield on Monday, Hereford on Tuesday, Leicester on Wednesday, Monmouth on Thursday, and Manchester Autumn and Salford on Friday.

It is feared that the breaking of a small bone in Caffyn's leg will prevent him from playing any more this season. Hayward has quite lost his position as batter being bowled out in every match he has been taken at least three times of late. The Two Elevens will be Surrey Gentlemen v. Surrey Players, at the Oval, on Monday next, and on Thursday All England meet twenty-two of the Caledonian Club at Wimbledon, and the united twenty-five gentlemen of Hampshire at Southampton.

DONCASTER MEETING.



Doncaster seems to have given the first great vent to the unhappy wights on whom St. Grouse and St. Partridge have not smiled this year, and Heaven knows there are many of them. The last stout leg trembled like bats out of their hiding-places, and sought the shrine of the ever-green St. Leger on their way to the seaside. The little town was never known to be so full on a race, scarcely two hours' race-horses had arrived. The betting-room coffers held £100 beyond all previous years, and the lodging-houses reaped a magnificent harvest. As high as eighty guineas was given for a house in the town, and one absurd fellow is reported to have given £50 for a single bed. Early in the week the two stockwell colts were sold—one for 330 gs., to Mr. Merry, and the other for 205 gs., to Mr. Padwick. Mr. Merry's great town brother to Bivouac also fetched 340 gs., and a capital brother to Athos 210 gs.; but the sale for the rest was slack, and only fifteen thousand guineas in all. On Tuesday the fields of the Town Moor for the St. Leger courage rather shocked. There had been rumours as to Thormanby being off, and the public were not at all pleased at the unsteadiness in the market—a thing which Mr. Merry would never have brooked if he had been quite sure of his position—made general visitor rather nervous. However, his position hardened towards nightfall at the rooms, and he not only displaced Sabreur for the ensuing day, but laid 2 to 1 (5 to 2 in some quarters) on the field. It was maintained that the Axe horse was only great in mud, and placed much trust in the fact that the course was dry. Tuesday's betting-book had the pen quietly put through his name on the Saturday, and Buccaneer's position in the betting assumed the most hopeless character. With the Leger day gradually approaching, Sabreur was a favourite, and Thormanby "might and would do the trick." Winton was slightly yielded to, and Buccaneer was quoted at 20 to 1 against. Mr. Wallace, the story went forth that he was lame all round, but one leg. Of Tipple-cider nothing was known, and the large field of eighteen that came out for the Flavvithian Stakes. Brown Duchess showed herself in capital condition, and was backed heavily to cut down the favourite the pace, was caught and beat cleverly in the handicap by Moorhen. The Champagne Stakes, the most interesting race of the Doncaster meeting, clearly, as their grand chestnut colt Kettledrum did not get a very good start, and could never reach Wallcon, who seemed all the better and greater for his Goodwood victory, drawn clear of the field. The twenty hundred-guinea yearling Chanade ran very fairly, but Parasite showed to be a better one. Kettledrum was not destined to last long. Mr. Aldcroft, on The Wizard, was in the saddle before any of them, and the horse looked as though he knew as all those on his back (Sherwin) could make him. Stampede (A. Day), who bears a strong resemblance to Mr. Alcock, showed a good deal of temper; and a Mr. Cartwright's stopped short, and refused to take his canter. Castanea soon put him right, but he looked bigger in condition than he did at the Derby, and never wished to be well out. Mr. Bowes's Cossack (Custance) was also on the "best list," and very different to St. Albans (L. Snowdon), who looked, in appearance, drawn and ill. Mr. Merry's Sabreur (Flatman) is a good-sized dark chestnut, with a round but not very big barrel, and looks well on his legs. Thormanby (Wells) is a bright bay, a trifle rather far away from the ground; and, take him altogether, does not seem the horse to stay a very severe course. The hunting-like Mr. Wilkinson's Bloomsbury (Wilkinson), Mr. Crawley's Ellington (Aldcroft), High Treason (Bullock), Sabreur (F. Osborne), Earl of Zetland's Wizard (Grimshaw), and Mr. Merry's Thormanby went up the rest of the field. Sam Rogers had not a mount; after Horror's withdrawal he did not even come to Doncaster. The parade past the stand was made in capital order, and at 3.45 the flag fell, considerable complication ensued. It seemed as if there was a solemn league and covenant among the jockeys not to start. Some of the lads were quite away from the body of horses, then Thormanby, then Umpire, and then Sabreur, and the latter was the last recalled. At last it was the flag went down, and he was left some distance in the rear; while Sabreur, who had got a good start of those or four lengths, did not like it as he did the Derby course, and was not at all pleased. Thormanby still led merrily along, all the favourites being well forward, and there was no change in the order of the first six, save that Ellington was quite away from the body of horses, then Thormanby, then Umpire, and then Sabreur, the latter a long way behind Umpire, at last at

VIEW OF DAMASCUS FROM THE HILL OF SALAHIYEH.—FROM A DRAWING BY E HARKER.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 25

PRESENTATION OF A SILVER BUGLE BY LADY DUFF GORDON TO THE 6TH SURREY (ESHER) VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 256.

REGGIO, CALABRIA, RECENTLY TAKEN BY GARIBALDI.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 256.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

It was announced at the Kensington vestry last week that the beeches bounding the famous horse-ride in Kensington Gardens had been taken away, the road was being levelled, and new turf laid down.

An Anglo-French commercial paper, called the Treaty, is about to be issued in London, with, it is said, the approval of the Emperor. It is to be built in French and half in English.

At Grays Thurrock, where the edge of the basin of chalk in which the London clay lies "crops up," an immense supply of spring water has been discovered in the chalk-pits, out of which thirty tons an hour daily. The water flows into the excavation at the rate, it is said, of 2,100,000 gallons every twenty-four hours. An artesian well is in progress to pierce the chalk and flow into the Thames. To make this water available for London use is a project of no slight difficulty and considerable expense.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—The deaths registered in London last week were 1,076, showing a decrease on the number in the previous week, which was 1018. The comparison shows that the deaths of last week were less by 124 than the average which have been under the same circumstances at the beginning of September. Last week the births of 887 boys and 818 girls—in all 1747 children—were registered in London. In the corresponding week of the years 1850-59 the average number was 1871.

THE LATE FIRE AT ST. MARTIN'S HALL.—It affords us sincere pleasure to announce that the valuable library of the Society of British Musicians, occupying a room in the above hall, has miraculously escaped destruction by the late calamity, and is restored to its former elegant, of incalculable benefit to the English musical profession. A few great enemies not only of a expensive collection of the productions of the great masters and didactic writers on the art, but also of many rare works none of which could ever have been replaced.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS.—On Wednesday the man who was charged with stealing sausages at different places was found guilty and sentenced to four years' penal servitude.—Chinna, "the Queen of Spain's painter," was found guilty on Monday of conspiring to defraud Mr. Alderman Hodgkinson, of London, of a plan. A man named Meyer was also found guilty of uttering a counterfeit with the same object. Sentence was deferred in both cases.—A novel fraud has been brought to light by a trial on Monday. A youth named Charles Marsham was charged with obtaining money under false pretences from Mr. Hall, a dentist, by means of a letter, which he sent to Mr. Hall, a dentist, by means of a letter, which he sent to Mr. Hall's house, requesting him to attend Lord Alvanley's son, who was suffering from toothache. Mr. Hall attended, and was told by the servant that Lord Alvanley's son was not at home, but that Mr. Hall would be paid for his trouble. Mr. Hall waited for some time, and then left, but sent in his account, which was not paid. Marsham was found guilty, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS.—On Wednesday the man who was charged with stealing sausages at different places was found guilty and sentenced to four years' penal servitude.—Chinna, "the Queen of Spain's painter," was found guilty on Monday of conspiring to defraud Alderman Hodgkinson, of London, of a plan. A man named Meyer was also found guilty of uttering a counterfeit with the same object. Sentence was deferred in both cases.—A novel fraud has been brought to light by a trial on Monday. A youth named Charles Marsham was charged with obtaining money under false pretences from Mr. Hall, a dentist, by means of a letter, which he sent to Mr. Hall's house, requesting him to attend Lord Alvanley's son, who was suffering from toothache. Mr. Hall attended, and was told by the servant that Lord Alvanley's son was not at home, but that Mr. Hall would be paid for his trouble. Mr. Hall waited for some time, and then left, but sent in his account, which was not paid. Marsham was found guilty, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

JOHN HUNTER.—The council of the Royal College of Surgeons have caused a beautiful memorial tablet to be placed over the site of the grave of Hunter, now in the Westminster Abbey, with the following inscription:—"Beneath are deposited the remains of John Hunter, born at Long Calderwood, Lanarkshire, on the 14th of February, 1728, died in London on the 16th of October, 1793. His remains were removed from the Church of St. Martin-in-the-Fields to this abbey on the 28th of October, 1859. The Royal College of Surgeons of England have placed this tablet over the grave of Hunter in grateful commemoration of his genius, his zeal in the cause of the Divine power and wisdom at work in the laws of organic life, and their gratitude to him for his services to science, to his art, and to mankind in a scientific surgery." This inscription is deeply cut in brass of a Gothic design, inlaid in a black marble slab, and granite and pressure of the most elegant appearance. Mr. Weekes, the sculptor, is progressing favourably with the model of the bust which is to be placed over the tablet in memory of the Hunterian Museum. Mr. Smith, the president of the college, still continues to receive valuable contributions for the foundation of a scholarship in the name of the statue, in order to perpetuate still more the immortal genius of Hunter. Mr. Smith has also received from Mr. Alexander Hunter, a relative of Mr. Hunter, as a first instalment towards this desirable object. It is right the public should be informed that the sum that as yet has been collected would have gone towards defraying the expenses of the above beautiful tablet, or the heavy fees consequent on the removal of the body from the Church of St. Martin-in-the-Fields to this abbey, and their re-interment in Westminster Abbey; the whole of the expenses, amounting to a considerable sum, has been paid from the funds of the Royal College of Surgeons.

THE INDIA HOUSE LIBRARY, now about to be removed to the offices of the Board of Control, Cannon-row, contains upwards of twenty-four thousand volumes of every class of Eastern literature, and about three thousand are manuscripts; this latter portion is famous throughout the world for its treasures, including the magnificent collection of Persian and Arabic MSS. extant; some of beautiful calligraphy, superbly illuminated, and dressed in elegant native bindings, of enormous value, which are "Haut Jin," Persian and poems in exquisite variety, monuments of native skill and industry. In this library are numerous Korans, many of them written in the Cufic character, by the Caliph Othman III., about 85 of the Hegira (A.D. 655), bearing reference to the original seals of Oriental monarchs. Among them is a portion of the Koran written by "Haut Jin," son-in-law of Mahomet, with the title of Commander of the Faithful. Kings of Persia, commencing with Ali "Shah Johan," referring to his having given 1500 golden mohurs for it. Amongst the curiosities in the East India Company's museum are preserved also in the library containing the autographs of subscribers under an act "for raising the sum of £600,000 for the payment of the debts due by the Company at the trade to the East Indies," dated July 14, 1698, in the tenth year of the reign of William III. The sum was raised by the Commissioners of the Treasury by subscribers of £10,000 in the name of his Majesty. The subscribers, 1444 in number, included most of the English nobility, whose autographs and signatures are written on forty-seven pages of parchment. The amounts subscribed range from £500 upwards, the highest (No. 1005) being that of John Lord Somers. The printed library contains the largest and most unique collection of works on the subject extant, and the Oriental MSS. and Arabic, Persian, and Sanscrit are acquired as one of the most valuable as well as useful libraries in Europe, which is open to the public on application, and that distinguished Oriental scholar, Professor Horace Hayman Wilson, was for nearly a quarter of a century the librarian. It is gratifying to learn that the valuable property of the late East India Company has been preserved, and extend the library of the India Office, and render it as perfect as possible, and that the appointment of librarian, for the purpose, is to succeed Professor Wilson, a most liberalian, who will bring great talents as an Oriental scholar in carrying out his enlarged views for the universal use of the public, and that the library has been intruted to the assistant, who is making active preparations for the safe removal of this library to its appointed destination.

THE AGAPEMONE.—The Somerset County Gazette publishes a lengthened statement from a number of residents in the Agapemone, lamenting the scandal which, it says, has been occasioned by the conduct of Spencer Compton, and hinted, or, as an impostor, duped and deceived others to obtain money and enrich himself, as the writers state that "Mr. Prince has expended in the Agapemone nearly three times as much as any other resident. He has never received for his labour, if we say anything he possessed; but has generously made every residue in the Agapemone a sharer with himself of all that God has given him." The document then proceeds to refute the statements of "Samuel Starkey, formerly Rector of the parish of Charlton Kilvert, in the county of Somerset; George Robinson Thomas, formerly Curate of Spaxton, in the county of Somerset; George formerly of Swansea; Thomas Williams, formerly English Lecturer of St. John's Swansea; Harriet S. Price," and several other persons. Mrs. Price, the lady whose husband has repeatedly attacked the Agapemonites, writes to say that her and her fortune from Prince's grasp, declares that Mr. Prince has never seen her, and never received any money having poured into the common fund a sum amounting to nearly £9000.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 45″ W.; Height above sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER.			WIND.		Rain in inches
	Barometer corrected	Dew Point.	Humidity	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum in shade.	Minimum in shade.	Mean of the Day.	General Direction	Miles Observed
Sept. 8	30·235	56·9	82°	·79	9	64·7	64·9	NNW.	111	·000
9	30·202	56·2	83	·79	9	64·7	64·9	N. NNE. NE.	111	·000
10	29·916	56·2	83	·79	9	64·7	64·9	E. NE. NNE.	93	·000
11	29·746	56·2	83	·79	9	67·9	67·7	E. NE.	111	·000
12	29·941	56·2	83	·79	9	67·9	67·7	E.	111	·000
13	30·302	55·2	83·5	·93	5	49·3	47·7	ENE. NNE.	214	·000
14	30·302	55·2	83·5	·93	5	49·3	47·7	ENE. NNE.	214	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer in the open air corrected	30·235	30·202	29·916	29·746	29·941	30·302	30·302
Temperature of Air	59°	56°	57°	59°	59°	51°	52°
Temperature of Evaporation	56°	55°	55°	57°	57°	50°	50°
Direction of Wind	NNW.	NNE.	E.	E.	E.	ENE.	ENE.

At Stockport, on Wednesday week, Mary Ann Howard, wife of a labouring man named John Howard, was found dead, her throat being gashed in a frightful manner, and the skull fractured. An axe was found in Howard's house, and it is said there were some human hairs and stains on it. The unfortunate woman, it is his seventy-seventh year, is in custody, and has confessed his guilt. The murdered woman was of a disagreeable character, and had frequent quarrels with her husband.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

NOTWITHSTANDING the continuance of favourable weather for harvest over all the United Kingdom, and the fine crops of wheat now being gathered in the country, the market for nearly all Home Securities has been devoid of animation. Consols have left off to-day (Friday) rather heavy, the quotation having taken place in the quotations. The limited amount of stock absorbed by the public must be attributed to the high rate of the money now passing at the Bank and the active preparations on the part of Austria to repel any attack upon Venetia. The withdrawal of the Austrian troops into the Papal States for the money holders of stock regarded in a serious light.

The supply of unemployed capital in the discount market is very large. Although the demand for accommodation has been steady, the rates out of doors have ruled somewhat easier. Bills to the first class about £100,000 in gold has been sent into the Bank of England out of a total arrival not exceeding £250,000, so that the actual import is but £150,000. Discounts have ranged from minimum to 4½ per cent. In Lombard-street first-class short bills have been done at 3 to 3½ per cent. Advances have been made at 3 per cent for the month, 4½ to 5 per cent. From these quotations it is obvious that bankers and bill-brokers are now willing to accept a considerably lower upon paper having more than three months to run.

Continental exchanges show that money is very abundant, but that there is still only a limited demand for it, arising from the distrust on the part of the monetary classes in the political state of Europe. Paris bills have been negotiated at [illegible] per cent. Hamburg, Amsterdam, and Frankfort bills have been done at 12 per cent.

Much discussion has taken place in monetary circles on the subject of the payment of the double income tax on Indian securities. The Council have intimated to the Bank of England directors that they have no power to exempt from the interest payable in England. The Oriental Bank, however, are about to negotiate the payment of the tax in India, and to remit the amount to their agent at Calcutta, by means of bills on that presidency. This does not get rid of the difficulty, since the Government will not allow the deduction to be made for India, and another for England. We ourselves are of opinion that an eight per cent tax in India would be equivalent to a five per cent tax in England.

In the Stock Exchange money for short periods is freely offered at 1½ to 2 per cent. An instalment of 25 per cent has fallen due on the East Indian Railway Company's new shares, and 25 per cent on the Great Northern loan due on the Canada Loan of £7,800,000 on Monday next, and one of 10 per cent on the 15th of October.

We have no material alteration to notice in the foreign exchanges, and nearly all the quotations remain as last week. Indeed, the business transacted has not been sufficient to call very limited. About £36,000 in bullion has been sent to the Bank from the Cape of Good Hope, and £10,000 in specie from Australia in the Royal Charter.

The dividend of the Submarine Telegraph Company is announced at the rate of only 3 per cent per annum, or £15 per share, payable on the 15th.

Shares of the newly-formed companies have been somewhat inactive; nevertheless, no decline has taken place in the value of the best descriptions. The Marine Insurance have marked 1½ to 2 prem., Thames and Mersey Marine, 3 to 3½ prem., Universal Marine, 1½ to 2 prem., Law Life, 1½ to 2 prem., and Provincial Marine, ½ to ¾ dis.; and Great Northern and Midland Coal, 1½ to 2 prem.

On Monday Home Securities were very inactive—The Reduced Three per Cents, quoted on that day, 94¼ ¾; New Three per Cents, 93¾ ¼; Consols, for Money, 94¾ ¾; Ditto, for Account, 93¾; India Five per Cents, 102; India Bonds, 1860, 98 ½; Ditto, Old, 99; Exchequer Bills, 1860, 98 ½; Ditto, Old, 99; Court Exper Paper was 96¾; Ditto, Five-and-a-Half per Cent, 102. The Exchange on Bombay was 1s 10d per rupee, and on Madras 1s 10d. Reduced Three per Cents, Special transfer, 94¼; Consols, 94¾; Ditto, for Account, 94¾; Three per Cents, 1853-5, 94¼; Ditto Stock, 94¼; Ditto, Five per Cent Paper, 94¾; Ditto, Five-and-a-Half per Cents, 102½; Ditto, Five per Cent Stock, 102; Ditto, Five-and-a-Half per Cent Stock, 102½. The Three per Consols were somewhat firmer on Wednesday, at 94¾ for Money, and 95⅛ for Account; India Five per Cents were sold at 102; India Bonds, 1860, 98 ½; New, 1859, 98 ½; Ditto Five per Cent Paper Paper, 96¾ 96; Ditto Five-and-a-Half per Cent Paper, 102½; Ditto, Five per Cent Stock, 102; Ditto, Five-and-a-Half per Cent Stock, 102½. On Thursday Home Stocks were flat. Consols marked 93 to 93 ¼ for Money, and 93⅝ ¾ for Account; Reduced Three per Cents, 93⅝ ¾; New Three per Cents at 93¾. India Stock was 218; Ditto, New Loan, 103¼ ¼; Ditto Five per Cent Bonds, 1860, 98 ½; Ditto, Old, 99; Exchequer Bills, 1860, 98 ½; Ditto, Old, were 1s to 4s. prem. The half-yearly meeting of proprietors of Stock in the East India Company, at the India House, on Thursday, the 20th inst., for the last half year was declared. The profits during that period amounted to £1,500,000.

The Foreign House has been much less active. Compared with last week, however, the quotations have undergone no material change. The transactions of stock having steadily maintained previous quotations.—Brazilian Four-and-a-half per Cents, 92½; Buenos Ayres Six per Cents, 1868, 94; Chilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 82½; Mexican Three per Cents, 21¾; Peruvian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 72½; Portuguese Four per Cents, 1853, 46; Ditto, 1854, 46; Russian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 94; Russian Three per Cents, 1854, 72½; Spanish Three per Cents, 39¼; Ditto, New Deferred, 19¾; Ditto, Passive, 5; Ditto, Committee's Certificates of Coupon, not funded, 2½; Turkish Old Six per Cents, 1858, 84; Ditto, New, 1858, 84; Ditto, Four per Cents, 1854, 84; Ditto, Four per Cents, 64; and Venezuela Three per Cents, 23½.

A fair average business has been transacted in the Railway Share Market, at steady prices. The quotations:—Agra and United Service have realised 80½; Bank of Egypt, 9¾; Crystal Palace, 4½; Canterbury and Whitstable, 110; Ditto, A, 103; Eastern Counties, 10½; Ditto, Extension to London, 2½; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 18½; London, Chatham, and Dover, 12½; Ditto, New Shares, 5½; Ditto, Extension to Dover, 5; Ditto, Purchase Provisional of Regulated, New, 24½; National, 6½; Oriental, 6¾; Oriental Land Company, 1½; Peninsular and Oriental Steam, 75; Scinde Railway, 84; Union of Australia, 84; and Victoria Docks, 17¾; Royal Mail Steam, 57; Scottish Australian Investment, 128; South Australian Land, 39½; London Docks, 64; West India Docks, 81; and Wilts and Somerset, 98.

There has been a steady, though not to say an extensive, business passing in the Railway Share List, and prices have undergone little change. The dividend receipts, have had an upward tendency. The following are Thursday's official quotations:—Caledonian, 79½.

ORDINARY SHARES AND STOCKS.—Bristol and Exeter, 101; Eastern Counties, 10½; Great Northern, 103; Great Western, 71½; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 112; London and North-Western, 104½; London and South-Western, 93; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 27½; Midland, 104½; Ditto, Leeds, 85; South-Eastern, 80½; Vale of Neath, 68; West Midland—Dean, 44½.

LINES LEASED AT FIXED RENTALS.—Hull and Selby, 111; London and Greenwich, 68; Shrewsbury and Hereford, 103.

PREFERENCE SHARES.—Dundee, Perth, and Aberdeen Junction, 58½; Great Western, Chester Shares, 20½; Ditto, 1½; Londonderry and Enniskillen, 12½; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 127½; Midland—Preference-shares, 107½; Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 50½; North British, 50½; Ditto, Leeds, 85; South-Eastern, 80½; Vale of Neath, 68; West Midland—Dean, 44½.

LOANS.—Bombay, Baroda, and Central India, 94; Cape Town and Dock, 93; East Indian, 104½; Ditto, Four per Cent Debentures, 101; Ditto, Four per Cent Stock, 101; Ditto, Five per Cent Debentures, 103; Great Indian Peninsula, 93; Ditto, New, 93; Great Western of Canada, 17½; Madras Five per Cent, 94.

THE MARKETS.

"CORN EXCHANGE, Sept. 10.—To-day's market was but moderately supplied with English wheat, chiefly of the new crop, and in very middling condition. All kinds moved off slowly, at a decline of 1s per quarter compared with Monday last or fully 2s per quarter. The few samples from Kent and Essex were somewhat superior in point of quality. Floating cargoes were offered sparingly. Wheat, free on board, was neglected, and foreign parcels were somewhat drooping in price. There was but little sale in the malt trade, at barely the late advance in the quotations. Oats were a dull inquiry, and 1s per quarter lower than on Monday last. Both beans and peas were offered at a decline of 1s per quarter. Town-made qualities declined 2s., country sorts, 3s. per sack. Foreign parcels were in good request.

Sept. 12.—The wheat trade was heavy on Monday's decline in value. In the value of spring corn and flour no change took place.

Arrivals this week:—English: Wheat, 2,000 qrs.; barley, 1600 qrs.; oats, 2,000 qrs.; flour, 1,000 sacks. Irish: Wheat, 1,000 qrs.; barley, 300 qrs.; oats, 1,000 qrs.; flour, 1,000 sacks. Foreign: Wheat, 10,000 qrs.; barley, 6,000 qrs.; oats, 2,000 qrs.; beans, 1,000 qrs.; peas, 1,000 qrs.; flour, 1,000 sacks.

Mark Lane, Monday, Sept. 10.—Since Monday last the supply of wheat has been fresh and limited, and the demand for all kinds of grain has been very inactive, at a decline in value of 2s per qr. Flour has also given way 2s per sack.

Liverpool

NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "PERCY COMBE."
Immediately, 3 vols., post 8vo.
OVER THE CLIFFS. By Mrs. CHANTER, Author of "Percy Combe."
HERBERT CHANTREY: A Man More Sinned Against than Sinning. By Sir A. H. ELTON, Bart. 2 vols. 21s. (Now Ready.)
SCARSDALE; or, Life on the Lancashire and Yorkshire Border Twenty Years Ago. Am. of Fonblanque, &c. 3 vols.
31, Cornhill-street, Hanover-square.

MESSRS. SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO.'S NEW WORKS FOR THE SEASON.
THE LIFE OF DR. WOLFF. New Edition, revised. 18s.
LADY AUBREY; or, What shall it Be? A Novel. 2 vols. 21s.
HELEN AND HER FRIEND. 2 vols. 21s.
MY WIFE'S PIN-MONEY. By a Grandniece of the great Lord Lyndhurst. 1 vol. 10s. 6d.
THE EMIGRANT'S DAUGHTER. Dedicated by special permission to Baron de Rutzen. 3 vols. 31s. 6d.
BY MARIA LOUISA CHARLESWORTH.
MINISTERING CHILDREN. Fifty-sixth Thousand. With Illustrations. Price Five Shillings.
THE MINISTRY OF LIFE. Twenty-third Thousand. With Illustrations. Price Five Shillings.
SEELEY, JACKSON, and HALLIDAY, 54, Fleet-street.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "EOTHEN."
Now ready at all the Libraries, in one vol., crown 8vo, with 13 Illustrations by Vogel, price 10s. 6d.,
THE EVIL EYE; or, the Black Spectre, A Romance. By WILLIAM KINGLAKE, Esq., Author of "Eothen and Stories of the Irish Peasantry," &c. &c.
London: JAMES BLACKWOOD, Paternoster-row; and 7, Wellington-quay, Dublin.

Book-Club day, a Beautiful Present for good little Boys and Girls,
THE CHILD'S FAMOUS PICTURE-BOOK, with Plenty to Laugh at, and Plenty to Learn. Price, 500 Pictures, 5s. plain; or 7s. 6d. coloured. Bound in Boards. Half-crown handsome cover, price 3s. 6d.; coloured illustrations, gilt edges, 7s. 6d. Postage, 6d.
London: Ward and Lock, 158, Fleet-street.

On October 1st, price 1s., post free, 1s. 6d.,
THE STUDENT, a Monthly Periodical of Literature, Science, and Art. Part I. contains, amongst other articles, the following:—
A HISTORY OF THE FINE ARTS IN THE BRITISH ISLANDS. By JONATHAN CROUCH, Esq., F.L.S., Member of the Numismatic and Archæological Society, Paternoster-row.

ILLUMINATED by OWEN JONES and HENRY WARREN: PARADISE AND THE PERI, from the Persian Book of Flowers and Fruits. The work well worthy of its royal sire-page, and is intended to form the most elegant and appropriate Gift-Book for the approaching season. Price, bound in Persian tint and elaborately tastefully. Price, bound in Cloth, 42s.; in full calf, £3 13s. 6d. Subscribers' names received by DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

NEW SERIAL.
LORD THE WORLD.
Commenced in the New Day,
Office, 125, Fleet-street, London.

Just ready, by the Designer of "The Little Bullet,"
THE LITTLE ENGINEER; or, How a Child may Make a Cardboard Railway Station, with Engine, Tender, Carriages, Signals, Policemen, Passengers, Porters, and Guard. With Fifty Coloured Prints. 2s. 6d.
"A very pretty, tastefully beautiful and interesting book—one in which grown-up people will like to look with the little Bairdies."—Art-Journal.
"Most ingenious, when carefully put together, is charming in the extreme."—Athenæum.
London: Nisbet and Co., 53, Berners-street.

New Boy Book, price 2s. 6d., with 700 Engravings, pp. 424, gilt,
THE ILLUSTRATED BOY'S OWN TREASURY. "Best gift-book for boys ever produced."—Weekly Mail, 13th, Fleet-street.

This day, price 1s., with Map and Illustrations, demy 8vo,
HEALTH RESORTS OF BRITAIN; and How to Profit by Them. By VINCENT STOKES, M.D.
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, price 1s. boards, fancy wrapper, gilt edges, 3s.
THE DIARY OF A JUDGE. Compiled from the Notebook of a recently-deceased Judge.
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, Illustrations by M'Connell, Fanny Masters, H. G. Hine, &c.,
MIRROR OF THE MUSES. By ROBERT B. BROUGH.
MARSTON LEIGH. By R. B. BROUGH. 2s.
ULF THE MINSTREL. By R. B. BROUGH. 1s.
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, price 8s., fcap 8vo, fancy boards,
JOHN HORSLEYDOWN; or, the Celebrity. A Story by Himself. Revised by Thomas Littledove Holt. Also Editor of the "Opening Chapters" &c.
London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

NEW NOVELS.
UNDER A CLOUD. By FREDERICK and FRANCES BOYLE. 3 vols. post 8vo. (This day.
THE BADDINGTON PEERAGE: Who Won It—as Who Won It. By EDMUND YATES. Second Edition. 3 vols. post 8vo.
CAMP LIFE. By Captain WRAXALL. 1 vol. 10s. 6d.
London: T. C. NEWBY, 30, Wellington-street, Charing-cross.

Price 1s.; postage-free, 1s. 2d. Second Edition, Illuminated Wrapper,
HINTS ON ILLUMINATING; with Directions for Transferring from Old and rare MSS. By JOHN LUCEN—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

Price 2s. 6d., Second Edition, Revised, with 250 Illustrations,
THE ART OF ILLUMINATING: A Guide to Beginners. By A. H. WARREN, Instructor to the Royal Family—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

Price 6s. 6d.; postage-free, 6s. 10d., elegantly bound and gilt, with Illustrations and Portrait from Life and rare MSS. by Himself,
MISSAL PAINTING and ILLUMINATING. By JOHN LUCEN. With an Historical Introduction by J. JEWITT, F.S.A.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

2s. 6d., or thirty-two stamps, Fourth Edition,
CORPULENCY and its new Self-dietary Cure. By A. and C. WOODS, M.D.
London: H. RENSHAW, 356, Strand, Charing-cross, S.W.

THE LAST COPIES of ROBERTS'S HOLY LAND, EGYPT, &c., will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON, and HODGE, at their House, No. 3, Wellington-street, Strand. Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

THE LAST COPIES of the GRAMMAR of ORNAMENT, by OWEN JONES, will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOTHEBY and HARRIETT. Particulars of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

THE LAST COPIES of the TREASURY OF ORNAMENTAL ART, South Kensington Museum, by REDGRAVE, ROBINSON, will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOTHEBY and HARRIETT. Particulars of DAY and SON, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

THE LAST COPIES of the ART TREASURES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, by WAAGEN and REDGRAVE, A present for a King. Will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by Messrs. SOTHEBY and HARRIETT. Particulars of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

ARTHUR GRANGER'S SHILLING PRIZE BOOKS, Illustrated with Gold Paper, Envelope, Blotting-book, Pen-holder, Sealing-wax, Wafers, Pencil, Rubber, Pen, Ink-stand, Ruler, Scrap-book, Paste-pot, Knife, Pen-wiper, Pocket-book, &c. High Holborn. Sold by all Booksellers. Send for 13 stamps—Shilling Miniature Warwick Book, 32, High Holborn. B. D. Cahusac and Son.

SOUVENIRS, TRAVELLERS, and VISITORS to the SEASIDE will find it to their advantage to call at
ROWLANDS' KALYDOR
(Rowland's exciting and fragrant Kalydor), for the Skin and Hair, is a delightful preparation of the up to the face and skin. It allays tan, and sunburnings, and produces a delicate complexion, freshness, and transparency of complexion. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle. Hatton-garden and by Chemists and Perfumers.
Ask for "ROWLANDS' KALYDOR."

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST of NEW PUBLICATIONS.
RUBAULT, Dr. E. F.—The Pianoforte: Its History and Construction, with early Specimens of Tunes. Royal 8vo. £1 10s.
HOPKINS and RIMBAULT.—The Organ: Its History and Construction. Royal 8vo. £1 10s.
CALLCOTT, W. H.—Scottish Melodies. Two books, each 6s.; or complete in one, 10s. 6d.
HILLER, F.—Fifty Lessons for Beginners. £1 11s. 6d.
BALLAD.—"Sweetly Pensive" Handel (130 in number). 4d. to 2s.
WEST, G. V.—"Sweetly Pensive" Irish, and other Melodies, for Piano. Each 3s. 6d. and 4s.
WEST, G. V.—Gems from the Great Masters, for Piano. 30 numbers, each 2s. 6d.
WALLACE, W. VINCENT.—Beethoven's Sonata at Athens. Fantasia. 4s.
WALLACE, W. VINCENT.—Beethoven's Sonata. Illustrated. 4s.
WALLACE, W. VINCENT.—The Vetturino Rifles' March. 3s.
GLOVER, HENRY.—Glover's Organ Illustrated. 3s. 6d.
GLOVER, HENRY.—Mus. D.C.—St. Gregory's Rifle Galop. 3s. 6d.
KUCKEN, F.—The Pianoforte, as sung by Jenny Lind. 4s.
KUCKEN, F.—The Young Recruit, as sung by Jenny Lind. 3s.
KUCKEN, F.—Gems from Meyerbeer, for Pianoforte. 30 numbers, each 2s. 6d.
KUCKEN, F.—Gems, gavotte, and galop, from the Opera of Faust, for Pianoforte. 3s.
Lendon: ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street, Publishers to the Queen.

BALFE'S NEW SONG, "SLEEP, MY LOVE, SLEEP," the Poetry by LOVE, the Music by BALFE. Published this day, price 2s. 6d.
London: ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

THE BLACKSMITH'S SON, New Song, Composed by J. L. HATTON, and sung with immense success by Mr. SIMS REEVES at the Monday Popular Concerts.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

WINNING THE GLOVES. New Comic Ballad (illustrated), composed by CHAS. W. GLOVER; sung by J. B. CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., post-free. "This will make you laugh."—Vide Morning Post, Sept. 10.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

OVER THE MOUNTAIN—OVER THE SEA, Sung by Miss DOLBY. Composed by BENEDICT. Published this day. Post-free, 2s. 6d.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

THE RANELAGH POLKA (just published), Composed by J. RIVIERE. Dedicated, by permission, to Viscountess Bangor, and performed nightly at the Royal Pavilion Ball-room. Price 3s. 6d. ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

O DOUBTING HEART!—New Song by the Author of "Ever of Thee I Sing." Price 2s. 6d. Post-free, 2s. 6d.—Mr. Wilcox Cooper is singing this song with great success."
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

VOLUNTEER SONG. "Every Man join in Heart and Soul," composed by ALFRED HELLON, and sung by Mr. SIMS REEVES at the Monday Popular Concerts with unbounded success, is published this day, price 2s. 6d.
ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS' SONGS and CHORUSES, with Piano Accompaniments, post 8vo, nine books, 2s. each; or complete in one vol., cloth, gilt edges, 20s. Also in one vol., cloth, gilt edges, 10s. 6d., post-free. Or the three volumes in one, containing 145 songs, complete for 15s.; vols. 1 and 2, in one volume, containing 100 songs, 15s. Also, separately, 115 Christy's Songs for the Violin, 1s.; 50 of the best, without words, for the Concertina, 1s.; 50 Christy's Songs for the Flute, 1s.; 50 Christy's Songs for the Cornet-à-piston, 1s.; 50 Christy's Songs for the Flageolet, 1s. Published only at the MUSICAL BOUQUET OFFICE, 192, High Holborn.

ALL MUSIC at HALF the MARKED PRICE, at EVANS and CO.'S original Half-price Music Warehouse, 77, Cornhill, and 15, Regent-street, S.W. Country orders per return of post. Payment taken in postage-stamps.

WHEATSTONE'S HARMONIUMS are Superlative in tone and touch, manufactured by them expressly for the Exhibition of 1851, and are the only instruments which possess the full power and quality of tone, both sustaining and musical, and do not require tuning. Guineas.
No. 1, in oak or walnut case, with CC, double pedals 12
With one stop, 13 set of vibrators 14
With one stop, 2 sets of vibrators 16
With three stops, three sets of vibrators 18
With Oboe stop, large size organ bass, fifty 24
With ditto, ditto, and Vox Humana, fifty-two 28
With ditto, ditto, two sets of vibrators 30
With ten stops, three sets of vibrators, ditto 36
Prize Medalist, 1851. An extensive assortment of French Harmoniums, from 10 guineas to 100 guineas.
Wheatstone and Co., 20, Conduit-street, Regent-street, W.

SARL and SONS, 244 and 18, Cornhill, Manufacturers and Importers in their own Workshops of Musical Boxes, Cylinders, and Barrels, carefully revised to the display of Eua Gold Jewellery, Cameos, Intaglios, Mosaics, &c., at the Great Exhibition. The Show-glass Department is in the Nave, near the Building, and consists of every article requisite for the table and sideboard. In the Foreign Department the display of Bronzes, Clocks, and Ormolu is of the most elegant description. Sarl and Sons have also added to their stock of every novel experience. Sarl and Sons have also added to their stock of every novel experience. Sarl and Sons have also added to their stock of the most exquisite designs.
Books containing Engravings and Prices may be had on application.
Sarl and Sons, 17, and 18, Cornhill, London.

FRODSHAM and BAKER, 31, Gracechurch-street, E.C., respectfully invite attention to their Stock of Astronomical Clocks, Chronometers, Watches, &c. Also to their Stock of Gold Chains, Plain, Jewelled, and Enamelled, Gold Guards in the Queen's Own Pattern, from 3½ ounces. Albert Chains, from 8s. each.—FREDERICK HARVEY, Gold-chain Manufacturer, 31, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, beg to call the attention of the Public to their large and elegant stock, in new patterns, of Fiddle and Thread Plate, at 30s. per ounce. Many other patterns equally finished, plain or chased.
Fiddle Pattern. £ s. d. | Thread Pattern. £ s. d.
12 Table Spoons ..... 30 11 0 | 12 Table Spoons 25 16 0
12 Dessert Ditto ..... 22 16 0 | 12 Dessert Ditto 18 0 0
12 Tea Ditto ..... 11 8 0 | 12 Tea Ditto 9 0 0
12 Dessert Ditto ..... 22 16 0 | 12 Dessert Ditto 18 0 0
2 Gravy Spoons ..... 5 16 0 | 2 Gravy Spoons 4 16 0
2 Soup Ladles ..... 3 15 0 | 2 Soup Ladles 3 0 0
1 Fish Slice ..... 2 10 0 | 1 Fish Slice 2 0 0
1 Pair Sauce Ditto ..... 2 0 0 | 1 Pair Sauce Ditto 1 12 0
1 Fish Slice (gilt bowl) ..... 3 10 0 | 1 Fish Slice (gilt bowl) 3 0 0
1 Pair Sauce Ditto ..... 2 10 0 | 1 Pair Sauce Ditto 2 0 0
1 Pair Soup Tureens ..... 6 15 0 | 1 Pair Soup Tureens 5 15 0
Any article may be had separately at the same price per ounce. Each article is guaranteed to be of the full Sterling Standard of Purity. Fiddle Pattern, 18s. per ounce. Thread Pattern, 15s. per ounce

NEW BOOKS.

EVERY FAMILY'S BOOK.
Now ready, 17th Thousand, with improved explanatory Woodcuts, fcap 8vo, 6s. 6d.,
HOUSEHOLD SURGERY; or, Hints on Emergencies. By JOHN F. SOUTH, Vice-President of the College of Surgeons, and Surgeon to St. Thomas's Hospital. With a Chapter on Poisons by Dr. Glaisher.
"South's Household Surgery is Everybody's Book. We have seldom seen a book of wider or more sound practical utility."—Morning Chronicle.
"South's Household Surgery is very valuable and reliable work for families, emigrants, schools, &c."—English Churchman.
"South's Household Surgery is one of the most carefully useful books for families."—The Press.
"South's Household Surgery is an admirable book, and ought to be in every family."—Medical Circular.
"South's Household Surgery is invaluable, especially in the country."—Bell's Messenger.
"South's Household Surgery is full of the most useful information."—Sheffield Times.
JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

NEW VOLUME OF THE WELLINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.
This day is published, 8vo, 20s.
THE SUPPLEMENTARY DESPATCHES OF THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON, relating to the Expedition to Denmark, and the Conquest of Zealand.—Negotiations for Peace—and Fine Arrears of the British Army into Spain, July 1807—Jan. 1809. Vol. VII. Edited by his Son.
THE IRISH CORRESPONDENCE, 1807 to 1809. 8vo. 20s.
II.
THE SUPPLEMENTARY DESPATCHES RELATING TO INDIA. 1 vols., 8vo. 20s. each.
These volumes under complete the Indian Section of the First Edition of the Supplementary Despatches.
JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

MURRAY'S HANDBOOKS.
The following New Volumes are just issued:—
MURRAY'S HANDBOOK FOR BERKS, BUCKS, AND OXFORDSHIRE; with a particular account of the City and University of Oxford, and Notices of the Thames & Kennet Valleys and Windsor. With Map. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.
II.
MURRAY'S HANDBOOK FOR SOUTH WALES. With Map. Post 8vo. 9s. 6d.
III.
THE HANDBOOK FOR NORTH GERMANY, including Holland, Belgium, Prussia, and the Rhine, and to SWITZERLAND. A New and Revised Edition. With Maps and Plans. Post 8vo. 10s.
JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

Twelfth Edition, revised by M. A. Tidbaldin, Hon.; fcap. cloth,
CONVERSATIONS FAMILIERES; or, a Conversation for the Use of Young Ladies, in French and English. By T. GRANDINEAU, late Prench Master to her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen.
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, & CO.

A MANUAL OF ILLUMINATION. By J. W. BRADLEY, B.A.; with Appendix by T. GOODWYN, R.A., and Practical Instructions. Price 1s.—WINSOR and NEWTON'S Prize Medal Colours, 18, Rathbone-place, London, W., and all Booksellers and Artists' Colourmen.

Just published, price 1s. 6d.; sent free for 18 stamps,
AN UNCOMMON BOOK.—THE WILL OF GOD IN PREACHING, as Revealed in the Scriptures. God's Way of Preserving Health and Restoring it when Lost. By DR. OWEN, 15, Regent's Park Terrace.

IMPORTANT TO INVALIDS.—Now ready, price 2s.,
SYDENHAM; its Climate and Palace. By DR. GRANVILLE, Author of "Spas of Germany," and Other Works.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

5000 CHURCH SERVICES, ELEGANTLY MOUNTED, from 6s. 6d.
2000 PRAYER-BOOKS, elegantly mounted, from 2s. 6d.
4500 POCKET BIBLES, from 1s. 6d. to 3 guineas.
PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

WEDDING STATIONERY.—Patterns free by post.
The newest and most fashionable designs.
PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

PARKINS AND GOTTO,
PAPER and ENVELOPE MAKERS,
24 and 25, OXFORD-STREET.
By far the cheapest house in London. Carriage paid on orders over 20s. 50 reams of the best Cream-laid Note sent post-free for 10s.

NO CHARGE MADE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with ARMS, CREST, or INITIALS. ILLUMINATING, DIE-SINKING, and PRINTING. Best Wedding Cards. Usual Note, full size, five quires for 4s.; thick ditto, five quires for 5s.; Foolscap, five quires for 3s. 6d. ROBERT IVES, 59, Gracechurch-street.

WEDDING CARDS, WEDDING INVITATIONS. Invitations to the Ceremony, Dejeuner, or Ball, Printed and Stamped in Silver, with Arms or Crest, in the latest fashion. Note elegantly engraved, and 100 Superfine Cards Printed, for 4s. 6d. At HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS.—Elegant Dressing Bags, Travelling Bags, Dispatch-boxes, Writing-cases, Work-cases, Ladies' Reticules and Carriage Bags, Envelope-cases, Tablets, Purses, Pocket-books, and every description of Fancy Leather Goods. Best Self-closing Back-nib, also a choice variety of Elegancies and Novelties suitable for Presentation; to be had at H. RODRIGUES', Fancy Repository, Establishment, 42, Piccadilly.

DRESSING-CASES, DRESSING-BAGS, and highly-finished Elegancies for Presentation, of every description. The Registered Portable Writing-case, Work-box—RICHI and BAZIN, 113, Regent-street; 4, Leadenhall-street; and 37, Rue Castiglione, Paris.
LICENSE-MAKERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1776.

LADIES' WEDDING OUTFITS
Complete in every line of costume.
Descriptive Lists, with Prices, sent free by post.
CAPPER and SHRIMPTON, 171, Greenhard-street, London, E.C.

Sent post-free, Descriptive Lists of
COMPLETE SETS OF BABY LINEN,
for the use of the nobility and gentry.
Also of LADIES' OUTFITS, and every description of UNDERCLOTHING FOR HOME, INDIA, AND THE COLONIES.
For Ladies and Children of all ages.
LICENSEDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT.
Established in 1776.

BABIES' BASSINETS,
Trimmed and Furnished
ready for use, and sent home free of carriage.
BABIES' BASKETS.
Trimmed and Furnished, as approved
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, Greenhard-street, London, E.C.
Descriptive Lists, with Prices, sent free by post.

CHRISTENING ROBES, 24 Guineas, for Infants Cooks, 1 Guinea.
33 Embroidered.
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR, 55, Baker-street.

BABIES' BERCEAUNETTES, Baskets & Cradles, 1 Guinea.
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR, 55, Baker-street.

MARRIAGE OUTFITS.
Cotton Hosiery, 3s. 6d.
White Gloves, 1 Guinea.
Real Buckingham Hosiery.
Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR, 55, Baker-street.

LADIES' RIDING TROUSERS.
Chamois Leather, with Black feet.
Baker-street.
W. G. TAYLOR.

LINSEY RIDING HABITS for LITTLE GIRLS, 18 Guineas.
Leather Riding Habits, 6 to 8 Guineas.
W. G. TAYLOR, 55, Baker-street.

WANTED TO PURCHASE LEET-OFF CLOTHES, Regimentals, Jewellery, Plate, &c. for Cash, of all descriptions. Ladies and Gentlemen attended by Mr or Mrs. MOSES, from London, and 30, Marylebone-lane, Manchester-square. Parcels sent. P.O. orders remitted. Established 1760.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES for AUSTRALIA.—Mr. and Mrs. JOHN ISAACS, 319 and 320, Strand (opposite Somerset House), W.C., beg to intimate that having returned from their Provincial Tour, they are purchasing the highest prices in cash for Ladies' Gentlemen's, and Children's Wearing Apparel, Uniforms, Jewellery, Plate, Books, Boots, and Miscellaneous Goods. Letters attended to. Parcels from the country, the utmost value returned same day. Reference, London and Westminster Bank.

NEW MUSIC.

D'ALBERT'S NAPLES QUADRILLE.—The most popular Dance Music of the Season. Illustrated with View of Naples, and dedicated to Garibaldi. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S GARIBALDI GALOP, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pollini Festival. Splendidly Illustrated with a Portrait of the great Chief by BRANDARD. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLE, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pollini Festival. Splendidly Illustrated with a View of Moore's National Monument. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pollini Festival. Price 4s. Also, D'ALBERT'S Galitzin Waltzes. The Waltz of the Season. Splendidly Illustrated.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S NELLY GRAY VALSE, with Dorcas Accompaniment. Now set but published. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES or ST. JAMES'S GALOP. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated with a Portrait of the Prince of Wales, by BALDUS. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S CAMPBELL MINSTRELS' QUADRILLES. The last new set, introducing Nicky Gray and other favourite Melodies. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for ORCHESTRA, just published. Victorine Valse, Victorine Quadrille, Lurline Valse, Lurline Quadrille, Victorine Galop, Sicily Gray Valse, Campbell Minstrels' Quadrille, St. James's Galop, Prince of Wales Galop, Garibaldi Galop, Erin go Bragh Quadrille, Pollini Festival Quadrille, Galitzin Waltzes, Kathleen Mavourneen Waltz, Nelly Gray Valse, &c. Catalogues of this popular Composer's works may be had on application to the Publishers.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FASHIONABLE DANCE MUSIC for the PIANOFORTE, as played at the Galitzin Valses, Pollini Galops, Stuttgardien, Varsovienne, &c. Composed by D'ALBERT, and Illustrated with Fashionable Costumes. Edited by FRANZ KUHE, at the Court of Stuttgardt.
At CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S STANDARD DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing Country Dances, Hornpipes, Reels, Jigs, Strathspeys, Highland Flings, Galloises, Spanish Dances, Newly arranged by FRANZ NAVA. Net price, 2s. 6d.
At CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, a brilliant Fantasia on this favourite Air by the above popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. Portuguese Love Song. Composed by the Hon. Mrs. NORTON. Transcribed for the Pianoforte, price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS'S NELLY GRAY, the favourite Song, sung by Mr. Sidney Nelson, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and cheapest. Containing all the Rudiments, Scales, Exercises, Instructions, Lessons, Exercises, and a great variety of the most popular Melodies arranged as Studies. Full music size, 96 pages, price 2s. net.
N.B. A List of Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SONG OF SPAIN FANTASIAS, Just published.
KUHE'S ITALIAN CAVATINA. 3s. 6d.
KUHE'S Two Fantasias from LE PROPHETE, 3s. 6d. each.
KUHE'S FAUST, 4s.
KUHE'S DON GIOVANNI, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S SPARKLING DEWDROPS. Morceau de Salon for Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LANGE GARDIEN.—Pensée Poétique pour le Piano. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE JUVENILE ALBUM.—Just published, the Juvenile Album, a Selection of Popular Airs for the PIANOFORTE by E. F. RIMBAULT. Price 2s. each, post-free.
No. 1. Nursery Rhymes. | No. 2. Sir Roger de Coverley. | No. 3. Polka Mazurka.
4. Overland Mail Galop (D'Albert).
5. Old Dobbin.
6. Sweet and Low Valse.
7. Cheer Boys Cheer.
8. Tyger Valse.
9. Big Ben Polka.
10. Lurline Valse (D'Albert).
11. Sicily Gray.
12. Du Du Liegst.
13. Lurline Quadrille (D'Albert).
14. Victorine Valse (D'Albert).
15. Old Dobbin.
16. Cheer Boys Cheer Polka (D'Albert).
17. Nelly Gray.
18. Sweetly Smile Beauty Valse (D'Albert).
19. Auld Lang Syne.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S CHEAP WORKS FOR VARIOUS INSTRUMENTS. Price 1s. 6d. each, post-free.

FLUTE.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Marches.
Chappell's 100 Dances (Second Series).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorine."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrels' Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

CORNET.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorine."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrels' Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

CORNET-A-PISTON.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs, Dances, &c.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorine."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

ENGLISH CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs, Dances, &c.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorine."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

HARMONICON.
Chappell's 50 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 50 Scotch Melodies.
Chappell's 50 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Any should be taken to order CHAPPELL'S Cheap Works, as they alone contain D'Albert's and other popular copyright works.

MUSIC HALF PRICE and Postage-free.—All half-priced Music forwarded in any part of the Kingdom immediately on receipt of half the published price. Catalogues gratis. The Profession and Trade supplied to sell at half price.
CRITCHLEY & CO., 73, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.

NEW MUSIC.

20 SONGS BY MENDELSSOHN for One Shilling.—No. 1 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 20 Songs by Mendelssohn, with English Words and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

12 SONGS BY BALFE for One Shilling.—No. 2 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 12 Songs by Balfe, with Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

14 SONGS BY VERDI for One Shilling.—No. 3 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 14 Songs by Verdi, with English Words and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

20 SONGS OF THE CHRISTY MINSTRELS for One Shilling.—No. 4 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 20 Songs of the Christy Minstrels, with Choruses and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

50 FAVOURITE WALTZES for One Shilling.—No. 5 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains fifty favourite Waltzes for the Pianoforte. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

12 SETS OF QUADRILLES for One Shilling.—No. 6 of "Boosey's Musical Cabinet" contains 12 Sets of Quadrilles for the Pianoforte (Original). Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

40 POLKAS AND 10 GALOPS for One Shilling.—No. 7 of "Boosey's Musical Cabinet" contains 40 popular Polkas and 10 Galops, with all the trios and second parts complete, for Pianoforte. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

25 OPERATIC GEMS BY VERDI for One Shilling.—No. 8 of "Boosey's Musical Cabinet" contains 25 Operatic Gems, arranged for Pianoforte by Nordmann. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

AN EVENING WITH MEYERBEER (published this day). Melange for the Pianoforte, by NORDMANN, containing Airs from Robert le Diable, Robert le Diable, Duo, Les Huguenots, Valse, &c., price 3s.; net, 2s. 6d., sent free.
AN EVENING WITH CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS, solo and duet. Price 3s.; net, 2s. 6d., sent free.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE MAZURKAS of CHOPIN, edited by J. W. DAVISON, complete in One large Volume, music size (upwards of 200 pages), price 6s., elegantly bound by Hayday. The Mazurkas of Chopin are superbly bound in crimson cloth, gilt edges, price 10s. 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.—This is a very handsome publication. The price is cheap, the page is clear, and the type is good.
—Musical World, Aug. 25, 1860.

DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTE MUSIC.
Madame Oury's Santa Lucia. 3s.
Leopold de Meyer's Santa Lucia. 3s.
Leopold de Meyer's Home, Sweet Home. 4s.
Brinley Richards' Bonnie Dundee (Dircksen). 3s.
Brinley Richards' Sweet Home Waltz. 3s. 6d.
Anchor's Thou art so Near. 3s.
De Jaime's Sweet Home. 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE BALLROOM MUSIC-BOOK. Price 4s., superbly bound in cloth, gilt edges, containing 30 Waltzes,
30 Polkas,
30 Quadrilles,
12 Quadrilles (complete),
12 Mazurkas,
12 Varsovianas.
By all the most popular composers of the day, forming the most attractive and cheapest Ballroom Music ever published.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

RAMSGATE SANDS QUADRILLE.—The last new set published. Founded on favourite and well-known melodies, illustrating a visit to Ramsgate in characteristic style. Price 4s.; Full Orchestra, 3s. Also, the popular Quadrilles, by BRANDARD, in Colours.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NOTRE DAME. Romance for the Pianoforte by EMILIUS BERGER, published with very beautiful colours by Forgeot. Price 3s. Illustrated by Lolly. Published by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LAURENT'S LOCH KATRINE WALTZ on Scotch Melodies. Published this day (Illustrated) by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LAURENT'S KILLARNEY WALTZ on Irish Melodies. Published this day (Illustrated) by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LAURENT'S MARGARETTA WALTZ on the Italian celebrated Song, recently Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 3s. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

KUHE'S ROBERT LE DIABLE (just published), price 3s. Kuhe's "Domino Noir," 3s. Kuhe's "Dinorah," 3s. Kuhe's "Lucrezia Borgia," 3s. Kuhe's "Semiramide," 3s. And Kuhe's Sonnambula Valse, 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

TENNYSON'S exquisite Lyric, FOR EVER AND FOR EVERMORE, set to Music by the Hon. Mrs. NORTON. Illustrated PERIODICAL.—THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of September 8, is just published, price 6d., by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CHRISTY MINSTRELS' NEWEST SONGS, 24 songs in one thin music pocket-book size. Price 2s. 6d., post-free.
"Plantation." Solo and quartett.
"He is coming." Solo and chorus.
"Never mind." Solo and quartett.
"Sweet Ellen Bayne." Solo.
"Dearest Mae." Solo and chorus.
Published only by MACKNISH and Co., 22, 23, and 25, Great Marlborough-street, W.

GARIBALDI POLKA. By T. BROWNE. Performed with great success at the Floral Hall Concerts. With a splendid Illustration in Colours. Price 3s.
KETTLES and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

D'AUSSOIGNE MEHUL'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, a brilliant Fantasia on this favourite Air of Pianoforte by this popular composer. Price 3s., post-free.
KETTLES and Co., 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SNOW-WHITE BLOSSOMS. New Ballad, Composed by GEORGE BARKER. Sung at the London and Provincial Concerts with great success by Miss Poole, Miss Emerick, Miss Dolby, Miss Lascelles, and always re-demanded. May be had with or without Chorus, price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

DOWN BY THE SEA. New Song. Composed by J. W. CHERRY. Price 2s. 6d. The most successful and popular Song of the season.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

KUHE'S New Piece, FOUR LES ATTRAITS. Price 3s. net. Kuhe's Fantasia on the drooping swan. Price 3s. net. Kuhe's Fantasia on Dinorah. Price 3s. net.
COOTE'S QUEEN OF THE HARVEST VALSE. This third edition of this popular set now ready. Beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG.—OLD FRIENDS AND OLD TIMES. Composed by W. VINCENT WALLACE. Price 2s. 6d. This is the last production of the distinguished Composer, and is published immediately after the death of his wife. Miss Fanny Huddart, and will be found a perfect gem by all admirers of the Composer's genius.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG.—THE DREAM OF OTHER DAYS. Composed by LOUIS-CLUSE BISHOP, Grenadier Guards. Price 2s. 6d. Colonel Bruce has published several songs, but "The Dream of Other Days" will eclipse them all. Miss Poole is singing it with the most distinguished success.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG.—THE BEAUTIFUL EARTH FOR ME. Composed by S. GLOVER. Price 2s. 6d.
Mr. Sims Reeves has sung this charming song with unsurpassed success at the Queen's Concerts. It is published in the most pleasing composition, one of Glover's happiest conceptions.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, with Metallic Resonator.—The most extraordinary Cottage pianoforte! Three Strings and the full compass of seven octaves! The Metallic Resonator gives to the smallest means to endure the greatest amount of wear, and to stand perfectly in any climate. Price 50 guineas. Also, the Model Cottage, in rich walnut, fully, and richly and the best pianoforte ever produced. The case is of the most elegant description, in rosewood, the touch elastic, and the repetition very rapid. Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure its standing well in tune. Price 50 guineas. Testimonials from the most eminent in the profession, and particularly, in the Foreign Model, testimonials from Sir Pianofortes, in all respects comparable, has hitherto been made in England. Descriptive Lists, with Prices, sent free by post.—CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

HARMONIUMS at CHAPPELL'S.—The HARMONIUM by ALEXANDRE is the only instrument of the kind which possesses the singularly beautiful tone of a pipe-organ, and which, from its peculiar mode of construction, and is also unrivalled for this Church, Chapel, School, or Cottage.
Full descriptive Lists, with Prices, sent free.
CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

THE PATENT DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM is the best class in the Exhibition. Illustrated Catalogues of Pianofortes and Harmoniums upon application.—CHAPPELL and Co., New Bond-street; or 15, George-street, Hanover-square.

TO PURCHASERS of PIANOFORTES.—CHAPPELL and Co. beg to announce the Sale of every PIANOFORTE for sale by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ERARD, and CLEMENTI, at the Manufacturers' prices, and a discount of every PIANOFORTE for sale by CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, nearly of full compass, equal to new, at greatly reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE, 14s. per Month, by CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street. The Trade Discount and Intricate mode of obtaining a really good Pianoforte for Hire entirely done away with.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street, Cavendish-square, W.

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO. have a great variety Secondhand, at the close of the London Season. 201, Regent-street.

EVANS'S ENGLISH HARMONIUMS, 20 guineas and upwards.
THE SOCIETY OF ARTS PRIZE WRITING-CASE, manufactured by PARKINS and GOTTO, fitted with Their Patent Envelope-Case, Inkstand, and Pen-tray, and Pen-wiper, to any part of the United Kingdom upon receipt of 28 stamps or P.O. order for 20s. 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

ELEGANT PRESENTS at PARKINS and GOTTO'S.
24 Initial Notes, from 4s. 6d. per 100; Wedding-cakes, 24s. 3/4 Writing-cases, from 2s. 6d. | Envelope-cases, from 2s. 6d.
Dressing-cases, from 10s. 6d. | Inkstands, from 2s. 6d.
Desks, from 7s. 6d. | Blotting-cases, from 2s. 6d.
Scales for Letters and Parcels. | Pen-trays, from 2s. 6d.
Pen Knives, from 1s. 6d. | Pen-wipers, from 1s. 6d.
Cases and Brought Boards & Mem. | Tablets, from 1s. 6d.
Cases of Instruments, from 5s. 6d. | Purses, from 2s. 6d.
Cases of Mathematical Instruments. | Pocket-books, from 1s. 6d.
800 Portmonnaies, from 1s. 6d. | Albums, from 2s. 6d.
Fancy and Coloured Papers. | Tin-cutting and Die-sinking.
Illustrated Catalogues sent post-free.
PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.
Parkins' celebrated Gold, Bronzed, and Jet Oxford-steps.

GARDNERS' LAMPS are the BEST.—The largest, most elaborate, and cheapest assortment in London, at GARDNERS', 453, Strand, opposite Somerset House, and weekend equal to new. 31 and 2. Gardner (by appointment to her Majesty), 453, Strand, opposite Somerset House, W.C.

F. AND C. OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, W., Crystal Glass Chandeliers, for Gas and Candles.
Table Glass and Glass Dessert Services complete.
Glass Shades, Globes, and every description of Glass for Presents.
Rims, Burners, and Furnishing Orders promptly executed.
Manufactory, Broadbent-street, Birmingham.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, with all the recent Improvements, Fire-proof Doors and Dust-proof Coverings. List of Sizes and Prices sent free on application. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard, London.

CELEBRATED CANTERBURY PUNCH.—One dozen of this delicious beverage in quart bank bottles will be forwarded, carriage paid, to any part of the United Kingdom, on receipt of Post-office order for 30s., payable to T. F. DE LASAUX, Wine Merchant, Canterbury.

WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE.—Gourmets have pronounced "Lea and Perrins'" the best addition to Soups, Gravies, Hashes, Fish, Game, &c.
Beware of Worthless Imitations, and see the Names and Address on Wrapper, Label, and Bottle, as required by Act of Parliament.
Sold by CROSSE and BLACKWELL, and all Dealers in Sauces.
LEA and PERRINS, Worcester; and 60, Wigmore-street, London.

ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY, for making quickly and at small cost superior Barley Water; recommended by the Faculty, and used in the Royal Nursery, for nursing, and especially supplied to the Queen.
ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., 57, Jermyn-street.
Sold by Grocers and Oilmen in Town and Country. Beware of weak Imitations of this Name.

FRYS' IMPROVED HOMŒOPATHIC COCOA, a special preparation for delicate stomachs, more easily digested and very superior Homœopathic Cocoa, in packets and tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., and 6s. each.—Manufactory, 58, Newman-street, Oxford-street, W. Edward Hamilton, M.D. Author of "Homœopathy, its Tenets and Tendencies."
Price 1s. 6d. per lb. Sold by Grocers and Druggists.

SUMMER RECIPE FOR PATENT CORN FLOUR.
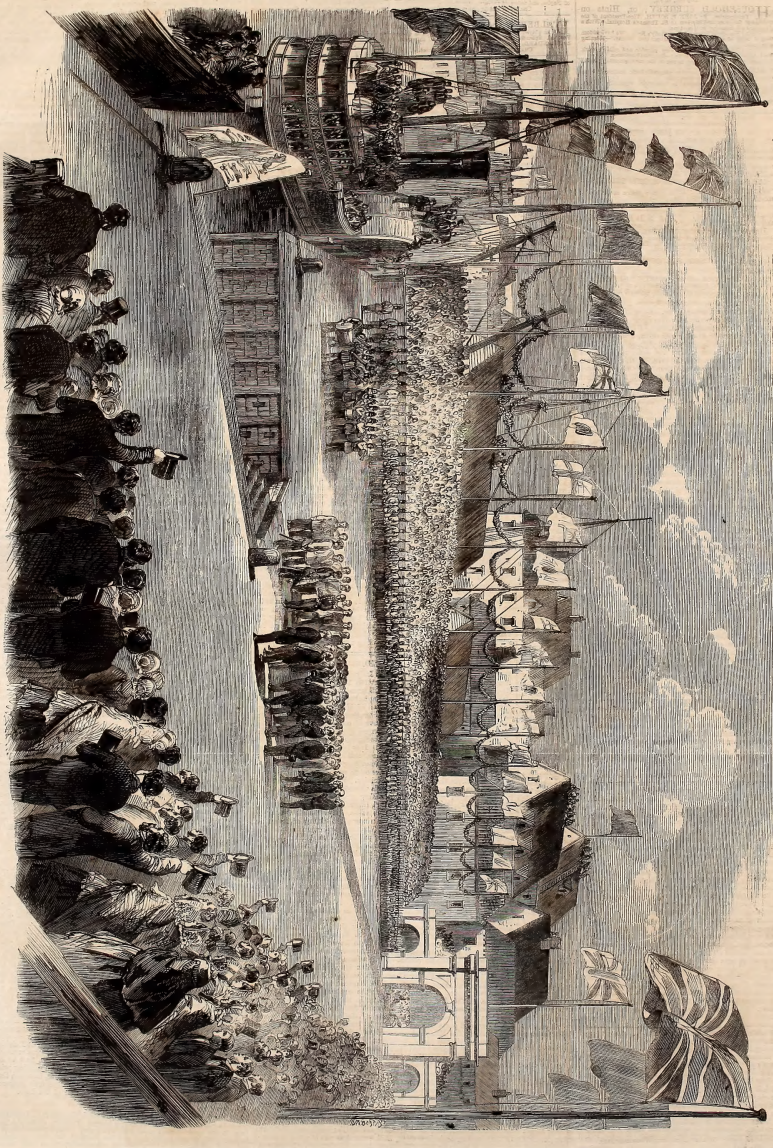
With Preserved or Green Fruit.
Half the Flour with the Fruit, and then pour it over the stew, and brown it in the oven or before the fire. This is very light, and delicious with Fruit Puddings or Pastry.
BROWN and POLSON, Paisley, Manchester, Dublin, and London.



BROWN AND POLSON'S
PATENT CORN FLOUR.
"This is superior to anything of the kind known."
First of Exhibitions, 1851. Prize Medal, 1855. Sole Royal Warrants from France, as supplying the Emperor and Empress, and from Spain, as supplying the Queen. Supplied by BROWN and POLSON, to the Queen, the Queen Dowager, and Prince Consort. Paisley, Paisley and London.

When you ask for
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH
see that you get it.
as inferior kinds are frequently substituted.
Warranted pure and unadulterated.

ROYAL ALBION EXTRA Refined POWDER BLUE, prepared expressly for the finest laundry purposes. Sold in packets, 1d., 2d., 4d., 6d., and 1s. each, by Grocers all over the kingdom. To be obtained of all respectable Grocers, Italian Warehousemen, Oilmen, Chandlers, &c. One trial will convince every one of its superiority. London Wholesale Depôt, 56, Lime-street, E.C., and Lombard-street. ALBERT BLUE, Manufacturer, 1, Crane-court, E.C.

BED CANDLES, to Burn Half an Hour only. No Waste, no Sparks, no Snuffing required. Sold by all Dealers in the Kingdom, and the Inventors, WHITMORE and CRADDOCK, 16, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, E.C.

BENZINE COLLAS'S CLEANS GLOVES, &c. It is a necessary article in the Parlour for removing Grease from the Mantelpiece.—Of all Chemists and Perfumers. Depôt, 111, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

THE PRINCE OF WALES LANDING AT ST. JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK.—FROM A DRAWING BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, C. H. ANDREWS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE PRINCE OF WALES LANDING AT ST. JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK.

HIS Royal Highness reached the harbour of St. John late on the evening of Thursday, the 2nd ult., the cannons on Partridge Island hoaring the signal of the joyful tidings. An immense crowd of people, eager spectators, assembled at the wharf called Reed's Point to witness the arrival of the steamer, which was greeted with prolonged and enthusiastic cheering. At ten o'clock the following morning the Prince and suite disembarked from the Styx, amidst the roar and thunder of artillery; and was received on the wharf by the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor, the Mayor, and Corporation, and escorted to his residence, Chipman House (the property of the late Chief Justice Chipman) by a grand procession, composed of the Executive Council, both Houses of the Legislature, the civic magistrates, and the different societies and trades.

DAMASCUS.

THE atrocities so lately perpetrated in Syria have aroused to activity and intensity that perennial interest which all must feel for that land which is the cradle of the world's history. Even as it still is the names of Abraham and Cowley, and we cannot, as Englishmen, hear without thrilling anxiety and fervent sympathy the sad tale of crueltics inflicted upon members of our Native Fellow-Christians. Such was "Sham Sheref" the "Holy Damascus," the most ancient city in the world, the "Eye of the East," has been profaned by the commission of every detestable outrage to which a noble people are forlorn and less than that of any other Pashalic, could be incited by fanatic bigotry and cruelty or tempted by lust and cupidity.

Damascus is the largest, most populous, and most splendid city in Turkish Asia Proper, according to Gibbon, if we except Bagdad on Nosh, and in all probability justly claiming an original as ancient, its name is preserved from the old Hebrew "Dammesek," as far back as note in the age of Abraham, and from that day to this it has been great and flourishing. Its rulers have been of every nation, and the forms of its government very various. Sometimes it has been the Royal city of King or Caliph, and sometimes it has sunk to the position of a provincial capital. After its capture by Pompey the Great, in B.C. 64, it was possessed by Phinoch Nechio; then by Nebuchadnezzar; and then fell under Persian sway. And now it is the capital of a province of the Turkish Empire, and the Turk, held it by turns for centuries; but Byzantine, the Arab and the Turk, held it by turns for centuries; but under all these successive changes of dynasty, and sometimes ruled by a native Prince or an alien conqueror, it has never fallen from its high rank, or ceased to be prosperous, populous, and wealthy.

Once before in history the same Saracenic city that has now laid one great quarter of the town in ruins swept the whole city with the besom of destruction. When the Caliph Walid, A.D. 705 (sometimes called in Holy Writ Hezekiah) had established in Damascus the seat of the Caliphate, it was possessed by Phinoch Nechio; then by Nebuchadnezzar; and then fell under Persian sway. And now it is the capital of a province of the Turkish Empire, and the Turk, held it by turns for centuries; but Byzantine, the Arab and the Turk, held it by turns for centuries; but under all these successive changes of dynasty, and sometimes ruled by a native Prince or an alien conqueror, it has never fallen from its high rank, or ceased to be prosperous, populous, and wealthy.

Once before in history the same Saracenic city that has now laid one great quarter of the town in ruins swept the whole city with the besom of destruction. When the Caliph Walid, A.D. 705 (sometimes called in Holy Writ) had established in Damascus the seat of the Caliphate, and the inhabitants had paid the head-money he imposed upon them. The citadel had been stormed and its defenders put to the sword, but this slaughter was not sufficient to slake the thirst for blood that possessed the Turks and Arabs. Upon the persistent refusal of many of the Damascenes had acided sectarians in their wars he excited the passions of the barbarians he led, and for ten days they revelled in the city, and gave its temples to the flames. Southern Asiatics that only one family of the great Christian population escaped the sword of the Turkish.

The Crusaders once, under Louis VII., Conrad and Baldwin, besieged Damascus, but the disputes and jealousies of the leaders put an end to their operations that the arrival of Moslem reinforcements drove the Christian host to an ignominious return. Thirteen years after Saladin from the beginning of the sixteenth century the Sultan Selim conquered Syria, then governed by the Mamelukes.

So much for the Damascus of the past. In the great source of her beauty and her pride in all ages will remain to her; and a splendid heritage are those luxuriant gardens which surround the city on every side, and whose streams that bless them with fertility. These gardens are not the trim well-kept inclosures of limited extent to which we are used here, but are for the most part composed of the almond, walnut, olive, fig, and pomegranate, beneath whose shade vegetables and minor crops are cultivated. Sometimes these other flowers run wild in tangled thickets; whilst here and there the palm, poplar, or cypress tower skywards, and break the monotonous outline of the luxuriant woods. The gardens, however, of these forest gardens is the apricot, and famous throughout the Eastern World is the "mishmish" of Damascus, and grateful to the taste is the fruit, both dainty, small, and white, except when a bold sunbeam has stolen through the leafy lattice and has left a burning crimson flush upon each cheek his fervid kiss has touched.

Through these gardens one may wander for miles on miles, catching now and then stray glimpses of the city with all the houses, domes, and minarets that may dominate it; but to gain a true general idea of what Damascus really is we must ascend to the summit of what rises to the hill of Salahiyeh, which rises behind the village from which it takes its name—a sort of suburb of the city itself—and, but its way in the gardens, and strayed off to the skirts of Anti-Lebanon.

The hill is abrupt, rugged, and utterly barren, and its declivity is studded with tombs. Some of these are monuments of the imagined than that which is here presented by the dreary sterility of its top, barren and cliffy and quite unconnected with the prodigious vast fertility at its base. From the foot of this arid slope of Salahiyeh a broad expanse of richest foliage of every hue of green—each tenfold more intense by the contrast to the parching aridity—stretches for many a mile over the plain, and, girded round by this dense forest, the holy city stands bright, glistening, and pure, like a diamond set in emeralds. Her white minarets glitter in vigorous relief against the dark woods that encircle her, every beyond the gardens, and in the cool, sober hue of ultramarine over the richness of their warm and glowing green. Then fertility suddenly ceases, and the desert resumes its sway and sand, and the wild country over which the Israelites and the Euphrates is reached, and cities up to far Bagdad. In whatever direction you look, and however far your eye may reach, the immensity of Abana and Pharpar all is life and growth and animation, beyond that influence the parched soil is dead and lifeless.

We give an engraving of this View from the hill of Salahiyeh. It is one of the most beautiful and striking prospects in the world, and, giving from without upon the splendid and magnificent city of which it rose, we can appreciate the feelings of the prophet, who as he turned from his Damascus to seek the purer air and more picturesque hills of his native Arabia, pronounced Damascus to be "too delicious" for man's abode. Man, he said, could have but one paradise, and he was one who could not but heaven upon earth.

There are but few striking relics of antiquity in Damascus. A very handsome Roman arch and some portions of the walls remain, but the great mosque, and a portal and part of its wall, are probably of Roman date, and older. It was not improbably in that the site of what can now boast is this great Mosque of the Ommiades. It occupies the site of the Cathedral of St. John, which again was preceded by a magnificent temple on the same ground as the Jupiter of the Romans. Before the earliest ages the chief shrine of the inhabitants stood on this spot, and that chief was erected Romans and was consecrated successively to Jupiter, John the Baptist. Then, when the Arabs were victorious, half the cathedral was given up to them, and they converted it into a mosque for the Christians, but ere many years elapsed the whole building was taken from them by the Caliph Walid, who lavished immense sums on its adornment. Its walls were wrenched with gold vines, its arches inlaid with jewels, and from the roof hundreds of golden lamps were suspended by golden chains. The gold and gems adorning the place but the marble, translated pavements and the marble colonnades surrounding its vast court-yard remain. One of its doors was originally a Christian door during the Partar conflagration and afterwards rebuilt. Another, the "Minaret of Jesus," is 250 feet high. Close to this mosque is the tomb of the renowned Saladin. No Christian foot dared to enter the mausoleum of their deadliest but most chivalrous foe.

The bazaars of Damascus are of immense extent and very picturesque and in them the shopping of a great part of Syria and that Mesopotamia is transacted. Many a wild Bedouin and Moslem pilgrim have entered a city's gates to shop scented plunder from afar and rushed in to complete the work the rascals of the bazaars had so ruthlessly begun.

The sumptuous mansions of the rich present the same peculiarity, but high, whitewashed, windowless walls, but their numerous courts and lofty saloons are decorated in marble and fountains and orange and gilding, and fragrant with the blossoms of citron and orange trees, jasmine and flowering shrubs.

The population of Eastern cities can only be guessed at approximately. That of Damascus is probably not far short of 150,000, and rumour does not flatter them. The Turks say that the Damascene is the most mischievous subject of the empire, and one quarter of the city especially bears an evil reputation and has ever been a sanctuary for the criminals of all the country round. This quarter it was that Omar gorged a great proportion of the vile bands who (helped, it is true, afterwards by Druse and Moslem) worked all the horrors of the massacres, outrages on the fair daughters, and slaughtered the tender infants of Syrian Christendom.

ARMS FOR DAMASCUS.

NAPLES.

GARIBALDI, unaccompanied by any of his troops, made a triumphant entry into Naples at noon on Saturday last, and was received with enthusiasm. He immediately proceeded to the Hôtel d'Angleterre, and subsequently visited the Neapolitan fleet, which had refused to accompany Francis II. to Gaeta, to the care of the Sardinian Admiral Persano. He afterwards visited Signor Bonaparte at the Foreign Office, in the office of Minister of the Interior, and appointed several other Ministers, including Liborio Romano, Minister of War. Order seems to have been completely maintained in Naples during the critical interval which elapsed between the King's departure and the Dictator's arrival.

Naples disputes with Constantinople the claim of occupying the most beautiful site in Europe. The city stands on the shores of the bay at the same name, and is built as the base and on the slope of a range of hills which have the appearance of an amphitheatre. Its forts are St. Elmo on the north-west, fort del Carmine, and the Castello Nuovo between the Royal palace and the sea, and the Castello dell' Ovo, which is the oldest Castle in Naples, and the View on our first page was taken, is a massive pile, and was founded by Ferdinand I. in 1480, when he was the first to make it the royal residence. It is a modern gaol, and enlarged by Don Pedro de Toledo. It is—rather was—used as a barrack and a military prison. The Castello Nuovo was built by Alfonso I. in the fifteenth century, and is the oldest event it was fortified. Its chief edifices are a cathedral, built on 10 granite columns which belonged to a temple of Neptune, a convent of the holy apostles, built on the ruins of a temple of Mercury; San Filippo Neri, San Spirito Santo, and the Church of the Annunziata, the whole palace used as a record office; the Pelagio degli Studii Publico, which contains the Bodkonico Library, a museum of antiquities, &c.; the Museo Borbonico, the seat of the Sovereign, seat of an Archbishop, and of the central administration of the kingdom, and has a college, a public library, a museum, and numerous fine, large, public building yards, and a Royal marine hospital. Its university, occupying the old College of the Jesuits, has 70 professors and about 1,000 students. Its episcopal seminary, medico-chirurgical school, veterinary school, deaf-mute institution, Royal military school, schools of design and music, an institution for the education of the blind, are only the centre of all the learned institutions of the kingdom, and has four public libraries, and 20 scientific institutions. Naples is the capital, and not generally diffused; an exchange, ten theatres, among which the opera, San Carlo, is one of the largest in Europe. The Marinelle and Chiaia promenades, hospitals for the sick, aged, and foundlings, but its streets are, notwithstanding, infested with mendicants of all ages, and the Lazzaroni, a class of beggars and thieves beyond the Castel del Carmine, was formerly the abode of the Lazzaroni, a class which has lost its distinctive features. The Teatro di San Carlino is the head-quarters of Pulcinella (Punch) and the characteristic theatre of Naples. Its charitable institutions, hospitals, and asylums for invalids for the sick (sometimes with 2000 patients), blind, aged, poor, and the orphan. Its manufactures are glove, silk, and cotton, and Torre Annunziata, Torre del Greco, Sorrento, carriages, &c. It has Royal type foundries and iron and glass works. It is the first port of the kingdom; its harbour is formed by a mole, and protected by a fort on each side of it into the bay. Naples was founded by the Greeks, who called it Parthenope. Virgil makes the city exist in the 12th century. Naples was sacked by Belisarius in 536; peopled successively under the Normans, the Emperors of Germany, and Spain; and in 1808, and the latter was driven from it by the Austrians in 1814. Naples was the scene of an extensive revolt in 1820, which the Austrians put down, and 1860 lives were lost. Among the numerous objects of interest in the vicinity of Naples are Vesuvius, Pompeii, Herculaneum, Baiæ, Lake Avernus, &c. In 1857 the population in 1857 was 419,800, excluding a garrison of about 20,000.

REGGIO.

THERE are two cities thus named in Italy, one of which is in North Italy, in the Duchy of Modena. But the Reggio recently taken by Garibaldi, and which is the capital of Reggio, is in the extreme south city and seaport of Italy. It is the capital of the province of Calabria, and stands on the coast of the Mediterranean, 10 miles south of Messina, and is one of the most beautiful in Europe, the public edifices around being amply one immense grove of orange, citron, and lemon trees, the roads through which are fringed with aloes and American aloe, and flowers of tropical gorgeousness: and the climate is as delicious as the scenery is beautiful. It is fortified and well supplied with water, is the see of an Archbishop, and has a cathedral, several convents, a Royal college, hospital, theatre, and public gardens, manufactures of silk, and carries on an export trade in wine, oil, citrons, and olives, the produce of its vicinity. Its population amounts to about 17,000. The Reggio (says Murray's Handbook of Southern Italy) is a town, with spacious streets, rising gradually from the broad Marina towards the hills, which are covered with villas and gardens. Among which are scattered numerous villas. It was almost entirely destroyed in 1783, and was rebuilt on a new plan. Many of its public buildings are modern, and the finest is the cathedral, adorned with fountains on the Marina. Among its public institutions are a library, a hospital, and a college of commerce, but the water supply is unhealthy, and adapted for the production of the fruits and flowers of both hemispheres. The duke-palm attains a great height here, and the banana finds its native abode in the gardens; the roads are bounded by the American aloe and the cactus, and the neighbourhood is the native country of the prickly pear, known as Indian figs. Nothing can surpass the beauty of the scenery, particularly the view from the Marina, which is especially lovely at sunset. Nothing can imagine almost all the prospects towards the south Rosa forms a prominent object. The Reggio is supposed to have been founded by a colony from Chalcis, in Eubœa, and to have been subsequently reinforced by colonies from Zancle (Messina). A colony from Reggio founded Velia, or Elea, under their general Alcidamidas, after the capture of Rhome by the Spartans in the 77th Olympiad. In times long before Rome's rise to Roman conquest it was one of the most flourishing Greek republics, and was celebrated for the number of distinguished men it produced. During the Athenian expedition to Sicily the Rhegians observed so strict a neutrality that they refused to allow the fleet to take in water in their port, and when Dionysius of Syracuse, anxious to secure their alliance, requested a consort from the city, the Rhegians offered him the hand of Rhegium's daughter. Under the Roman rule it was called Rhegium Julium, to distinguish it from Rhegium Lepidi, on the Via Æmilia, near Modena. Its Society say town in Italy has suffered such severe or such frequent reverses. It was almost deserted, in consequence of repeated earthquakes, in the time of Augustus, who contributed largely to its restoration. In 549 it was taken by Totila; in 918 by the Saracens; in 1005 by the Pisans; in 1060 by Robert Guiscard. It was reduced to ashes by Frederick Barbicosa; it was sacked by the Turks in 1552, burnt by them in 1557, and totally destroyed by the earthquake in 1783, when 32,000 persons perished. Many of its public buildings and churches were fit at intervals, but without causing much damage. Lycophron the poet is said to have lived at Rhegium for some time, and St. Paul visited it on his voyage from Cesarea to Rome: 'And from thence we fetched a compass, and came to Rhegium; and after one day the south wind blew, and we came the next day to Puteoli.' The Bay of Reggio is remarkable for the optical phenomenon called the Fata Morgana, which occurs only at high tides, when the most perfect calm of sea and air prevails. It is extremely evanescent, and is usually seen about sunrise, but is of rare occurrence. Reggio is backed eastward by the impending range of the Aspromonte, a granite peak, Montalto, is 6,860 feet high. Its lower flanks are clothed with forests of beech and oak, and its higher regions with pines.

PRESENTATION OF A SILVER BUGLE TO THE ESHER VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.

THE ceremony of presenting silver bugles to the volunteer corps by the "women of England" is by no means novel. We need not remark that may be taken as a type of these interesting incidents which are weekly being recorded. It represents the presentation of a bugle to the 4th Surrey Volunteer Rifle Corps at Esher, in the name of the ladies of Esher, by Lady Dott Gordon, who impressively delivered an address that was duly responded to by Captain Dodgson, in a manly and feeling manner. It is not to the hearts of all who had the pleasure to listen to it. The speech of her Ladyship and that of Captain Dodgson Sir Henry Fletcher, Officers, and Men of the 4th Surrey Rifle Volunteers.—The ladies of Esher and neighbourhood have evidently not forgotten your corps a silver bugle subscribed for by them. We earnestly hope that always never sound but for your training in those martial exercises by which you are rendering yourselves efficient, as your country has a right to expect. But if the day should come when its notes must ring on a field of battle, I assure you, in the name of the subscribers, that the ladies of Esher have no fear that it will stir up true and gallant hearts ready to shed their blood in defence of our country's liberties and of the Queen who so faithfully serves and truly represents our happy Constitution—that Constitution which has fostered the spirit of unanimity and self-reliance which has once more called forth the energies of the people. I already a moral triumph has been achieved. The Frank assurances of renewed friendship between the Emperor of the French and the Queen Empress prove that the British nation has found the way to win his regard. Let us on no account relax in our efforts to deserve it. Defence, not defiance, is our motto. Should an enemy land on our shores and on these shores, and defence no become defiance, may this our bugle be the first to sound the advance and the last to sound the retreat!"

THE FARM.

ALL the gloomy forebodings which the modern deluge engendered have quite passed away, and we may be pretty generally assured that, both as regards quality and quantity, the harvest will be well up to the mark. In other seasons corn has often been prematurely ripened, and far more than the average harvest has been the case in this year. No harvest season has been more calculated to teach murmurers a lesson, and to show how much more we have reason for unanimity and disastrous borne with such patience and trust.

A great international trial has been made by the Royal Agricultural Society of the Netherlands between three reaping-machines—to wit, Cuthbert's improved Hussey, Burgess and Key's improved M'Cormick, and Wood's new reaping-machine. The performances took place in Holland; and eventually the 600 florins were awarded to Burgess and Key. The object of the trial, which was so much admired and followed by it as quite to compensate for the greater cost of working it as compared with hand-labour. The latter is the more to be envied, while Wood's had its commendation indorsed by a silver medal. The two first machines met lately for the Royal Society's prize. Bray's Hussey was also in the field, and commended itself to those deficient in the machinery, and after a very rigid trial, in which the five judges gave marks for the quality of cutting, the quality of straw, quality, and durability, the total result was in favour of Cuthbert's, which is manufactured by the Derby Company at Beddale. It showed its greatest superiority in the quality of cutting, which, both as regards the straw and the grain, is rather remarkable that the English and the foreign judges should have differed so widely. Bray's machine was tried on a piece of wheat and barley grown on ridge ground at Tyler Hill, near Canterbury, and although it was purposely kept a secret for four days the crop proved to the crops.

Mr. Dudding's sale was well attended, and drew a few principal lots. Lady Mary Coke, 1770, by Sir Samuel Standish, by Sir Samuel daughter Lady Louisa Bountiful (1870s.), joined the herds of Mr. Torr and Mr. Richardson, and Mr. Dudding's own. The latter realised 2,000 guineas, with 1 guinea to spare, and 226gs. more for nine calves brought up the grand total to 2,226gs., among the prettiest we remember, the average of 414 4s. 6d. for seventy-seven rams, makes a very gratifying conclusion to Mr. Dudding's farming career. One of the rams in the present sale has been shown at Oxford, 1858, Battersea, 1860, winner in the aged bull class at Horncastle last July, and a very handsome commendation at the Royal Agricultural Society's show. Mr. Torr and Mr. Greetham determined that he should not leave the country. The Duke of Sutherland, Lord Feversham, and Messrs. Noakes, Atkins, and Richardson were also among the principal purchasers present and so was Captain Oliver, who added no little fire to the biddings. Mr. Dixon's sale on the following day was also a good one for fifty-three; and Holly, for the sake of her Colings descent, was the prima donna of the day.

The Lincolnshire ram shows during the week were well attended, and, in spite of the immense number of rams brought out, the prices were well supported. Mr. Stephenson's sale, on Friday, was a large one. He pure, large-sized Leicesters are a capital cross for the breeder Lincoln, and Mr. Stephenson's rams were quietly handsome and a somewhat closer set fleece. Sir Tatton Sykes had a large letting of Leicesters, at Eddlethorpe, on the twenty-first day; and Mr. Stratton (14 gs. 9th) and Mr. Wright (10 gs. 10th) master of the Holderness.

Mr. Turner, of Barton, near Exeter, has fixed his sale of Devons and Leicesters for Thursday, the 4th of October. Exeter is a good town for this class of sheep: When the Holme-Pierrepoint flock was sold on 1834 the purchasers were made for Exeter. Mr. Turner's flock during the 150-guinea shearling ram of that sale as well. Thirteen years after he carried off twenty of the old ewes, at a high figure, from the Devonshire plains sale in 1847, and a large number of Leicester breeders, for the best £40 prize for shearling rams, at the Newcastle Royal Agricultural Meeting, in 1858, was the first-prize prize for the two-year-old ram, at the Paris Exhibition, against a very formidable array.

The Aldershaw sale evidently keep was exceedingly good. Royal Butterfly won the aged bull prize against Napoleon, Bow-Bells, Duchess 2nd, and two others, made by a group which will long be the talk of the Keighley country side. Sir Charles Tempest had six in his class, and Mr. Aldershaw's were not behindhand. Mr. Greetham's sale, at Skipton, on the following Friday, the Towneley cattle were withdrawn from the ring just before the commencement of the sale, Mr. Wright drawn from the ring just before the commencement of the sale, Mr. Wright Stanley Boss represented Hindostan and Stanley Rose was returned. Mr. Boss represented Hindostan and Stanley Rose was returned. Mr. Boss and the five-hundred-guinea Queen of Athelstane bull, and Mr. Wright drawn from the ring just before the commencement of the sale, Mr. Wright Stanley Boss represented Hindostan and Stanley Rose was returned. Mr. Boss represented Hindostan and Stanley Rose was returned. Mr. Boss and the five-hundred-guinea Queen of Athelstane bull, and Mr. Wright Duchess 2nd, and two others, made by a group which will long be the talk of the Keighley country side. Sir Charles Tempest had six in his class, and Mr. Aldershaw's were not behindhand. Mr. Greetham's sale, at Skipton, on the following Friday, the Towneley cattle were withdrawn from the ring just before the commencement of the sale,

THE VOLUNTEER REVIEW AT KNOWSLEY PARK.

On Saturday, the 1st inst., there was a grand demonstration of the Lancashire and Cheshire Volunteer Corps at Knowsley Park, near Liverpool, the seat of the Earl of Derby. There was "Royal weather," for the occasion, and the review passed off in a manner that left little, if anything, to desire. The riflemen mustered about 12,000 strong, and there were, according to some accounts, nearly a quarter of a million spectators. We give, from the Times, a detailed account of the proceedings on the 1st inst. at Knowsley Park, in connection with the three Engravings, from drawings by our Special Artists, of the review ground in the present Number, which will, we trust, form a suitable memorial of this magnificent fête :—

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

Saturday, the 1st inst., was quite a field day in Lancashire. Throughout its wide extent there were unusual stir and bustle and the pleasant sense of holiday enjoyment. Not only did the regiments at London and Liverpool Docks Dep ôted in Liverpool, and Manchester, and Preston, and all the country round, but the population was one of the most loyal and devoted to the cause of Majesty reviewed the volunteers in the metropolis, have, on a scale more or less extensive, to prepare to transport themselves by the most rapid and easy manner to and to a great movement as delat which during the days of its preparation and drill and parades it had grown into a favourite and delightful holiday. Originating in the independent impulses of a free people, the volunteer force would be unfitted within itself the germs of dissolution if required not to be nursed and dandled into healthy and energetic life. Its enormous multitude as the outset of its rise into importance, it could not come them; and it now finds itself, after some sixteen or eighteen months of earnest work, the subject of loving appreciation, both from the Government, and the object of national hope. It is a proud position to have won in so short a time. It is a position which will be the envy and admiration of all who would seem difficult to maintain. Yet each successive display of the efficiency of the volunteer force but serves to call forth fresh materials for praise, and fresh grounds for exultation that it continues to do its work so bravely and so well. Day by day its ranks are closed up and its various features in its progress. Nor is it an easy task to keep pace with the rapidity of its march. Never in the record of a people's history has there been seen the presence of the Sovereign's lieutenancy, or half-a-dozen others, held in command over the provinces, we will not say with such a universal zeal for the free and hearty co-operation of the influential and the noble. Show fights, inspections, and the meetings follow each other with the rapidity of a succession. The movement, in short, is in its "hot youth," and is revelling in all the exuberance of the newly-awakened delight in the exercise of its long-questioned popularity. There is about it, however, an earnest spirit which forbids one to regard the opportunities that are afforded for display and fête over, it will dwindle into comparative inactivity, or assume a less imposing aspect. Its energies seem like that river near to Knowsley Park on Saturday fail to do much to keep such a spirit alive.

PREPARATIONS FOR REVIEW.

To all the volunteers of Lancashire—and they are some 14,000 strong—the Earl of Derby, more than six weeks since, issued intimation that he proposed the ground at Knowsley should be that day be placed at their disposal for the purposes of a review. Before a fortnight had elapsed some 12,000 of the volunteers had signified their desire to be present at the festive purpose. Then arose the question as to how to get them to the ground. Some of them were to take the chief part in its proceedings, and of him who was its prime and liberal promoter. The volunteers of Liverpool, as a body, acted, indeed, with assiduous energy. Each corps hoped by means of increased exertion to win for itself the most distinguished place in the review, and to a man, or a private, to do its work in such a manner as to reflect no discredit on the county to which it belonged. Knowsley Park—the noble park—was found to afford the requisite military details. Its secretary, Captain Milly, laboured with the chief constable and to secure the best and most convenient arrangements seconded by Major Hanson, Assistant Inspector of Volunteers. The result was the rapid and satisfactory completion of the preliminary arrangements. No longer than a week or ten days back, however, one important thing yet remained to be done. The ground for the review was to be chosen, and the eye of more than one person conversant with military matters had, indeed, been fixed by common consent on a particular spot in the park which seemed was the most eligible for the purpose; but it was not until the close of the week preceding the review that the point was finally determined upon. General Sir G. Wetherall, Commander-in-Chief, and Colonel Wilbraham, Adjutant-General, the Earl of Derby, Major Harman, Captain Heig, and Captain H. Hornby, of the Liverpool Artillery, definitively chosen.

KNOWSLEY HALL AND PARK.

Knowsley Hall stands on an elevated spot in the south-east of the old domains of England. It is a vast pile of building, constructed for the most part of red brick, and is of more modern date than the other mansions are said to have been erected so far back as the days of Henry VII. Additions have been from time to time since been made, and it covers a large dimensions of noble manners. It is imposing because of its great extent, rather than for any beauty of appearance. Around it the Knowsley grounds are beautiful and extensive. Lawn and woodland alternate in picturesque variety. Frequent clumps of trees are dotted over the smooth and velvet slopes. Broad avenues open up charming views. Of these views none is finer than that which presents itself when you look to the south, which, standing facing the west, a solid, oblong, and stately mass. A wide expanse of park-land, bounded here from trees trees, rises gradually in a southern direction. The prospect which it reveals is that of beautiful grounds, gently gliding into a wooded ridge, bounding in the distance with a dense forest, then rising again to a higher degree of elevation, and forming small eminences which are crowned with trees. Of these the most prominent is known as the spire on the top of a church, and which, when all other objects become visible, the eye must have wandered beyond the limits of Knowsley; but this is not the only one which from these points is revealed, so like one great park is the whole scene on which it opens and which extends to Ormskirk and Formby, and so on towards St. George's Mount.

ARRANGEMENTS IN THE PARK.

It is on this western side of the Hall, and at a distance from it of somewhat less than a quarter of a mile, that the spot on which the review was made for the review. At that distance a flat space of ground, about one hundred and twenty yards wide, runs from the south to the north. On the side in north side it is bounded by a ridge of more elevated land, into which it gradually slopes, and which assumes a convex form as it rises to the more considerable extent. Its south side is defined by a similar but a still more gradual elevation. Along the centre of the flat space of ground runs a broad and well slopes of its northern boundary, and so on along the north side, so as to confine the spectators which has not been already mentioned, unprotected while wire fence was run. The ground thus bounded in formed a sort of triangle with the apex pointed at its northern end. Here, on the summit of the ridge, and at the point where the two sides of the triangle together elevation and depression of the ground was extremity to be the most favourable for the review to make without inconvenience this and their whereto point as they marched in review before the officer. At the base of the triangle, on the south side were erected two stands, the one being set apart for the Earl and Countess of Derby and their guests; the other devoted to the use of the Mayor and Corporation, the Lord Mayor, under the general direction of the noble owner of Knowsley himself, had the duty of making the arrangements for the due supply of refreshment to all non-military respects principally noted. Behind these stands the remaining space of broad, flat, sandy, level ground, was, on the review days, the elevated ground immediately outside being set apart for carriages and vehicles of every description. The space allotted to the latter was large, for the nature of the ground and the necessity of allowing the facility of entrance to the view of the more favoured guests provided, moreover, that there should be a single line of seats, running from Lord Derby's stand close by the fence for upwards of a quarter of a mile, for the accommodation of the public.

THE COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.

That much was well and sumptuously done, all, however, the least part of the work which Captain Hornby had undertaken to accomplish. Lord Derby had invited 14,000 volunteers to review, and Captain Hornby was to be had done more. He had, in the spirit of a princely hospitality, determined to provide refreshment for them. Now, he had not undertaken to do this even a single meal is, as Sir R. Airy and, indeed, every military man of experience will tell you, no mean achievement. It is a task which is full of difficulty and highly undertaken. It was, however, undertaken by Lord Derby, and with the able and active assistance of Captain Hornby, it was accomplished. Captain At the rear of the platform on which it was arranged the volunteers on their arrival from all parts of the county should form into their respective corps. Each of these tents was divided into two compartments, and in each of those compartments were placed the necessaries for the refreshment of the men. The tents in which twenty went to compose the five brigades which were expected to take part in the review. The number of refreshments to be given to each individual tallous was attached to the tents and divisions of tents thus allotted to the purpose of the commissariat, so that with the greatest possible confusion in serving out the refreshments could be avoided. In those tents 11,340 meat pies were by eleven o'clock on Saturday morning placed. To wash these down fifty-nine hogsheads of beer, brewed at the Hall—but vividly kept below the strength of the brewery—Knowsley Ale, was provided. Provision for the fine flavour and highly-levelling qualities—were placed under canvas. Nor were the means for the general public—for the public who were not expected to be present at that which he had done all in his power to make a brilliant spectacle—neglected. Tents for their accommodation were erected at convenient points throughout the park, and refreshments supplied to them by Mr. Morpith, of Liverpool, on a reasonable and regulated rate of charge. Water, both for their use and for the horses, was placed at intervals along the ground. To bring about these results, and to go through much more, to which it is needless further to allude, Captain Hornby had in a brief space of time to effect, and no work could be done in a manner more courteous or with a success more complete.

THE GATHERING OF THE SPECTATORS.

Devout were the expectations as the day fixed for the review approached in the busy centres of industry in Lancashire. Unfavourable weather might not come to mar the enjoyment of that which it had been arranged should be a general holiday. Saturday morning at length dawned, to dispel for the moment all doubts and fears upon the subject. The sun rose bright and cloudless, and a brilliant morning was that of Saturday, the 1st inst. By o'clock his beams were entirely shorn of their splendour. The sky became overcast: rain fell in a short shower. Again for a few minutes the sunshine and hope; then, again, a night sprinkling of rain, partially to obscure the face of the heavens. Such was the state of affairs at Knowsley Park, and the other towns of Lancashire, began to pour forth their thousands. Liverpool, Manchester, Preston, and all the towns and districts round, with the president of Knowsley Park at their head, were in motion. There were abroad the signs of unusual stir, and bustle, and excitement. Carriages of every description, from the humble cart to the lordly coach, were in infinite of people. With unmistakable forethought a plan of the ground, assisted by authority, was issued, giving the chief features in the review, and pointing out the positions to be taken up by the volunteers, as well as by the public at large, and published in the Liverpool Mercury and other local journals, for all directions. To avoid confusion, too, written instructions were printed on a large scale for the guidance of the police in the management of the traffic which, as it might so, carriages or volunteers only, or pedestrians generally were to visitors from Liverpool, and Manchester, and Bolton, and hundreds of places inside, from Ormskirk, and Southport, and Wigan, and St. Helen's, and Prescot, Ormskirk; and Croxteth gateways, from the summit of each of which floated a large flag, the Union Jack, the Lancashire Rose, and Derby Knot, having streaming by its side another emblazoned with the arms of the house of Stanley. Early in the morning carriages commenced to arrive. By twelve o'clock some 6000 or 7000 persons were, after a walk of two or three miles, on the ground. Many more arrived subsequently, by railway, which, with its white lines of posts and fences, looked picturesque in the extreme. The weather in the meantime had assumed a threatening aspect. The sun still occupied the sky, but then there were frequent gleams of sunshine—at the more frequent and threatening clouds which overhung the whole expanse of the heavens. After half-past twelve no rain fell, while the few showers of the morning had served to lay the dust and to refresh the air. The prospect was a brighter, a brighter, a brighter ground.

At about half-past two the first regiments of volunteers came upon the scene, and took up their position on the plateau on the north side of the ground. From that point they marched down into the centre of the ground, and, halting in their progress through the crowd, arrived in rapid succession, with their respective bands playing, and their colours flying, at the positions on the south side of the ground which the officers had previously indicated. The position on the south side of the inclosure had become filled with one dense mass of human beings, the various sections of which were distinguished by contributes their thousands to the already vast assemblage. Splendid equipages, filled with the rank and fashion of the county, were ranged in front of the line. Fringe of many colours, the crest of the rising ground set apart for their accommodation.

ARRIVAL ON THE GROUND OF LORD DERBY'S CORTEGE.—MARSHALLING OF THE VOLUNTEERS.

It was near five o'clock. The troops, amounting to about 11,000 strong, were all arrived, and were drawn up in order on the north side of the ground, which extended along the verges of the high ground on which they formed. The wind had become very high, and the clouds were dark and lowering, as the spectacle could desire. There was about the landscape itself a glow and a warmth of colouring which were most favourable to the effect of the scene. At the commencement of the proceedings which had drawn such numbers together, there was a slight shower of rain, but it was of short duration, and a sudden the union jack was hoisted on the flagstaff at Knowsley. It was the signal that Lord Derby had left the Hall, and that his field was about to open. Old hospitality of the noble owner of which they had, in common with an immense number of the spectators, been the recipients on the day of the Liverpool Artillery, who were stationed on the extreme left of the line of volunteers, formed the nucleus for a general salute. A moment after, the same, at a quick pace, headed by Sir G. Wetherall, with whom, mounted on a magnificent charger, rode Lord Derby, with himself. The Earl's son, Lord Lieutenant of his county, Colonel Wilbraham, Lieutenant-Colonel Egerton, Lieutenant-Colonel Heig, Major M. Taylor, and Captain Hornby, and immediately following. The rear was brought up by two open carriages with one, in the first, the Countess of Derby, Lady Emma Stanley, and Lady Emma Stanley. Rapidly the cortège entered the ground at the south-eastern side and proceeded to the north-western. Then the line of volunteers separated crews and the waving of hats and handkerchiefs by the assembled thousands, and the cheers which rent the air, told that the commencement of a general salute as he rode by the troops in line.

The ceremony of the Earl and Countess of Derby and Lady Emma Stanley drove up to their stand on the south side of the inclosure, where they took their seats in front of the Mayor and Corporation of Liverpool. Captain Horsby's was the Staff flag, by which Sir G. Wetherall took up his post. The Earl of Derby having dismounted, a few minutes after, on the ground by the ground so backstack. The volunteers up to this moment maintained their original position, Sir G. Wetherall up to the left of the line, and Captain Hornby on the extreme right were placed the Lancashire Hussars and the Lancashire Artillery, the Liverpool Artillery, commanded by Major Hanson, one of the latter corps brilliant in cavalry but, numbering only thirteen on Saturday, there were present, with the exception of the Liverpool Volunteer Artillery, consisting of four battalions 2000 strong. They took up their position in front of the Liverpool Artillery, and on the extreme right of the line. Then came the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Lancashire Rifle Brigades, each being 1000 strong, and the 1st Lancashire Artillery, and the last-mentioned brigade occupying the extreme left of the line.

THE MARCHING PAST.

The position of the several brigades, commencing with the artillery, was followed by the cavalry, and the whole presented a most imposing appearance as G. Wetherall having rode by the troops in this order, and having returned to the Staff flag, he gave the word of command for the marching past on the ground and the extreme right of the line formed column and the movement of the troops commenced. Slowly and majestically the artillery moved past in close mass of close columns of brigades, and opening out to wheeling distance by battalions in front of the Staff flag, the Lancashire Rifle Brigades and the cavalry began to march been executed by the artillery and infantry brigades. The eight battalions marched past in four. On a fine open space at the point at the west end of the ground, along the level space already indicated, the Lancashire Hussars, about 200 strong, known as Sir R. Gerard's corps, in their gorgeous uniforms of scarlet and gold, and mounted on their splendid chargers, and a most fully entitled them to share with the artillery the honours of the day, and who marched past in splendid style. The cavalry were the last of the troops, and these having marched past and proceeded to form with the other brigades in front of the Staff flag, Sir G. Wetherall, with Lord Derby and his staff, and those who had halted at the east end of the ground, rode back at full gallop by the whole length of the front of the troops in line. They were, as they did so, repeatedly cheered.

THE GENERAL SALUTE.

The marching past, which had occupied about three-quarters of an hour, was followed by the general salute by the troops in line to the Earl of Derby as he passed. Slowly they moved down the slope, on the crest of which the Staff flag had been planted, and, as they did so, the cheers rent the air. The position the foremost rank was outstepped by that immediately behind it, and the whole line, as it passed, presented a most imposing appearance. The station stood far back on the plateau being now on the verge of the slightly declining ground on the north side of the ground. The officers of the line, Sir G. Wetherall and his staff, accompanied by Lord Derby, rode towards the Staff flag, and, having halted at it, the Earl of Derby addressed a few words, aloud, lighted up the whole park with a sudden glory. The sounds of the cheers which had rent the air during the salute sank into silence, and became splendour. The dark masses of the volunteers—for the uniforms of those regiments which had not yet arrived were not distinguishable—the dense masses of admiration of the picturesque beauty of the scene might be heard as follows :—

SIR G. WETHERALL'S ADDRESS TO THE VOLUNTEERS.

While you have been marching past your Colonel has received addressed the assembled troops in the following words :—

"Officers, non-commissioned officers, and men,—I wish to express to you the entire satisfaction I have received—a satisfaction which I am sure everybody else has experienced—at the manner in which you have performed the duty you have undertaken to perform. You have, during the short period you have been assembled together, to improve everybody with the conviction of the extreme efficiency of the force which you compose, and I have to thank you for the movements which are necessary in actual war. I have had many opportunities of witnessing the movements of troops in the presence of the enemy, and can, in my opinion, well exceed the rapidity of that advance. It keeps pace with the movements of the line, and I am sure that the Lancashire Brigade has nothing to be ashamed of in the manner in which they have performed the duty they have undertaken to perform. I have also to thank you for the manner in which you have behaved yourselves during the time you have been assembled together. I have no doubt that you will continue to behave yourselves in the same manner, and I am sure that you will continue to behave yourselves in the same manner, and I am sure that you will continue to behave yourselves in the same manner, and I am sure

VISIT OF THE PRINCE OF WALES TO NORTH AMERICA.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS IN NORTH AMERICA.

THE progress of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in British North America having directed public attention in an especial manner to our possessions on the new continent, we have been induced to give the accompanying Map, in which the route of his Royal Highness may be clearly traced.

CANADA.

This extensive tract of country, and most important colony of England, extends in a triangular form from Gaspé Point, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, long. 64 deg. 10 min. W., to the shores of Lake Superior, about long. 90 deg. W., between lat. 42 deg. and 50 deg. N., bounded north by the Hudson Bay territory, south by Lakes Huron, Erie, Ontario, and the St. Lawrence, New Brunswick, and the United States of New York, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine; and west by Lake Superior. Length, 1500 miles; breadth, 200 to 400 miles. In 1858 its population was about 2,500,000. The country, formerly divided by the Ottawa River into the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, was united in 1841, though differing in laws, manners, and customs. For some purposes the old divisions are still retained. The upper province, or Canada West, has a level surface, except in the west, where a ridge of undulating heights, stretching from south-west to north-east, forms the water parting between Lakes Huron and Superior. The upper province is watered by streams flowing south to Lakes Erie and Ontario; the principal rivers are the Thames and the Ouse, which enters Lake Erie. The Niagara separates the peninsular portion of south-west Canada from the State of New York on the east. Lower Canada, or Canada East, is characterised by picturesque scenery; it is traversed from north-east to south-west by the Green mountains on the south of the St. Lawrence, the Mealy mountains, which are always snowclad, and the Wotchish mountains, between Hudson Bay and the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Its principal rivers are the St. Lawrence, forming, in part of its course, the boundary between Canada and the State of New York, and its tributaries, the principal of which are on the north, the Ottawa, formerly the boundary between the upper and lower provinces, which flows south-east and joins the main stream at Montreal, the St. Maurice or Three Rivers, which flows south and joins it seventy miles west of Quebec, and the Saguenay from Lake St. John. On the south side of the St. Lawrence the chief affluents are the Richelieu, St. Francis, and Chaudiere, flowing northwards. Besides the great Lakes Superior, Huron, Erie, and Ontario, the surface of the country is covered with sheets of water connected by numberless small streams. Its climate is excessive, the temperature ranging from 102 deg. to 36 deg. Fahr., but the dryness of the air, and the absence of high winds, greatly mitigate the cold of winter, and render the climate salubrious.

The educational establishments are rapidly advancing in number and usefulness, the Government educational grants for Lower Canada being £38,888, and Upper Canada £58,845. In 1851 the population, according to religion, was—

	E. Canada.	W. Canada.
Church of England	45,402	223,190
Church of Scotland	6,047	57,542
Church of Rome	746,866	167,685
Free Presbyterians	267	45,807
Other Presbyterians	19,221	80,719
Wesleyan Methodists	5,799	99,849
Episcopal Methodists		43,844
New Connection	3,442	6,744
Other Methodists	11,355	19,785
Congregationalists	1,227	12,747
Baptists	4,661	45,313
Lutherans	18	12,089
Quakers	163	7,469
Jews	348	103
Others not classed	22,556	54,954
	890,261	952,004

Canada is peculiarly inviting as a field for emigrants, the soil being fertile and easily cultivated, with facilities for commerce on the rivers and lakes almost unbounded. Numerous railways in progress or completed, excellent roads and canals, open up the interior. Land is easily attainable. Crown lands in Lower Canada can be purchased at from 1s. to 6s. per acre, according to situation, the purchase-money being payable in five yearly instalments from the date of purchase. In Upper Canada the cost of land is 7s. 6d. per acre, the purchase-money being payable in ten yearly instalments. Agricultural labourers are in demand, and wages are high. This country was discovered in 1499 by J. and S. Cabot, and acquired by the British between 1759 and 1763. In 1774, by an Act of the British Parliament, a Legislative Council of twenty-three members was appointed to assist the Governor. In 1791 two Legislative Chambers were constituted; and after several years of much discontent in the colonies, and at last an open rebellion in 1837-8, a bill was passed in 1839 to reunite the two provinces under the administration of a Governor-General, a Legislative Council of not less than twenty-two elected by the Crown, and a Legislative Assembly of forty-two members from each province elected by the people, the electoral qualification being the possession of a 40s. freehold. Lower Canada is subdivided into the four districts of Quebec, Montreal, Three Rivers, and Gaspé, each of which has its judges, sheriffs, &c. The districts are subdivided into forty counties, and upwards of 200 seigneries and fiefs, and 160 townships. The seigneries are old French divisions, and mostly inhabited by a population of French descent. In 1793 Canada was made an English bishopric. There are now Bishops of Quebec, Montreal, and Toronto, besides Roman Catholic Bishops, and Protestant dissenting ministers of all denominations.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

This British colonial territory in North America lies between lat. 45 deg. and 48 deg. N., long. 63 deg. 48 min. and 67 deg. 30 min. W., having west Maine and Lower Canada, north Chaleur Bay, east the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Northumberland Inlet, and south the Bay of Fundy, connected at its south-east corner with Nova Scotia by an isthmus fourteen miles across. Its estimated area is 27,700 square miles, and its population in 1851 was 120,609. Its principal rivers are the St. John, Restigouche, and Miramichi. Of the soil, which is fertile, only a small portion is cleared, the rest is mostly covered with dense forests, and the exportation of timber has been hitherto the principal source of wealth. Potatoes are the chief article of culture. Other crops are wheat, maize, oats, and barley. The rearing of live stock is increasing. Its fisheries are highly important, and shipbuilding is actively carried on at St. John. Manganese and iron are abundant. Its government is vested in a Governor, a Council, and House of Assembly of twenty-six members, which meets at Fredericton, the capital. Besides the armed force maintained by the British Government, a native militia of 20,000 is kept up. In education, this is in advance of most other British colonies, having King's College at Fredericton, seven grammar-schools, and in 1846 500 parochial schools. In 1858 a railway, sixty-five miles in length, between St. Andrews and Woodstock, was opened. Also the railway from St. John to Shediac, 100 miles long, was opened in 1859. Public revenue (1857) 41,18,270. The colony is divided into fourteen counties. Its principal towns are St. John, Fredericton, and St. Andrews. It was ceded to Great Britain with Canada in 1763.

NOVA SCOTIA,

a peninsula of North America, forming a British colonial territory, lies between lat. 43 deg. 25 min., and 45 deg. 40 min. N., long. 59 deg. 36 min. and 66 deg. 10 min. W. It is connected on the west with New Brunswick by an isthmus fourteen miles across, and separated on the north from Prince Edward Island by Northumberland Inlet, and by a narrow strait from Cape Breton on the north-east, having on other sides the Atlantic and the Bay of Fundy. Its estimated area is 17,646 square miles, and its population in 1851 was 276,177. Its surface is greatly diversified, and well watered, but nowhere more than 700 feet above the sea. Coal abounds in its western part. Its rivers are numerous, and Lake Rossignol, in the south, is thirty miles in length. The shores are rugged, abrupt, and present numerous harbours, with deep water close to land. Its principal crops are wheat, barley, rye, oats, potatoes, turnips, and maple sugar. In 1851 there were 467 churches and 1096 schools, attended by 31,954 pupils. It has railway communication with Halifax and other places. The government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor, a Council of twelve members, and a Legislative Assembly, elected by 40s. freeholders, two members being returned by each of the ten counties, and the rest by the towns, the principal of which are Halifax, the capital and chief seat of commerce, Annapolis, Liverpool, Pictou, and Windsor. The colony has a High Court of Chancery, and forms, with Cape Breton, a bishop's see. Nova Scotia was discovered by Cabot in 1497, subsequently settled by the French, who named it Acadia, and, after many vicissitudes, finally ceded to the British in 1763.

CAPE BRETON,

an insular colony of British North America, is situated at the eastern extremity of Nova Scotia. Its extreme length from north to south is 100 miles, and its extreme breadth from east to west eighty-five miles. The population is about 35,000. It is irregularly shaped, and indented with bays, almost intersected by an arm of the sea called the Bras d'Or. The land to the north has an elevation of 1000 feet. There are fresh-water lakes and rivers, but not navigable, and salt springs on the coast. The climate is varied. Vegetation is rapid. Maize and other grains are raised; but the corn produced is insufficient for home consumption. The principal exports are pine, oak, birch, and maple timber to Great Britain; fish and coal to the United States and West Indies. The population is mostly of French, Scotch, or Irish descent. This island forms a colony under the government of Nova Scotia, and sends two members to its House of Assembly. Its principal towns are Sydney, the capital, Arichat, and Port Hood. Cape Breton was first colonised by the French in 1712, and taken by the British in 1758.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND,

another of the British colonies of North America, is in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, separated south and west from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick by Northumberland Strait. Its area is 2134 square miles. The island is entirely composed of carboniferous sandstone, and coal is abundant. The climate is milder than in the surrounding British colonies, and the soil is fertile. Most of the grains and vegetables raised in England come to perfection in this colony; timber is plentiful, and the pastures are of a superior quality. The fisheries and shipbuilding are important. Its trade is principally with Great Britain, Ireland, and the adjacent colonies, with which its agricultural produce, timber, deals, shipping, and fish, are exchanged for colonial and manufactured products. The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor, a Council of nine members, and a House of Assembly of eighteen members, elected by the inhabitants. Charlottetown is the capital.

CANADA,
NEW BRUNSWICK
AND NOVA SCOTIA
British Miles 69 to a Degree
0
50
100
150
200
Note.—The boundary between the British Possessions and the United States is shown as settled by treaty August 9th 1842
Railways opened progress
LABRADOR
ATLANTIC OCEAN
Quebec
Montreal
Ottawa
Toronto
Kingston
Hamilton
London
Windsor
Detroit
Niagara
Buffalo
Rochester
Albany
Boston
Portland
Halifax
Fredericton
St. John
Shediac
Pictou
Charlottetown
Arichat
Port Hood
Sydney
Newfoundland
Anticosti I.
Prince Edward I.
Cape Breton I.
Grand Manan I.
Lake Superior
Lake Huron
Lake Michigan
Lake Erie
Lake Ontario
Lake Champlain
Lake Memphremagog
Lake Temiscouata
Lake Timiscaming
Lake Nipissing
Lake Simcoe
Lake Temiscaming
Lake Abitibi
Lake Mistassini
Lake St. John
Lake Kenogami
Lake Metapedia
Lake Megantic
Lake Pohenagamook
Lake Temiscouata
Lake Edward
Lake Memphremagog
Lake Champlain

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE GRAND DUKE OF MECKLENBURG-STRELITZ.

His Serene Highness George Frederick Charles Joseph, Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, was the son of the Grand Duke Charles, and grand-nephew of Queen Charlotte, consort of George III. He was born on the 12th of August, 1779, and married, on the 11th of August, 1817, his Serene Highness Maria Wilhelmina Frederica, daughter of the late Frederick, Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, and had issue Prince Frederick, the present Grand Duke, who married Catherine, daughter of the late Grand Duke Michael of Russia; and Augustus, married to, but since separated from, the present King of Denmark. The Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz succeeded to his sovereignty on the death of his father, the Grand Duke Charles, on the 6th of November, 1816. He himself died on the 6th inst., and was succeeded by his son, Grand Duke Frederick William Charles George Augustus Paul Louis, Hereditary Prince of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who was born on the 17th of October, 1819, and is a Lieutenant-General in the Imperial Russian Service, Proprietor of the 7th Regiment of Hanoverian Infantry, and Colonel of Prussian Hussars. He succeeded to the throne on the 10th of June, 1841, her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta Caroline Sophia Elizabeth Maria Sophia Frederica Amelia Adelaide, eldest sister of the present, Duke of Cambridge, and has an only son, Prince George Adolphus Frederick Augustus Victor Charles Edward, born on the 13th of July, 1848.

LADY RIVERS.

The Right Hon. Frances, Dowager Baroness Rivers, was the only daughter of Lieutenant-General Phipps, of Hale Bailey, of Mulgrave Castle, Yorkshire, and Frances, daughter of Sir Thomas Rumbold, Bart., M.P., Governor of Madras. Lodge-play was married on the 30th of February, 1813, to the Hon. and Rev. Augustus Barkham Rivers, Rector of Sibley Parish, in the county of Gloucester, by whom she had issue. She suffered severely from the effects of the fire at Windsor Castle in 1853, and died on the 7th of January, 1861; she had two sons—George, present Lord Rivers, and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Horace Pitt; and two daughters—Fanny, who married to Frederick William Cox, Esq., and died in 1836; and Harriet Elizabeth, who was Maid of Honour to the Queen, and is now wife of Charles Augustus Murray, Esq., nephew of Thomas, seventh Earl of Elgin. The Dowager Lady Rivers died on the 8th inst.

LADY ADELA IBBETSON.

Lady Adela Cavendish Maria Ibbetson, whose lamented death occurred on the 4th inst., at Osterley Park, her mother's (the Countess Dowager of Jersey's) seat, Brentford, Middlesex, was the youngest daughter of George Child, 8th Earl of Jersey, by his wife, Sarah Sophia, daughter and sole heiress of Robert Child, Esq., and now Countess Dowager of Jersey, and was sister of George, 9th Earl of Jersey, and of the late Princess Esterhazy and the late Lady Clementina Villiers, and aunt of Victor Albert, seventh and present Earl of Jersey. Lady Adela was born on the 24th of March, 1824, nine months before the 17th of November, 1845, to Major Charles Parke Ibbetson, then of the 11th Hussars, and since Brigade Major in Devonport. Lady Adela was the last survivor of those three daughters of the Earl and Countess of Jersey whose beauty and other qualifications had won them such popularity and esteem.

SIR HENRY G. WARD, G.C.M.G.

His Excellency Sir Henry George Ward, Governor of Madras, was the only son of the late well-known novelist, the author of "Tremaine" and "De Vere," Robert Plumer Ward, Esq., of Gilston Park, Herts, by his first wife, Catherine Julia, daughter of C. T. Maling, Esq., of West Herrington, Durham, and sister of Admiral Maling and of the late Countess Dowager of Mulgrave, and was the great-grandson of the gallant John Ward who was with Admiral Rook and the Prince of Hesse at the taking of Gibraltar, and died in the captured fortress. Sir Henry Ward commenced his distinguished career in the diplomatic service. He was Attaché at Stockholm in 1816; at the Hague in 1818; and at Madrid in 1819. He was at Malaga as Consul in 1826, and remained there till May, 1831. He was M.P. for St. Albans from 1833 to 1837, and for Dudley from 1837 till May, 1841. He was Secretary to the Admiralty from July, 1846, to May, 1848. In 1849 he established, as editor, the "Plymouth Chronicle," and he was knighted in the same year, on being appointed Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Isles, and he held the same position as G.C.M.G. He held the Commissionership till February, 1855, when he was made Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Ceylon, where he displayed very admirable ability in his administration, which was very successful. In the May of the present year he succeeded Sir Charles Trevelyan as Governor of Madras. Sir Henry married, in 1824, Emily, second daughter of Sir John Edward Swinnerton Dyer, Bart., by whom he leaves a family. Henry Ward—for the general public regret—died of cholera, on the 2nd ult., at Madras.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

The Royal Astronomical Society's new volume contains a paper, by Mr. G. B. Airy (the Astronomer Royal), "On the Movement of the Solar System in Space." He objects to the term "proper motion" being used for determining, from the observed proper motion of stars, the probable direction of translation of the sun and solar system in space, and the velocity of stars—viz. Sir W. Herschel's method, and its recent modification. Mr. Airy proposes that he terms "the motion arising from the parallactic change of the linear movements of the sun and each star by the use of rectangular co-ordinates," which is abundantly illustrated by figures. The volume also contains, besides other papers, several by Captain Jacob, of the Madras Observatory, on the measures of Saturn and his satellites.

The Mosaic Pavements and other antiquities discovered at Carthage by the Rev. N. Davis, which have been deposited in the British Museum, are described by Mr. A. W. Franks, the Director of the Society of Antiquaries, in the new volume of the Society's "Archæologia," which, besides containing figures emblematical of several of the Roman months of spring, &c., are represented in coloured plates. The paper is of great interest and value.

The Sun Ophthalmoscope.—The new number of the valuable Ophthalmic Hospital Reports, edited by Mr. J. Foster Jones, contains several interesting papers, illustrated by coloured plates. Amongst which is a notice, by Dr. Macdonald, of New York, of a method of using sunlight instead of artificial light in the inspection of the eye—a convex mirror being employed instead of a plane or concave one. "Sunlight," he says, "is much superior to artificial means of illumination. Its intensity may be increased to any extent, and with it the relief of the eyeball is seen of a more natural colour and appearance. By the use of this convex mirror, the fluid of the vitreous illuminated in much larger than when a concave one is employed."

The Statistical Society's Journal (new number), in addition to the usual valuable miscellaneous tables and the official proceedings of the society, contains the Prince Consort's inaugural address at the recent International Congress; the remarks of Messrs. Fox and Senior on the Study of Statistics; and papers by Dr. Jarvis on American Statistics, by Mr. Anderson on Russian Serfdom, and Mr. Purdey on recent results of English Post-rates.

A New Filter for Obtaining Water has been devised by Professor Malaspert, of Poitiers. All experimenters are subject to the annoyance of delay occasioned by the weak resistance of the paper at the close of the operation of filtering; the paper frequently tears, and the weight of its charge of water is increased in the mass of its fibres, in the pulp of the paper, a fine layer of cloth, which not only increases the solidity of the paper, but also affords a very liquid layer after the first filtration. The coarse cloth is not used as in the ordinary method, but much more sure. The new filter has been examined and approved by the Society of Pharmacy of Paris. The members consider that the substance of the filter fulfils all the conditions required for the most delicate chemical experiments: it contains no lime or iron, and only a trace of chlorine—much less than in all other papers.

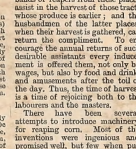
To Purify the Foul Air emanating from the drains or Cologne, M. Gruter proposes the placing over the drainage channels containing pine charwas, some of which are to be saturated with weak sulphuric acid, to the ammoniacal, others to be dipped in a solution of chloride of zinc with fumes; and others to be encrusted with a mixture of lime and oxide of lead, to complete the combination. The charcoal requires to be renewed daily or tea days, when they are to be let fall into the drains and fresh ones supplied.

Physiology of Reptiles.—Dr. Blanchard, of Paris, M.E. Blanchard has laid before the French Academy of Sciences his researches on the respiration of reptiles and ophidians (serpents), and has established that they peculiarly variable tegumentary systems. He states that his observations and experiments prove that the scaly covering of the skin of reptiles is necessary for the efficacious reception of the action of air. Among them the elegant snakes are remarkably solid, in consequence of the osseous particles they contain, and are formed by several superposed layers provided with minute canals and spaces, which being filled with air give the animals the silvery appearance observed on their coverings. When the animal or even the scales are plunged in water, in a time shorter or longer, according to the temperature, the air in the canals is expelled and the spaces filled with water. To prove the permeability of these scales, M. Blanchard has employed coloured liquids.—The chameleons alone among the saurians have a warty skin, which plays an unimportant part in the respiration of the blood. M. Blanchard considers that the lower the position of the reptile in the order of animals, the more important is the impairment to become in the act of respiration. A complete study of the biological condition of animals, thus pursued, must greatly tend to throw light on many intricate physiological questions.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

Reproduction of the Ostrich in Europe.—In 1859 two young ostriches hatched on the estate of Prince Demidoff at San Donato, near Florence, under the care of M. Desmenez. They are now magnificent birds, nearly as large as their parents. This summer five more of these remarkable birds have reared. Twelve eggs had been laid by June 3—one on each alternate day. Incubation commenced on May 31, and lasted till June 26; the female sitting about five hours daily, and the male the remaining sixteen hours. On the 24th of June about four birds were hatched, and on the next on about in the park immediately; a fifth bird appeared on the 24th, and a sixth (a weakly one) was released on the 28th, and lived but a few days. The male remained sitting, while the little ones followed the mother—resting at night under her wings. In consequence of Lady Demidoff's residence the eggs were removed, and consequently forsaken. M. Desmenez considers that in a short time ostriches will be as common in Europe as ordinary poultry, and states that the parent birds have become much tamer than formerly. Fuller details will be found in Prince Demidoff's letter to M. Is. Hilaire, which we read at a recent meeting of the French Academy, and which is printed in their Comptes Rendus.

The Gas-tester (Gas-Prüfer) is the name given by Professor Heumann to a new apparatus invented by him for the examination of the gas employed in lighting. It is described and figured in the new number of his Journal für technische Chemie. The high character of the inventor will secure for his apparatus the attention of those interested in the matter. In the same number is given a paper by Dr. G. Winkler on the manufacture of coal-tar and the gas employed in lighting Chemnitz, in Saxony, the attention of these chemists having been directed to the subject in consequence of the general dissatisfaction with the quality of the gas employed.

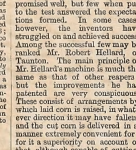


Goethe's Theory of Morphology is ingeniously described and illustrated by a series of plates in a paper by Dr. Richard Spruce "On the Phytotype or Archetype of the Flowering Division of the Vegetable Kingdom" inserted in the new number of the Proceedings of the Liverpool and Philosophical Society of Liverpool."

How Frogs are Produced.—If into a glass globe filled with air, and having the sides moistened with water (says Dr. Mcllen), we simultaneously introduce one or two grammes of liquid ammonia, and fifteen or twenty drops of nitrate of silver, we see, after some time, a dense cloud formed, which fills the globe, and lasts for several hours. This cannot be explained by any direct action of the ammoniacal vapour on the nitrate, either on each other or on the water; and therefore the doctor concludes that the phenomenon known under the name of "rain of ammonia" is the manifestation of the ammoniacal substances some together therein indifferent to each other and to water. It is only necessary that they be obtained at the moment of the air and water into new substances, each one, no doubt, endowed with a special optical property; and perhaps meteorology may draw from the fact some explanation of the physical theory of certain fogs and clouds.

A Permanent Pen.—Messrs. Moseley and Son, of London, have perfected a pen that will write for twelve hours, or more, continuously, without any application to be lubricated, and can be kept in use for years in a pocket pencilcase. The material employed by them, and found to answer admirably, is vulcanised India rubber—not any acid on its surface, as may be fancied in the reservoir. The whole is most ingeniously arranged, but simple, and quite unlike all other fountain pens. For durability, neatness, and similar purposes the invention is one of more than ordinary usefulness.

HELLARD'S REAPING-MACHINE.



Cutting the corn when it is ripe is one of the most important operations of harvest. It requires many hands to accomplish it in dropping time, as the corn when it is ready for the sickle may not be too ripe and shed, nor the fair weather be allowed to pass before the corn is secured. The labourers who are employed all the year for the ordinary purposes of husbandry cannot, without great inconvenience, on extensive farms, and recourse is usually had to the assistance of mechanical aid, or to gangs from the neighbouring towns and villages, or from Ireland. In the latter case, the employer has to provide and encourage the annual returns of such valuable assistance every Indulgement is offered them, not only by wages, but also by food and drink, and amusements after the toil of the day. Thus, the time of harvest is a time of rejoicing both to the labourers and the masters.

HELLARD'S PATENT VICTORIA SIDE-DELIVERY REAPING AND MOWING MACHINE.

There have been several attempts to introduce machinery for reaping corn. Most of the inventions were ingenious and promised well, but few when put to the test answered the expectations formed. In some cases, however, the inventors have struggled on and achieved success. Among the successful few may be ranked Mr. Robert Hellard, of Taunton. The main principle of Mr. Hellard's machine is nearly the same as that of other reapers; but the improvements he has patented are very considerable. These consist of arrangements by which hard corn may be cut, whatever direction it may have fallen, and the cut corn is delivered in a manner extremely convenient for binding. At the same time he claims for it a superiority on account of lightness of draught, and the fact that, although there are a number of cutting knives, it is less likely to clog than any other machines, it can be got through any gateway, while in the case of the latter it has to be carried over or part of a hedge taken down in order to effect admission to the field. This machine has been tested under circumstances with marked success, before a large assembly of practical farmers, whose qualities are thus set forth by its inventor and manufacturer:—"As the corn-growing districts of England, that raise lodged or down-laid corn, the points of which are in advance of the knife, and extend slow the horses or machine might travel. 5thly, Its entire width is only eight feet nine inches, enabling it to pass through ordinary nine-feet field gates, and yet to cutting apparatus is five feet. 6thly, It is self-acting, only requiring a man or lad to drive the two horses, and still cut from one acre to one acre and a half of corn or grass per hour. 7thly, The machine can be used in regular swathes, with the horses lying in one uniform direction, thereby doing away with the possibility of waste when driving in the contrary direction. 8thly, It is made very portable and yet very strong, and can be drawn on its own wheels from field to field, or might easily be put in a common four-wheel dray or drag, and thus drawn any distance without risk of breakage.

HICKETT'S ROAD LOCOMOTIVE.

Some time back we gave an illustration of a steam-carriage which was driven from Buckingham to Windsor Castle. The accompanying Engraving represents a similar one, built for the Earl of Caithness, in which Lord Caithness, accompanied by Lady Caithness, the Rev. W. Ross, and Mr. Rickett, "travelled north," in fact, from Caithness to London. The journey, a distance of 150 miles, was virtually in two days, and which is considered by the oldest and most practical drivers recorded in the annals of road locomotion. A trial trip to a point 150 miles ahead, with a full load of passengers and luggage, passing over the most mountainous districts of Scotland, the party for the journey, with the exception of the ladies, and the supplies of coal and water therefore uncertain; sometimes ascending hills of 1 in 7, tempering up to a splendid sea view, and again descending the winding roads cut in the hill sides, crossing the mountain ranges at an acute angle by a narrow ridge, down an unprotected gallery of rocks, without the slightest accident occurring, promptly speak well for the noble conductor, and also for the inventor of the carriage. It is stated that his Lordship travelled the first stage from Thurso to Reay, a distance of fourteen miles, in one hour and twenty minutes, notwithstanding the numerous stoppages that were made for water. After leaving Reay, on those parts of the road where there was a distance of ten miles, he attained a speed of eighteen miles an hour, and could have kept it up for any distance with ease and safety. In Glen Tain, the mountain, which is steep, and, proceeding down the very steep declivity near where the road on the highroads was lurked with strictness. His Lordship stopped more than an hour for refreshment, and then, amid the gathering shades of night, drove on Golspie, a distance of twenty-four miles, all in that treeless country, and his Lordship drove as merrily as by daylight to within a few miles of John o'Groat's.

LOCOMOTIVE STEAM-CARRIAGE FOR COMMON ROADS, BUILT FOR THE EARL OF CAITHNESS.

These carriages for Mr. Rickett to carry three persons at ten miles per hour on any ordinary roads, which they appear satisfactorily to accomplish. They require about the same space as a horse and chaise, carry sufficient water for ten to fifteen miles, and coal for thirty miles, weigh thirty cwt., and are well mounted on springs, the only noise being that of the escaping steam, which can be stopped instantly when horses appear frightened. The arrangement is such that the carriage and the engine are distinct, and the duties pertaining to each divided. The fireman keeps up the supply of power by attention to the fire and water, while the person occupying the front right-hand seat turns it on as he thinks proper, having absolute control in the use of the steam and in guiding the carriage.

In the Engraving the spectator has taken off the wheels in order to show the machinery, which when working is protected from dust and dirt.

Relics of the Past

KING ALFRED'S JEWEL, PRESERVED IN THE ASHMOLEAN MUSEUM, OXFORD.

This remarkable relic, so intimately associated with the traditionary incident in Alfred's life with which every one is familiar—his finding shelter in a neatherd's cottage when pursued by his enemies—was discovered in the Isle of Athelney, Somersetshire, about the close of the seventeenth century. From the place where it was found, and from the inscription on its face—

"ALFRED ME ORDERED TO-BE-WROUGHT"—

there is little reason to doubt that it was an ornament belonging to the great King, and was lost by him when forced by the Danes, in 878, to seek concealment in the little Isle of Athelney. It was on this occasion, and on this spot, that the well-known incident to which we have alluded is related to have occurred. The story has been told in a truer form, but the truest version of it was found, after the lapse of an early Anglo-Saxon homily, which says:—"The King then went hurbling through hedges and ways, through woods and fields, so that he, through God's guidance, arrived safe in Athelney, and begged shelter in the house of a certain swain, and remained diligently at rest and his evil wife. It happened one day that this swain's wife heated her oven, and the King sat thereby warming himself by the fire, the family not knowing that he was the King: then was the evil woman suddenly stirred up, and said to the King in angry mood, 'Turn thou the loaves, that they burn not, for I see that thou art a great eater.' He was quickly obedient to the evil woman, because he needs must."

The jewel represented in our Engraving, and believed to be immediately connected with this popular story, is of pure gold, about two inches and a half in length, and is composed of an oval compartment, containing a pointed vitreous substance covered with a crystal figure, the outlines of which are traced by threads of gold, and so arranged as to exhibit the features of the countenance, the whole being inclosed in a border of rich gold filigree-work. "This remarkable ornament," Mr. Shaw observes, in his 'Dresses and Decorations of the Middle Ages,' "has been generally accounted an enamelled work, but it must be admitted that the variety of existing specimens of early a date is such, and our acquaintance with the processes of art employed at that period so limited, that the assertion can scarcely be made with confidence."

The reverse of the jewel exhibits on a matted ground a kind of flower, with three branches. Being flat, it is supposed to have been worn attached to a collar. We rather conjecture that, like an analogous specimen of ornament discovered in 1841,* while excavating a sewer opposite Dowgate-hill, in Thames-street, it was a fibula, or brooch, used for fastening the mantle to the shoulder, and, like that, probably one of the productions of those foreign artificers mentioned by Asser as having executed works in the precious metals under the personal superintendence of Alfred himself.

* See "Archæologia," vol. xxix. p. 70, for a description of this curious and ancient ouche by C. R. Smith, F.S.A.

ELECTION OF MAYOR BY BALLOT.

The following ordinance, extracted from the municipal records of the ancient city of Winchester, for the election of the civic magistrates and officers by private voting, is sufficiently curious to deserve publicity :—

[Election of Mayor and all other Officers to be by Pewter.]

"Whereas it hath been found, by often experience, that public and open votes at the assemblies holden within the said city for electing of the Mayor and other Magistrates and Officers within the same hath caused clamour and ill-blood amongst divers of the citizens of the city aforesaid, for the preventing whereof in time to come, and to the end that the said citizens may be more free in their votes and elections than formerly they have been, and for the better continuance of love and unity amongst themselves, it is ordained and established by this Assembly that there be forthwith provided one hundred bushels of coloure red and white, in equal proportion, and that the said bullets be kept in a fit box, to be provided for that purpose. And that at all such public assemblies and meeting one of each of the said bullets be delivered to each citizen then present, and that the Mayor for the time being (if occasion do so declare it willingly) shall have, for whatever person or purpose each of the said bullets shall stand at every nomination or election; and that, instead of such open and public voices, each citizen put privately into the said box the bullet for or against such person or purpose then in question at such nomination or election, according to the dictates of his conscience; and that the Mayor put in two bullets for his casting vote (in case the bullets so put in as aforesaid shall happen to be even); and that, upon view of the said bullets, the election to pass, stand, and be determined, according to the major part of the bullets, for or against such nomination or election, or purpose as aforesaid, and to be as effectual to all intents and purposes as if the same had been openly and publicly voted, any ordinance or custom to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding; and that the bullets remaining in each citizen's hand be immediately after such election privately put into the said box: Provided—that it shall and may be lawful to and for any citizen, if he think fit, openly to publish and declare his own vote, and to declare the reasons and inducements leading him thereunto."

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.—It will be interesting to many readers to know that the Cottonian Library at Plymouth has lately received a valuable addition in the shape of several autograph letters and other MSS. of Sir Joshua Reynolds, together with his pocketbook of the year 1760, which contains the names of his sitters and the entries of his engagements, &c.; and a copy of the great painter's notes and observations on pictures, chiefly of the Venetian school, illustrated with photographic facsimiles of his sketches made in Venice. The family of Sir Joshua may be desirous of inspecting these rarities we may suppose, when of himself, one of his sister Fanny—and a choice collection of engravings after his works. For the benefit of travellers who may be desirous of inspecting these rarities we may add that the above-named institution, better known as the "Plymouth Public Library," is open to visitors on Monday in every week.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. D. P., Corfu.—I. Decidedly wrong : you were bound to capture the Pawn. 2. The new code of Chess Laws is published in "Chess Praxis," the work mentioned in our last Number.

A Constant Reader, Dublin.—The opening you speak of—1. Ke to K B 2nd, is not recommended—2. Kt to Q B 3rd is the usual answer to such commencement of the game; by playing Kt to Q 4th. That is generally considered the best move. 3. The opening of the game with Q's fourth, as you say, is sound, but that is rarely or ever adopted in the contests of first-class players who is sufficiently versed in openings would always prefer that his opponent played P. from to K 4th to any other move.

NOTTINGHAM.—If Black play as you suggest, 1. Q to Q 5th, White can mate in two moves by playing 2. Kt to Q B 7th. Except for Pawns he advances to queen on his adversary's first move. See Problem No. 864, in our Number for Saturday, in the domestic problem by which Mr. Bayer carried off the premier prize in the late problem tourney of Paris. Enigma No. 1395 is by the same author, and is considered one of his best productions.

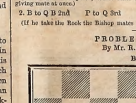
PHILO.—If you have any question to ask on the game of Chess, or any other subject, as I suggest, "in" of replies, before launching the name, he is bound to play it, it is a kin to or take it, it is a forfeited game.

COMPETITOR.—You are right in every problem-tourney there should be a competent committee of adjudication appointed, to which all the problems sent in for competition should be submitted. Such committee should consist of three persons, each one out of the number submitted to their judgment. To avoid even the suspicion of favouritism it would be well, too, if the whole affair—opening programme—were written out in a fair hand, and copied by the examiners unaccompanied by solutions. The manner in which these contests are conducted in Paris is worthy of the best days of the Philidor Chess Association.

C. B., Sudbury.—Your Knight's tour from any square of the board given may easily be credited to your clear powers. Let us see a few more specimens during the approaching dreary British winter, when, Mum, and a mere prey to ennui abides than that which accompanies your present contribution.

We have to thank numerous correspondents for similar favours at the same time without sight of a solution, but we cannot find any such interpretive task of necessity, to our mind, has never been equalled by any other performance of the same description.

SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 860, by Dr. Bayer, Dr. Conrad, Dr. Gerhardt, Teutobi, Schneider, F. R. S., Tubby, R.N., F.R.S., G.W., Frederick, Non, Blenheim, Little Dorrit, Dr. Wilkinson, Constant Reader, Dublin, Philo, C. D. P., Corfu, Alpha, Nemo, Rev. W. Wilks, F. T., W. D., Rose, Sandwich, Gladiator, Fellow, Jerry, H. W., Wyvern, Rev. M.P., Capt. L., Amateur, Semper Idem, A Clerk, Miles, G. N. S., Colonial, Great Barford, Beta, Constant Reader, Argus, Ben Nevis, Dr. Bernhardt, Dr. Goth, Dover; Bellevue Guard, Knight, F. P., H., Gravelsun, A. T., Slyer, Leilan, F. G., Nemo, Rev. W. Wilks, F. T., W. D., Rose, Sandwich, Gladiator, Fellow, Jerry, H. W., Numbers Bay, of Mauritius, Bombay, Kenton, F. A. S., Blackburn, Gonah, T. F. G., Alpha, Arthur Kidnappy, are correct. All others are wrong.



SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 863.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q 8th (ch)	K to Q B 6th	Q R 3rd, and if he play away the Kt the
(If the Kt is interposed, White takes it,		Rook mates at Q B 3rd.
bring mate at 2nd.)		3. B to Q B 4th	Kt moves
2. B to Q B 2nd	P to Q 3rd	(If K moves, or any other follower, as before mentioned, by R to K 5th.)
(If he take the Rook the Bishop mates at		4. K to Q 4th,	Mate.

PROBLEM No. 865.

By Mr. R. WORMALD.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White, playing first, mates in four moves.

CHESS AT CAMBRIDGE.

The following Game was played at the recent Cambridge Chess Meeting between Mr. STAUNTON and Mr. T. H. WORMALD, of Merton, the former giving the odds of a Knight :—

(Irregular Game.)

(Remove Black's Q's Knight from the Board.)

BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr. W.)
1. P to K 4th	P to Q Kt 3rd.
2. P to Q 4th	P to Q Kt 2nd
3. P to Q 5th	P to Q 3rd
4. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q 2nd
5. Castles	P to K 4th
6. P to Q 6th	P to K B 3rd
7. P to Q B 4th	P to K Kt 4th
8. B to Q B 2nd	P to Q B 4th
9. P to K R 3rd	P to K Kt 5th
10. B to Q 2nd	B to K 2nd
11. P to K R 4th	P to K R 3rd
12. Q R to Q Kt sq	Kt to K R 2nd
13. Kt to K 2nd	P to K B 5th
14. B to Q B 3rd	P to Q B sq
15. P to Q Kt 4th	P takes P
16. P takes P	Kt to Q 2nd
17. P to K B 4th	P to K 6th
18. P to K B 4th	P to K B 3rd
19. P to K B 5th	P to K Kt 4th
20. P to K R 4th	Kt to K R 2nd
21. P to K R 5th	P to K R sq
22. Kt to K 3rd	R to K sq
23. K to K B 2nd	R to K 2nd
24. B to Q 2nd	B to K Kt sq
25. P to K B 3rd	Q to K B 2nd

(Had he made the more natural move of P to K Kt 4th, White would have replied with the second check on—)

25.	P to K Kt 4th
26. P to K B 4th	Q takes P (ch)
27. Q R to K B sq	Q moves
28. K to K B 2nd

26. K to K B 4th	P to K Kt 4th

(Trying to win a piece by the way, as he could, soon see was inevitable.)

27. P to K Kt 4th	P takes P
28. Kt takes R	K takes Kt
29. K to K 3rd	K to K B 3rd
30. K to Q Kt 3rd	B to Q 2nd
31. Q to K B 2nd	B to K B 3rd
32. Q R takes P	K Kt to K Kt 4th
33. Q to K 2nd	B to K 2nd
34. Q to K R sq	B to K B 3rd
35. Q to K B 2nd	B to K 2nd
36. P takes P	Q to K 3rd
37. Q to Q B 2nd	Q to K 2nd

(A failing move. From this point Black's game becomes hopeless, and the remainder of the game need not be given at length.)

38. Q to Q Kt 2nd (ch)	Q Kt 2 takes P
39. P takes Q P	B to K sq

(He would not have lessened his danger by taking the Pawn with the Rook.)

40. Q to Q B 3rd	Q to K 3rd
41. P to Q B 3rd	Q to Q Kt 3rd
42. P to Q Kt 4th	Q to K 3rd
43. B takes B (ch)	K takes B
44. Q to Q B 4th (ch)	K to Kt 2nd
45. K R to Q Kt 3rd

(Threatening a beautiful combination, as entitled White's Journal, by Messrs. Staunton and Lucas, which we should be glad to see.)

45.	Q Kt 3rd
46. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
47. Q to K B 4th	Q to K B 2nd
48. Q to K 4th

(The whole beautiful sobriety of his opponent's error, and in much of the remainder. Mr. Staunton has play social terrify to any pianist.)

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Queen intends giving a west window to the church of Sidmouth, in memory of her Majesty's father, who died at Sidmouth.

On Monday the National Gallery was closed to the public until further notice, for alterations.

It is announced that Sir John Lawrence will be prepared to receive the freedom of Glasgow on the 21st instant.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed James Wigham, Esq., to the County Court Circuit No. 37, vacated by Mr. Cock's death.

King Victor Emmanuel has just sent the insignia of the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus to Abdel-Kader.

Florence has just decreed a statue to Dante. It is to be executed by Enrico Pazzi, of Ravenna, and must be completed by 1865.

That portion of the Chelmsford and Ongar Railway which lies between Carnarthen and Cowell, was formally opened on Tuesday week.

The deliveries of tea in London estimated for last week were 560,421lb., a decrease of 10,000lb. compared with the previous statement.

At Stalybridge, Robert Hines, a chimneysweeper, has been fined £1, or two months' imprisonment, for refusing a ballot to vote.

A terrible conflagration has taken place at Smyrna. No less than four hundred houses have fallen a prey to the flames.

Mr. H. E. Gurney entertained the supervisory teachers of the ragged schools of London at his house at Nutfield on Wednesday week.

A despatch from Reuden announces the total loss, on Monday, of the Alliance, from Constantinople, Crew saved.

During the year 1859 thirteen prosecutions were instituted in this county for violation of the Passengers Act. Eleven were instituted at Liverpool, one at Plymouth, and one at Glasgow.

A number of Indies of Belleville, Canada, have determined to appear on horseback in a procession to be organised in that place in honour of the Prince of Wales.

A meeting of the Leeds Festival General Committee has been held, at which it was unanimously resolved to recommend the holding of a second triennial festival in the autumn of 1861.

Some gentlemen have been unanimously presented, through Messrs. Commanny, Sons, and Co., the navy-agents, one hundred pounds for the endowment fund for the Royal Naval School, New-cross.

On Friday se'nnight a serious explosion of gas occurred at the residence of Mr. Dodd, photographic artist, in Wolverhampton. The servant girl was very severely injured.

The Commissioners of Sewers on Tuesday appointed a committee to consider the new Metropolitan Gas Act, which was severely denounced by one of the members of the court.

The London Court of Aldermen on Tuesday re-elected Sir J. Laurie a trustee of the Bancroft Museum, Limerp, and Wood of Art, for another period of five years.

The operations of the British brandy during the past year was 2,654,234 in—an increase of fifty-seven per cent on the preceding year; and of this quantity 1,000,000 gallons were sent to France.

The smack Mars, belonging to Scilly, has been run down off the Nore-sand by the Comet, a Hull steamer. The Mars instantly sank, carrying with her a poor boy, who was drowned.

A correspondent of the Times, referring to the late failures in the leather trade, points out that to meet liabilities to the amount of £2,000,000 twenty-four of these have at present assets of only about half a million.

The disputes between Mr. Scott Russell and the Great Ship Company relating to the Great Eastern have at length been decided by the arbitrators (Messrs. Hawkshaw, M'Lean, and Fowler) awarding him £18,000.

The fire at the ropewalk at Ratcliff, on Sunday week, is supposed to have originated in the ignition of a lucifer match. We have offered a reward of £100 for the discovery of the author of the crime.

Mr. Urquhart's new enterprise commenced in London, has left £300 as a legacy to the Kirkwall Grammar School, the place of his education.

At a meeting of the Newcastle-on-Tyne Town Council, held on Wednesday week, it was resolved to invite the National Association of Social Science to hold its next meeting in that town in 1861.

The directors of the North-Eastern Railway have stated that the new line to Harrogate will be commenced in October next, and completed in May, 1862.

The Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli, M.P., has consented to preside at the annual dinner of the Royal Free Hospital Annuity Association, which is appointed to take place at the Windmill, Saltehill, on Oct. 3.

The gardens of Heanburg was twice broken in one day, last week, amid the enthusiastic applause of the company, who cheered the successful efforts of the performers with loud and long plaudits.

Mrs. Lawrence, widow of the late Hon. Abbott Lawrence, formerly Minister at the Court of St. James's, died on the 20th of August, in Boston, United States, in the seventy-first year.

In the three City prisons there are at present 315 prisoners, of whom eighty-six are in Newgate, 292 in Whitecross-street (debtors), and thirty-three in Holloway.

An explosion of firedamp occurred on Wednesday week on board the steamer Ann, while she was lying in Seaton Sluice, when some damage was done to her decks, and eight men were slightly injured.

Last Saturday Thomas Gallagher, who was convicted at the late Liverpool Assizes for murdering his wife, was executed in front of Kirkdale Gaol.

The London and Middlesex and the Surrey Archæological Societies are trying to make arrangements for a series of evening meetings to be held once a month during the winter.

Early on the morning of yesterday week the house of Mr. Bruce, Liverpool-road, was destroyed by fire, and Mr. Alfred Edmonds, a lodger, was burned to death.

Mr. Le Chevalier Jacob Letterstadt, his Swedish and Norwegian Majesty's Consul-General, died on the 20th of August, at his house in the Academy of Science, Stockholm, the munificent sum of £40,000 sterling, for the benefit of the poor of that city.

The South Kensington Museum was visited last week by 14,271 persons. On Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday (free days) there were 6305; on Monday and Tuesday (students' days) 1977; and on Wednesday, Thursday (admission to the public 6c.), 1368; and students' evening (Wednesday), 131.

Yesterday week, with the usual ceremony, with the apparatus, presented to the city of Glasgow by Mr. David Fleming, of Manchester, was formally handed over by the Lord Provost and the magistrates of the city, and thrown open to the public.

A scat for tired pedestrians has been conveniently placed within a niche in front of No. 1, Hyde-park-corner, Piccadilly, and is made good use of.—Three seats for pedestrians have also been erected at the Bayswater-road entrance to Kensington-gardens.

There is talk of the construction of a large theatre, to contain 6000 spectators, in the Champs Elysées, between Rond Point and the end of the Rue du Faubourg St. Denis. It is said that it will be called the Théâtre Auche Frondeur.

The Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, with other leading members of the Corporation, will attend, according to annual custom, at Christ's Hospital, on Wednesday next, at 11 o'clock, to hear the Boys' Midsummer Exhibitions' orations to the great bell.

The chairman of the Scottish Temperance League have dispatched a deputation to France to make inquiries as to the drinking customs of that country, and to collect statistical facts bearing on the pending question of a Wine Licenses Bill for Scotland.

M. C. Bercier, a manufacturer of Liége, recently deceased, has bequeathed to the municipal hospitals of that town his entire fortune, and the reversion of his dwelling-house, on condition that the administration of hospitals shall in no case be allowed to interfere in the choice of its physicians.

According to official information, 130 licenses have already been granted to sell wine within the bills of mortality; and about 500 applications have been made for refreshment licenses, respectively costing £16, £12, £9 5s., £10 15s. and £41 19s. In each case the prisoner was committed for trial. Bail was refused.

The designs of Mr. James Heyworth, of Derby, for the Stockport Market-house, have been selected from among those of nine competitors. The first premium of £100 was awarded by the intending Public Buildings, to that of Mr. Shreeve, of Macclesfield; and the second prize has been awarded to Mr. Wilson, of Bolton.

MR. PEARSON, MAYOR OF HULL.

OUR Number of the 1st inst. contained an account of the opening of a People's Park at Kingston-on-Hull, and we have the pleasure of giving in this Impression a Portrait of the noble donor thereof, Zachariah Charles Pearson, Esq., Mayor of Hull. Mr. Pearson is in his fortieth year, having been born in 1821. His father was a merchant at Hull. At four years of age he was left an orphan, and was brought up, with three sisters, by an uncle, a gentleman of independent means. He received his education at the Hull Grammar School. When thirteen years old the lad, at his earnest solicitations, was allowed to enter the merchant service; and at seventeen years of age he was made second officer, and in his nineteenth year first officer, of the vessel which he had entered as an apprentice. His rise in after-life was equally rapid. When Mr. Pearson became of age he commanded the finest ship then sailing out of Hull, and after a short time had a vessel of his own in charge. Mr. Pearson, having been engaged about seventeen years in the sea service, left it, and commenced business as merchant and shipowner. Whilst in command of his own vessel he acted also as a merchant, always buying his own cargoes and chartering other vessels. He subsequently established a line of packets, called the Intercolonial Royal Mail, between Sydney and New Zealand, which has contributed greatly to the benefit of the inhabitants both of Australia and of New Zealand; and on the breaking out of disturbances at the latter place those vessels proved an immense boon by at once conveying troops and warlike stores to the scene of action, thereby preventing the spread of the rebellion. Mr. Pearson carries on business at Hull and in London as merchant and shipowner, under the firm of Z. C. Pearson and Co.; he has steamers in the transport service in China, vessels in India, and steamers running regularly weekly to all the Baltic ports from Hull and London. Some time ago Mr. Pearson's fellow-townsmen elected him a member of the Town Council: subsequently he was appointed to the office of Sheriff; and the Town Council of Hull have done honour to themselves by raising him to the Mayoralty, which dignity he at present holds. Ever since Mr. Pearson entered on his municipal duties he has devoted himself assiduously to public business, and has been throughout a steady and strenuous advocate of dock improvement and extension. Since he has occupied the civic chair, the well-known though unostentatious benevolence of Mr. Pearson has been necessarily made more manifest. The activity of his benevolence is exhibited in the warm interest he has always taken in the Port of Hull Society, in the Sailors' Home, and in many other most useful institutions. Though a Wesleyan, Mr. Pearson has amply vindicated the charity and liberality of his sentiments by taking a leading part in the restoration of Holy Trinity Church; and it was only last week that the local papers had to chronicle a further instance of his liberality by the commencement of a new Wesleyan chapel, towards which he is the chief contributor. All these things, however, are overshadowed by the magnificent event of the 27th ult.—the handing over by him of a park for the use of the people of Hull. The desire to see the town of Hull possessed of a people's park was with him predominant long before he was elevated to the chief magistracy, and events happened at the close of last year which gave him the opportunity of gratifying his inclination. The park given by Mr. Pearson "for the recreation and amusement of the inhabitants of Hull," and which was formally opened with becoming honours on Monday week, consists of about twenty-eight acres of land, situated between Newland-Toft's-lane and the west side of Beverley-road, in the parish of Sculcoates.

Z. C. PEARSON, ESQ., MAYOR OF HULL.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY MAYALL.

DRONTHEIM CATHEDRAL.

A FEW weeks ago we gave several sketches and a description of the ceremony at Stockholm of the coronation of Carl XV. and Louise as King and Queen of Sweden. During the past month a similar ceremony took place at Dronthelm, to celebrate the coronation of their Majesties as King and Queen of Norway; and we give a view of the Cathedral at Dronthelm in which the ceremony was performed.

Dronthelm, or Trondhjem, the most northern capital of Europe, has for many centuries occupied a very prominent position in the great historical events of the middle ages. The town is beautifully situated at the southern side of a magnificent fiord, extending upwards of fifty miles to the north-east, and which from the shore appears landlocked by a range of picturesque hills, some bleak and high, others rich with the bright hues of cultivation. The bay has by many been compared to that of Naples. It is, certainly, marvellously beautiful, and of sufficient extent to float the navies of Europe.

The Cathedral at Dronthelm, where their Majesties Charles XV. and Louise were crowned King and Queen of Norway on the 5th ult., is the most interesting in Norway, and when in its glory it was the grandest in the whole north of Europe, as well for architectural beauty as for extent and rich adornments. The varied stories, rich statues, and exquisite details made it equal some of the finest. The part standing is only the remains of the greatness and beauty of the olden time, but even now it is a most interesting remnant of the middle ages. The plan of the building is cruciform; its extreme length being 323 feet, and its width 162 feet. The greater portion is in the Norman style of architecture, and was doubtless erected by Archbishop Eystein, circa 1171—most probably upon the original foundations of the church built by Olaf Kyrre (the Tranquil), circa 1070. The east end of the choir is abaidal, the arches in the interior are arranged to form an octagon, and from the elegance of its design, and the richness of its architectural decorations, combined with an almost aerial lightness, it forms one of the finest specimens of the lancet style.

About the year 1300 the cathedral was in its full splendour. Besides the central tower there were three others, two at the western end, and one octagonal. It had numerous chapels, 32 altars, 316 windows, 7 entrances, and 3361 pillars, many of polished white marble. Within its walls lie the remains of King Olaf, King Magnus the Good, and many other Norwegian Kings and magnates.

The wealth of this church was enormous; it consisted of two-thirds of St. Olaf's tax, paid by the landowners in the whole kingdom, of large landed property, of tithes, and of offerings from pilgrims. The shrine of St. Olaf, which lies at the high altar, was of silver-gilt, richly adorned with precious stones; its weight and value must have been immense, as it required sixty men to carry it round the cathedral, as was the custom on St. Olaf's Day. Whenever a King was to be confirmed in his authority the shrine was taken down to the landing-place of the river, and there the King gave his oath, laying his hand upon the shrine. The remains of Archbishop Eystein were also kept in a silver shrine of great value. In addition to this there were numerous large silver crosses, chalices, &c., all of which were taken away at the time of the Reformation; the ships, however, which contained them were either taken by pirates or foundered at sea. The western portion of the cathedral, from the great central tower, was destroyed by fire in 1718, and since that time has remained in ruins as it now stands.

THE CATHEDRAL AT DRONTHEIM, IN WHICH THE MONARCHS OF NORWAY ARE CROWNED.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1860.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1051.—VOL. XXXVII.] SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1860. WITH A COLOURED MAP OF ITALY AND SWITZERLAND] FIVEPENCE

THE PAPAL STATES.

UNLESS some sudden and violent intervention occur, there is every probability that in a period which may now be measured by days the temporal dominions of the Pope will be reduced to a palace and a garden in Rome. There are indications of an understanding in certain quarters which tends very palpably to this result. It has long been supposed that the ruler of that realm, the reigning Sovereign of which formerly bore the title of his Most Christian Majesty, entertained the project of establishing the head of the Roman Catholic Church in a position of arch-priestly dignity and splendour, apart from the cares, and toils, and, in many respects, the disadvantages to himself, of temporal power. It has, indeed, been said that the contest between France and Russia on the subject of the Holy Places, and which eventuated in the Crimean war, had its origin in a project for establishing the Pontiff in sacerdotal grandeur at Jerusalem itself. That part of the design, it may be presumed, has been given up; but there is still a floating belief that it is a portion of the mission of Louis Napoleon to remove the scandal to Roman Catholic Christendom which the social and governmental condition of the secular dominions of the Pope presents to the world by forming the city of Rome into a pleasaunce, and by making the Vatican the centre of a spiritual dominion alone. There is something very taking, something romantic, about the notion of identifying the state and the power of the Pontiff, and converting Rome really and truly into a Holy City. It is quite conceivable how such a design should enter into, and find favour with, the mind of a man whose most realistic plans are always tinged with a hue of romance, and whose practical energies almost always seem to have their origin in the workings of an active imagination. The existence of the Popedom as a hierarchy pure and simple would probably put an end to a political difficulty which has been for many years constantly obtruding itself into European politics, and even creating complications when there was a chance of ordering international affairs on a satisfactory basis. One thing is quite certain, and that is, that no possible settlement of the vexed affairs of Italy can take place while the temporal dominions of the Pontiff stand in its midst, a moral plaguespot, at once contagious and infectious. It is probable that it would have been more tactical, even if it had been more difficult, to commence the regeneration of Italy with the secular purgation of the Papal States; but, as things have happened, that duty remains for the last, and there is no doubt but that the moment of lustration is at hand.

The necessity of the case has naturally evoked the instruments, and the only question is as to the modus operandi. So far as sweeping clean away the foul accumulation of corruption, venality, self-seeking, oppression, and injustice which cumbers and clogs the machinery of the governmental system of what are called, by an almost impious allocation, the States of the Church, there would be nothing easier than to commit the task to Garibaldi. That he would make short work of it there can be no hesitation in believing. That he has earned for himself as nearly as possible the right that his should be the hand to strike the last stroke which consummates the liberation of Italy few will be disposed to deny. But at the same time, dealing with things as they are, and looking to surrounding influences, and possible, if not probable, ultimate results, the sincerest well-wishers to the Italian cause—and we believe that Garibaldi himself in his heart of hearts is of the same opinion—must be inclined to pause and weigh well the circumstances of the situation before risking all that has already been done for the sake of the culmination of an idea. It is therefore not without anxiety, and certainly with some little fear mingled with our hopes, that we watch the progress of events as they march on towards the point where the great "Question Romaine" is to reach solution. The position of things is peculiar; and unless there be either complete understanding amongst the several movers in the game, or else great forbearance, judgment, and temper exercised on all hands, it is not easy to say what may come to pass, and whether the whole object may not be jeopardised, if not lost.

GARIBALDI'S ENTRY INTO NAPLES.—A SKETCH IN THE STRADA DI TOLEDO, BY T. NAST.—SEE PAGE 266.

The decided course taken by the King of Sardinia, and which has resulted already in the testing of the capabilities of Lamoricière and his band of mercenaries as the defenders of the Papal States, and which have been decided on as unwarrantable, Pope, can scarcely have been decided on as unwarrantable, Pope, can scarcely have been decided on as unwarrantable, Pope, can scarcely announced that the public health had improved since last year, and certain measures of medical reform would be proposed to the Legislature. The harvest had been plentiful, in spite of the continued rains of this season. The fisheries had been productive, manufactures busy, commerce tolerably thriving, but the shipbuilders were not so well off. The colonies in the East Indian Archipelago were doing well: Boni had been subjugated, and the kingdom of Bunjermassing brought under the direct administration of Holland. Amongst the projects of law for the ensuing Session would be one for the suppression of slavery in the West Indian Colonies. A slight reform in the customs tariff, and the construction of canals for shipping communication between Rotterdam, Amsterdam, and the North Sea, are also mentioned.

AUSTRIA.

On the occasion of the discussion of the Budget in last Saturday's sitting of the Reichsrath, it was resolved that after the expiration of its present grant the National Bank should not be prolonged from any connection with the Government, and that special members should be appointed for this reorganization of the bank. In the same sitting the proposal of the Committee of the Public Debt for the conversion of the public funds into bonds of 5 per cent was rejected. The proposal to increase the amount of direct taxation was also declared inadmissible.

AUSTRIA, PRUSSIA, AND RUSSIA.

Count de Toll, Aide-de-Camp General of the Emperor of Russia, arrived at Vienna on Monday, the bearer of an autograph letter from the Czar inviting the Emperor of Austria to an interview at Warsaw.

A despatch from Berlin, dated Wednesday evening, states that the Prince Regent will arrive at Warsaw on the evening of the 3rd of October. The Emperor Alexander, the Prince Regent, and the Emperor of Austria will meet on the 14th of October. A report that the Minister of Bavaria is perfectly quiet, and the Moslems all over Syria are subdued.

UNITED STATES.

The annual election of the State of Vermont took place on the 3rd inst., when Governor Parkinson, the Republican candidate for re-election, was elected by a majority of about 20,000 votes.

The United States' steamer Ossawatomie has captured a steamer engaged in the slave trade on the coast of Cuba; the slaver had succeeded in landing a portion of the negroes before being taken.

Throughout Germany and Austria the greatest interest prevailed on the subject of Walker's expedition. The New Orleans Picayune states that another portion of Walker's force has left Mobile, that city for Brazos, at Washington telegram says:—"Secretary Cobb has ordered the revenue vessels in the gulf to cruise off the mouth of the Mississippi for New Orleans clearances, and compel their return to that port, if there is no consequence of reports that large numbers of men who are anxious to join General Walker in Brazos are hurrying to New Orleans for that purpose. President is determined to discountenance all unlawful expeditions against our friendly American neighbours." A later despatch says:—"General Walker's plans exciteso little interest in official quarters that no naval vessels have been directed especially to watch his movements. Every precaution will, however, be taken to prevent any armed bodies leaving our shores to join him. The crowd at Minister Dunlop's from Corn Rico to Nicaragua, recently so excessive as to have almost vested in him to repel the invader, was, it is known, more in a spirit of diplomatic duty than with the intention of joining the expedition. It reached less that before Walker captured Truxillo, he despatched agents to Nicaragua to secretly organise his friends in anticipation of his invasion of that State."

INDIA.

By the arrival of the Overland Mail we have Bombay papers to the 26th of August.

A public meeting has been held at Madras, for the purpose of petitioning her Majesty to appoint Mr. Morehead to the Governorship of that Presidency. Mr. Morehead has acquired a great reputation in India. He was, we believe, strongly opposed to the late Mr. Wilson's views on the income tax; but he disapproved of the publication of the proceedings of the Madras Government.

The merchants at Bombay have petitioned against the threatened increase in the tax on opium, partly in consequence of the competition they have to contend with in the Chinese market.

The Nizam is to be rewarded for his fidelity to the British Government by the restoration of a portion of his dominions, and by a magnificent present, which is enumerated.

The death of Mr. Joseph Jackson, the eminent railway contractor, and of Dan Dunmilee, a faithful ally of the British Government, are also announced.

The Memoria Captain Morrish, was lost on Thursday last at the Ras de Sene—mouth of the Seine. The crew and passengers were fortunately saved.

The Queen has approved of Mr. Reinhard Francksen as Consul at Brisbane, New South Wales, for the Grand Duke of Oldenburgh.

Count Strzelecki, the unsuccessful Australian explorer, died of the late Asiatic war, is said to be devoting his enforced leisure to the composition of his memoirs.

The Belgian journals state that game is abundant this year in Brabant, and that the markets of Brussels are well supplied with hares and partridges at low prices.

Tuesday's Gazette announces that the Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, appointing Baron Bramwell to be a Puisne Judge.

The 14th inst. being the birthday of the late Baron Humboldt, many of the students went to the grave at Tegel, near Berlin, and adorned his tomb with flowers and wreaths of laurel.

A correspondent of the Times writes to remove the impression that fortifications are being constructed at Biarritz. Nothing of the sort, he says, are sought for the purpose of improving the place as a commercial port.

The Daily News says:—The Lords of the Committee of Council for Trade and Plantations have received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Malaga, relative to the consequences of the cessation of cholera at that port, clean bills of health will be issued to shipping.

According to a telegram from Marseilles, it appears that the failure in laying the submarine cable there was owing to the fact that a heavy gale encountered just as the latter port had been almost reached. The line had been successfully submerged from the Sardinian coast to Corsica, and the point off Toulon at which it is calculated to be reversed to, it is said, not actually reached when the gale overtook.

Two lines of land telegraph from the Atlantic to California are now in course of erection. The section between Carson City, Nevada, and Nebraska, is expected to be so far completed in November that the remaining gap will be only about 1000 miles. The line will be carried westward through Missouri and Arkansas, is also consistently advanced, and a provisional line, connecting the two sections, has been for some months in thought that before the end of next year one, if not both, of the lines will be in perfect working order. At that time we shall be brought into connection with the East, we may then look for our speediest China news to arrive occasionally in a week.

THE "MUTTON CLUB" IN INDIA.—We are going to join the Mutton Club, which is one of the great social institutions of the Mofussil, that is, of all northern India except Calcutta. The Mofussil Club consists of a presidency, a station where the mutton for the purposes of supplying their tables twice a week with plate of grass-fed mutton. The Sheppard is hired always amongst their dinner-parties, if possible, for hard quarter or middle day. At the end of each month the secretary (usually an active-minded lady) adds up the accounts, and the sum total is paid by the number of guests present each his share of the cost. When a new Mutton Club is started each member deputes a sheep to the station of his choice, and when he leaves the station, or office, or some other person, buys up the share at the price originally paid for it, provided the club is in a flourishing condition.—From Sketches in Lucknow, by a Captain in the Indian Service.

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams were received at Mr. Reuter's office yesterday (Friday) :—

SARDINIA.—Turin, Sept. 20.—The official gazette gives a formal denial to the reports of certain letters having been received and answered by the King.

THE PAPAL STATES.—Turin, Sept. 20.—Yesterday the chassers attacked the German mercenaries at Montefiascone, and pursued them as far as road to Viterbo. Baron Talleyrand left yesterday for Paris.

PARIS, Thursday Evening.—According to advices received here the Papal army was attacked after the departure of the Roman corvettes. The diplomatic corps were present at the funeral of the Duchess of Alba.

The Sardinian Parliament has been convoked for the 2nd of October.

The King of Denmark has convoked the Diet of that kingdom for the 1st of October.

The Vienna journals announce the death of Prince Milosch Obrenovitch, of Servia.

Sir George Simpson, Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company's territory, died at Lachine on the 7th inst., after a short illness.

Australia and New Zealand put in claims for a visit from the Prince of Wales.

The Neapolitan man-of-war Monarca has been rechristened Il Galantuomo, "the honest king," the epithet generally given to King Victor Emmanuel.

Cardinal Ferretti, who was the Pope's Prime Minister from the time of his accession to his flight to Gaeta, died on Tuesday, at the age of sixty-five.

The conquest of Naples by Garibaldi, which was effected in twenty-one days with 20,000 his army, according to official reports, eight also killed and sixteen wounded.

The citadel of Messina, the last stronghold retained by General La Rocca for royalty, is now in the hands of Sicilians, the garrison having evacuated the place and crossed the Strait into Calabria.

The news from Bolivia is of a most startling character. Discoveries of silver mines have been made in the neighbourhood of Fort Hope. The news from Fraser River continues encouraging.

Dr. Bernard Derosne publishes articles exposing a system of obtaining degrees from "the University of Giessen" on payment of £30. The university consists of a town, and a number of clerks employed chiefly in writing out diplomas for Englishmen!

The marriage of the Governor of Victoria, Sir Henry Barkly and Miss Fanny Sophia Winstone, of Hereford Park, was solemnised on the 21st of July, at Christ Church, South Yarra.

A Berlin letter announces the death, in one of the hospitals of that city, of Mdlle. Auguste Bowdoin, author of several tragedy. Her father purchased was about forty years of age, and has been for some time in indigent circumstances.

A congress of chemists has just been held at Carlsruhe. Representatives were present, not only from all parts of Germany, but also from France, Belgium, England, Switzerland, Russia, Poland, Italy, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, and Mexico.

The first importation of continental hops, of the growth of 1866, arrived in London on Tuesday, and have been sold for bearing purposes at 41s 14s. per cwt. duty paid. The quality and flavour are alleged to be excellent, and the crop appears to be in every way a large one.

The Superior Council of Commerce at Paris is still actively engaged in considering the question of the commercial treaty between Great Britain and France. The duties to be imposed on British manufactures were to be fixed at 30 per cent ad valorem.

The pay of officers in the Ru sian Navy is as follows :—High Admiral, 1500 roubles, or £2400 a year; Admiral, 4,000 a year; Vice-Admiral, £800 a year; Rear-Admiral, £500 a year; Captain of the first rank, £300 a year; Captain (2nd class), £300 a year; Commander, £300 a year; Lieutenant, £200 a year; Midshipman, £100 a year.

The Emperor of China is in a state of drunken, helpless imbecility. Some months ago the Court protested against the conduct of his majesty, against his drinking habits, and against his neglect of his business and love of low society. The reproof was published in the Pekin Gazette, and was followed by a month's fresh indulgence in wine.

The King of Sweden is about to close in person the long session of the Diet of that country. Most of the measures passed this year will not be definitively voted until the next Session, which will not commence till the end of the year. The session recently opened in Sweden seems to have died away.

Another German traveller has become the victim of his curiosity and in the wilderness of Africa. Dr. Roscher has been killed by the natives of Hiumeyang, a village in the neighbourhood of Usevu and the River Kilimani. Other travellers who were with him escaped, and the books and drawings of the Doctor seem to have been destroyed.

MEXICO.—Advices have been received from Mexico by way of New Orleans. A battle was fought at Lagos, between Miramon and Degollado, on the 10th inst., in which the former defeated the latter with loss. But his force was surrounded by Degollado with 2000 men. The fight lasted five hours. Miramon's force was defeated, wounded, but made its way safely. He lost all his artillery, and the balance of his army were made prisoners. General Degollado was wounded. Miramon's wife joined him on the way in full flight. There was great rejoicing at the capital and throughout the country in consequence of Miramon's success. Juarez issued a call for Leva against the authority of Valearti, Governor of Coahuila and New Leon, was in open rebellion. Juarez's proclamation declares that the lands and dwellings of the Doctor seas to have been destroyed.

MEXICO.—Advices have been received from Mexico by way of New Orleans. A battle was fought at Lagos, between Miramon and Degollado, on the 10th inst., in which the former defeated the latter with loss. But his force was surrounded by Degollado with 2000 men. The fight lasted five hours. Miramon's force was defeated, wounded, but made its way safely. He lost all his artillery, and the balance of his army were made prisoners. General Degollado was wounded. Miramon's wife joined him on the way in full flight. There was great rejoicing at the capital and throughout the country in consequence of Miramon's success. Juarez issued a call for Leva against the authority of Valearti, Governor of Coahuila and New Leon, was in open rebellion. Juarez's proclamation declares that the lands and dwellings of the Doctor seas to have been destroyed.

AN INNOCENT CONVICT IN A FRENCH BAGNE.—One of the special correspondents of the Constitutional relates a romantic episode in society in the south of France. A small number of convicts who are still undergoing their punishment to the bagnes of Toulon was the 26 inst., released on the Emperor's birthday, by virtue of the Imperial decree. Certain indications certain whispered confidences had caused doubts to arise as to the guilt of one of these men. Investigations had been set on foot and he was the victim of a judicial error to which he had voluntarily lent himself, and that for the purpose of saving the honour of a young lady connected in the Arsenal of Toulon. Until lately these rumours had been vague—but now, the mechanician, aided from the results of an accident, and then the last confidences of this convict, has succeeded in finding out the truth, and that, in order to save the criminal position ought to save his brother, who, thanks to his good earnings, had been able to purchase a substitute. The brother, who is a mechanician in the Navy, Prefect of the Var, then suggestee thought it his duty to inform the Emperor of them, and, after procuring the Chancellary of the Legion of Honour, in consequence of the conviction, the Emperor at once granted a free pardon to the innocent victim of a fraternal devotion.

SOCIETY IN TASMANIA.—Tasmania has at the present moment a population little short of 100,000. There are Bishops and clergy of the Anglican and Roman Catholic communions, and the representatives of the Presbyterian Free Church of Scotland, and every shade of Dissent. Schools of the highest character are established in the principal towns of the colony, than in any other part of the British possessions; and the Legislature has just voted £20,000 for the purpose of founding a College, and endowed several scholarships of £200 a year, each tenable for four years at the university of that colony. This colony has also made ample provision for public institutions embrace, in addition to those of a commercial character, a Royal Society, which has published many valuable contributions to scientific associations in England, agricultural societies, public libraries, temperance societies, mechanics' institutes, literary societies, infant schools, ragged schools, city missions, colonial missionary societies, total abstinence societies, and numerous benevolent and charitable institutions for one of which a hall, erected at a cost exceeding £6000, has been recently opened. A Botanical Garden has been established, and a Museum, and some time since expended upon a proprietary grammar school, and upon the sale of the land which was granted on the arrival of the colony, a fund was raised by private subscription for the benefit of his family. The contributions from the colony to the various religious and missionary societies have been in excess of the contributions from other places relatively to their wealth. The Aborigines, who on the arrival of the people were stunted in a miserable manner during the Russian war, and a sum of £50,000 was contributed by the people of Tasmania to the Patriotic Fund. Several with regard to the population, this was the largest amount contributed by any of our colonies. In Tasmania, as in the other Australian colonies, responsible government, the institution of a popular representative and responsible government, and the result of the settlement of the question of the disposal of the waste lands of the colony, has contributed for improving the social and moral condition of the people. It contributed for improving the social and moral condition of the people. It is considered that the people of Tasmania are more moral, more intelligent, and more prosperous than they would probably have been under the old system of government.—Australian and New Zealand Gazette.

COUNTRY NEWS.

It is stated that the new packet service between Holyhead and Dublin is likely to commence on the 1st of October next.

On Tuesday the first drinking-fountain erected in North Shields was handed over to the inhabitants by the Mayor.

The Somersetshire Archæological Society will hold its annual congress in Monday and Tuesday next, the 24th and 25th inst., at Glastonbury.

The Ayr Observer announces the death of Mr. Robert Martin, of Bridge of Weir, one of the friends of the poet Burns. Mr. Martin was ninety-nine years of age.

During the last few days, Mr. Slack, a solicitor of Bath, has, by the permission of Mr. Knott, tenant of Mr. Kent's house, served members of the family. The proceedings are private.

The Leeds Town Council have unanimously resolved "that it is desirable that the Recorder should be created a Lord of Parliament." The proceeds are to go to the medical charities.

Lord Beaumont has given to an old Roman Catholic family, we, a few days ago, received into the Protestant Church at Christ Church, Hath Barrogate.

An influential meeting has been held at Beverley, at which a committee was appointed to take steps to promote the speedy union of that town with Market Weighton by railway.

There lies in the Bank of Ireland Government stock amounting to £36,744, which was unclaimed ten years ago, and continues unclaimed still. The dividends accumulated value thereon amount to £4,410.

On Monday morning a collision occurred at the Ordsal-lane station of the London and North-Western Railway, by which six persons were injured.

The authorities have forbidden a lottery which it was proposed to hold in Stonehaye in aid of the funds for providing for the poor Catholics of that town increased church and school accommodation.

Mr. W. J. Scoresby, secretary to the Liverpool School, and Acting Treasurer of the Shoeblack Brigade, Newcastle, has received the appointment of Inspector of Reformatory Schools of Scotland.

The annual festival given by the Hinckford Agricultural and Conservative Association will take place this year at Castle Hedingham, on Thursday, the 11th October.

Earl Spencer has consented to preside at the annual dinner of the Incorporated Law Agricultural Society, which was to take place in the Townhall, Brackley, yesterday.

The Midsommer holidays of the Etonians, which commenced on the last of August, terminated on Wednesday, on which day the lower boys returned, followed by the fifth and sixth forms on Thursday and Friday.

The body of William Hughes, a "general utility man," in the employment of Messrs. Thos. Wild, was found in the river Aire, near Leeds, on Sunday morning. The body presented no marks of violence, and had, it was supposed, been in the water a week.

At Great Houghton, one day last week, a boy got over a garden wall to steal mulberries. In getting down from the tree, or in some other way, he received a fall which caused his death in a few hours. A coroner, he was quite dead.

A friend of the Earl of Kingston arrived at Chester yesterday week, and obtained his Lordship's release from the county lunatic asylum, to which he had been sent by the magistrates under circumstances related in last week's Courant.

By an Act passed on the day of prorogation it is declared that the evidence of Roman Catholics in Ireland in criminal proceedings is to be a misdemeanour. Such banners may be removed. The Act is to be in force for ten years.

A new Roman Catholic church was opened on Tuesday, dedicated to St. Anthony, at Walker, near Newcastle, and in the afternoon a numerous and influential body of members of the party entertained the clergy at a dinner.

The Church Congress in the newly-organised University of Aberdeen has been filled up by the appointments of Mr. Alexander Bain, professor on Moral Philosophy and Logic, and he University of London and for the Indian Civil Service.

A child was poisoned at Shields, on Monday, through the carelessness of a surgeon, who sent to a Dover's powder to mistake, and together with a dose of laudanum, which was intended for Murphy some one ago sent one or two teaspoonfuls of Dover's powder.

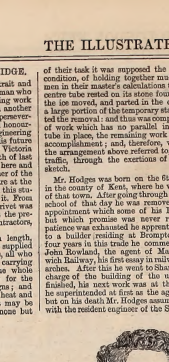
On Monday evening, a gas explosion occurred in a house, situate in Peel-street, Beverly-road, Hull. There had been an escape of gas in the house, and the servant girl, on entering the room with a lighted candle, took place. The door and the whole of the windows of the house were blown out. The girl, Miss Dorothea Hall, was severely burnt, and Mr. Hall's son, a junior, who happened to be in the room at the time, were severely injured. It is feared he will lose the sight of one eye.

LADIES' NATIONAL SANITARY ASSOCIATION.—On Monday's meeting, consisting chiefly of ladies, was held in one of the lecture-rooms at the Townhall, Manchester, to hear an address from Mrs. William Fison, of Brighton, one of the members of the Ladies' National Sanitary Association, on the subject of sanitary and temperance reform amongst the poor. A considerable audience, and at the close several ladies gave in their names as members of the local committee.

THE RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR MANCHESTER.—The Coroner's inquiry touching the accident on the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway near Dicconhurst was brought to a close yesterday week, the jury returning a verdict of "Accidental death." The evidence showed that the engine driver had the power and number of guards attached to the second train were insufficient, and that the signals were not properly attended to. Considerable censure in the evidence given by Colonel Yolland, the Government Inspector.

Colonel de Winton addressed a meeting in the Townhall, Birmingham, on Tuesday night, in favour of increased activity in the work of Volunteer Rifle Corps. He said that he had just been engaged in continual hear of keep chestnut into the religion of their masters; and this reason was that the Protestants had neglected their duty, and had supposed that Christianity was not a thing to be taken into the statement, but a thing to be left to the hearts, and understood by the understanding. He defended the compulsory use of the Bible in the Government school.

MORLEY FLORAL AND HORTICULTURAL AND AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY'S FIRST ANNUAL EXHIBITION.—This exhibition took place in a field near St. Peter's Church, at Morley. The sum of £100 was offered in prizes, with the exception of the horticultural, which were confined to the neighbourhood. The show was a very large one, fewer in number than usual, but the specimens were of a superior character. Poultry, pigeons, and rabbits not included some fine beasts. The floral and horticultural show was good, the tents were also very convenient.



GREAT BUDWORTH AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The nineteenth annual exhibition of this club took place on Tuesday last. The total entries were 412, being 82 above those of the previous year. The show of implements was not so large as it has been during some of the past years. The show of live stock was pronounced excellent. There was also a good display of roots. The Rev. Edward Stanley addressed the farmers and labourers for best work and long servitude. The president of the society for the year is Sir Philip de Malpas Grey Egerton, Bart., of Oulton Park.

THE LIVERPOOL FREE LIBRARY.—It is stated that the proceedings in connection with the opening of the Liverpool Free Library will commence on the 12th of October, when a public meeting of the working classes will be held in the Royal Amphitheatre. On the morning of the 13th there will be a public procession from the Townhall to the Free Public Library, where Mr. William Brown will in due form hand over to the Mayor and Council the building, which has been erected at the cost of his generous building. In the afternoon there will be a grand banquet in St. George's Hall, at which the Mayor will preside. Amongst those who have announced their intention of being present are Lord Brougham, the Earl of Derby, the Earl of Carnarvon, Lord Stanley, Lord Cranworth, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Milner, M.P., none of the Bishops, &c. The proceedings will be closed on the 15th by a grand soiree, to be given by the Mayor in the Exchange.

MR. HODGES, BUILDER OF THE VICTORIA BRIDGE.

We have much pleasure in presenting to our readers the Portrait and the following Sketch of the life of Mr. James Hodges, the gentleman who superintended the construction of this the greatest engineering work of the age. The antecedents of Mr. Hodges constitute him another striking illustration of "self-help." To his own indomitable perseverance alone, coupled with the strictest integrity of character and honourable conduct, does he owe his present high position in the engineering world—a position which did not fail to attract the notice of his future King on the occasion of the laying of the last stone of the Victoria Bridge by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on the 25th of last month. Of the many claimants that have sprung up, both here and Canada, for the honour of being the originator or designer of the Victoria Bridge, it is not now our intention to speak; but we are at the present time about to introduce a name in connection with this stupendous structure which well deserves the record we here give it. From the hour in which the first cofferdam was sunk until the last rivet was driven which completed the Victoria Bridge as it now stands the presiding genius was Mr. Hodges, as the engineer of the contractors, Messrs. Peto, Brassey, and Betts.

That the plans of the bridge, which is nearly two miles in length, and which occupied from 1853 to 1860 in its construction, were supplied by the engineers of the company, Messrs. Stephenson and Ross, all who have studied such works are well aware; but, the mode of carrying know anything of such works are well aware; but, the mode of carrying them out was left entirely in the hands of Mr. Hodges the whole of the applicances used in the temporary works necessary for the erection of the bridge were from his own models and designs; and these, when the novelty of the situation and the extremes of heat and cold incident to the climate of Canada are considered, it may be readily inferred, were of no ordinary character. Indeed, if none but a master-mind could plan the Victoria Bridge, it required no less a master-mind to carry the designs into execution; and, to afford some idea of the task undertaken in this respect, it is only necessary to mention that the whole of the temporary stagings, with works generally, had to be removed every autumn prior to the icestarting, and re-erected in the following summer when the ice had departed; so that, in reality, the labour at the masonry at the bridge in its earlier construction could only be carried on between the months of May and November; and, as all engaged in the ironwork were inexperienced as to the system of the Canadian winter and its effects upon that metal in erections of this nature, the anxieties of him upon whom devolved the management of such an undertaking, and amid such perplexities, is easily understood. But during the whole time that these vast works were in hand no emergency ever happened (and many emergencies did happen) that Mr. Hodges, with his native genius and energetic action, was not ready to meet and to vanquish; and never will the writer forget the incessant labour and watchful anxiety displayed in the winter of 1858-59 by that gentleman, and not only by him, but, as showing the force of example, by the hundreds of men who were working for him, at a time when the performance of their tasks seemed to be at the risk of their very lives, in order that what he had promised, as regards work to be done within a given period, should be accomplished. And to those who know him it is not necessary to add that his promise was fully redeemed. The circumstances were these. The importance of the Victoria Bridge to the Grand Trunk Railway system soon became so apparent as the main linkage of the road began to be opened and worked that the directors determined upon giving the contractors a bonus of £1,000 if they would deliver the bridge to the company, completed, a year before the date fixed in the contract; and the contractors, with that spirit of enterprise for which Messrs. Peto, Brassey, and Betts are so universally known, and their knowledge of the man in whom they had to trust, at once undertook to complete the bridge so as to be ready for traffic in December, 1859, instead of in that month of the following year, as stipulated in the contract. This arrangement was concluded so late in 1858 that all, save the one man who had to do the work, looked upon the thing as next to impossible, and so it appeared to be. But with Mr. Hodges it was not only possible but certain, and to his

MR. JAMES HODGES, THE BUILDER OF THE VICTORIA BRIDGE OVER THE ST. LAWRENCE.

of their task it was supposed the ice was incapable, from its rotten condition, of holding together much longer, such was the faith of the men in their master's calculations that not one left his labour until the centre tube rested on its stone foundations. In a few hours afterwards the ice moved, and parted in the centre of the river, carrying with it a large portion of the temporary staging, of which time had not permitted the removal: and thus was completed, within seven weeks, an amount of work which has no parallel in the history of engineering. This task in plain, unvarnishing words to explain the bridge was an easy of accomplishment; and, therefore, within the time agreed upon, under the arrangements soon referred to, the Victoria Bridge was opened for traffic, through the exertions of the man whose name heads this sketch.

But Mr. Hodges was born on the 6th of April, 1814, in Queenborough, in the county of Kent, where he was educated at the grammar-school of that town. After quitting the school he was articled to a gentleman of that neighbourhood, with whom he remained until the death of his employer, when, on the appointment which some of his Parliamentary friends had promised him, but which promise was never realised. After waiting until his patience was exhausted he appointed himself, at the age of seventeen, to be a builder residing at Brompton, near Chatham. Having served four years in this trade he commenced his railway practice under Mr. John Rowland, the agent of Messrs. Peto, the contractor of the Greenwich Railway, his first essay in railway work being the centring for the arches. After this he went to Shard, and, at the age of twenty-two, had charge of the building of the Dunmow branch of that place. This finished, his next work was at the Shakspeare Tunnel, Dover, which he superintended at first as the agent of the contractor, Mr. Rowland; but on his death Mr. Hodges assumed the charge of the work in concert with the resident engineer of the South-Eastern Railway; and it is not a little remarkable that every ounce of gunpowder used in the large blasts was deposited in its place by his own hands. During the progress of this work he attracted the attention of Sir Wm. Cubitt, then engineer-in-chief of the South-Eastern Railway to whom Mr. Hodges has frequently stated he is more indebted for his subsequent success and progress in his profession than to any other man. The pupil in this case is a worthy disciple of a very worthy master.

It was at this time that a curious resolve was made by young Hodges, which was this, that, if spared, he would work until the age of thirty-five for whatever amount of remuneration others might think his labour worth, but that after that time he should name the price at which his services were to be obtained. And to this end he steadily kept on progressing, so that by the time the period of his life was reached he had superintended the driving of the Abbotts Cliff, Seabrae, and Archcliff Fort tunnels, and the erection of the Shakspeare Viaduct, along with the blasting of the Roundedown Cliff and several other works in that neighbourhood, as well as the erection of early bridges at Norwich, Needham, and Somerleyton, as the agent of Sir Morton Peto, Bart., with whom about this time he became acquainted—his resolve was no castle in the air on his part, but a firm determination to work up by hard industry and integrity to the point which he himself had chosen, and which he attained within the time he had himself specified. A handsome testimonial from Sir William Cubitt at the termination of their business relations as to his worth gave him a fresh start as it were in his upward tendency, and the next appointment he filled was that of resident engineer, under Mr. G. P. Bidder, on the Norfolk Railway. The command of daily routine, and no less limited a scale, were not in consonance with his feelings, and, retiring from that position, we next find him as the engineer of the Lowestoft Railway, after which, in connection with Mr. James Peto, the brother of Sir Morton, he contracted for and built fifty miles of the Great Northern Railway, on behalf of his principals, Messrs. Peto and Betts.

After so many years of active life, under which his health suffered to a considerable extent, Mr. Hodges, in 1853, determined to retire into private life, and, with that view, purchased a small estate, near Bagshot, Surrey; but no sooner had he completed his arrangements, in 1855, for enjoying his otium cum dignitate than the organisation of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, with its Victoria Bridge across the St. Lawrence, afforded him, as the agent of the contractors who had undertaken the work, the opportunity of handing his name down to posterity as the man who was making what is all but through all time. Such an opportunity was not to be lost sight of by the active and genial temperament of such a man, and it was at once embraced. The good he has done in the field of his labours between that time and the present day may be summed up in the words of the Bishop of Montreal, who spoke them on the occasion of the workmen in the employ of Messrs. Peto and Betts erecting a stone—a granite boulder, from the Victoria Bridge, taken from the bed of the river—to preserve the desecration the remains of 6000 emigrants which were found in digging the foundations of some of the Grand Trunk Railway works. The right rev. gentleman said:—"He was there because he wished to pay the tribute of his personal respect to Mr. Hodges, to testify his high sense of that gentleman's integrity, and of the Christian principle with which he had always proved towards all employed under him. He had provided for their spiritual and educational supervision; and his otherwise high moral principles, his Christian philanthropy, and his munificent liberality to the charities of their city would remain on perpetual record."

GARIBALDI'S ENTRY INTO NAPLES.

On the first page of our present Number we give an Engraving of the passage of Garibaldi through the streets of Naples, on the occasion of his triumphant entry into Naples on the 7th inst. The Toledo is the main artery of Naples, and Garibaldi traversed this magnificent street in the afternoon, on his way from the palace where he had taken up his abode to the cathedral. A correspondent thus describes the scene:—"After some hours of refreshment and repose the Dictator, accompanied as before, went up the Toledo to the Duomo and back to the Palazzo again, where he remained; and this time there was more enthusiasm, and a different people manifested. Indeed, it was a most successful demonstration. Looking up the side streets the perspective was beautiful. Every street crossing was filled from every window. At night there was an illumination and a torchlight procession; hundreds of carriages moved to and fro in the Toledo till late at night; and the crowds continued to shout till not a sound voice could have remained in Naples. Had it not been for the exodus which has taken place during the last two months, the demonstration would have been more brilliant; but thousands of persons are either in the country or out of the kingdom."

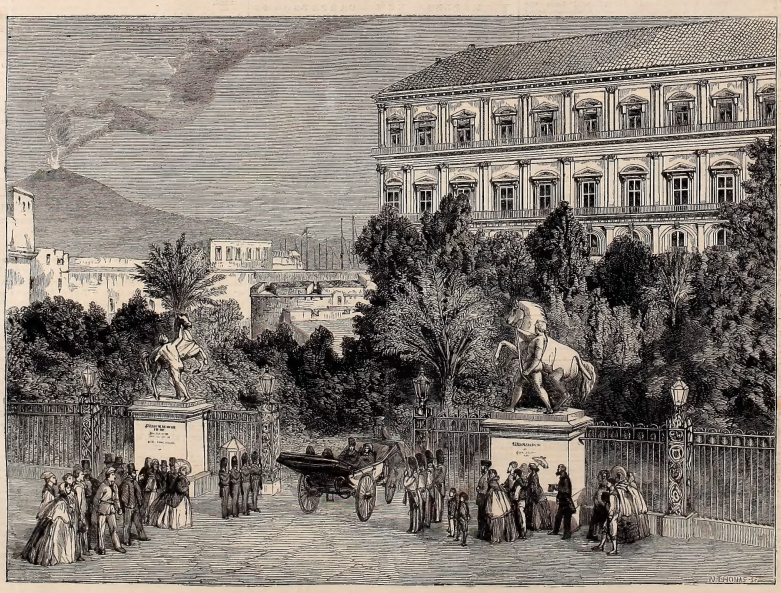
THE PRINCE OF WALES AT FREDERICTON.

THE Prince reached Fredericton, New Brunswick, on the 4th ult. A Fredericton dispatch of the date says:—"Friday is the most delightful experienced by the Prince of Wales since his arrival. The boat run up the St. John's River, through a fertile and beautiful country. The Prince was on deck most of the time, and was loudly cheered by groups of people in boats and on the banks, and was saluted by the waving of flags, ringing of bells, firing of muskets, &c., which were answered by the steamer's whistle and band. He arrived at Fredericton at six o'clock in the evening, and was received by several volunteer military companies and a large crowd of people. The town is decorated with three handsome triumphal arches, flags, &c." On the 6th ult. his Royal Highness received addresses from the Government, inaugurated the new park, and in the evening attended a ball at the Parliament House. The Prince left Fredericton on the 7th ult. in the Styx, which took his Royal Highness across the Bay of Fundy back to Hantsport.

The special correspondent of the Times gives the following account of the design of the Prince of Wales at Fredericton:—The boat with the Prince arrived at Fredericton on the evening of the 4th, and as it came slowly up against of the clean little town the scene was exceedingly pretty. The banks were lined with crowds, the churches had flags flying from their steeples, and all the windows of the tall, neat houses were crowded with occupants. The Prince landed under a Royal salute, fired by the Volunteer Artillery—a guard of honour, also of the volunteers, presenting arms and forming double with most creditable precision. The chiefs were deafening for a moment until the Prince got into his carriage, when the loyalty overpowered every other sentiment, and the crowd rushed rather tumultuously round the equipage, scattered the aldermen and other dignitaries of the town before them till they got sight of the Prince, when they stood still and cheered till the hills echoed again. Escorted by a body of well-drilled detachment of Yeomanry Cavalry, the Prince's carriage drove slowly through the town to Government House, and everywhere his Royal Highness received the enthusiastic marks of devotion and respect. In the evening there was a brilliant procession to Government House, which was a scene of affair. Sunday, July 8, was, of course a strict holiday, and the Prince and suite attended service in the cathedral church. On Monday the State labours of the Prince commenced again. A first proceeding was to formally open a cleared meadow of some thirty acres, the germ of a future park, which Fredericton is about to lay out in its suburbs. After this, of course, there was another levée, at which everyone was presented. On the evening of the 5th there was a ball at the Provincial Assembly, which passed off well. As a matter of difference of opinion as to building one large temporary ballroom, the matter had to be compromised by building several little ones. There was all manner of different plans, and one, at least, apparently, on no plan at all. The result of this arrangement may easily be guessed. Some of the rooms in which was dancing was crowded inconveniently, and the others, of course, were nearly empty.

INHABITANTS OF NAPLES.

In the Engraving on the opposite page our Artist has made a picturesque grouping of some of the inhabitants of the kingdom of Naples. The profound melancholy of the lazzarone, notwithstanding the pipings of the sampognaro, offers a marked contrast to the outbursts of frantic joy with which, according to all accounts, the Neapolitans everywhere welcome their deliverer Garibaldi. The woman standing in the middle in such a listless attitude, with the tambourine by her side, is a native of Sorrento. Her hair is generally worn (piped) after the Abruzzi; and at his back is seated a woman of Caraffa." At the opposite side of the picture a woman of Procida and by her side she is a young fisherman of Naples. The man in the background is a peasant of Calabria; and the woman carrying a child is a native of Viggiano.



THE PALAZZO REALE, NAPLES.

THE Royal palace was begun in 1600, by the command of Philip III., in the viceroyalty of the Count de Lemos, from the designs of Domenico Fontana, and is considered the handsomest in Naples. The front, five hundred and twenty feet long, presents the Doric, Ionic, and Composite orders in the three stories, the three arches in the centre, and, in Fontana's design, formed an open portico, with three entrances flanked by columns of granite from the Temple of Isis and Serapis. These arches have been walled up to give solidity to the building. The first and second floors have each twenty-one windows. The principal court has a double row of portico. The palace was partly destroyed by fire in 1837, and has been since repaired and enlarged especially towards the Piazza di San Carlo, where a garden has been planted, and two colossal bronze horses, presented to his Majesty by the late Emperor of Russia, in recollection of his reception in Italy in 1844. These statues are by Bonnani and Salvati. In St. Peter's Church. The grand staircase, which was constructed in 1651 by the Viceroy Onate leading to the State apartments, is generally esteemed the most magnificence, and ornamented with works of modern sculptors. The chapel is remarkable for its altar of precious marbles, formerly in the church of Santa Teresa, and the statue of the Conception by Fanaga. The State apartments contain some fine pictures. In the second floor are the private apartments which were occupied by the King. Adjoining these apartments is the extensive private library of the King, which occupies eight large halls, and contains a most valuable collection of prints and original drawings by the most celebrated artists. In another part of the apartments is a cabinet of philosophical instruments and apparatus. On the ground floor of the palace is the King's Armoury, which consists of a good collection of ancient armour, amongst which are most worthy of notice the helmets and shields of the Norman King Roger, of Ferdinand I. of Aragon, of Alexander Farnese, and Victor Amadeus of Savoy; the swords given by Ferdinand I. to Scanderbeg, and by Louis XIV. to his grandson, the Duke of Anjou, on his accession to the Spanish throne.

INHABITANTS OF THE KINGDOM OF NAPLES.

GATES OF THE KING'S PALACE, NAPLES.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Sept. 24.—Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 25.—Boerhave died, 1738.
TUESDAY, 26.—Leuchars inflicted, 1357.
WEDNESDAY, 27.—Cyprian. Old Holy Rood.
THURSDAY, 28.—Cedar of the Jussieu founded, 1640.
FRIDAY, 29.—New Silver completed, 1816.
SATURDAY, 30.—St. Michael. Michaelmas Day.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1854.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
3 39	4 20	5 0	5 40	6 20	7 0	7 40
15 59	16 40	17 20	18 0	18 40	19 20	20 0

THE THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—On Monday, Sept. 24, and during the Week, will be performed (for the third time), Mr. Falconer's new and successful Comedy, entitled THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE. After which, (for the first time), a Comedietta, in one act, entitled MR. CHIPPENDALE. Mr. Howe, Mr. Compton, Mr. Buckstone, and Mr. Wilkins will also appear in this Comedy. After which, FITZWATTLE OF FITZWATTLE HALL.—On Saturday, Sept. 30, will be performed, for the benefit of the Author, a NEW COMEDY. Box-office open daily from Ten till Five.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—On Monday, and during the Week, THE RIFLE BRIGADE. Mr. Webb, Mr. Wright, Miss Woolgar; and COLLEEN BAWN.—Messrs. Dion Boucicault, D. Fisher, Billington; Mrs. Agnes Robertson, Miss Woolgar, and MADGE ROBINSON CHARMS. Concerto at half-price.

ROYAL ENGLISH OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN, under the Management of Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. W. Harrison, will OPEN for the Season on MONDAY EVENING, Oct. 1, with WILLIAM TELL. Leader, Mr. Loder. Pyne, Lyne, Miss Abercrombi; Gibbs, Miss Heller; Comic Ballets, Mr. Harrison; Bonachi, Mr. Weiss; Walter, Mr. Borrani; Tell, Mr. Weiss; Gessler, Mr. Aynsley Cook; Arnold, Mr. Brooke, the National Anthem. Doors open at Half-past Seven; Commence at Eight. Box-office on Thursday, Sept. 28, from 11 to 4, and 29, 30, 31, 2 to 5, 4 to 11; 1st, 11 to 5. Private Boxes, £2 2s.; Amphitheatre Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Pit, 5s.; Amphitheatre, 3s.; Gallery, 2s. No charge for booking or fees to back-doors. Arrangements have been made with the Omnibus Companies, so that a Conveyance will pass the Doors every Ten Minutes, from 6 p.m. to 12, starting from the Bank, Pic. Nic, 64.—Stage-manager, Mr. Edward Stirling; Acting-manager, Mr. Edward Murray.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—CLARA NOVELLO'S FAREWELL CONCERTS.—Arrangements are in progress with Mdlle. Clara Novello and MESSRS. HALLE, to give the Handel Festival on WEDNESDAY, the 25th, and SATURDAY, the 28th of September. Mr. Hall will conquer the principal performers of the Norwich and Worcester Festivals, the band of the Crystal Palace Company, and numerous additions, pro-fessional and amateur, to the Chorus, which will be assembled from the Choral Societies of the metropolis. Clara Novello will sing on the 25th, and Mdlle. Clara Novello, Clarence Holmes, Mr. Weiss, Mr. Winn, Miss Suinton-Bailey, Mr. Wilbye Cooper, Mr. Bentley, and Mr. Weiss, Conductor, Mr. Costa. Organist, Dr. Gauntlett. Miscellaneous Concerts, Half-a-Crown each; Reserved Seats, arranged in blocks so as the Handel Festival, Half-a-Crown each; Reserved Seats in the Area, Five Shillings each. Doors open at Half-past Ten. On the 28th, a Miscellaneous Concert, Half-a-Crown each. Doors open at Half-past Eight. On the 30th, a Miscellaneous Concert, Half-a-Crown each. Doors open at Half-past Eight. Complete Programmes of the Concerts are reserved to secure Tickets immediately.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Arrangements for the Week ending on Saturday, September 30.—Monday, Display of Great Fountains. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, Display of Great Fountains, Concert of Miscellaneous Music. Wednesday, Display of Fountains, and Miscellaneous Attractions. Wednesday and Saturday, Open Gallery of Pictures. Open on Monday at 9; other days at 10. Admission, Wednesday and Saturday, Shilling; Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday, Sixpence; Children under Twelve Pennies. Season Tickets, free, may now be had at Hall-a-Guinea each, available till August 31st, 1855. Bromley, open on Mr. Limbird's premises, Bromley, Kent.

ASLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. HATTY.—Last Nights of MADEMOISELLE ADELAIDE, Equestrienne, and Sparring by the Brothers Carmichael, with Jack Bryan's Celebrated Dog, and the WILD HORSE. Succeeded by an unequalled programme of Feathers Scenes in the Arena. Second Season.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Handel's MESSIAH will be performed on WEDNESDAY EVENING, October 2, under the direction of Dr. Wylde; principal vocalists, Miss Dolby, Miss Lascelles, Mr. Lawler, Mr. Weiss, and Mr. Lockey Thompson. Leader, Mr. Willy. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Organist, Mr. E. Chipp. Mus. Bach. Tickets at popular prices—viz. Area Seats, 5s.; Balcony, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.—to be had at the Hall, and of all the principal Musicsellers.

EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, entirely Redecorated.—It will commence on Monday Evening, October 2, 1854, HAMILTON'S EXCURSIONS ROUND THE WORLD AND BACK, IN TWO HOURS, in which he will visit Egypt, Nubia, Russia, Scinde, Switzerland, and the Rhine. Patronised on 30,000 occasions first of nearly, by the most distinguished and foreign Artistes and Amateurs. Stalls, Three Shillings; Private Boxes, Eleven Guineas; Stalls, Two Guineas; Stalls, Guinea. Crowded, Mr. Leicester Buckingham. The music made by Mr. Hamilton.

THE SISTERS SOPHIE and ANNIE will have the honour of appearing in their new and highly-successful Entertainment, entitled MERRY HOLIDAYS, at Ryde on Sept. 24; Deal, 25; Dover, 26; Folkestone, 27; Ashford, 28; Maidstone, 29; and Rochester, 30.

WASHINGTON FRIEND'S LAST FOUR WEEKS in LONDON, with his Vocal, Musical, and PICTORIAL ENTERTAINMENT, entitled AN HOUR IN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES, EVERY EVENING, at Eleven and Eight o'Clock. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. St. James's Hall, Piccadilly.

CORREGGIO'S "ECCE HOMO."—The long-sought Replica of this Picture is in the National Gallery, where visitors may compare it before purchasing the finest painting in the country. It ON VIEW at GARDNER'S GALLERY, 128, Oxford-street. N.B.—Admission Free Till 10 Night.

MINERALOGY.—King's College, London.—Professor TENNANT, F.G.S., will commence a COURSE OF LECTURES ON MINERALOGY, with a view to the Examinations for Appointments in the Civil Service, on Wednesday, in the Arts. The Lectures will take place on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at the same hour. Fee, £2 2s.—Introductory Lecture on Wednesday and Friday at the same hour. Fee, £2 2s.

PICTURE FRAMES, cheap and good, of every description.—A neat Gold Frame, Glass, and Back for the "Pride of Niagara," 5s.; a better Frame for 7s. Looking-glasses supplied with the moulding to any pattern. Observe the Gold Frames of every description kept in stock. Regilding done in all its branches for the trade; re-silvering. CHARLES REES, 97, Quadrant, Regent-street.

FOR FAMILY ARMS or CREST send name and county to the ROYAL HERALDIC STUDIO. No fee for search. Arms painted and painted on Vellum, Sketches and Instructions how to find Arms, 5s. Crest on Seal or Ring, 7s.; on Steel Dies, 8s.; Initials, 1s. 6d. each; Book Plate Engraved with Arms, 10s. Hand-book of Mottoes, 1s.—Seal, Hall-marked Gold Mounted, with Crest, size for Arms. The Lever Embossing-press for Stamping Paper with Arms, Crest, &c. Sketches, 5s. Arms, Crest, and Motto, Illuminated in Gold and Colours, 10s. 6d. Heraldic Engraver to the Queen, and Author to the Court of Truth, 26, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.—Livery Button Dies, &c.

WEDDING CARDS.—For Lady and Gentleman—50 each. Wedding Cake Ornaments Delivered with Wedding Breakfasts. Visiting Cards.—Copper Plate Engraved in any Style, and 50 Best Cards, Printed, for, post-free. Stamping.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

MARK YOUR LINEN.—The Pen Superseded.—The best and only method of marking linen, stockings, &c. Initials, 1s. 6d. each; Name, 3s.; with CULLETON'S ELECTRO-SILVER PLATES. Any person can use them. Crests, Monograms, and Addresses in proportion. Sent by post on receipt of stamps or P.O.O. Arms found and fee for search.—T. Culleton, Heraldic, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS send to the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE, 201, Piccadilly, Corner of Sackville-street. Sketch, 2s. 6d.; or stamps. Pedigree of Families, 10s.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The established office for authority in England, which for many years has furnished Arms, Crests, &c., with their authority from throughout Europe.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

CAUTION on HERALDRY.—The Errors committed by Stationers, Jewellers, Engravers, and others, are such that includes are represented incorrect, the wrong tinctures are used, and the meaning wrongly applied. To avoid these perplexities, to consult her Majesty's Heralds, or the Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, who have recently purchased H. SALT, Authority.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—Engraving on Steel, Stone, Silver, Emblazoning, &c. in accordance with the laws of Correct Use of Arms. Sketches, 2s. 6d. Book Plate Arms, 10s. 6d. Seals, Rings, Dies, &c. Fee for search.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

"PRACTICE WITH SCIENCE" is the golden motto of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, and this is one the kind of industry, skill, and science which is displayed in the Prize Ploughs, Prize Cattle, Implements and other scenes of stock, are for the successful use of this Establishment, beginning to emphasise that the value of food depends upon how it is digested. Chemically, the most nutritious food is that which is in the highest value, but if imperfectly digested, what is the advantage which accrues? Dr. Dinsdale, just referred to proves that hay and straw prepared with the cutting-machine are more digestible than when given in the usual way. He latter may contain a much greater amount of alimentary matter. A pamphlet post free on application.—Address, Hickey's Steam Mills, Caledonian-road, King's-cross, N.

COALS.—BEST COALS ONLY.—COCKERELL and CO.'S price is now 20s. per ton, each, for the best screened coals, as supplied by them to Her Majesty. 13, Cornhill; Pimlico Wharf, Belgrave-road, Pimlico; and 352, Strand (Middle Exit), and Scotch-street Wharf, Peckham, S.E.

THE CENTRAL TRAINING-SCHOOL of ART at South Kensington, for MALE and FEMALE STUDENTS, and the METROPOLITAN SCHOOLS of ART, at Somerset-house, Bloomsbury, the Female School, Gower-street, removed from 37, Gower-street, and at Spitalfields, Glenfie-street; Finsbury, Willeson-street; Lambeth, Upper Kennington-lane; Manchester, Ancoats; Birmingham, Ormond-chambers, Bagot-street; St. Martin's-in-the-fields, Castlemaine, Leicester; Lambeth, St. Mary's, Prince's-road; Hammersmith, Bridge-road; Christ Church, St. George's-in-the-East, Gardener-street.—TERMS OPEN on MONDAY OCTOBER 2.
By Order of the Committee of Council on Education.

NAVAL CADETS, MARINE CADETS, &c.—At the last Examination of Pupils, which terminated yesterday in the Royal Naval College, the first place of all candidates was taken by a pupil of ESTABLISHMENT
Hatton Park, near Warwick, which has produced the following first-class classes, each second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth places. This Establishment is conducted by the Rev. Thomas Ford, M.A., Oxford, assisted by the Rev. Alfred Ford, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford, and by the late Mr. Thomas Redman, B.N. In addition to special instruction for naval examinations the Pupils receive a sound education in every branch of literature. Terms, 100 guineas per annum; Entrance Fee, 10 guineas. Pupils have been taken from their studies at this Establishment, less than 200 at Hatton Castle, previous to this last examination. Application to be addressed to the Rev. Thomas Ford, Hatton Park, Warwick. Terms and other information may be had at Messrs. Bentley's Library, 807, Regent-street, W.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE RIFLE COMPETITION.—The Annual Meeting of the Corps will be held at Lord Leconfield at the Cotswolds.—The FIRST GREAT MEETING will be held on the 27th, 28th, and 29th of September, 1854, at Cheltenham, on the Cotswolds.—Upwards of £200 to be competed for by the Volunteers of the County of Gloucester, and the Rifle Brigade, and the Rifle Corps of Volunteers from all the remote of the United Kingdom. "Aunt Sally" Targets, &c., &c. Programme, Rules for the Meeting, and further information, on application to Capt. Wm. Hale, Adjutant, 1st Gloucestershire Rifle Volunteers.
Henry J. Cochrane, Secretary.
6 Offices, 12, Colonnade, Cheltenham.

PICTURES.—Gentlemen are invited to view some fine ones, Modern and Ancient, at 6, Newman-street, W., Oxford-street.

TOLKIEN'S 25-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, with easy terms of purchase, elegant fingers, and various woods, 62-octave, is superior to any English or French Pianoforte of Fifty Guineas. Illustrated Price-list with Wrinkles, Post-free. Wm. Tolkien, 376, Oxford-street, London-bridge, E.C.

TOLKIEN'S PIANOS.—Public attention is called to a large assortment of Pianofortes, Cottage, Semi-Cottage, Semi-Grand, Grand, Cabinet, and Piccolo, 42 octaves, with all the latest improvements, some a little used, from 10 to 20 guineas below the usual prices. Also a few new ones, at 10 guineas. Illustrated Price-list and Directions for Hire. Illustrated Catalogues gratis.

TOLKIEN'S 10-GUINEA PIANOFORTE.—This Piano, with 6½ octaves, is of great power and responsible tone, is found often seven years, and is the only Pianoforte of the kind that has obtained universal approval for making the keys and damp of those climates. Height, four feet. Also, Cottage Pianofortes, with 6½ octaves. Illustrated Catalogues gratis.—T. King William-street, London-bridge, E.C.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOTS, 56, Cheapside, and 32, Ludgate-hill.—Messrs. NICOLE, NEPHEWS, and CO. (LATE DE LAMOTTE), Highly Recommend Snuff and Scent Boxes, at 21 Air. Snuff-boxes, two tunes, 12s. 6d. to 3l.; Ditto, three tunes, 21s. to 4l. 4s.; Ditto, four tunes, 2l. 2s. to 5l. 5s.; Ditto, six tunes, 3l. 3s. to 6l. 6s. Walnut and Rosewood Cases, 2l. 2s. to 5l. 5s.

PIANOFORTE, brilliant, full, and sweet-toned Cottage, in elegant walnut case, 42 octaves, metallic plate, and every improvement, by a good maker. Price only 22 guineas; a fine rosewood ditto—Key to move to Semitone Room, 22 and 23, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge.

FURNITURE.—Gratis: a new and elaborately-illustrated Catalogue, containing Designs and Prices of Bedsteads, Chairs, Couches, &c., with prices and estimates for all classes of houses. Country orders carriage-free.—LEWIS and CO., 295, 296, and 297, Tottenham-court-road, and 1, 2, and 3, Morwell-street, Tottenham-court-road. N.B.—THE LOWEST PRICES IN LONDON for SOLID for 30 guineas, recently sold 40 guineas; dining-room ditto, in Spanish mahogany, 50 guineas; and two bedroom and complete bedroom suites, in fine mahogany and wood, with winged wardrobes and massive top washstands, 25 guineas. The whole of the above are fully warranted.

SUPERIOR SECONDHAND FURNITURE.—The intention of intending purchasers is invited to the following suite of walnut drawing-room furniture, recently used by a family leaving town, viz.—A fine cabinet pianoforte, four-cane couches, eight cane chairs, and four easy ditto, and fine centre table, with carved and covered with rich green brocatelle silk; a handsome mezzo-tinto cabinet, shaped, with three doors, bevelled plate-glass panels, and a pair of handsome, small fancy work-tables, a pair of whatnots, and a tall bookcase. There are also two large-sized best plate chimney-glasses in rich carved and gilt frames, and a pair of fine Brussels carpets, with rich borders. Also fine Furniture for a Dining-room, in rich dark oak, of perfect manufacture and design, consisting of sideboard with plate-glass back, large telescope dining-tables, wrapper, twelve chairs and two arm-chairs, in rich crimson velvet. The above Furniture is of the best manufacture's prime cost. The whole are in perfect condition, and may be seen at Belgrave Gallery, 91, Belgrave-road, Pimlico.

BEDSTEADS of every description, both Wood, Iron, and Brass, fitted with Furniture and Bedding complete.—J. MAPLE and CO., entrance 197, Tottenham-court-road, at Shrewsbury-street.

J. MAPLE'S NEW CARPET-ROOMS
MACHINE CARPETS
Of the best manufacture, 2s. per yard.
Entrance,
197, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S Superior HOUSEHOLD LINENS.—J. FAMILIES REQUIRING LINEN should inspect the Stock, get samples, wash and compare prices. Goods well used by families of distinction, and guaranteed to wear well. Sheeting, Sheet Flannel, containing two 3-4 Damask Cloths, two Damask Cloths, two Huckaback Towels, two Diaper Towels, two Linen Sheets, and one yard any railway station in England, on the receipt of an order.
J. MAPLE and CO.,
195, Tottenham-court-road, and 1, 2, 3, Tottenham-place.
Established 20 years.

FURNITURE.
WHERE TO BUY, WHAT TO BUY, HOW TO BUY.
F. and S. BEVERS, 91 to 99, City-road,
Good and Cheap Furniture for any part of the kingdom.
Illustrated Catalogues gratis and post-free.

FRENCH MODERATOR LAMPS, the newest Patterns of the Season, with Glass Reservoirs, Pure Colza Oil, and Best Wicks, Assorted Sizes from 7s. to £1 10s.; China from 1s. to £7 7s. each. Engravings, with prices, free per post. Free Grocer, 107, Strand, corner of Wellington-street, and 107, Regent-street, Lambeth-row, Camberwell-gate, and Cross-road, Bayswater.

SARL and SONS, 17 and 18, Cornhill, respectfully solicit Visits to their Establishment, where they have a large and choice assortment adapted to the display of Fine Gold Jewellery, Gold and Silver Watches, and Fine Gold Chains. The Silversmith's department is in the Show-room, and consists of every article requisite for the Table and Sideboard. In the magnificent Show-room, on the first floor, are displayed Bronzes, Ormolu, Porcelain, Glass, and other articles suitable for the Drawing-room, Library, and Boudoir. Sarl and Sons' Show-room for the Display of Dressing and Dining Room Cloths of the most elegant and recherché Designs combined with Durability and Economy, is unrivalled.
SARL and SONS, 17 and 18, Cornhill, London.

DENTS CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS, 61, M. T. Dent, Chronometer Maker to the Admiralty, the Royal Observatories, and Clerkenwell Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen.—33, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross.

SUPERIOR GILT DRAWING-ROOM CLOCKS, at £5 5s.; the richest ditto, £10 10s. Every Clock warranted.—E. J. DENT, 82, Strand, London, at WALKER and M'CULLOCH'S Clock Depôt, 66, Cheapside, next door to Bow Church.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES.—Matchless in power, quality, and economy, and effective. As recommended by Sir David Brewster, Dollond, Ross, New Read-street corner of Goswell-street. N.B. Sole agent for the celebrated small but powerful Telescope, recommended by Captain Scott, R.N.—Catalogues gratis.

MICROSCOPES.—J. AMADIO'S Improved COMPOUND MICROSCOPES, £2 12s. 6d.; Students', £3 13s. 6d. "Both these are from Amadio, Holborn-hill, Second Edition, an Illustrated and Descriptive Catalogue, containing the Account of their Construction and Use, free on application.

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—E. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 59, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the Green Park, Manufacturers of Telescopes, Microscopes, Opera, Field, and Marine Glasses, Gunpowder, and general coal-tar Soap and night powerful Waterproof-coated PERSPECTIVE GLASSES, which are the best and most portable ever made. They are of the most powerful description, guaranteed each returned they power last name, 42 inches, with an extra astronomical eyepiece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's rings, and the mountains in the moon. Also, a large assortment of second-hand Telescopes, by Dollond, Adams, and other first-rate makers, at half the original cost.

SPECTACLES.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme sight, one of the most important discoveries of the present century, is now ready for sale to the public at the Establishment of Messrs. SOLOMONS, opticians, 59, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly. The valuable advantages derived from this invention in the vision of persons of advanced age are, that it will restore perfect sight to those who have lost it, and will prevent the necessity of using spectacles to those who have not arrived at that period. It is equally applicable to persons of any age, and is the only means of preserving the sight unimpaired to the most extreme old age. Messrs. Solomons have also invented a new and powerful Telescope, combining all the latest improvements, and which will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's rings, and the mountains in the moon. Also, a large assortment of second-hand Telescopes, by Dollond, Adams, and other first-rate makers, at half the original cost.

THE WIDOW of a CLERGYMAN of the Church of England begs to draw the attention of Parents and Guardians to her Establishment, healthily situated near Kensington, for the Board and Education of Young Ladies. Terms, 40 guineas per annum. Masters attend for the highly-finished EDUCATION; under Mr. Bent Masters. Vacancies in August. High references.—Address, Mrs. W. R., care of Messrs. Hatchard and Co., Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, W.

HIGH SCHOOL, CARLISLE.
Head Master—Rev. WILLIAM HILL, M.A., Oxon.
Mathematical Master—Rev. J. G. Dodson, M.A., Cantab.
Master of the English School—Mr. Alex. Macmillan, late of Edinburgh University, and the Normal Training School, Cheltenham.
For prospectus apply to the Rev. the Head Master; or Bell and Bradfute, 150, Aldersgate-street, London.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97a, Quadrant, Regent-street (private or carriage entrance in Beaufort-street). Open from Ten till Nine. Terms (of 24 lessons), Ladies and Gentlemen, 21s.; Schools and Classes, Less rating than ever extensions. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in Eight Lessons. Mr. Smart's Writing Copies, 1s. per dozen. Specimens (post-free) of Mr. Smart's Pen, 1s. Pencil, 6d. Ink, 6d. and 1s. Full particulars forwarded.

FORD'S HALF-GUINEA SHIRT JACKETS surprise everyone. Good cloth and well made. Send Neck Size Office order, 10s. 6d. and 21s. Illustrated Self-measure Post-free. Ford, 17, Oxford-street, London.

FORD'S EIDER-DOWN JACKETS for Invalid Ladies are in many new life-preservers. Those who suffer from cold in the chest should not be without them. Price 21s. Illustrated Self-measure Post-free, from 2 guineas upwards. Directions, free.—THOMAS FORD, 42, Oxford-street, London.

FORD'S STEEL JACKETS for Ladies in Zouave or loose Jacket Shape, and Gentlemen in Vest. Particulars post-free. T. Ford, Leather Jacket Maker, 42, Oxford-street, London, W.

FORD'S ZOUAVE JACKETS, for Dinner or Evening Dress, in Velvet, Cloth, or Fancy Materials, richly braided in gold, or in silk, or in velvet, and in Sealette, displaying a white silk or muslin vest underneath. Illustrations free.

FORD'S ZOUAVE JACKETS, beautifully fitting and elegant, for Morning Wear, in Cloth, Fancy Materials, or Velvet. Illustrations for self-measurement post-free.—T. Ford's Manufactory, 42, Oxford-street.

FORD'S ZOUAVE JACKETS, in LYONS VELVET, black or blue, as well as every colour. Illustrations free. 21s., 25s., and 30s.; all sizes ready. Orders and inclosures. Gentlemen Jackets, beautifully braided, 21s.

FORD'S ZOUAVE JACKETS.—Ladies who are desirous of obtaining Zouave Jackets of the most elegant description, and at the least possible, are invited to inspect an immense assortment of beautiful patterns, made in various materials, and trimmed in the most tasteful manner, which are now ready for inspection, and which will supply, post-free.—Ford, Manufacturer, 42, Oxford-street, London, W.

A PLAN of the CITY of NAPLES will be given in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for next Saturday, Sept. 29.

Numerous interesting Sketches in connection with the PRINCE OF WALES'S VISIT to BRITISH NORTH AMERICA and with the REVOLUTION in NAPLES have been received from our Special Artists, and will be engraved in the forthcoming Numbs of this Journal.

A LARGE PICTURE, PRINTED IN COLOURS, of the METROPOLITAN RIFLE CORPS in HYDE PARK, IN THEIR RESPECTIVE COSTUMES, will appear in this Journal for the 27th of October next.

A carefully-finished VIEW of the FALLS of NIAGARA, FROM THE TOP of the FALLS on the AMERICAN SIDE, also PRINTED IN COLOURS, will be given at the same time.

COLOURED MAP of ITALY and SWITZERLAND GRATIS.

With this Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is issued, instead of the usual Supplement, a FOUR-PAGE MAP OF ITALY AND SWITZERLAND, printed in Colours, distinguishing the Sardinian, the Austrian, the Roman, and the Neapolitan States; and showing the Territory lately ceded by Sardinia to France. The Islands of Corsica, Sardinia, and Sicily are also included. In this Map the progress of Garibaldi in Sicily and on the main land of the Sardinian and Papal troops in the Roman States, can be clearly traced, OFFICE, No. 198, Strand.

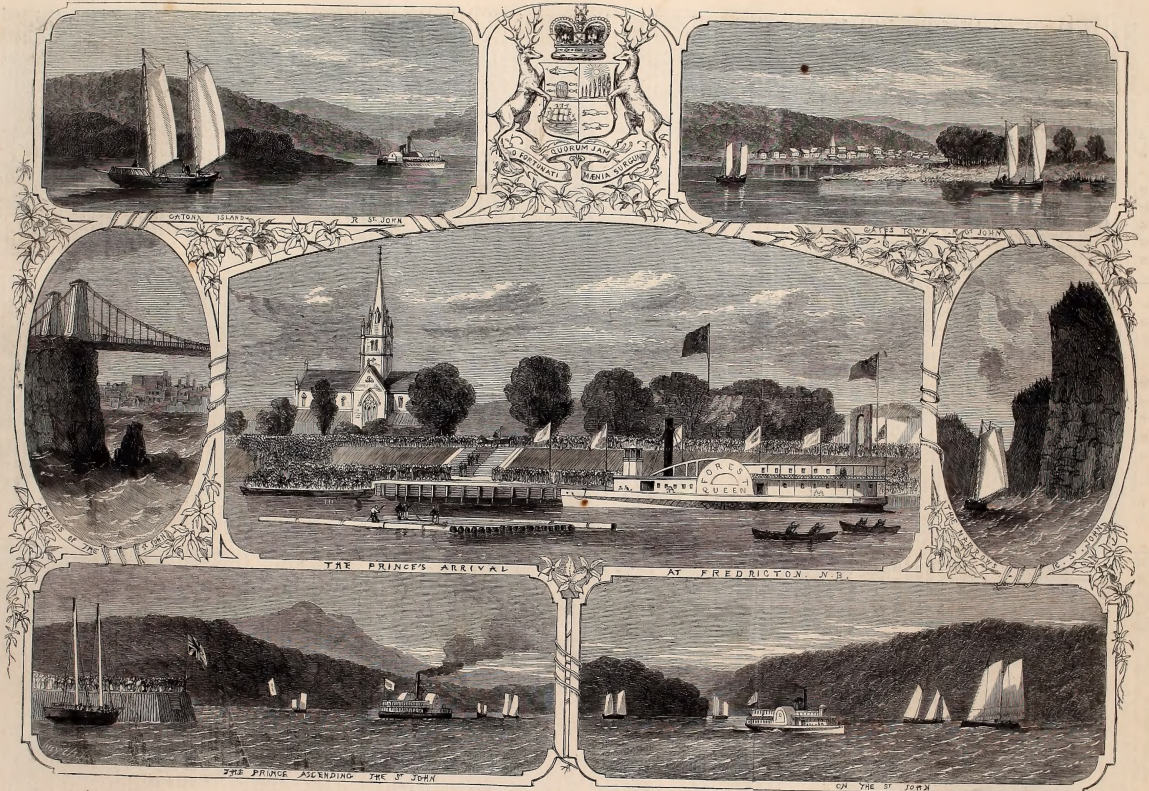
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1854.

It is singular how week after week develops the secrets of the Syrian massacres, the inner life of the country which stern old Mehemet Ali alone knew how to keep in order. Our ears had hardly ceased tingling at Father Palgrave's frightful disclosures, when a letter comes to light from a Syrian Bishop serving to bear out to a very considerable extent Lord Palmerston's frequently-reiterated assertion that the Christians were the aggressors. It is true the quarter from whence the letter is communicated enjoins caution in receiving it, and more than hints at the possibility of fabrication; but there is internal evidence of authenticity; and, after all, a friendly witness would merely stamp it, even as it stands, as a most justifiable precaution by persons well aware of a mediated raid. Read it which way one will, however, what a state of society is disclosed! And if it be the fact that the old play of "The Revolt of the Harem" is about to be revived for the Sultan's benefit at Constantinople, who shall say that the Emperor Nicholas was so very far wrong, after all, in his estimate of the symptoms of the sick man?

It is an old proverb that a wronghended man is fifty times a more difficult subject than a bad one. Our Orange friends in the North of Ireland succeeded this Session in signalising themselves by forcing a Liberal Parliament to pass an Act for their especial use and behoof. We had thought that any interruption to the uniformly harmonious flow of the rejoicings which have greeted the heir to the throne in Canada would have been confined to the solitary misanthrope who probably saw no other chance of making himself famous. But party spirit everywhere claims an immunity from the rules of good taste, and we regret to see that the Canadian Orangemen have been asserting this privilege in a somewhat ungainly manner.



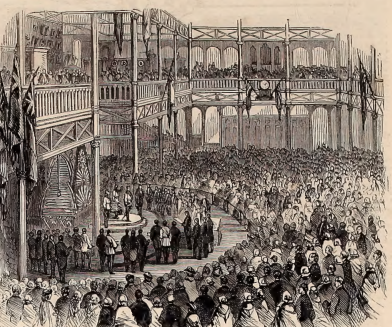
THE COURT.

RETURN OF THE QUEEN FROM SCOTLAND.

The Queen and the Prince Consort, accompanied by Prussian Allee, Helena, and Louise, Princess Arthur and Leopold, and attended by Lady Churchill, the Hon. B. Bruce, Sir C. Wood, Sir Charles B. Phipps, Major Elphinstone, and Colonel the Hon. C. Grey, arrived at Buckingham Palace on Saturday morning at ten o'clock for Holyrood Palace, where the Royal party arrived at a quarter before seven o'clock in the evening. Her Majesty was received by General Cameron.

On Sunday the Queen and the Prince Consort, accompanied by Princesses Alice and Helena, and attended by Lady Churchill and the Equerries in Waiting, drove to Presmennan, the residence of her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and afterwards attended Divine service in the parish church, and heard a sermon from the Rev. Mr. Cowie, minister of Cramond, officiated.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Princesses Alice and Helena, and attended by the Equerry in Waiting, drove out into the city of Edinburgh, and on returning to Holyrood at half-past two o'clock, Her Majesty received the Address to the Queen from the National Gallery, and afterwards to the Botanical Gardens, where Her Majesty planted a commemorative tree. The Queen and Prince Consort left Holyrood at four o'clock, accompanied by Princess Alice, and attended by Lady Churchill, the Equerry in the Waiting, and Commander the Hon. C. Grey. Their Majesties arrived at Perth at seven o'clock in the evening the Queen and the Prince Consort were received by Princesses Alice, Helena, and Louise, and Princes Arthur and Leopold, and attended by Lady Churchill, the Hon. B. Bruce, Sir Charles B. Phipps, Sir C. B. Elphinstone, Major Teesdale, and Major Grey the Hon. C. Grey, left the palace, escorted by a detachment of the 11th Hussars, and proceeded to the Perth Railway Station, where the Royal train left the station. Mr. Cawkwell, general manager of the London and North-Western Railway, who had been for many years superintendent of the line between Perth and Carlisle, changed the train, which proceeded viâ the Caledonian Railway, at Carlisle. The Queen and Prince Consort, after one hour and nineteen minutes, was brought to a close at Abington, where the engine was replenished with water, and proceeded thence to Carstairs, passing which the journey was accomplished without stoppage. At the Dorker City a delay of ten minutes took place, during which the Royal party were served with refreshments. The Caledonian directors here resigned the charge of her Majesty into the hands of Admiral Moorsom, Colonel Bunbury, and Mr. Glover, who accompanied by Mr. Stewart, secretary of the North-Western Railway, attended the Royal party to Euston Square. Waterhouses were waited and to take water at Shap, Lancaster, Preston, Whitmore, and Stafford. At Wolverhampton the Royal party were received by the chairman of the West Midland Railway, the officials of the Great Western Railway assembled in the garden of the station to receive the temporary guests of the line. This company, viâ Leamington, Banbury, and Oxford, at which places only stoppages for water were made, arrived at Slough, the ground station belonging to the Eastern Counties Railway, at twenty minutes before seven o'clock. Mr. Hawkshaw, superintendent of the South-Western Railway, went to Eastern Counties Railway, at twenty minutes before seven o'clock. Mr. Hawkshaw, superintendent of the South-Western Railway, went to Basingstoke, where the Royal party arrived at 7.30 A.M. Mr. Carpenter's train was in waiting at Slough, and the remaining six hours' journey to Gosport was performed without stoppage. At 11.30 the Royal party left the Clarence Victualling Yard, and proceeded alongside the Queen's yacht to the pier, which was lately brought alongside the Queen's yacht to the pier, which was lately brought alongside the Queen's yacht to the pier, which was lately brought



SUDORUM JAM
NEMO FERINAT
NEMO TERGUM
CATON ISLAND R. ST. JOHN
GATES TOWN R. ST. JOHN QUEEN
THE PRINCE'S ARRIVAL AT FREDRICTON N.B.
THE PRINCE ASCENDING THE ST JOHN ON THE ST JOHN

SEE PAGE 286.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT MONTREAL.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE, OPENED BY HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS AUGUST 25.

THE PRINCE OPENING THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION IN THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

THE Prince of Wales landed at Montreal on Saturday morning, the 25th ult., and was received with the most enthusiastic demonstrations of welcome by about 60,000 people. The occasion was probably the most striking ever witnessed in Canada. The streets were beautifully decorated—there being some tastefully-constructed arches; and the procession which accompanied his Royal Highness from the wharf after the presentation of an address from the Mayor embodied all the civic societies, the clergy, the fire brigade, the regular military, and the volunteers, not only of the city, but of distant places. One military company from Boston took part in the ceremonies. The procession proceeded immediately to the Crystal Palace, which was formally opened by the Prince; after which he rode in an open car to the Victoria Bridge, which he completed by laying the corner-stone, with appropriate ceremonies.

The ball on the evening of the 27th was a magnificent affair. It was held in a building erected for the special purpose, and was attended by about 6000 persons, including the Governor-General, the Duke of Newcastle, Lord Lyons, Lord Mulgrave, the Earl of St. Germans, Lady Franklin, Sir Fenwick Williams, the Marquis and Marchioness of Chandos, and others. The Prince arrived at ten o'clock, and opened the ball with Mrs. John Young. He danced every dance but one—twenty-one dances—and retired at about four in the morning. The supper-tables were supplied with fountains of champagne and claret, also with jets of eau de cologne. A concert was held in this hall on the 29th, at which 8000 were present; and on the 30th there was a city ball, attended by 10,000 persons. The Prince was present on this occasion, but did not dance.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

In this building was held the Provincial Exhibition, which his Royal Highness opened in person on the 25th ult. The palace and the opening ceremony are thus described by the Times correspondent:—"The exterior of the building is not particularly striking, but inside its great length, breadth, and height are imposing. Two broad galleries, one above the other, run round the vast hall (there are no transepts at present), and these were, of course, well filled with the fair ones of Montreal, as was also the spacious floor. The Prince arrived about eleven o'clock, and was received by the executive committee of the Board of Arts and Agriculture, and other officials, and by them conducted to an apartment provided for his use under one of the galleries. Here the Lord Bishop of Montreal and the President of the Arts Committee and others were presented to his Royal Highness, after which the Prince entered, and took his seat upon a throne which was erected on one side of the building, with the members of his suite standing uncovered around on the steps of the dais. The scene was brilliant enough—the people all rose, and the Oratorio Society of Montreal sang the National Anthem, accompanied by two organs, which are being exhibited in the galleries. His Excellency the Governor-General, surrounded by his Council, standing at the foot of the throne, read a brief address to the Prince, and his Royal Highness replied as follows:—

Gentlemen,—Most readily I assent to the request you have made, a request the more agreeable, because it is conveyed to me by my kind friend, your excellent Governor-General. I am not ignorant of the high position attained by Canada in the Great Exhibition of 1851, which was opened under the happy auspices of the Queen and the Prince Consort; and, as carrying out the design of that memorable undertaking, this smaller, but to Canada most interesting collection of the products of your land, and of works of art and industry, has my entire sympathy, and claims my best wishes for its success. I hope and believe it will realise all the objects for which it has been designed.

A prayer was then offered up by the Lord Bishop, after which the Prince and his suite were conducted round the building, where many interesting articles were shown to his Royal Highness. In the fine arts department is a good collection of pictures, and the council, being desirous of presenting the Prince with a specimen of Canadian art as a memento of the occasion, his Royal Highness was pleased to select a water-colour painting by Mr. Way—subject, "The Prince's Squadron at Anchor at the Mouth of Gaspé Basin." His Royal Highness stepped out on the balcony in front of the building, and was loudly cheered by the assembled multitude outside, to whom he bowed his acknowledgments. The Governor-General having asked his Royal Highness's assent, said, "By command of his Royal Highness I declare this exhibition opened." The choir afterwards sang the "Hallelujah Chorus," and the illustrious Visitor and his suite shortly after took their departure to inaugurate the great Victoria Bridge. A guard of honour of the Montreal Light Infantry, with the colours of the regiment, under Captain Taylor, and with a fine band, was stationed at the building.

THE BALL-PAVILION.

THE BALL-ROOM.

The correspondent of the Times describes the ball which was given to the Prince of Wales at Montreal, in its excellent arrangements and brilliant effect, as unexcelled by any ball he ever witnessed. The ball-room was not alone specially built, but extensive surroundings in the way of pleasure-grounds, fountains, groves, and bowers, all lighted up like a second Vauxhall, were specially constructed for the occasion. The ball-room was one immense circle, with an orchestra in the centre, beneath the lofty-peaked roof, which gradually sloped down towards the outer walls, so as to resemble in the design a circular pavilion-tent—though, of course, of colossal dimensions, as the diameter of the ball-room was nearly 100 yards from side to side. In the midst the double orchestra was placed, reaching from the ground to the roof of the building. The design of this centre ornament, if it may be so called, was light and exceedingly beautiful, and its trellis of open columns was almost entirely concealed under garlands of flowers. Every part of the room was decorated with such consummate taste and knowledge of effect that no portion could be selected for particular admiration. The prevailing tone of the whole was pink, but of such a soft tint that it was only when one saw it in immediate contact with the white and gold that its actual colour could easily be distinguished. Even the floor of the ball-room was stained of the same light rosy hue. The outside was almost as good in its way as the grand ball-room itself. Four handsome entrances were made into the building, flanked with battlemented towers with low walls and turrets connecting them, while the apex of the ball-pavilion was surrounded by a cupola and open lantern to secure the utmost ventilation. Many acres of ground around the building were set apart for bowers and promenades.

ARCH AT THE HEAD OF M'GILL-STREET.

PAVILION ON THE QUAY.—THE PRINCE LANDING.

THE ARCH AT THE PLACE D'ARMES.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS AT OTTAWA.

On the 1st inst., as stated in our Number last week, the Prince of Wales laid the foundation-stone of the new Parliament buildings at Ottawa. Over the entrance to the grounds, which were inclosed, a handsome Gothic arch was erected. In the round open space there were tiers of seats containing several thousand spectators. The central space was reserved for the Prince and suite. The several leading Irish, Scotch, and English societies, bands of lumbermen in scarlet shirts, Orange societies from the country, mounted, and clad in orange scarfs, marched round. After the Prince had passed through the arch the streets with the Mayor to the field where the Canadian regiment is encamped. The Prince's defence he went to the Falls of Montmorenci, Falls, where, by three wooden inclined planes, rafts are conveyed from Chaudiere Lake down to Ottawa River, a distance of 1,000 feet. The Prince and suite went down the slides, the people cheering lustily. In the evening the whole city was illuminated.

THE PRINCE CONTINUES HIS PROGRESS.

On the evening of the 2nd he left Ottawa, and arrived at Brockville the following evening, after a fatiguing journey by carriage, canoe, foot, and through the bark country from Montmorenci.

On the 3rd the Prince slept on board the steamer and started the next morning for Kingston, which town he left for Toronto about noon on the evening of the 4th inst. The Prince did not land here, owing to the ill-judged conduct of the Orange party, who insisted upon the ill-judged conduct of the Orange party, who insisted upon joining the procession with Catholic societies, &c. The Duke of Newcastle would not sanction any party display, and the Prince proceeded on the following morning to Belleville, where a similar precedent prevented his landing. The townspeople were anxious to receive the Prince, but the presence of a number of Orangemen from Kingston rendered it impossible. These disagreeable occurrences were much regretted by the people of the province in general, and great indignation was felt over the leaders of the Orange party.

The Prince arrived at Coburg on the evening of the 6th, where he met with a most hearty reception. The streets were thronged by a number of gentlemen carrying torches, and escorted by an immense crowd, cheering vehemently, to the Queen's Hotel, where he received addresses from the Town Council and Victoria College. In the evening addresses from the Town Council and Victoria College. In the evening the Prince attended a ball, and entered with spirit into the dancing.

On the 7th the Royal party left for Peterborough, where he was likewise warmly welcomed. Afterwards he visited Rice Lake, where he was received by the Mississaga Indians, who, under Chief Paudash, are now nearly one hundred years of age. The Prince lunched with the authorities of Fort Hope, where his reception was most enthusiastic, and then proceeded by rail to Whitby; here 4000 persons had assembled, who fired a salute and cheered the Prince, on his way to the steamer, with almost frantic enthusiasm.

ARRIVAL OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS AT TORONTO.

The Prince arrived at Toronto on the evening of the 7th, and met with a magnificent reception; the principal streets through which he passed were lined by the Queen's Own Rifles, the Canadian artillery, and the Volunteer Militia. On the 8th the Royal party left for Hamilton, where he was received by the Mayor, Corporation, Judges, members of Parliament, officers of the army, volunteers, &c. The Prince, on leaving the steamer, was received with a royal salute of twenty-one guns. The Mayor presented an address, and a procession of militia, firemen, and national societies defiled past the Prince, shouting hurrahs and cheering vociferously. The crowd on this occasion was quite dense before it was finished, but the city was most brilliantly illuminated in the Prince's evening honour. The streets were thronged by principal streets, cheered by the people the whole of the way, and flowers were strewed before him; and the Prince proceeded to the Government House, where reception was provided for him. He left Hamilton by Royal Highness held a levée. The reception of the Prince at Toronto is described in the Globe of Saturday morning as follows:—

It was a spectacle which, for magnificence, has probably never been surpassed. A semicircular platform, whose radius was at least 200 feet, had been erected, and from the centre out that of semi-circle diverged several lines of seats, connected with shields, banners, &c., and more than one of these lines was occupied by ladies. Within the area of the semi-circle a squadron of cavalry, and in the centre was a great level platform, with a throne and seats for the Governor-General, the Prince, and his suite, the members of the Corporation, the Judges, many members of Parliament, and all the officers of the army. Behind the judges, many members of Parliament, and all the officers of the army. Behind the judges, many members of Parliament, and all the officers of the army. Behind the

MUSIC.

THE WORCESTER FESTIVAL, in a financial point of view, has been very successful. The daily receipts were as follows:—Tuesday, £955 5s. 6d.; Wednesday, £729 2s. 6d.; Thursday, £725 5s. 10d.; Friday, £393 5s. 6d.; total £2124 18s. 6d. It was expected that additional donations and the surplus of receipts over payments would swell the amount of pecuniary benefit to the charity to £2200 or £2300. This is gratifying, as the charity is a large one, and, as stated in the Report, "is the only institution in the county of the highly laudable one—the relief of the widows and orphans of the clergy of the three dioceses of Worcester, Gloucester, and Hereford, in which, it seems, there are many very small livings. In a musical point of view the Festival, call for very little remark. It was, as usual, a musical and social affair, and was fashionably known, with one single such event and scarcely another. The Festival Choir, by Bridge, is an exception, a cantata, called "The Lord is King," which is a clever work, Dutch counterpoint, some continuous repetition, a little monotonous, but lacks originality and interest; and, though well performed, was received with coldness. Rudersdorff, Lemmens-Sherrington, and Mr. Weiss—was but coldly received. The greatest and most successful performances were Handel's "Messiah," on Thursday, and "The Creation," on Friday; the former above 1600 persons were present; at the latter, upwards of 2000. The festival, as usual, terminated on Friday night with a ball.

THE NORWICH FESTIVAL has been held this week. It has presented much novelty, and has been, altogether, of even more than usual interest. At every one of the four concerts the performances generally, deferring till next week our remarks on the pieces brought for the first time before the public. The festival began on Tuesday morning, at eleven o'clock, with Mozart's Requiem; on Tuesday evening there was a miscellaneous Monday evening; on Wednesday morning a selection from Gluck's celebrated opera "Armida" on Wednesday morning from Gluck's celebrated opera "Armida" and Handel's "Dettingen Spoh's oratorio "The Last Judgment," and Handel's "Dettingen Te Deum" were given. On Wednesday evening, a miscellaneous concert, of which Sterndale Bennett's "May Queen" was the principal feature; on Thursday morning, Haydn's "Creation" was given. The following principal singers were Mdme. Clara Novello, Mdlle. Titiens, Mdme. Borghi-Mamo, Mrs. Weiss, Miss Dolby, Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, Giuglini, Mr. Wilbye Cooper, Mr. Santley, Mr. Weiss, and Signor Belletti. The performers were contributed by the Sacred Harmonic Society for many years been the musical director of the Norwich festivals.

An operatic company, organised by Mr. Willert Beale, and of a strength hitherto unequalled in the British provinces, has, during the present month, been performing Italian operas at the Theatre Royal, Dublin. Its principal members are Mdme. Grisi, Mdme. Viardot, Mdme. Lotsch, Signor Mario, Signor Gardoni, and Signor Graziani, besides several efficient performers of lesser note. With this troupe Mr. Beale has not only produced the favourite operas—"Norma," "Lucrezia Borgia," "Fidelio," and others—but he has produced a work wholly unknown to the English public—Verdi's "Macbeth." In this instance the third eyrea has never been brought upon the metropolitan boards, for it is, in many respects one of the greatest efforts of the composer's genius, and the character of Lady Macbeth gives the fullest scope to the powers of a great lyrical tragedian. On the occasion it was sustained by Mdme. Viardot, whose marvellous picture of the terrible woman, both in the very soul of Shakspeare, and had an effect on the audience such as was produced in former days by the representation of Mrs. Siddons. The opera received a most unrivalled display of scenery, and Giuseppe Verdi's Macbeth, too, was a powerful performance; and the whole opera was acted and sung in a manner worthy of either of our metropolitan theatres.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.—The first great revival of the season at this house was undertaken to be produced on Saturday, and announced on Saturday. It has been placed on the boards with great attention to propriety of costume and scenery, but the principal performance is insignificant in point of art, of which each successive portion forms a splendid picture. It is not needful that we should enter into any critical criticism of a character with which the public are so familiar as Mr. Phelps's Coriolanus. It is enough to state that it lacks nothing in the fire and vigour of the part, and realises to the situations in which the noble Roman was engaged. Than those scenes nothing, perhaps, in these times can be more interesting. The whole tragedy reads, and was intended by its mighty author to read, as a political lesson that should endure for ages. One of the best representations of a masculine character on the stage is Mr. Barrett's Menenius; and we have also reason to be pleased with Mr. Vezin's Tullus Aufidius. Mrs. Atkinson's Virgilia was remarkably good. Miss Atkinson, as the hero's no less heroical mother, was inspired with a stern grandeur, which raises the actress in our estimation. Miss Pearce was creditable.

SURREY.—This house was reopened on Saturday with two new melodramatic pieces which occupy about three hours each in representation. Both are expensively placed on the stage, and remarkably well acted, so that we cannot but regret that their literary value is not in some measure equal. They belong to that class of the highest taste must always repudiate, whatever the merit of the individual example. The first, entitled "The Fatal Error; or, Two Lives," turns on a revolved plot which it is difficult to elucidate. It is from the pen of the author of "The Flower Girl," and, like that, is what is pretentiously called "a Surrey piece." Some scenes are adapted to the presumed low taste of the audience, and not intended to educate them in a higher style. This is a great misfortune which might easily be demonstrated. The hero, Ralph Gaston, is impersonated, in and his variations of character and costume, by Mr. Creswick, with ease and ought to be better than he is. Altogether, this Gaston is a most imperfect specimen of our common humanity. Accused by the seducer of his sister of robbery, and being sentenced to a term of imprisonment, he devotes his life to revenge. He leaves Australia for England with a wealthy companion named Bathhurst, but on the voyage home, he makes fate, and his master perishes in the flame; Gaston manages, however, to take possession of his papers, and, assuming his identity on his return makes into possession of all his property. This gives him the means of revenging himself on Sir Everard Dudley (Mr. Ternan), who, instead of rescuing his sister's child from destitution. Mr. Ricey, the low comedian, is engaged at this house, and took in this piece the part of an Irish lawyer, which he sustained with considerable tact. The second drama is entitled "The Veteran and His Son," and is adapted from the French. Of this Mr. Shepherd is the hero, and acted his part with his usual severity. The piece, considering the late hour, the curtain descended to the plaudits of the audience.

OLYMPIC.—Mr. H. Wigan has given to this house an extravagant farce, entitled, "Savage as a Bear," founded on a late French piece entitled "Un Tigre de Bengale," in which the passion of jealousy is again received as an element of comedy. Mr. Wigan appears to support the part of the self-tormentor, one Gregory Griffin, who suspects his opposite neighbour, Mr. Jaydee (Mr. H. Wigan), of using his cigars and meerschaume for amorous signals with Mrs. Griffin. The lady writes to Jaydee begging him to desist from his usual window practices. The latter completely misunderstands the matter, and seeks a personal interview. The perplexities of the lady are now increased, as she seeks to conceal the interview from her husband. All her efforts are defeated by his timidity. Jaydee always leaves something behind him that serves for his detection. Ultimately, the enraged husband becomes satisfied of his neighbour's innocence. We have yet to add a character to this little piece—a faithful soubrette, played with much force by Mrs. Emden.

STRAND.—"Hit Him—He has No Friends" is the title of a trifle little more by Messrs. Yates and Harrington. Mr. James Rogers is the hero—a nervous gentleman, who is prescribed by reason of a paragraph in the newspapers recording the desertion of his wife and children by a person of the same name. But the husband is not him. His mistress rejects him, her brother would kill him, and a magistrate would commit him. Such is the poor fellow's distress that the death of an uncle where he seeks solace only him a husband. The curtain falls to applause.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

ABSENCE IN COLOURED PAPERHANGINGS.—Professor Schnitzler has been appointed by the Imperial Academy of Vienna to examine papers taken from rooms, the inhabitants of which had suffered from deleterious exhalations. He found that one hundred square yards of a green paper contained nearly 70 grains (5·1 grammes) of regulus of arsenic, representing 214 grains (15·6 grammes) of white arsenic. This is sufficient to constitute a large proportion of this dangerous substance. The Academy of Sciences at Vienna is about to investigate the subject.

TARTARIC ACID has been converted into malic acid by M. Dessaignes, by means of decolidation. The tartaric acid is in the state of lemon, remaining from the manufacture of cream of tartar, is heated to 180° Cent., and phosphorus on tartaric acid. The malic acid thus produced is separated from the greater part of the tartaric acid by the natural malic acid.—Comptes Rendus.

THE MEASUREMENT OF THE VOLUME OF THE LUNGS IN MAN has been determined by M. S. Gerhant, who has experimented on both healthy and diseased persons, by means of a gasometer filled with a mixture of hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, and carbonic acid. His mode of operation and the results obtained, are the subject of a paper read to the Academy of Sciences.

THE THREDOMETER, an instrument for resolving spherical triangles mechanically with precision, the invention of a lawyer, has been exhibited to the Academy of Sciences, of Trieste. A description of its construction and application is given in the "Bulletin." Its construction is very simple, and it appears to be being much cheaper and stronger. Professor Sandberger, of Wurtzburg, has also invented a similar instrument.

HORSE GUARANTEE, of Brest, expects that his wife will be able to supply Europe with wood charcoal, it is said, has been discovered by Dr. Millon, of the Central Pharmaceutical Establishment in Algeria. Here his experiments it exhibited that wood, when exposed to a temperature of 220 deg. cent. (468 deg. Fah.), represents an organic residual, which, submitted to the action of water, absorbs, without dissolving, substances into a black matter, analogous to the products of the soil; insoluble in water, but soluble in ammonia and alkaline lyes.

LEMON-JUICE, according to Mr. Schweitzer, may be preserved from decomposition if ten per cent. of sugar be added to it. It will be thus rendered perfectly fit for preservation and use.

MICROSCOPES.—When Professor Agassiz came to Europe he announced his intention of visiting the manufactories of Spencer and others then known to him. The results obtained by them, as recorded in the American journals, have been of the most satisfactory kind. The late European microscope (of Nachet and Rose) by Professor Thury, who has studied his instruments in the Bibliotheque Universelle, has principally contributed to the structure of the pores in the cuticle as microscopically observed. From the latter, Professor Thury has made his own admirable microscopes, but does not consider that their superiority over the best European instruments is established. The latter have been employed in the microscopes in general interesting to persons devoted to the study of nature in the home of their distinguished owner.

EPIDEMICS, and their relations to Changes in the Weather, form the subject of a Report, which is printed in the new volume of the Transactions of the Royal Society. The Report is drawn up by Mr. Glaisher, of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, and contains a number of elaborate tables and twenty-eight diagrams representing the progress of certain diseases from the year 1850.

M. OTTO STRUVE, the great Russian astronomer, has published in the new volume of the "Memoirs of the Imperial Academy of St. Petersburg" his observations on the Nebulæ discovered by Herschel, accompanied by six plates, exhibiting the phases of the comet on several occasions. It is a work of great astronomical interest.

THE FORCE OF GRAVITY IS APPLIED TO METALLURGY in which M. Tessenier has made some interesting experiments. It is well known that when bodies of unequal density are mixed with water, the heavier fall with the greater rapidity, the latter remaining in suspension for a longer time. This property has been various boiling-machines for the purpose of separating metals from their matrices, in the order of their density; and thus the metallic or metalliferous substances, such as gold, silver, lead, tin, copper, and mercury, are separated from the matrices, such as gold, silver, lead, tin, copper, and mercury, are separated from those of the successful employment of M. Tessenier's apparatus in the mines of Huelgoat, in Brittany.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF LIVERPOOL AND ITS VICINITY has for some years occupied the attention of several members of the Philosophical Society of that town, and a catalogue of the Mollusca which have been compiled by Dr. Dickinson, the Rev. Mr. Higgins, and Messrs. Hartwig, Bewley, and Cash, has been published in the Proceedings of the Society. In the society's proceedings. The one lately issued contains the hepatica and lichens, by Johnson and Stirton, and the lilies and rushes by Baker.

M. BERTHELOT, renowned for his researches in organic chemistry, has published a memoir on the synthesis of neutral fatty matters. "Chimie Organique fondée sur la Synthèse," which have been laid before the French Academy of Sciences. The experiments are by the distinguished chemist himself. The first two books comprise the greatness of organic chemistry, and the fourth books are entitled "Successive Principles" and "Methods."

BLACK SULPHUR.—In 1847 Professor Böttger distinguished chemist, of Frankfort, made the discovery of a substance which he considered to be an allotropic condition of sulphur, and which he named "Insoluble Sulphur." Subsequently, Professor Magnus published a notice that black sulphur is merely ordinary sulphur coloured by having been suddenly cooled after fusion. Professor Böttger has now published his views and resins, with which he had experimented.

SPONTANEOUS GENERATION.—M. Pasteur has published an account of his new experiments, made to put in evidence the real part played by the atmosphere in the phenomena of life. He refers to the fundamental proposition of the germs of infusoria and other low forms of organic life, which the atmosphere contains, and which are the cause of putrefaction. He describes the experiments, as detailed in the Comptes Rendus, agree with those of Guy-Lussac, which prove that the atmosphere is the agent of conveying the organic germs in sufficient quantity to explain the most abundant cryptogamic development.

THE WOURALI POISON (now called Curare) is affirmed by M. Vella of Turin to be the true physiological substance which produces the effects ascribed to it. He has proved by experiment upon animals who had received strychnine into the stomach, that by the hypodermic injection of curare a dog received into the pulmonary cavity was rendered safe from the effects of strychnine. He proposes to use this antagonism of the poisons to remove the minerals from the laboratory without suffering from convulsions or muscular contractions.

THE ACADEMY OF SCIENCES, PARIS, has lost two more of its distinguished members.—M. Pierre Dauny (elected into the class Geography and Navigation in 1839, in the room of M. de Rossel), died on the 6th inst. (after Botany in 1854). Both died suddenly on the 6th inst. after surgical operations performed on them by Dr. Amussat, on the 3rd inst. M. Dauny, a distinguished hydrographical engineer, was born in 1798. He was a distinguished and astronomer, and was the author of the "Annuaire des Marées des Côtes de France" in 1815. He was one of the most active members of the Bureau of Longitude, and of the Commission of the Hydrographical Service of the Ministry of the Navigation. M. Payer was born at Arolsh, in the Ardennes, in 1792. After having served in the Imperial Guard, he studied medicine, and became a professor at the Sorbonne. In 1841 he was appointed Professor of Botany at the Museum of Natural History, and was elected member of the Academy after the Revolution of February, 1848. He was a moderate republican, and was the author of a pamphlet entitled "Le Socialisme Rouge et l'Orgueuscie Véritable Compacte," which constituted him the chief of a new political party. He was also the author of "Considérations sur la Flore," as well as the important of his labours were becoming recognised.

THE PRODUCTIVE PROPERTIES OF SOILS.—From the subject of an important paper by Dr. Voelcker in the new number of the Journal of the Royal Agricultural Society, which contains detailed accounts of the experiments made at the Royal Agricultural College at Cirencester. In his summary he states that the differences between soils in their capacity to retain water are not so great as is generally believed. All the soils he experimented upon retained more than one-third of their weight of water, and in one case as much as 50 per cent. It is never completely removed from its solution. Ammonia may be washed out from soils by water, but the quantity is inconsiderable. Nor does the drying of soils affect the power of the soil to absorb ammonia from solutions of free ammonia, or from the ammoniacal salts, such as sulphate of ammonia, chloride of ammonium, than the power of water to retinsolve it. Consequently, no fear need be entertained that ammoniacal manures may be lost by evaporation. Ammoniacal and ammoniacal top-dressings, such as sulphate of ammonia, soot, guano, and urine cannot be too much.

THE OHIO METEORITE is figured and described by Professor E. E. Andrews and others in the American Journal of Science. About fifteen minutes before one o'clock, 1, 1860, people of Cincinnati and the adjacent towns Virginia were alarmed by a noise resembling the firing of heavy cannon and the explosion of a mine in the vicinity. At New Concord, the Ohio, many meteoric stones, amounting in collective weight to about 700lb., were obtained. The largest, weighing about 15lb., has been analysed; its specific gravity was found to be 3·3417, and its composition—silica, 0·125; protoxide of iron, 0·2704; and metal smaller proportions of magnesia, alumina, iron, nickel, sulphur, and water, with traces of chromium and phosphorus. The article contains interesting details of the phenomena accompanying the fall of these meteors.

Lord John Russell has informed the General Shipowners' Society that Mr. W. S. Lindsay has received no authority "to make him his representative with the Government of the United States on behalf of her Majesty's Government."

THE FARM.

THE tempting weather of last week, and the fear that it might not last, induced several farmers to cut rather too soon, and this, added to the rain, which began to fall on Thursday, has done many of the new samples of wheat to be very soft in condition. Still, with reasonably fine weather to complete the harvest, and the good accounts from America and Southern Russia, there seems no doubt that the necessities of the next eleven months will be amply met. The fine weather has done much for the potatoes, but nothing can restore the potatoes.

Yorkshire has had its trial of reaping-machines on three sunny acres of fine wheat, situated on undulating ground, and rather beaten down. All the judges were unanimously in accordance that the best cutting the wheat as it lay towards them, but in descending the result was far inferior. In this point, both Burgess and Key's and Messrs. Wood's machines were fairly tried, and both appeared to have against them. Nine machines entered the competition, and were tried on a piece of barley as well, and eventually the decision was in favour of R. Cuthbert and Co's, of Bedale; Beckwith's, of Ripon, second; Burgess and Key's highly commended, and W. Coates's, of Millenham, commended.

The Sarsden Herd ruled with such absolute sway at the Chipping Norton Meeting that the Duke of Marlborough's handsome offered a dinner to exhibit his cattle no more. This, however, the company would not consent to, and it is understood that his withdrawal will be destructive to the interests of the society. His 400 guinea bull Royal York, who was purchased from Mr. Ambler, of Thame, Oxon, prize for the best animal in the yard; and we believe that he is destined for the Royal Show at Leeds next July. The prize shorthorn bull, which consisted of Mr. Stratton's, Mr. Hall's, and Mr. Carter's Royal York the 3rd, formed a most beautiful group.

The Royal Lancashire Agricultural Society's Meeting held a most flourishing thirteenth anniversary at Bolton last week, and nearly £1300 was taken at the sales. An enormous amount of silver medals were awarded to the exhibitors, and Mr. Atherton was, as usual, most wonderfully successful with his shorthorns. Mr. Jonathan Peel carried off two prizes for his Leicesters, and Mr. Ambler, of Thame, a section of the show; and Mr. Ambler's Prince Talleyrand gained another large prize. The show, however, was fully equal to the Duke of Holland for the special prize, and was defeated by him after a long conference between the judges. The Leicester sheep were in full force, and the show of pigs was as good as a whole, while the pigs well kept up the honour of Lancashire. The Bowmley herd was not represented at Bolton, but Mr. Booth had a magnificent Aylesford last year, sent nothing. Unfortunately, the strength of the prize list was fettered by local restrictions (Lancashire) and it is the case of the farmers for such very dubious honours which prevents this meeting from being fused with the North Lancashire, and taking quite as high a place as the Yorkshire or Cheshire Shows. There is a fund wonderful strides—from 300 subscribers, £70 in prizes, and 97 persons at the dinner in the first year, to 1000 subscribers, £1300 in prizes, and the right direction was taken this year by distinguishing the best pair of heifers on the ground that they were too fat to breed; a most important step, to the credit of the Council, a large show of notice. As Moffat lately the prize for dogs of this description was—first, a silver medal; and, second, a bronze medal for each sheep."

The shorthorn world have something to talk about at present in connection with the Duke of Northumberland's sale of Alnwick Castle herd, and then employing agents to buy in; and the Mark-lane Express takes the lead in denouncing the practice. As a matter of course, the sale has recently been announced, and what nearly every one who saw them believed to be their utmost value has published a statement to the effect that a number were circulated in the room, to the disadvantage of the bidders. The failure of the sale is attributed to the dogs, to the weather, to everything but the right cause, namely, nothing like grasping at consolation from any quarter.

Considering the prevalence of the harvest, Mr. Turner, of Skelton's sale, on Tuesday, was well attended, and the bidding for some of the lots were remarkably brisk. The best prize hen of Leicester sheeplings were sold for 83 guineas, a pen of shearling ewes to Mr. Potter, near Exeter, for £35; and Somersetshire, Cornwall, and Worcestershire carried off the lion's share of the prizes. Fifty-six head of the thirty-eight Devon lots, including Prince Frederick, Great Western, and Beswinge, were bought in, and about thirty of the choicest were sold by private bid and fetched from £40 to £60, which were nearly all by Prince Frederick, made almost 18 gs. each. Among the purchasers were Mr. Farthing, Mr. Beswinge, fell to his beifer calf, to the nod of Lord Falmouth's commissioner, who also bought Bloomer and Cloth of Gold, to accompany her to Cornwall, whither Lees and May Queen also wended their way for Mr. Harvey. The Prince Consort bought six of the females, as well as a Prince Frederick bull calf. The attendance of the Anglesian amateurs has lately spoonered at Tregunay. The improved black Essex pigs kept up the fame of their breed, and Mr. Harding, for the seventh year, was very sharp. The Herefords are to have their innings next Tuesday at Stobden Court, near Leominster, where Lord Bateman's entire herd will be put up by auction. Among the lots are Sir Gilbert, Lord Wilton, "White Faces," and principally by the celebrated bull Carlisle. The Ox House Farm, Ashton-under-Lyne, is to be sold by auction a mile and a half from the Kirgsland and Penbridge stations, on the Leominster and Kington railway.

THE LEBANON.—When, after hours of toil, the highest summit is attained, then indeed the prospect is sublime. Far as the eye reach are seen the mountains of the Meditterranean, rising only imitating its little blue curves here and there where some stray nephyr ruffles the surface of the sea. Immediately at our feet are the valley of Issus, and exulting in the promised spoils of Tyre. Through the valley flows the Leontes, and the Sources of Jordan; and to the south may be discerned the Lacustrine and Masseas of Pranse, to revenge the bloodshot of Antiochus. Of the Cedars of Lebanon, there are but few.—Cornhill Magazine.

ANOTHER FATAL ACCIDENT IN THE ALPS.—The Times of Saturday last contained a letter from Geneva, giving an account of the burning of the Rise of August last, by which the Rev. W. G. Watson, Chaplain of Turin, and Mr. Hall, a young gentleman from Manchester, lost their lives with a similar fate to that which so recently befell our three unfortunate countrymen in crossing the Col du Géant. The party, consisting of four, including Jean Antoine Carrel, Joseph Marie Perrod, and Jean Baptiste Bich, guides, were overtaken by a snow slope, disappeared suddenly; and, when assistance had been procured, were found at the bottom of a deep crevasse, all dead.

GEOGRAPHICAL DESCRIPTION OF THE PAPAL STATES.—Before the war of Italy the States of the Church were divided into four provinces, or delegations, viz., Bologna, Ferrara, Forli, and Ravenna; the provinces of Bologna, Ferrara, Forli and Ravenna, were called Romagna. The provinces of Bologna, Ferrara, Forli, and Ravenna, were called Romagna. The provinces of Urbino, Pesaro, Macerata, Loreto, Ancona, Fermo, Ascoli, and Camerino, were also grouped together, and called the Marches, as they are situated on the east and the Adriatic, on the south the Kingdomof Naples, and on the west Tuscany and the provinces of Perugia and Spoleto. The Campagna di Roma, from the Neapolitan States. The third legation consisted of the provinces of Viterbo, Civita Vecchia, and Rieti, and that is called Umbria. The fourth or Perugia, and Spoleto, and that is called Umbria. The fourth or Perugia, which is in Perugia, is the Province of the Patrimony of St. Peter, and is called Patrimonio. The provinces of Frosinone, and Benevento; the latter, however, is surrounded by Neapolitan territory. The district of Rome, which is called Comarca di Roma, consists of that city, of Viterbo, Civita Vecchia, and Velletri, the latter being an important position.

THE RUSSIAN EXPEDITION for establishing the decimal system of coins, weights, and measures, in all parts of Europe, lately applied to the Academy of Sciences, St. Petersburg, for its co-operation. That and learned body has just issued resolutions declaring that it thinks the object proposed "very desirable," and that it will do all in its power to promote the friendly relations of different countries," and that it will recommend the adoption of the decimal system to the Government.

RUSSIAN POLICY IN NORTH CHINA.—The Czar has commenced the formation of a new Cossack army in the province of the Amoor, the fresh troops to consist of such Manchoos and Tartars as are willing to enter under the colours of Russia. That Russia is pursuing a successful policy in North China is, says the Times correspondent in China, beyond question. This policy may be described as peacefully aggressive. Before many months are over the Amoor will be connected with St. Petersburg by telegraph, and the southern portion of Siberia has lately received an important extension at the expense of China. Russia has gained her success by diplomacy—a science in which her agents are second to none.

THE DONCASTER CUP, 1860.

THIS Cup, which was won yesterday week by the Earl of Zetland's Saltwear, has been designed to illustrate the ballad of the birth of St. George, which Bishop Percy has included in his "Reliques of Ancient Poetry." It is not too much to say that the artist has thoroughly succeeded in obtaining a perfect keeping between the vase and the poem. The same mystery and weird feeling, and the same mediæval idea, seem to pervade both. We have not a Gothic legend illustrated by a Greek design, but we have, in truth, the spirit of an Anglo-Norman legend carried out and portrayed upon an Anglo-Norman vase, and this not only in design, but in tone, colour, and shape. There is, therefore, not to be found, as is too often the case, an ignorant anachronism upon the very face of the work of art itself.

A glance at the illustration will show the reader the form of this Cup far better than words can describe it. Around the body four oblong panels bear upon them, firstly, the dream of the mother of St. George; secondly, the interpretation of that dream; thirdly, the death of the knight's mother; and, fourthly, the deliverance of the princess by St. George. On two oval medallions in the centre are—The conquest of the dragon; and Lord Albert about to question the weird lady. The handles are formed by the great winged dragon, and upon the summit of the vase is a figure of St. George victorious, whilst around the foot of the cup is the legend so prophetic of St. George's future fame.

His name, advanced in future times, on banners shall be worn.

The lily, the cross of Christianity, and certain mystic figures enrich the body; and the delicacy of the conception of these is very remarkable. Metal-work may, indeed, rank with the fine arts when we contemplate such works as these. Not a line of design is without meaning, not a fold of the drapery without its peculiar truth. The work would delight Mr. Ruskin and his school. It is Pre-Raphaelite in its tendency, in its laboriousness, in its matter-of-fact rendering of each accessory, and in the mystic and symbolic suggestion of the whole.

The work is of oxidised silver, and is mounted upon a scagliola base, upon which the name of the race and the stewards are prominently placed. It has been modelled and designed by Mr. H. Armstead, and executed by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, of Bond-street.

THE DONCASTER CUP.

THE CUP DAY AT DONCASTER.

The business of the meeting at Doncaster was brought to a most satisfactory conclusion yesterday week. The racing during the four days was abundant and of the most gratifying description. The officials worked with a cordial co-operation to carry out the arrangements in an efficient manner, and their efforts were attended with complete success. No greater proof of the increased popularity of the meeting could be adduced than the fact that the receipts of the Grand Stand exceed by over £1000 those of any former year. The authorities at the Doncaster Railway Station deserve especial commendation for the regularity and order with which they conducted the immense traffic during the week. To Mr. Leith, the traffic manager, and Mr. Wood, the clerk in charge, at Doncaster, the public are mainly indebted for the admirable arrangements which were so efficiently carried out. The defeat of the first favourites for the St. Leger in each event for which they started created considerable astonishment, and the successes of Lords Derby, Zetland, and Portsmouth were hailed with great demonstrations of enthusiasm. Altogether, the concluding day's sport was of great interest, bringing one of the most successful Doncaster meetings on record to a satisfactory issue.

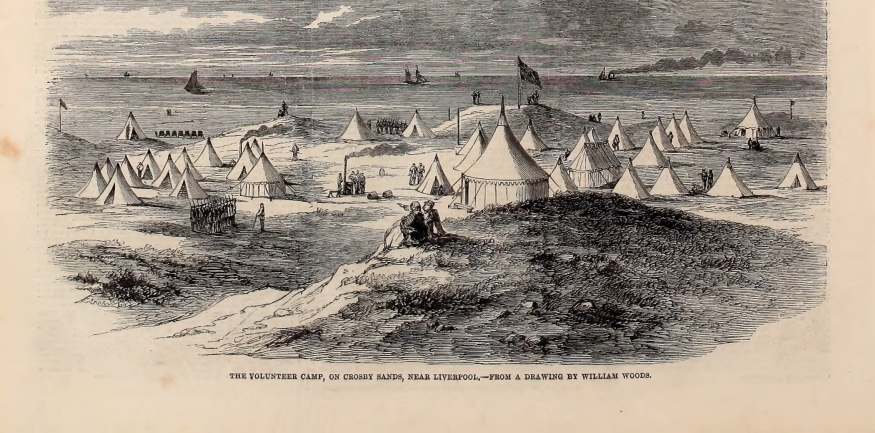
The great race of the day was for the Doncaster Cup, which was won by Saltwear. Annexed are the particulars of the race :—

The Doncaster Cup, value 300 sovs.; 3-yr-olds, 7st.; four, 8st. 5lb.; five, 8st. 12lb.; six and aged, 8st. 7lb.; mares and geldings allowed 3lb.; penalties and allowances. Cup course (about two miles and a half.)

Lord Zetland's Sabreur, by Voltigeur, 3 yrs., 7st. ...(Challoner) 1
Mr. Merry's Thormanby, 3 yrs., 7st 7lb.; 7lb. ex. (G. Fordham) 2
Lord Zetland's Vanquisher, 3 yrs. 7st. .....(H. Grimshaw) 3
Mr. Jaques's High Treason, 3 yrs., 7st. 3lb.; 3lb. ex. (Bullock) 4
Lord Strathmore's Mouravieff, 4 yrs., 8st. 5lb. .....(Aldcroft) 5
Mr. Lowe's Wild Rose, 4 yrs., 8st. 5lb. .....(Snowden) 6
Coronet also ran.

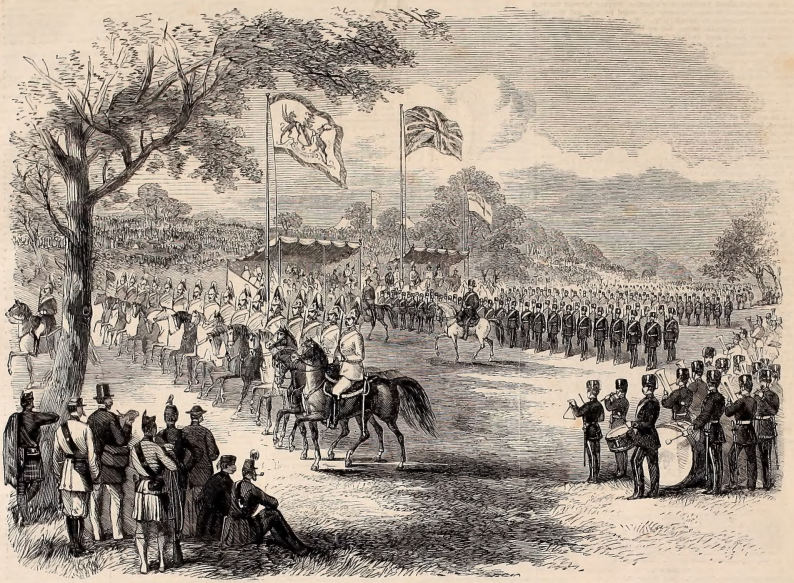
Betting: 3 to 1 agst Wild Rose, 4 to 1 each agst Sabreur, High Treason, and Mouravieff; 8 to 1 agst Thormanby. Vanquisher went off with a long lead, Coronet lying second, Wild Rose and Mouravieff next, and Thormanby last. Passing the Stand Enclosure Vanquisher increased his lead about ten lengths, Mouravieff depriving Wild Rose of the second place on going round the top turn, with Sabreur close up, Thormanby still "whipping in." At the Bawtry turn Thormanby went up to his horses, and Coronet compounding, was pulled, and took no further part in the race. On coming into sight Mouravieff was leading, attended by Vanquisher and Wild Rose, Sabreur next, and Thormanby many lengths in the rear. At the Red House Wild Rose was beaten, Sabreur taking up the running, Thormanby, who came up with a rush, taking second place at the turn entering the straight; there the race was left to Mr. Merry and Lord Zetland's representatives, Sabreur winning, after an exciting set-to, by three lengths; Vanquisher a very bad third; the others pulling up. Coronet trotted in and did not pass the post.

A VOLUNTEER ENCAMPMENT.



A GREAT novelty in connection with the volunteer movement was the encampment during the summer months, and which has just closed, amongst the sandhills at Crosby, near Liverpool, under the personal supervision and command of Lieutenant-Colonel Rossdell. The men in camp belonged exclusively to the 1st battalion of Lancashire Rifles, the majority being members of the 1st company. The tents were pitched for the purpose of inuring the volunteers to the hardship of camp life, as well as to bring them near the shooting-ground on the shore, where they might, by constant practice morning and evening, learn to become expert marksmen. A rather sheltered site was fixed upon amongst the hills, about five minutes' walk from the railway station; and each tent appears to have been placed so as to avoid the damp which accumulates in some parts of the ground. Altogether there were forty-one tents, including the "canteen establishment," where refreshments were supplied according to a fixed tariff. The "lines" inclosing the camp were indicated by small flags, inside of which no volunteer was permitted to enter without being in uniform. At night sentinels guarded the ground by watches, and in other respects strict military discipline was enforced. The men rose at five in the morning, and then prepared for drill, rifle-shooting, skirmishing, &c., which generally began at six o'clock. Breakfast was afterwards had, and the majority of the volunteers returned to town about nine o'clock to engage in the business of the day, leaving the tents in charge of a few men and boys, who attended to the victualling and cleaning departments. The same routine of training was observed in the evening. On every alternate Wednesday there was a battalion drill, when the "campaigning" was enlivened by two or three bands of music from Liverpool.

THE REVIEW AT KNOWSLEY PARK.



THE two Engravings on the opposite page complete our series of illustrations of the Knowsley Park Review. A detailed account of the review was given in this Journal last week, so that a few particulars relating to the annexed Engravings are all that will be required at present. And first as regards

THE MARCHING PAST.

This was commenced by the Lancashire Hussars, a magnificent body of cavalry, splendidly mounted, and numbering nearly 200 troopers. The public were loud in their encomiums on this splendid body of men and horses, whom it would be impossible to surpass by the finest regiment in the service. Next came the artillery, four batteries, and numbering upwards of 2000; and of which, if it were possible to make a distinction, the palm must be given to Colonel M'Ivor's third Liverpool battalion, composed entirely of the artisans employed in the great factories of the Cunard Company. The appearance of these men, the style of their marching, and the completeness of their equipments, left nothing to be desired. Conspicuous among the commanders of the artillery brigade was the venerable Colonel Brown, one of the prince merchants of the world, and who, it is said, contributes £3000 a year to the maintenance of the efficiency of his battalion. After the artillery came the "first brigade," four battalions, commanded respectively by Lieut.-Colonel Rossdell, Major Bourse, Captain Greensall, and Lieut.-Colonel Gladstone. Colonel Rossdell, the youthful commandant of the 1st Lancashire, was loudly cheered as he rode along at the head of his perfect corps. This brigade mustered 2211 men. The second brigade, which was commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Crofton, was stronger in number, amounting to 2267 men, all told. This brigade included a perfect battalion from Manchester, commanded by Lord Grey de Wilton, and numbering nearly 700 men. The marching of this battalion was excellent, and was loudly cheered. The third brigade was commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Lightfoot, C.B., assisted by Lieutenant Wheatley, 84th Regiment, Major of Brigade. It included the youths from Rossall School, a very smart cadet corps, and

THE VOLUNTEER CAMP, ON CROSBY SANDS, NEAR LIVERPOOL.—FROM A DRAWING BY WILLIAM WOODS.

THE REVIEW OF LANCASHIRE RIFLE VOLUNTEERS IN KNOWSLEY PARK.

THE 1ST LANCASHIRE MOUNTED RIFLES AND THE ARTILLERY BRIGADE MARCHING PAST.

the 11th Preston, commanded by Major Pedder. The fourth brigade was commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. P. W. M. Talbot, and included contingents from all the great towns of the county. The marching of all was excellent, and fully satisfied the most competent critic. When the marching past, which occupied about an hour, had terminated, the volunteers, between 10,000 and 12,000, resumed their original position, and advanced in columns, the space not allowing of an advance in line. The united bands then struck up the National Anthem, which was responded to by the multitude with enthusiastic cheering.

THE COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.

The hospitality of the Earl of Derby to the volunteer corps on the occasion of the review at Knowsley Park was on a scale of princely munificence; and the arrangements of the eating and drinking department, which so generally fail on similar occasions, were as perfect as they were gigantic. The following programme will show how carefully matters were arranged by the committee:—"At the close of the review, officers commanding battalions will send an officer to take charge of the tent told off to his battalion, and will direct the captain of each company to send one non-commissioned officer, with four men, to bring from the tent one basket containing refreshments for sixty men; one beer-can, containing three gallons of ale, ten half-pint drinking-cups, which will be found distinctly marked with the number of the company in the battalion (not with the county number of the corps). The captain of each company is charged with the proper distribution of these refreshments, and will send the can to be refilled, the portion allotted to each volunteer being one pint of ale. One water-cask will be told off to each tent. The volunteers will then pile arms, but are not to be allowed to stray away. The baskets, cans, and cups will be returned to the refreshment-tents when done with."

BIVOUAC OF THE VOLUNTEERS AT THE CLOSE OF THE REVIEW.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE Doncaster meeting pursued its brilliant course to the very close, and the Grand Stand receipts, subject, of course, to free-entrance reductions, reached £4560. This shows an excess of £1142 over last year, when Promised Land failed to raise a public subscription, and £564 over 1857, when the trial of the Blink Bonny v. Ignoramus issue brought the North men to their "little racing metropolis" in such shoals. On Thursday Tadmo, a daughter of Redshank, did a capital thing by receiving only 10lb. for her year from Emily, Red House in, and beating her and twenty-eight others in a canter. In the Eglinton Stakes, Dictator found no difficulty in giving Folkestone 5lb., but 8lb. to the Flying Lady Clifden was quite beyond his powers. Friskyat camal, was brought with credit to the front. Cape Flyaway is a most unexpected extinguisher upon the Wizard (5lb. ex.) and Sir. Albone (10lb. ex.) in the Doncaster Stakes. The former, last spring as he is, fell into trouble the moment he was collared; and the extra weight told in a trice on the Leger winner, who not only ran a much greater distance, but was made to recover from the effects of his Wednesday's race, in which he started anything but fit. A quaint-looking race-cup (of which we give an engraving on page 274) presented by Mr. Cookson, Saltburn, and Thormanby to try Sir. Leger constitutions once more. The race was originally confined to Gimcrack and Wild Dayrell, and Thormanby, the last turn; and, although the Derby winner struggled very gallantly, he found it impossible to give Saltburn the 7lb. The result of this he found it impossible to give Saltburn the 7lb. The result of this last race of the season was looked upon with much satisfaction; and Lord Portsmouth, after his double disappointment with Buccaneer, now him elapses of Lullaby, Wizard, and High Treason, at a much more than greatest possible cash.

The sale of Mr. Cookson's yearlings was the horse-market event of the week; and the eleven lots, six of which were by the untried Fandango, averaged 322 gs. apiece, which is 172 gs. more than the Sheffield sale realised on the second day. But for the very hollow back of the Brother to Dundee (65 gs.), Mr. Cookson's average would have not been much short of 400 gs. The rush of 700 gs. became Lord Stamford's; and Collarius (half brother to Miscomment and Kettledrum) left to Lord Portsmouth's nod for 620 gs. after a severe struggle with Mr. Naylor. It is rumoured that Sir Tatton Sykes was so pleased with the look of Fandango and his produce that he has the 2000 guineas engagement for the Baronet's colt by the last of Zetland's when he came to Doncaster, and took him back to head the Sledmere stud.

The meetings for next week are—Belford on Monday; Newmarket on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday; Perth on Tuesday and Wednesday; and Lanark on Tuesday and Friday. The weights for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire have been published, and the long list El Hakim that "could" a bottle more than Nunnykirk with 7st. 4lb. in the one and 7st. 12lb. in the other. Newmarket is, however, deprived of its greatest autumnal attraction, owing to the serious illness of the father of Dr. Beaufort, the horse and hound match, for which the latter had been showing such high capabilities in their trials, is postponed sine die.

The cricket season is drawing to a close, and with next week, as the All England Eleven have no more engagements to fulfil, and the United wind up at Leamington on Monday, Cambridgeshire at Nottingham on Monday, and twenty-two of Reigate and District at Reigate on Thursday.

The Royal London Yacht Club has its closing trip on Saturday, starting from Blackwall at 8.30 A.M.

RICHMOND (YORKSHIRE) RACES.—TUESDAY.

Ely Stakes.—Bet Bunny, 1. Archer to Rooster 2.
Sapling Stakes.—Queen Bess, 1. Lucy Lockett, 2.
Richmond Handicap.—Lady Trapper, 1. The Alderman, 2.
Cromwell Handicap.—Lady Lockett, 1. Modavian, 2.
Members' Plate.—Lily, 1. Moorhen, 2.

LEICESTER RACES.—WEDNESDAY.

Lubbs Handicap.—Lubbenham, 1. Elvdbolt, 2.
Prestgate Park Stakes.—Caller Ou, 1. Love, 2.
Leicestershire Handicap.—Audrey, 1. Rosamond, 2.
Leicester Stakes.—Vixen, 1. Sir Bedivere, 2.
Handicap Plate.—Thornhill, 1. The Fawn, 2.
County Cup.—Bellevue, 1. Mistress, 2.

THURSDAY.

Innkeepers' Plate.—Vixen, 1. Miss Bismore, 2.
Nursery Handicap.—Nunnery, 1. Miss Emma, 2.
Surry Handicap.—Orcus, 1. Orcus, 2.
Welter Handicap.—The Monk, 1. Ipswich, 2.
County Cup.—Wizard, 1. Wild Rose, 2.
Selling Stakes.—Enthusiastic, 1.

Mr. Price, by the aid of a detective party, captured his wife yesterday week in the act of committing what was stigging with Smith, another of the Aggesense ladies. The domestic troubles of Mr. Price are, however, not yet ended. His wife appeared before the Lord Mayor at the Mansion-house on Wednesday, a writ of habeas corpus, requiring him to produce her before that learned judge, and to show cause why he had forcibly carried her from the Aggesense. The case, both pro and con, will, no doubt, be fully argued in our Courts.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.—A correspondent kindly furnishes us with the following particulars in addition to and partly in correction of, our account of the colony last week:—The Constitution of the Government is responsible. It provides a Legislature consisting of a Governor, a Council of nine, a Legislative Council (Upper House) of twelve, and House of Assembly of thirty members, the first chosen from the ranks of the people, the second, nominees of the Crown (or party in power); and the latter, elected by universal suffrage. The Governor presides when the Council sits as a branch of the House, been increased to eighteen, so as to enable the Government to carry through its measures, and to these seats will be found the Executive of the Legislature. No coal has been discovered in the island, although the local Government a few years ago expended a small sum in searches for this important mineral.

UMBRIA AND THE MARCHES.—The following particulars relative to the Papal States, which is now the seat of war, will be interesting at the present moment:—The population of the Marches, according to an official return by the Papal Government, was in 1853, 1,212,709 souls. Of whom 176,566 were in the province of Ancona, 110,931 in that of Fermo, 205,104 in Macerata, 207,201 in Camerino, and 512,907 in that of Pesaro and Urbino. The citadel of Ancona is situated on the summit of Mount Artagno, rising to a considerable elevation the level of the sea. Immediately on the part of the mountain which slopes to the sea, and its port is formed by little hills which run out into the Adriatic. The highest of these, called Guasco, which protects the citadel itself, is the Montagnola, upwards of 700 feet above the sea. On the north-west is Mount Cornio and Mount Quaggiolo, which is on a level with the barracks of the artillerymen in the citadel. The mountain on the south-west continues to rise until it reaches its highest point, and extends along the side of the fort, with a bend. In 1859, the Austrians, during the time they occupied Ancona, undertook extensive works on Mount Guasco and Monte Pelago. They erected the fortress with cannon, which they left partly unfinished. Their object was to render it capable of a long resistance, and to this end they began, and constructed in such a way that a garrison of no enemy can be approached except from the side of the mountain with which it is connected. The fortress would contain a numerous garrison, but the magazines are large enough to contain provisions for a long siege. The fortress is surrounded by a deep ditch, and the powder magazine itself could not resist a sustained bombardment. The fortress is surrounded with a little enclosure.

FLOOD IN THE RHONE VALLEY.—The broad and fertile valley of the Rhone has been visited by a most disastrous flood. A private describes its appearance in the Valais:—"At seven o'clock on the 1st of September the telegraph at Martigny informed the authorities that the Dranse had overflowed its banks during the night, and that an avalanche of stones and gravel had completely blocked up the Col de la Forclaz. It announced the carrying away of the bridge of Nature by the Rhone, and likewise the total destruction of the bank and thatched cottage of the station. The waves rose higher and higher during the afternoon, and the torrents were spread along the gardens on the right of the bank, and shortly afterwards was thrown a huge rocky mass, which carried portions of the railway, beams of other material, the woodwork of dwelling-houses, and an enormous number of other materials. Towards the night at night two enormous trunks of trees, which had been carried down by the high road opposite Vernayaz. From that moment the plain disappeared under the waters of the river, which, during the night, enveloped the valley of the Rhone, and the roaring of the flood. The inundation is still increasing, and the wind, and by the wind, which continues to blow over the glaciers, and to melt the immense snow on the high Alps."

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 28′ 0″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 45″ W.; Height above sea 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF			THERMOMETER.			WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours.
	Barometer corrected and reduced to 32°.	Dew Point Temperature.	Rain.	Highest.	Lowest.	Range.	General Direction.	Hourly Velocity in Miles.
	Inches	°	Inch	°	°	°		Miles	Inches
Sept. 12	29·782	54·4	43·7	0·15	54·7	67·9	E. ESE.	9·7	·000
" 13	29·932	55·4	45·7	·72	50·9	61·9	SSW.	7·0	·000
" 14	29·819	53·9	46·2	·00	49·3	63·2	SW.	9·1	·000
" 15	29·919	53·9	49·2	·83	48	59·3	S. SSW. SW.	13·2	·070
" 16	29·613	...	...	·00	50·1	68·5	...	18·6	·014
" 17	29·613	...	...	·10	50·1	63·3	SW.	19·7	·160
" 18	29·742	...	...	·00	49·2	67·1	WSW. NW. W.	11·1	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine A.M.:—

Barometer in Inches reduced to 32°	29·782	29·932	29·819	29·919	29·613	29·613	29·742	29·742	29·742
Temperature of Air	56°	57°	56°	54°	52°	52°	57°	57°	57°
Temperature of Evaporation	54°	54°	53°	52°	49°	49°	52°	52°	52°
Direction of Wind	E.	SSW.	SW.	S.	SW.	W.	W.	W.	W.

PROPOSED MANCHESTER COTTON COMPANY.—Yesterday week a meeting was held, in the Mayor's Parlour, for the purpose of establishing a cotton-purchasing company, for receiving the produce of the cotton-growing ports of the world, particularly to India and Australia. Mr. Thomas Bailey, M.P., presided, and there were present Lord Stanley, Lord Elcho, Lord Lindsay, Sir Hugh Mason, Major Jackson, several members of Parliament, and the gentlemen connected with the company, and naming the conditions upon which the company to be considered as formed when a subscription to the capital of £150,000 was guaranteed. A motion was put from the chair, and carried unanimously.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

THE stirring events in the Peninsula have led to the withdrawal of the French Minister from Turin, have produced considerable inactivity in the Consol Market, and have caused a portion of the purchases of the public stock have been made with considerable caution; nevertheless, as no sales of importance have been effected, and the disposition to realise is not very extensive, the leading quotations for the Three per Cents having been 93¼.

In the supply of money for discount purposes but little increase, and the demand for accommodation has slightly improved. Good commercial bills are somewhat freely negotiated at 3 per cent. Very few of the applications received second-class paper has been rejected.—Short bills have been done at 2¾ per cent, and intrinsically a fair business has been transacted at 3 to 3½ per cent. An impression is gaining ground that the directors of the Bank of England will speedily reduce the minimum rate of discount to 3½ per cent. Four millions is certainly increasing, but not, we imagine, to the extent that would warrant an immediate change in the rate. The fact is, the Bank has not yet acquired a large portion of the crop of wheat and other produce is still unharvested in the north; the demand for money, therefore, for the purchase of produce on change, indeed, as to be almost unnoticeable; and hence we may be compelled to wait away from the Bank for a month or two before the change is generally imagined. The harvest once secured, an ample stock of foreign grain and flour in our markets, there will speedily be a plentiful supply of money, and the effect of reducing the value of money; but, at present, the circumstances of capital are of a somewhat peculiar character, and we are inclined to think that the Bank directors are acting otherwise than judiciously in quietly regulating the rate of discount. The supply of money must be very abundant, and may be had at from 1½ to 2 per cent on Government Securities. Some of the discount houses have reduced their rate for loans on stock to 2 per cent. The rate of call, however, remains unaltered.

Advices from the manufacturing districts become very scarce and dear—as much as 9 per cent having been paid for advances upon produce. Bills this week have been discounted at the Continental banks at 6 per cent in capital, for which the demand has not increased. At Amsterdam, Paris, and Brussels the quotations are 3 per cent; at Hamburg, 4; and Berlin and Vienna 4 per cent.

The determination on the part of the Council for India to defray the double decime-tax upon all interest paid in that country has been the topic of conversation in the money market, but not yet been acted upon. The proposition is, however, likely to be carried into effect. To the extent of a persistent course on the part of the Council in this matter, Indian investments will be affected in the long run. This week very few transactions have been recorded in them, on easier terms.

The decline in the exchanges with the Continent has been checked, and Ocean Marine Insurance have marked 1-15-16 to 2-1-16 prem.; Thames and Mersey Marine, 1-16 to ⅛; Channel Marine, ⅛ to ¼; Coasting Marine, ¼ prem.; London and Provincial Marine, ½ to ¾; East India Irrigation, ¾ dis. to par.

About £180,000 in gold has been disposed of to the Bank. For shipment to the Continent, £50,000.—Four millions has been actually set apart for export for silver. The present measure for India has taken out £120,778, comprising £47,491 gold, and £73,287 silver. Advices from Calcutta of the 22nd ult. report ex 2s. 9¾d. or a slight advance movement as regards England. There had been a steady rise in the value of Government Securities.

A meeting of the shareholders in the General Discount Company has been held for the purpose of winding up the concern.

The agents general for the Crown Colonies have intimated that they are prepared to receive tenders for the purchase of the whole or part of the Six per Cent Debentures, the principal and interest to be payable in London. The Rate of Colonial Debentures will be published weekly in the list of the respective certificates of the funded and registered debt.

In Mincing-lane, Produce were flat, as follows:—Consols for Money, 93¼ ⅛; Bills for Account, 93⅛; Indian Five per Cents, 103¾; Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. prem.; Bank Stock, 8 per Cent, 214 to 216; Bank Stock, 7 per Cent, 203 to 205; and Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. prem.

About 4,180,000 in gold has been disposed of to the Bank. For shipment to the Continent, £50,000.—Four millions has been actually set apart for export for silver. The present measure for India has taken out £120,778, comprising £47,491 gold, and £73,287 silver. Advices from Calcutta of the 22nd ult. report ex 2s. 9¾d. or a slight advance movement as regards England. There had been a steady rise in the value of Government Securities.

A meeting of the shareholders in the General Discount Company has been held for the purpose of winding up the concern.

The agents general for the Crown Colonies have intimated that they are prepared to receive tenders for the purchase of the whole or part of the Six per Cent Debentures, the principal and interest to be payable in London. The Rate of Colonial Debentures will be published weekly in the list of the respective certificates of the funded and registered debt.

In Mincing-lane, Produce were flat, as follows:—Consols for Money, 93¼ ⅛; Bills for Account, 93⅛; Indian Five per Cents, 103¾; Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. prem.; Bank Stock, 8 per Cent, 214 to 216; Bank Stock, 7 per Cent, 203 to 205; and Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. prem.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine A.M.:—

Barometer in Inches reduced to 32°	29·782	29·932	29·819	29·919	29·613	29·613	29·742	29·742	29·742
Temperature of Air	56°	57°	56°	54°	52°	52°	57°	57°	57°
Temperature of Evaporation	54°	54°	53°	52°	49°	49°	52°	52°	52°
Direction of Wind	E.	SSW.	SW.	S.	SW.	W.	W.	W.	W.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, Sept. 17.—Only a moderate supply of English wheat was on offer in to-day's market, and very little was disposed of. In foreign, the sale was slow, and prices were 1s. per quarter lower than last week. There was a good consumptive demand for oats, and, in some instances, the quotations were rather higher. Barley and peas were very steady at previous rates. In flour, 1s. per sack was obtained more money.

Sept. 19.—The supplies of most kinds of produce here to-day were only moderate. On the whole, the trade was in a sluggish state, at barely previous rates.

MARK-LANE, Monday.—Wheat and Rents, red, 40s. to 45s.; ditto white, 40s. to 46s.; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 40s. to 45s.; ditto white, 40s. to 46s.; Essex and Kent, red, 40s. to 45s.; ditto white, 40s. to 46s.; Scotch, 40s. to 45s.; Irish, 40s. to 45s.; Barley, Lincoln and Yorkshire, 30s. to 32s.; Norfolk and Suffolk, 30s. to 32s.; Kingston and Ware, 32s. to 34s.; Chevalier, 34s. to 36s.; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire Oats, 20s. to 22s.; Scotch, 20s. to 22s.; Irish, 20s. to 22s.; Beans, Mazagan and Tick, 32s. to 34s.; Harrow, 34s. to 36s.; Pigeon, 34s. to 36s.; Indian, 32s. to 34s.; Peas, White, 34s. to 36s.; Grey, 32s. to 34s.; Maple, 32s. to 34s.; Indian, 32s. to 34s.; Flour, per sack, 40s. to 44s.; Norfolk and Suffolk, 36s. to 38s.; Essex and Kent, 36s. to 38s.; Irish, 36s. to 38s.; Foreign, 36s. to 38s.

LIVERPOOL, Monday.—Wheat, Red, per 70 lbs., 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d.; ditto white, 7s. 6d. to 8s. 6d.; Flour, per barrel, 28s. to 32s.; Barley, per 60 lbs., 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.; Oats, per 45 lbs., 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.; Beans, per 70 lbs., 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d.; Peas, per 70 lbs., 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d.; Indian Corn, per 480 lbs., 25s. to 26s.

MARK-LANE EXPRESS, Monday.—Liverpool and Manchester, 6d. to 7s. 6d.; Irish, 6s. to 6s. 6d.; Foreign, 6s. to 6s. per cwt.

Liverpool, Monday.—The trade was dull quiet, at our quotations. The receipts of new articles continue moderate.

Liverpool, English, crushing, 1st to 2nd, 1½d. to 2d.; Colombia, 5½d. to 6d.; Peruvian, 6d. to 6½d.; Egyptian, 6½d. to 7d.; Brazil, 6½d. to 7d.; Pernambuco, 6½d. to 7d.; Maranham, 6½d. to 7d.; Bahia, 6½d. to 7d.; Ceara, 6d. to 6½d.; Jamaica, 6d. to 6½d.; Barbadoes, 6d. to 6½d.; Demerara, 6d. to 6½d.; Surinam, 6d. to 6½d.; Cuba, 6d. to 6½d.; Porto Rico, 6d. to 6½d.; Manilla, 6d. to 6½d.; Batavia, 6d. to 6½d.; Java, 6d. to 6½d.; Madras, 6d. to 6½d.; Bengal, 6d. to 6½d.; Bombay, 6d. to 6½d.; Scinde, 6d. to 6½d.; Penang, 6d. to 6½d.; Siam, 6d. to 6½d.; Manilla, 6d. to 6½d.; Singapore, 6d. to 6½d.; Sydney, 6d. to 6½d.; Adelaide, 6d. to 6½d.; Port Phillip, 6d. to 6½d.; Moreton Bay, 6d. to 6½d.; Natal, 6d. to 6½d.; Cape, 6d. to 6½d.; Mauritius, 6d. to 6½d.; Ceylon, 6d. to 6½d.; Sierra Leone, 6d. to 6½d.; Gambia, 6d. to 6½d.; Gaboon, 6d. to 6½d.; Fernando Po, 6d. to 6½d.; Old Calabar, 6d. to 6½d.; Bonny, 6d. to 6½d.; Cameroons, 6d. to 6½d.; Accra, 6d. to 6½d.; Lagos, 6d. to 6½d.; Whydah, 6d. to 6½d.; Benin, 6d. to 6½d.; Dahomey, 6d. to 6½d.; Abbeokuta, 6d. to 6½d.; Ashantee, 6d. to 6½d.; Fantee, 6d. to 6½d.; Gold Coast

NEW BOOKS.

THE BEST AND LATEST BOOK ON NEW ZEALAND.
Now ready, New Edition, with Map, Plan, and Numerous Illustrations, 8vo, price 21s.

THE STORY OF NEW ZEALAND, Past and Present, Savage and Civilised. By Dr. THOMSON.
"Dr. Thomson's well-informed work—published this autumn—is one of the very best books on New Zealand that have appeared. . . . Dr. Thomson has given a large amount of every important proceeding from the earliest to the latest date, and to no settler's library must be considered as an excellent relative to the lively island group established by Englishmen."—Spectator.
"His narrative is clear, full, and comprehensive, and conveys a very favourable impression of the country, the climate, the natural history, the people, and the Maories. It is now placed in every intelligent and satisfactory an account of any land."—Quarterly Review, October, 1860.
JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

PICTORIAL SUNDAY READINGS.
By the REV. WILLIAM OLVER,
Author of "A Bible Side of Mercantile," &c.
Comprises a Complete Series of Scripture Subjects, forcibly, fully and yet concisely treated, with especial adaptation to the spiritual requirements of families; and forming a comprehensive, instructive, and interesting Commentary on the Holy Bible.
The Pictorial Illustrations, all of rare size, from drawings of eminent artists, executed by the chromatic process in rich and appropriate colours. The whole of the volumes have been prepared, expressly for the work.
Vol. I. (of four), small quarto, 3s. cloth, containing Four Coloured Engravings and Numerous Woodcuts.
JAMES SANGSTER and CO., 36, Paternoster-row; and all Booksellers.

MESSRS. SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO.'S NEW WORKS FOR SEASIDE READING.
THE LIFE OF DR. WOLFF. New Edition, revised.
LADY AUBREY; or, What shall I do? A Novel.
HELEN LA MONTE; or Rose of Real Life.
MY WIFE'S PIN-MONEY. By a Grandniece of the great Lord Mansfield.
THE MISDEMEANOR'S DAUGHTER. Dedicated by permission to Baroness de Rutzen.

ILLUMINATED by OWEN JONES and HENRY WARREN. "HEROES AND THE HERO, from the "Lethe Reach" of Thomas Hood. The work will consist of 12 royal quarto parts, to be issued in form the most elegant and splendid gift-book for the ensuing season which can be produced. Part I. now ready, price 2s. 6d. Part II. will be published on Sept. 25. To call, at the Art Journal Office, royal 8vo, 21s. cloth; morocco, 31s. 6d.; elegant morocco, 42s.
Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE HUMAN BODY: its Structure and Functions. Illustrated by Physiological Diagrams, containing 193 Coloured Figures. Designed for the use of Students in Medicine, and Artists. By JOHN MARSHALL, F.R.S., Professor of Anatomy and Surgery to the Royal Academy, and Surgeon to the Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, Brompton. Assistant in the Science and Art Department, South Kensington. In Two Vols.—Vol. I., cloth, consisting of Text, 8vo, price 12s., and Atlas of Plates, imperial 8vo, bound in cloth boards, price 21s. The two volumes, 33s. Will be arranged in 3 folio parts. Price of the two volumes, 31s. Will be completed in Nov.
London: John Ker, Lithographer to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

100 STARTLING AUTUMN NOVELTIES and Standard Works, at Mudie's Select Library. Postage Paid. Prospectuses and Lists of Terms, Prices, &c., forwarded on application. Fifty Thousand Volumes of Ancient and Modern Books, Pamphlets, and Periodicals, are in circulation. MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, 509, New Oxford-street, Strand.

NEW SERIAL.
ALL ROUND THE WORLD.
Commenced now early.
Office, 12, Fleet-street, London.

Now Ready Book—THE ROSE, Illustrations, 2s. 6d., gilt.
THE ILLUSTRATED BOY'S OWN TREASURY. "The best gift-book for boys ever produced."—Sunday Times. Price 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s. Post-free.

This day, price 5s., price Map and Illustrations, demy 8vo,
HEALTH AND DISEASE: Their Cause and How to Profit by Them. By STEPHEN THOMSON, M.D.
London: Longman, Green, and Co., 13, Paternoster-row.

This day, fcap. 8vo, boards, fancy wrapper, price 2s., 2nd Edition,
THE DIARY OF A JUDGE. Compiled from the Notebook of a Recently-deceased Judge. By Lieutenant-Colonel ADDISON.
London: Watts and Lock, 139, Fleet-street.

Price 2s. Illustrated by M'Connell, Kenny Meadows, H. G. Hine, &c.
MISS BROWN. By ROBERT B. BROUGH, Jun.
MARSTON LYNCH. By R. B. BROUGH.
ULF THE UNJUST. By R. B. BROUGH.
London: Watts and Lock, 139, Fleet-street.

JOHN HORSLEY DOWN; or, the Old Gentleman's Recollections of Fifteen to Fiftysix.
London: Watts and Lock, 139, Fleet-street.

ENLARGEMENT of the WELCOME GIFT CURES of Deafness, Cancer, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Gout, Ague, Thousands. Newly Discovered Remedies have been beneficially introduced every living language, and they deserve such universal popularity. Sold by the Proprietor, 244, Regent-street, London, and by all Druggists. Agent in the United States of America, for the sale of this elixir from evaluation, as the abstract and core of the most powerful healing agents in the world, to impart vigour, energy, warmth, and power, to cure, to be conveyed America from the highest peaks of the Rocky Mountains to the Mississippi Valley, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, and to remain in every family for all time to come.
Believing that Gustave Aimard's tales of Indian life must only to be known to England to be admired, the Proprietors of the "Welcome Gift" have secured the Copyright for this country, and the first translation will be

THE PRAIRIE FLOWER,
which will be published in a series of papers, THE STREETS OF NEW YORK, illustrated by William M'Connell. A COLLECTION OF SEA STORIES, by Captain Chamier, R.N., and other Tales, forming a weekly serial, entitled Art, "and sold at the price of Sixpence. Orders for Popular Tales" will also appear at regular intervals.
London: Ward and Lock, 158, Fleet-street, 31, Paternoster-row.

5000 CHURCH SERVICES, ELEGANTLY BOUND, from 6s. 6d.
2000 PRAYER-BOOKS, from 1s. 6d.
4000 HYMNS, NOW, and FAMILY BIBLES, 104, to 3 guineas.
PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d. Second Edition, Illustrated Wrapper,
HINTS on ILLUMINATING. With Lithographic Illustrations from old and new MSS. By H. N. HUMPHREYS and ALBERT and SON, 333, Oxford-street.

Price 2s. 6d., post-free 2s. 8d., cloth gilt, illustrated,
THE ART of ILLUMINATING: A Guide to the Practice of Illuminating on Paper and Vellum. By Mrs. BRADLEY, R.A., with Appendix by T. GOODWIN, R.A., and Twelve Illustrations in Colours. Price 1s.—Wrapper, with Directions for Rubbing-place, London, W.; and all Booksellers and Artists' Colourmen.

Fourth Edition, four published, price 2s. 6d., or by post 31 stamps,
DISEASES of the SKIN: a Guide to their Treatment on Principles of Pathology. By ERASMUS WILSON, F.R.S., Lecturer on Anatomy to the Western Dispensary, Author of the Skin, &c., Charles-street, Surrey-square. "Mr. Wilson has transformed what was formerly the driest study to the dumbest."—Lancet. London: T. RICHARDS, 37, Great Queen-street.

EPILEPSY: ITS CAUSE AND CURE. By Dr. LANGDON DOWN. Price 1s. Post free for sixty stamps.
London: Hardwicke, 29, Piccadilly, Oxford-street, W.

Ninth Edition, just published, price 5s., by post 56 stamps,
DEBILITY and IRRITABILITY: MENTAL and BODILY, their Cause and Cure. By Dr. LAYCOCK, Physician Extraordinary to the Queen, Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine, and Medical Jurisprudence in the Queen's University. Letter Carriers' Provident Institution, &c.
London: From the Author, 29, Upper-bedford-place, W.C.

Just published, price 1s. 6d.; sent free for 18 stamps,
AN UNCOMMON BOOK—THE WILL OF GOD TO BE INVALID, as Revealed in the Scriptures, Way of Practically Realising it. By a Physician.
London: W. OWEN, 19, Regent's Parade, S.W.

CARDS FOR THE MILLION—Wedding, Visiting, and Business.—A Copper Plate engraved in any style, 3s.; fifty best Cards printed, any small quantity, 2s. 6d. ARTHUR GRANGER, Card Stationer and Engraver, &c., 336, High Holborn.

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.
The Old Clock on the Stairs, by Miss M. Lindsay (Mrs. J. Wortsington Smith). Illustrated Edition, 24 stamps.
W. H. Callcott's Adventures of Don Quixote, No. 1, Duet, 4s. Mendelssohn's 3 Quartets, 2 Violins, Tenor and Bass, each 12s. Mendelssohn's 3 Quartets, 2 Violins, Viola and Bass, each 12s. Ladies Duet Repertoire, 24 Numbers for Pianos, 2s. 6d. Mendelssohn's Lieder ohne Worte, Book 1, for Piano, 3s. Harry Hirth, Fantasia on Irish Airs, for Piano, 4s. Wesley Richter, 101 exercises, for Piano, 3s. Time, Song by W. Vincent Wallace, 2s. Eliza's Wedding, Song by Balfe, 2s. The Dashwood Polka, by Charles D'Albert, 3s. The Dashwood Polka Mazurka, by Charles D'Albert, 3s. Hopkins and Rimbault's Organ, its History and Construction, 31s. 6d. Rudiments of Music, by Hopkins and Rimbault, 2s. 6d. Catalogues of all kinds of Music, &c., gratis and post-free.
Lendon: Robert Cocks and Co., New Burlington-street, Regent-street.

SIX THOUSAND, New, Popular, and Standard PIANOFORTE WORKS will be found in the Catalogues just published by CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street, gratis and postage-free to applicants. Address, Robert Cocks and Co., 6, New Burlington-street, Regent-street.

VOLUNTEER SONG, "Every Man join Heart and Soul," composed by ALFRED HILLON, and sung by Mr. Wilbye Cooper at the Hanover Square Rooms, with unbounded success. Price 2s. 6d. ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

BALFE'S NEW SONG, "SLEEP, MY PRETTY ONE, SLEEP," Words by the Rev. J. LESTRON. Published this day, price 2s. 6d.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

THE BLACKSMITH'S SON. New Song. Composed by J. L. HATTON, and sung with immense success by Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 2s. 6d.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

WINNING THE GLOVES, New Comic Song, composed by CHARLES SUTTON, and SUNG BY HIM. Written by J. T. CARPENTER. Price 2s. 6d., post-free. "This song is a decided success."—Morning Advertiser.
ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

THE SINGER'S LIBRARY of CONCERTED MUSIC. Edited by JOHN HULLAH. Nos. 1 to 23 of each Number now ready, price 1s. each, post-free 13 stamps. Vol. I., in cloth, post-free. Volume 1 of each series, price 7s.
ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BEAUTIFUL DOVE. The latest and most fascinating production of this popular composer. Price 3s. Also, "Good Night," recently sung in Song or Vocal Duet.—H. TOLKIEN, 27, London-bridge, City.

NOT A MINUTE TO SPARE.—A Sacred Song by HENRY SMART. Price 2s. Published this day. Just published. This is a song that every lover of harmony and good music should possess."—Vide Morning Advertiser, Sept. 19th, 1860.
ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street.

SUTTON'S 13s. BOOKS for the PIANO-FORTE. Twelve Yellow book post-free, 13 stamps. 50 Selected Fellow Pieces, 50 stamps. 50 Selected Airs, 50 stamps. 13 Gallops, 4s.; 20 Waltzes, 5s.; 20 Quadrilles, 5s.; 20 Polkas, 5s.; 20 Mazurkas, 5s.; 20 Quadrilles, 5s.; or the whole six books in one superb volume, cloth, gilt edges, 13s. 6d. net. 7s. to 13s. Pianos for 5s. per month, on the Irish Monopoly, 5s., and 6s. of Chevalier's unrivalled Cottage Pianos, 6s. per month. 7s. to 13s. Pianos for 5s. per month. JULLIEN'S MUSIQUE OFFICE, 214, Regent-street.

CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS' SONGS, with CHORUSES and PIANO ACCOMPANIMENTS, in drop and chapel vocal parts. Nos. 1 to 12 now ready, price 1d. each; 13 to 17 Songs in one col., thirty-fifth, 7s. 6d., and in three volumes, 21s. each. Christy's Minstrels' Song Book, with Choruses, Symphonies, and Accompaniments for the Pianoforte, 5s. Christy's Minstrels' Instrumental Accompaniments to 19 Christy Songs for the Violin, 1s.; 50 Minstrel Melodies, arranged for the Violin, 1s.; 50 Minstrel Melodies, arranged for the Violoncello, 1s.; or the whole six books in one superb volume, cloth, gilt edges, 13s. 6d. net. 7s. to 13s. Pianos for 5s. per month, on the Irish Monopoly, 5s., and 6s. of Chevalier's unrivalled Cottage Pianos, 6s. per month. 7s. to 13s. Pianos for 5s. per month. JULLIEN'S MUSIQUE OFFICE, 214, Regent-street.

CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS' SONGS, with CHORUSES and PIANO ACCOMPANIMENTS, in drop and chapel vocal parts. Nos. 1 to 12 now ready, price 1d. each; 13 to 17 Songs in one col., thirty-fifth, 7s. 6d., and in three volumes, 21s. each. Christy's Minstrels' Song Book, with Choruses, Symphonies, and Accompaniments for the Pianoforte, 5s. Christy's Minstrels' Instrumental Accompaniments to 19 Christy Songs for the Violin, 1s.; 50 Minstrel Melodies, arranged for the Violin, 1s.; 50 Minstrel Melodies, arranged for the Violoncello, 1s.; or the whole six books in one superb volume, cloth, gilt edges, 13s. 6d. net. 7s. to 13s. Pianos for 5s. per month, on the Irish Monopoly, 5s., and 6s. of Chevalier's unrivalled Cottage Pianos, 6s. per month. 7s. to 13s. Pianos for 5s. per month. JULLIEN'S MUSIQUE OFFICE, 214, Regent-street.

RIFLE CORPS PRESENTATION SILVER BUGLES, Manufactured and Supplied to Government for the manufacture of the above Bugles in Sterling Silver, which have been adopted by upwards of 100 Corps, and are pronounced by every Bugler to be the most perfect Bugle in the world, at twenty pounds. Copper Bugles, the same as supplied by Boosey and Sons to the Rifle Corps, 2l. 10s. each. Bugle Horns, Trumpets, Cornets, and Bugles, Cornets, and Bugles, Cornets, and Bugles

NEW MUSIC.

DALBERT'S NAPLES QUADRILLE.—The celebrated set, on popular Italian Airs, Illustrated with View of Naples, and dedicated to Garibaldi. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S GARIBALDI GALOP, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pulitzer Festival. Beautifully Illustrated with Portrait of the great hero, by BRANDARD. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLES, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at Mivart's Hotel. Founded on the most favourite of Irish National Melodies. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Julien Festival. Founded on the favourite song of "Kathleen Mavourneen." With Illustrated Title. Beautifully Illustrated, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NELLY GRAY VALSE, with Illustrated Title. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES or ST. JAMES'S GALOP. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated with Portrait of the Colonel of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by BAXTER. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S CAMPBELL MINSTRELS' QUADRILLES. The last new set, introducing Sally Gray and other favourite Airs. Now Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. Full Orchestral Parts, 7s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for PIANOFORTE. Victorine Valse, Victorine Quadrille, Lurline Valse, Trovatore Marches, Kathleen Mavourneen Valse, Billy Taylor Valse, Garibaldi Minstrel Quadrille, Nelly Gray Galop, Italian Campagne Quadrille, Sir Hugh Valse, Echo Corps Galop, Prince of Wales Galop, Garibaldi Galop. Beautifully Illustrated. In each quadrille and galop the subject of the popular Composer's works may be had gratis and postage-free on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FASHIONABLE DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing fifty Quadrilles, Valses, Polkas, Galops, Mazurkas, Varsovianas, &c. Composed by CHARLES D'ALBERT. Bronze, Leader, Lutanay, &c. Edited by FRANZ BEYER.
At CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S STANDARD DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing one hundred Quadrilles, Valses, Polkas, Galops, Jigs, Strathspeys, Highland Flings, Reels, Hornpipes, &c. Edited by CHARLES COTE.
At CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, and the most effective and favourite Air by the above popular Composer. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. Pertuyuez Love Song. Composed by the Hon. Mrs. NORTON. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS'S NELLY GRAY, the popular Song, transcribed for Pianoforte Minstrels, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and cheapest of all Pianoforte Tutors.—Scales—Gymnastic exercises—Exercises, scales, exercises, and a great variety of the most popular Airs, Duets, Marches, Waltzes, Galops, Jigs, full music size, 96 pp., post-free, 24 stamps.
N.B. A List of Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NEW OPERATIC FANTASIAS, KUHE'S DIAMANS DE LA COURONNE, 3s. 6d.
KUHE'S DINORAH, 3s. 6d. KUHE'S PROPHETE, 3s. 6d.
KUHE'S ROBERT, 3s. 6d.
KUHE'S DON GIOVANNI, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S SPARKLING DEWDROPS. Morceau de Salon for Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S L'ANGE GARDIEN.—Pensée Poétique pour le Piano. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

H! WHY DO WE LOVE! Song. By G. A. MACFARREN. Price 3s. post-free. Sung by MISS. Wynn at the Norwich Festival with great enthusiasm.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE JUVENILE ALBUM.—Just published, in a handsome volume, 24 FAVOURITE MELODIES arranged for the PIANOFORTE by FRANCIS HOWELL. Illustrated by Valentine Bromley. Price 5s. (Paradise Polka, Marietta Waltz, 2. Overland Route Galop (D'Albert) 3. Dewdrops Waltz (D'Albert) 4. Bo-Peep to Bo-Peep 5. Dance to the Music of Time 6. Diamond Waltz 7. Ring Dance Polka 8. Big Ben Polka 9. Sibyl Valse (D'Albert) 10. Lily of the Valley Valse 11. Bella, Bella! 12. Ole! Ole! Ole! 13. Rifle Corps Galop (D'Albert) 14. Rollicking Beauty Valse (D'Albert) 15. Sailing, Sailing Waltz 16. Rifle Corps Polka (D'Albert) 17. Ball Valse 18. Good News from Home 19. Grasmere Valse (D'Albert) 20. Lily of the Valley Polka (D'Albert) 21. Oh! Polka 22. Rifle Corps Galop (D'Albert) 23. Ringing Beauty Valse (D'Albert) 24. Auld Lang Syne
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S CHEAP WORKS FOR VARIOUS INSTRUMENTS. Price 1s. 6d. each, post-free.

VIOLIN.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Second Violin and Bass Part to ditto.
Chappell's 100 Hungarian Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Popular Songs.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorius."
Chappell's 100 Hornpipes, Reels, Jigs, &c.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

FLUTE (PRINCIPALLY D'ALBERT'S).
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Hungarian Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorius."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

CORNET-A-PISTON.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorius."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

ENGLISH CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorius."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

GERMAN CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Melodies, Songs, Dances, &c.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

GUITAR.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's Popular Songs, with Guitar Accompaniment, in two books.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

HARMONIUM.
Chappell's 56 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 56 Secular Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
Can always be had to order CHAPPELL'S Cheap Works, as they form extra contain D'Albert's and other popular copyright works.

NEW MUSIC.

LOCH KATRINE WALTZ (by LAURENT), on Scotch Airs, and KILLARNEY WALTZ, on Irish Airs. Both Illustrated. Price 4s. each. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MARGARETTA WALTZ (by LAURENT), on Sailor's Celebrated Song. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Composed to the MALE and BELOVED STAR WALTZES. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

RAMSGATE SANDS QUADRILLE.—The most popular set of the day. Founded on favourite and well-known melodies, illustrating a visit to Ramsgate in characteristic style. Illustrated by BRANDARD. Twenty-Fourth Edition, 24. BRANDARD, in Colours.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

NOTRE DAME. Romance for the Pianoforte by EMILIE MAY. Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s. SPANISH DANCES, 4s. Illustrated by Lahy. Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

KUHE'S ROBERT LE DIABLE (just published), price 3s. Kuhe's "Domino Noir," 3s. Kuhe's "Jacques," 3s. Kuhe's "Les Huguenots," 3s. Kuhe's "Dinorah," 3s. and Kuhe's Fantasias Vals, 4s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

TENNYSON'S Impromptu Lyric, FOR EVER AND FOR EVER, has been exquisitely set to Music by MRS. ALEXANDER HUME, and is sung by Madame SAINTON-DOLBY at Scarborough. It is just published, price 3s., by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

AN EVENING WITH MEYERBEER (published this day). Mélange for the Pianoforte, by NORD-MANN. Containing Selections from "Robert le Diable," "Les Huguenots," "Dinorah," "Le Prophète," "Vielka," "Le Pardon de Ploermel," "L'Etoile du Nord," "Le Camp de Silésie," and "Struensee." Price 4s. AN EVENING WITH GOUNOD'S "FAUST," Selected, Arranged, and Illustrated by BRANDARD, 4s. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

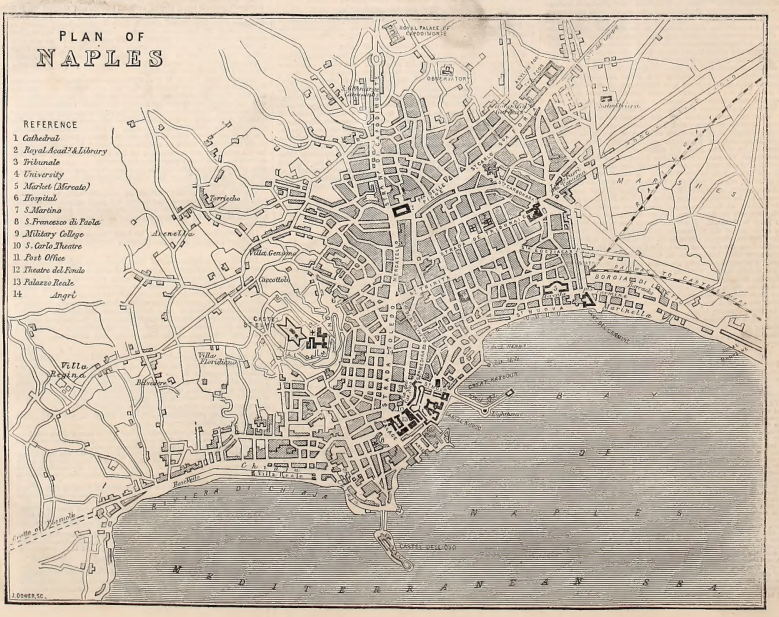
THE BALL-ROOM MUSIC-BOOK. Price 4s., in a handsome volume, with Illustrated Title, by BRANDARD. It contains 3 Schottisches, 2 Varsovianas, and 2 Sets of Quadrilles (complete). BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CHEAP EDITION of IL TROVATORE for Voice and Pianoforte, with English and Italian words, in eight monthly parts, 1s. each. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

NEW ENGLISH DUET, SWEET IS THE DREAM. Duet by CAMPANA, being an English version of his celebrated air, "Dormi Pur Cosi." Price 4s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE MAZURKAS of CHOPIN, edited by FRANZ KLINDWORTH. Complete in one volume, music size (100 pages), with preface by the Editor, and portrait of Chopin, price 3s. (uniform with sound and handsome editions of Beethoven's and Mozart's Pianoforte Music, by pianoforte Music by Schubert, by pianoforte Music by Weber, by pianoforte Music by Mendelssohn, by pianoforte Music by Schumann, by pianoforte Music by Handel, by pianoforte Music by Haydn, by pianoforte Music by Clementi, by pianoforte Music by Dussek, by pianoforte Music by Cramer, by pianoforte Music by Field, by pianoforte Music by Hummel, by pianoforte Music by Moscheles, by pianoforte Music by Bennett, by pianoforte Music by Steibelt, by pianoforte Music by Kalkbrenner, by pianoforte Music by Thalberg, by pianoforte Music by Henselt, by pianoforte Music by Heller, by pianoforte Music by Rubinstein, by pianoforte Music by Dreyschock, by pianoforte Music by Litolff, by pianoforte Music by Gottschalk, by pianoforte Music by Jaell, by pianoforte Music by Brinley Richards, by pianoforte Music by Kuhe, by pianoforte Music by Wehli, by pianoforte Music by Ascher, by pianoforte Music by Goria, by pianoforte Music by Ravina, by pianoforte Music by Rosellen, by pianoforte Music by Prudent, by pianoforte Music by Osborne, by pianoforte Music by Goddard, by pianoforte Music by Arabella Goddard, by pianoforte Music by Madame Oury, by pianoforte Music by Madame Dulcken, by pianoforte Music by Madame Schumann, by pianoforte Music by Madame Pleyel, by pianoforte Music by Madame Szarvady, by pianoforte Music by Madame Montigny-Rémaury, by pianoforte Music by Miss Kate Loder, by pianoforte Music by Miss Arabella Goddard, by pianoforte Music by Miss Agnes Zimmermann, by pianoforte Music by Miss Lucy Chambers, by pianoforte Music by Miss Eliza Wesley, by pianoforte Music by Miss Mary Wurda, by pianoforte Music by Miss Fanny Wurda, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Woolhouse, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Elton, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Lucas, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Smith, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Brown, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Jones, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Robinson, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Thomas, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Williams, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Davies, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Evans, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Hughes, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Morgan, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Price, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Rees, by pianoforte Music by Miss Julia Roberts

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.



No. 1052.—VOL. XXXVII.] SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1860. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE ITALIAN REVOLUTION.

In the remarkable absence of any movement in home politics this autumn, public attention is concentrated on the affairs of Italy to an extent and with an interest which justifies continual recurrence to the subject. The rumours, if not the events, of the last few days have tended towards a new phase in that which must now, at any rate, be called the Italian revolution. We use the word revolution in a peculiar sense—in a sense which renders it antithetical to that course of conduct which we should term constitutional. Hitherto, as we all know, the great chieftain who has conquered so much by the magic of his name and the spell of his presence has sedulously professed to act in the name of a constitutional King of Italy. There has been no appeal to the peoples with whom Garibaldi has come in contact bearing that significancy which has generally accompanied those popular insurrections which have assumed the title of revolutions. The dictator has scarcely assumed that he has been self-appointed, or that he has acted solely on his own warrant: and while, of course, recognising and contending for the principle that the people who were by his assistance throwing off the yoke of one monarchy, had a right to choose their personal ruler, he has only presented another and a better kind of monarchy as the alternative, and has not directed the aims and the wishes of those whose cause he has espoused towards a republic.

If only a part of what we hear be true it would seem that a change has come over the spirit and the feelings of Garibaldi. If, as we have before hinted, a trap has been set for him, he seems very likely to fall into it. It is difficult to suppose that a man with the high heart and generous impulses of Garibaldi could be influenced by petty vanities or personal self-seeking. If it be the fact—and he has in his past career given strong proofs of it—that he is actuated by pure love of country and devotion to liberty, one can hardly imagine that in a moment he could peril the objects and the hopes of his life for an idea connected with a diminution of his individual dignity. To use very plain and homely language, surely he will not turn sulky and impracticable because there is a chance of his not continuing to play first fiddle. The world has marked him out as the man of the age who is the least selfish as he is the most romantically heroic. The time has probably arrived when he will be called upon to justify that opinion, and to vindicate his claim to a chief place in the abstract Walhalla of nations.

We have been naturally led into these observations by rumours, rising into statements, which have insinuated themselves into the current news of the day, and which, briefly summed, imply that Garibaldi has had a difference with Victor Emmanuel; has quarrelled outright with Cavour; has thrown himself bodily into the hands of Mazzini—this latter having renounced the allegiance to the King of Sardinia which he some time ago publicly professed—and that he has adopted a broad scheme of Republicanism on the one hand, and a plan of marching with his own immediate forces first upon Rome and then upon Venetia. The reports point also to the circumstance of a market change having come over the demeanour of the chieftain, indicating dissatisfaction with much that is going on, and an alteration in his feelings and purposes. The question is, supposing this to be true, whether this is only one of the dark shadows that occasionally pass over and obscure the minds of great and good men—merely an eclipse of a fine nature—or an absolute mutation of the mind and heart, which will lead to as absolute and complete a deviation from the line of policy and the direc-

PLAN OF NAPLES REFERENCE
1 Cathedral
2 Royal Acad.y & Library
3 Tribunale
4 University
5 Market (Mercato)
6 Hospital
7 S.Martina
8 S.Francesco di Paola
9 Military College
10 S. Carlo Theatre
11 Post Office
12 Theatre del Fondo
13 Palazzo Reale
14 Angri
Capodimonte
Arenella
Villa Genova
Vomero
CASTEL S.ELMO
Villa Reale
Villa Floridiana
Riviera
Chiaia
Mergellina
Strada Nuova di Posillipo
Strada di Piedigrotta
Strada di Chiaia
Strada di Toledo
Strada Nuova del Molo
Strada del Piliero
Strada Nuova di Portamedina
Strada Nuova del Mercato
Strada Nuova di Porta Capuana
Strada Nuova di Porta Nolana
Strada Nuova di Porta Reale
Strada Nuova di Porta Alba
Strada Nuova di Porta S.Gennaro
Strada Nuova di Porta S.Giovanni

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

THE IMPERIAL TOUR.

The Emperor and Empress arrived at Algiers on the 17th, at half-past eight in the morning, although their passage was retarded by heavy weather. At noon the Bey of Tunis, who came to congratulate the Emperor on his arrival, entered the roadstead on board the Crocodile steam-frigate, and on landing was received with all the honours due to his rank. His Highness soon after had an interview with the Emperor and Empress. The fêtes given in honour of their Majesties were splendid. The Empress, rising from grief on account of the alarming state of her sister's health, was not present at the ball.

We take from an Algiers letter in the Paris Moniteur the following particulars of the Emperor's visit to Algiers :—

"The Emperor and Empress laid, on the morning of the 18th inst., the first stone of the monument bestowed by the city of Algiers on the memory of which, while it bestows a fine walk upon the city, will create an artery for the purposes of the future. The Emperor and Empress, in the ceremony of benediction was performed by Monseigneur Pavy, the Bishop of Algiers, in the presence of the Clergy, the Municipal Council, a numerous crowd, and had collected to witness the spectacle. In the course of the day their Majesties proceeded to the Jardin d'Essai, where a Military Review and a grand Arab festival was to take place. Here, under the direction of General Jusuf, contingents of Kabyle infantry and of Spahis, mounted on fine Arab horses, with all the alpha and colds at their head, were assembled to do homage to the Emperor. After a mock fight between the tribes, and after a display in which from nine to ten thousand horsemen galloped up and fired off their carbines at their opponents, the Emperor, Empress, and Prince, with a large squadron of Spahis riding like a whirlwind across the plain; after jousts, in which Europeans, as strictly barred, and spectators, took part, there was a feast of the Tolbargas, with their faces veiled, mounted on camels, and of the Chameaux, who, mounted on the finest horses, the property of the state and from the Soudan, all the guests, forming an immense line of battle, skirmished, while their horses, at full speed, leaped ditches of the height of a man. The Emperor's tent was pitched. Then the chiefs in white bournous alighted from their horses, and came in a body to present their homage to the Emperor, mounted with gold, and to perform the act of submission to the Sovereign of France. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the Emperor, with the Empress at his side, after long counterfeiting against us in arms as enemies, now new subdued, in the European manner, to resist visible danger, and to fight for the flag that was present at this important solemnity. In the evening the city gave a ball in the Hôtel de Ville, which was to have been followed by a supper, which was too much stinted at the alarming state of her sister the Duchess of Alba. On the following day, the 19th, the fête was a repetition of the preceding one. The province, when the Bey of Tunis accompanied the Emperor, and then took place the ball given by the city of Algiers.

"On the 20th, the reply of the Emperor to the speech of the President of the Council General of Algiers, at the banquet given to his Majesty by that city :—

"My first sentiment, on putting my foot on the African soil, was directed towards the army, whose courage and perseverance accomplished the conquest of this large country. I wished to pay a public tribute to one of the noblest arts of war as a punishment or as a redemption. In our hands the conquest can only be a blessing. It is the duty of a great nation to put an end to more than three millions of Arabs, whom the fate of arms has brought under our rule. Hardened by the military life, they are incapable of any kind of civilisation. What, then, is civilisation? It is to reckon material comfort for something. But 20,000 men, who have left their families, prefer to it the glorious blessing of all. To raise, therefore, the Arabs to the dignity of free men; to spread over them the benefits of a wise legislation; to make them accept religion; to improve their existence by bringing out from the earth all the treasures which it contains—behold, gentlemen, what I consider the mission I would wish to remain freities—such is our mission, and we will not fail in the accomplishment of it. I am glad to see here the representatives of interests in Algeria the flag of France, and with it all the arts of a civilised nation, next a few days from Europe, and to see assembled around me the chiefs of the institutions which I have given make them already find here their native country, with all its blessings. I propose to you, then, this path, we may hope that their example will be followed, and that other populations will come to the hospitable soil, for ever French. I am glad to see that you do not allow France to show herself more generous towards her colonies, and, if I have created for them a ministry, it was because I wished that they should leave here, as trace of my visit, confidence in the future, and entire faith in the beneficial effects of the efforts for the prosperity which are always crossed by Providence. I give, as a toast, "The Prosperity of Africa."

This reply was received with the loudest acclamations.

The Emperor and Empress left on the night of the 19th, and reached St. Perpignan on account of the rough weather. They reached St. Cloud on Saturday.

FUNERAL OF THE DUCHESS OF ALBA.

The funeral of the Duchess of Alba, sister of the Empress, took place on Thursday week, at the Church of Carabanchel, about a mile and a half to her rank. There were present at the ceremony all the Ministers, several of the grand officers of the household, the Senate, Legislative Body, and Council of State, the members of the Spanish Embassy, and several of the representatives of the Spanish nobility. The coffin was laid on a funeral car, drawn by four horses with silver, and bearing, at intervals, escutcheons with the initials of the deceased, and a crown and coronet surmounting the whole. The cortège started from the Hôtel d'Alba, in the Champs Elysées. The hearse, which was drawn by six horses richly caparisoned, was followed by the carriages of the Emperor and Empress, in succession. The Duke d'Alba was present, and officiated as chief mourner. The Archbishop of Paris, with the clergy of the church, received the body at the door of the church, and preceded it, with the usual ceremonial, to the catafalque, where a solemn service was performed. It is not yet known whether these influences will be victorious." The same journal further says :—"It is unreasonable to fix the 15th of November as the day when the Conference will not extend her intervention beyond Rome. Were she to act otherwise, she would render herself suspected by the Italian people. The Times of Saturday, in conclusion, expresses the hope that the Pope may resist the counsels which are given to him through the French Press.

FRANCE, SARDINIA, AND RUSSIA.

Baron de Bourke, Secretary of the French Embassy at St. Petersburg, arrived at Turin a few days ago with despatches, stating that Count Walewski had had a long conference with the French Ambassador, the Duke of Montebello, in reference to the general state of things in Europe, and to Italy in particular.

The Prince, after having expressed the sincere desire of Russia to maintain friendly relations with France, said that the good understanding between France and Sardinia encouraged the propagation of doctrines constituting a permanent danger to the political equilibrium and the stability of thrones. Russia, he said, would entirely fail in her mission were she not, in common with other States threatened, to raise her voice in favour of the principles of order and conservation. The Prince added that this was the object of the approaching interview at Stuttgart.

The semi-official journals are instructed to give a positive contradiction to the rumour that the Emperor has been fishing for an invitation to Warsaw. The origin of this story is believed to be a conversation made by Prince Gortschakoff to M. Thouvenel on the subject of the secret treaties which have been communicated and ostentented by official gossip. The Times correspondent adheres to the story.

BELGIUM.

The King and Royal family of Belgium have returned to Brussels from their excursion in Flanders, their last visit after leaving Ypres being to the establishment of Messins, founded in 1776 for the reception of the daughters of soldiers killed or pensioned while in the service of their country. The King, on the day following his return to his capital, gave a private audience to Baron de Meyendorff, Grand Master of the Court of Russia, and formerly Russian Ambassador at Vienna.

The thirtieth anniversary of the establishment of the national independence of Belgium was celebrated on Sunday last. Throughout the preceding years, the cannon were fired early in the morning, the public buildings were decorated with flags, the societies of archers, crossbow men, &c., and also the singing socie ties, promenaded through the principal streets with music and banners, and afterwards competed for prizes; and there were grand musical concerts, gratuitous theatrical performances, illuminations, &c.; there was also the opening of the horticultural exhibition of the Royal Linnean Society, which was visited by the King and the Duke and Duchess de Brabant. But the grand event of the day was a display of rifle-shooting, the first that has taken place there. It came off in the plain near the Ixelles Railway station, and was attended by a vast crowd of spectators on foot, in carriages, and on horseback. The Ministers of the Interior and of Public Works (MM. Rogier and Vandenbleken) were present. The firing began at one o'clock, preceded by a discharge of artillery, and was not concluded until six. The competitors to a number of Belgians, a great many Bavarians, English, Swiss, and Dutch took part in the competition. The Bavarians were the most numerous; they wore green hats, and had on their breast several medals won in previous matches. The Dutch were very warmly received; it was the first time they had publicly "fraternised" with the Belgians on a friendly festival. The whole of the day's rejoicings passed off with great spirit, notwithstanding the rain fell heavily at times.

The Belgian Ministry of War has decided on increasing the number of its men occupied in the manufacture of arms, in course of construction at Antwerp to between 8000 and 10,000. Arrangements are being made for their accommodation.

NAPLES.

The news concerning Garibaldi's movements of late is rather meagre. A telegram from Caserta, dated the 21st inst., gives the following intelligence of himself and his troops :—"A few days ago Garibaldi attacked Capua, in order to make a movement in the direction of Volturno, on which occasion 200 Garibaldians were put into requisition. The Garibaldians succeeded, however, in passing Cattabene. The Neapolitan have concentrated their forces at Capua, but without success. Garibaldi has concentrated his troops on the heights of Volturno. General Türr is expected this night in order to concert with him a general attack against the Neapolitans. A fresh proclamation of Garibaldi has been published, in which he states that he will join the Sardinian troops at Rome, and will "proclaim Victor Emanuel Venice."

The following account of Garibaldi's army before Capua is supplied by the correspondent of the Daily News, in a letter dated "Advanced Posts of Santa Maria, September 18, noon" :—

Our advanced posts were pushed on here on the night of the 16th without opposition, the Neapolitans having withdrawn the handful of cavalry which occupied this position falling back rapidly on the main body at Capua; and this morning the whole of the Garibaldian Army of the Volturno began to pass to the south-west of that town, an immediate attack on which is precluded from our want of artillery. Two or three batteries are, however, preparing in Naples; and ere long, unless the troops of the Bourbon should somehow or another get possession of the Garibaldian artillery, we shall no doubt be able to give a good account of them. So great is their dread of our new rifles that they never keep up a steady fire against our artillery, evidently the result of numerous false alarms of our advance: and the Neapolitans imagine that we have a large force in the vicinity at a distance of a European army. Our men are in capital condition, and number between 17,000 and 18,000, the Neapolitans at Capua, Caserta, and Santa Maria there are only 15,000; but the enemy are supported by a very heavy and well-disciplined artillery; the cavalry number from 10,000, are in certainty or form a part of the garrison of Gaeta. Of the 80,000 Calabrians brought up by Bosco, 20,000 are said to have deserted, and the rest have been sent to different divisions, which, including the half of Medici's division but at present lying the sanitary state of Garibaldi's regulars up to the number of 10,000 men; the remaining 20,000 are at Caserta, being organised in battalions of Royal Corps. It is said that Garibaldi's brigade, which is now reduced to some 10,000 regulars, to say nothing of the Neapolitans who are flocking in, and who are to form a separate division.

It is repeated in a variety of ways that Garibaldi has demanded the dismissal of Cavour, and that he is counted on as the Judge of Sardinia. The step is attributed to Mazzini and his party, now at Naples.

A letter from Turin, dated the 22nd inst., says :—"The Sicilian Ministry is entirely anti-annexationist, and the Mazzinian elements are also wanting there. The party of Mazzini have disappeared. Naples is announced, but it requires confirmation. Three days ago Mazzini was at Parma, and Garibaldi at Naples. Both of them are equally near. The great game is being played between Cavour and Garibaldi. It is presumed that within another fortnight one or the other must prepare for battle. Everything will depend if that shall succeed or be to spend the horrors of civil war. Garibaldi is at the present moment at Naples; he can dispose of an army of 40,000 men. Public opinion is blindly devoted to him. On the other hand, Count Cavour is strong in the confidence of Piedmont, popularity has not forsaken him. Piedmont, properly speaking, defends him, and Turin especially.

Accounts from Turin of Monday's date, show that the dissensions between Garibaldi and Count Cavour are now openly and officially avowed. The Official Gazette of Turin does not only endorse Count Cavour and his policy, but publishes a letter in which Garibaldi himself declares that, "although he is quite disposed to sacrifice all personal feelings on the altar of country, he can never be in communication with men who have sold an Italian province." Nor is this all, for Garibaldi, who has paid a brief visit to Naples, has issued a fresh proclamation to the Sicilians, in which he again declares that it is only at Rome that the final struggle for the emancipation of the Italian Peninsula will take place, and that annexation must be postponed for the present. It appears, however, that by a decree the Dictator has proclaimed the Sardinian constitution of 1848 for Naples, and that the Neapolitan army is being raised in it to come into operation.

Kossuth has, it is said, written an energetic letter to Garibaldi, pointing out the disastrous tendency of his pique against Cavour, and urging him by all the sacred sympathies they both hold in common to come from Naples to the assistance of an insane and impracticable faction.

The Neapolitan Ministry has tendered its resignation. It is said that Signor Conforti has been intrusted with the formation of a new Ministry.

According to advices received from Gaeta, the Official Journal of that place had published decrees constituting a Ministry under the presidency of Spinelli, and ordering a state of siege to be proclaimed in all provinces where the revolutionary struggle exists. Another decree cashiered all the officers of the marine as guilty of high treason, with the exception of those belonging to the Partenope, who had come to Gaeta. The same journal had also published proclamations addressed to the people of Capua and the adjacent districts to remain firm against the order of things established by Garibaldi. A decree had been issued by the King exiling three Bishops.

SICILY.

On the 17th inst. Garibaldi paid an unexpected visit to Palermo. He arrived there on board the Elettrique, a Neapolitan steamer, and immediately proceeded to the palace, passing through the streets of Toledo, where he was at once recognised by the crowd. The General, followed by the people, subsequently assembled in immense numbers, appeared upon the balcony, and addressed the multitude. Garibaldi afterwards held a review, and embarked again at dusk.

The following proclamation has been issued by Garibaldi to the inhabitants of Palermo :—

The people of Palermo, who showed so fear in the face of those who bombarded their city, have allowed themselves recently equally regardless of fear in face of corrupt men, who want to beat them astray.

Every fault must be expiated, and the people of any one was more fervent than whoever that the repentance should be full; but they could not, and will not, repent, and they replied like a people who feels its own dignity, and followed by the people in solemn assembled and unanimous language which I approved upon the balcony, and addressed the multitude. Garibaldi afterwards held a review, and embarked again at dusk.

The following proclamation has been issued by Garibaldi to the inhabitants of Palermo :—

The people of Palermo, who showed so fear in the face of those who bombarded their city, have allowed themselves recently equally regardless of fear in face of corrupt men, who want to beat them astray.

Every fault must be expiated, and the people of any one was more fervent than whoever that the repentance should be full; but they could not, and will not, repent, and they replied like a people who feels its own dignity, and followed by the people in solemn assembled and unanimous language which I approved upon the balcony, and addressed the multitude.

Italy and Victor Emmanuel!"

The following proclamation he will proclaim the kingdom of Italy, and there only will be sanctified the great family bond between freemen and those who are still slaves of the foreigner.

At Palermo annexation was demanded, that I might not pass the Straits; at Naples I was asked to remain, that I may not cross the Volturno. But so long as there are chains to be broken in Italy I will follow my course or bury my bones there.

I leave you Medici as pro-Dictator, and certainly he will show himself worthy of you and of Italy. I have yet to thank you, as well as the brave national militia, for the faith you have placed in me and in the destinies of our country. GARIBALDI.

Palermo, September 17, 1860.

The Patrie of Monday evening states that 5000 Piedmontese troops are ordered to Sicily for the restoration of public order, and to give effect to the wish of all sensible men there, for the immediate annexation of the island to the united kingdom of Italy.

THE PAPAL STATES.

The interest of the campaign in the Roman States centres at present in the citadel of Ancona, of which place we give an Engraving on page 296. It is there that the final and decisive struggle will soon take place of which the battle at Castelfidardo was the prelude; and, according to appearances, the issue of the struggle will soon be seen. The commander against the fortress and its approaches commenced at midnight of the 22nd; the fleet participated at a later hour. It is announced that the siege batteries of General Lamoricière have made a breach in the south side of the walls of the town, and that consequently the assault will be given very soon. This news bears date the 22nd of September. The fire was opened on the 18th against the fortress by six frigates—the Maria Adelaida, Vittor Emanuele, the Carlo Alberto, the Governolo, the Governolo, and the Constitucione. It is true that, after a bombardment of nine hours, which was vigorously replied to by the citadel, Admiral Persano was informed that General Cialdini was not yet ready for the assault, ceased firing, to spare the city as much as possible. Doubtless, the bombardment has been resumed, but the Corriere Mercantile, which publishes these details, does not mention how long the suspension lasted. The advices from Turin do not mention the opening of a breach. It will be seen, however, that the siege artillery had been landed before Ancona. Fanti is to have come up to Lamoricière to aid in the attack. The columns have therefore effected a junction, and, aided by the fleet, they ought to make short work of the fortress and town. The 9th and the brigade of Bologna and the battalions of the 32nd and 25th Regiments of Bersaglieri took by assault two of the forts of Ancona—namely, forts Palago and Pulito.

A telegram from Perugia on Monday states :—"The column of General Mazza and the Cannoneri of the Tiber have occupied Castellana and occupied the fortress; sixty of the garrison were made prisoners. Captain Nunzi Dacci has arrived at Spoleto. He will occupy Cerneto this evening, the French having left that town, and taken the road to Civita Vecchia. Great enthusiasm prevails among the population."

By an official despatch from Rimini on Tuesday we learn that after some hours' firing the garrison of the fortress of Pesaro had surrendered at discretion. The Sardinian troops occupied the fortress yesterday at noon. Several officers and soldiers of the garrison had previously deserted themselves in the attack. The flying columns commanded by Brigione have made 500 other prisoners.

The official journal at Rome publishes the note of Cardinal Antonelli, claiming the assistance of the Catholic Powers against Sardinia.

AUSTRIA.

There have been very animated debates in the Reichsrath, on such stirring subjects as the press tax, the liberty of the press, Provincial Governments, and, above all, Government expenditure. There appears to have been no dearth of liberty of speech, and the most vital of the subjects was relegated to each time as the Constitution is discussed.

The official Gazette of Vienna announces the appointment of the Lieutenant-General uncressing the military patrols, and limiting the use of arms for the suppression of revolutionary attempts.

The Austrian war-steamers in the Neapolitan waters have been ordered to return to Trieste, as the Austrian Government, on account of the offer made by the King of Naples to grant a Constitution, has, with an auxiliary corps against Venetia, can no longer offer hospitality to his Majesty.

THE EAST.

The Sultan has ordered the Grand Vizier to continue his journey in the provinces, in order to calm the excitement which prevails in Bosnia and the Herzegovina.

The Journal de Constantinople denies that there is any agitation in Servia, and states that Syria is now tranquil; but that, as the Greek Consul at Beyrout had asserted that massacres were threatened at St. Jean d'Acre, two war-vessels had been sent thither, under the commanders of which had declared that they would open fire on the town upon the slightest attempt being made to create disturbances.

Great misery and mortality prevail at Constantinople.

The Public Treasury has ordered expenses to be interest due on public securities. An immediate rise of 14 per cent in the exchange on London took place.

THE EXECUTIONS AT DAMASCUS.

A letter from Damascus of the 22nd of August says :—"The day before yesterday our town was, for the second time in an interval of two months, thrown into mourning. All the shops closed, and one heard only the lamentations of women and children, who asked God for their husbands and fathers, who had been executed. Public justice has had its way, and 167 persons have expiated their crimes against the Christians, and have with their blood washed out the dishonour their hands had brought upon the Ottoman Sovereign, their Government, and their religion. Fifty-seven of the condemned, amongst whom were some of the highest personages in the Druse tribe, remaining 110, consisting of Bashi-Bazouks and auxiliaries, were shot. Their sentence was executed about eight o'clock (Turkish time), in front of the Gouvik Meidan. Two of them were of a strong temper, but were cut to pieces by the cavalry; another was not hit by a ball, but feigned dead, he also was killed by a soldier as soon as he was discovered to be alive."

UNITED STATES.

The Mayor of Washington has received a letter to the Duke of Newcastle, inclosing a resolution of the Board of Aldermen and Councilmen, tendering to the Prince of Wales and his suite the hospitalities of the city.

The Maine State elections for the state officers and members of Congress have resulted in the triumph of the Republican ticket, Washburne, their candidate for Governor, being elected by a large majority.

The progress of Senator Seward from Detroit to Lansing, Michigan, which place he reached on the 7th, was one continued ovation, the people turning out in great numbers to see the great party leader. At Lansing the demonstrations of welcome were most enthusiastic, delegations having passed from all the counties of the state to do unprecedented numbers. The immense crowd was addressed by Mr. Seward, General Nye, and others. Mr. Seward proceeded to Jackson the same evening.

The Breckinridge State Central Committee met at the Astor House on the 7th, and appointed a sub-committee to confer with the sub-committee appointed by the Douglas State Committee, and try to negotiate a union between the two parties; but, after holding two conferences, the committee were unable to agree on the terms of coalition, and further negotiations were postponed to next morning.

Senator Douglas reached Harrisburg on the 7th, and received with demonstrations similar to those which have greeted him everywhere. He addressed a large crowd in the evening. The programme of his future movements embraces a number of prominent places in the west. It was understood, also, that he had received very pressing invitation to again visit the south, and to Charleston, Missouri, being signed by fifty prominent citizens.

According to the Washington correspondence of the New York Times, the United States' Government had given its assent and cooperation to the intended republican movement in Mexico, and to Spain in the affairs of Mexico, and Mr. M'Lean had received instructions to that effect.

Professor Lowe had again failed in inflating his balloon in which he intends to voyage to Europe. He intends to start at the first favourable opportunity.

CHINA.

We have little intelligence from Shanghai to August 2. The rebels have taken Hankien City, in the silk district. Gordon, Captain Dowell Wetherell, undertook to recapture Singapo. He failed in the attempt and was wounded. The allies left for Pehtsi to agree on the terms they were to take the forts before treating with the Chinese. The French and the general division are landing simultaneously at Pehtang. A severe engagement has taken place with pirates, 200 were slain, and two European leaders captured.

Don Juan de Bourbon, who still seems to think that he has inherited the pretensions to the Spanish throne with his brother, the Count of Montemolin, renounced by whom is captivity and reclaimed when at liberty, has published a letter or a manifesto, in which he makes the strongest professions of his attachment to liberty of all kinds, and even of his respect for universal suffrage.

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams were received through Mr. Reuter's office yesterday (Friday) :—

PARIS, Thursday.—The Marquis de Moustier and the Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne, diplomatic representatives of France at Vienna and Berlin, who are now on Paris, the bears of absence, will not return to their posts until after the interview at Warsaw.

THE WAR IN ITALY.—VIENNA, Thursday Evening.—The Emperor Francis Joseph and the Prince Regent of Prussia will arrive at the same time in Warsaw, where they will stay three days.

PARIS, Friday Morning.—Paris, Thursday Evening.—The Patrie says :—"The siege operations before Ancona are being actively carried on. The advanced works of General Lamoricière are in Bezezione, several miles from Rome. These troops were to be encamped before the walls of Rome."

TURIN, Thursday.—Official Despatch.—"The Sardinian troops have taken the Belle Grate fort of Ancona. The hospital has been destroyed. General Cialdini, with the Italian army, has taken up a position in the suburb of the Porta Pia. Notwithstanding the desperate resistance of the garrison, the bombardment of the citadel continued on. The Sardinian losses have been slight. Many soldiers of the Papal army have been taken prisoners."

PARIS, Friday Morning.—The Patrie denies the reported departure of the Pope from Rome. The same journal also says :—"The military division of Lyons will proceed immediately to the formation of a corps of occupation."

ROME, Sept. 24.—General Goyon, on the demand of Mgr. Merode, has ordered the reoccupation of Cornetto by French soldiers. General Goyon has also placed outposts two miles beyond Rome. The Cardinals have been requested to be present at the Council of the Pope. The majority is said to have pronounced itself in favour of the departure of the Pope, but that the question should be deferred.

NAPLES, Sept. 25, via Marseilles.—Liborio Romano's cabinet has tendered its resignation on account of the preponderance of Bertani. Signor Conforti will form a Ministry. Bertani has appointed amongst the members of which it is said will include Ferrigni, Mignogna, and Mancini. The Ministry will be formed to-morrow (Tuesday).

HUNGARY.—Pesth, Wednesday.—An ordinance of the Commander-in-Chief of the Hungarian Army announcement of the lectures at the University of Pesth for an indefinite period.

ITALY.—Berlin, Thursday.—According to reliable information Austria intends to withdraw from Italy, but only when matters have acquiesced. The remainder of the Port of Baia, near Naples, still resists, and threatens to blow up the fortress. The soldiers of the King of Naples are said to have behaved splendidly. Admiral Sir W. Parker, Consul under the pretence that there was a connivance between him and Garibaldi. The Admiral was absent at the time.

Marseilles, Friday.—Letters from Naples to the 25th inst. assert that the Bavarian brigade of the King's troops had completely beaten the Anglo-Hungarian legion, because of its superior force.

LITERATURE.

MODERN PAINTERS. Volume V. Completing the Work. By JOHN RUSKIN, M.A. Smith, Elder, and Co.

We are so grateful for the announcement that the ponderous volume before us completes this long-protracted work that we are little disposed to quarrel with the author for the delay which has occurred in its production. Mr. Ruskin, however, is conscious of his apparent dilatoriness himself, and thinks it necessary to say something by way of apology. "The disproportion between the length of time occupied in the preparation of this volume," he says, "and the slightness of the apparent result is so vexatious to me, and must seem so strange to the reader that he will perhaps bear with my stating some of the matters which have employed or interrupted me between 1855 and 1860." We need not go into the details of these multifarious interruptions and onerous occupations, the relation of which is thus introduced. We quote the sentence merely as an illustration of a peculiarity we have through a long course of observation remarked in Mr. Ruskin, and which seems to be the ruling principle of all his performances—namely, a bold repudiation of all logical restraint, and which is equally observable in the construction of a sentence as in the treatment of an argument. It must be obvious to all who know the meaning of words that Mr. Ruskin intends the very converse of what he states, and that, as far from his apprehending the existence of "disproportion between the length of time occupied in the preparation of this volume and the slightness of the apparent result," he means a "disproportion, &c., and the bulk or importance of the result—for the word "apparent," as it seems to us, may be dispensed with.

Nevertheless, this subject, "the apparent result," has at length been given to the world, and the duty devolves upon us now for the fifth time to investigate the mysteries of Ruskinism, and to attempt to follow it in its rather erratic progress. Let us not pretend to underrate the importance of the subject. There is no denying the fact that Ruskinism is an institution, and Mr. Ruskin one of the marvels of the age. He is marvellous in himself—marvellous as regards his influence in the social world of taste; while the inference to be inevitably drawn as to the intellectual capacity of the latter is most marvellous of all. Yet there is nothing extraordinary or incredible in the affair when we come to consider other marvels which are going on around us. Mr. Ruskin, in his way, is not unworthy of his generation—a generation which has invented clairvoyance, spirit-rapping, and Mormonism, which builds a costly tabernacle for a Spurgeon, and which accepts a Rochdak as the impersonation of wisdom and patriotism, and a Bright as the embodiment and measure of the statesmanlike capacity of the country.

Nor let any inference be drawn from all this that we look upon Mr. Ruskin as an impostor—malo, a humbug. On the contrary, we believe him to be perfectly sincere—sincere in his high estimation of himself and in his contempt for the opinion of all the rest of the world; sincere in his conviction that nobody knows anything about art, be it more or less, but himself, and that his mission is to give the law upon the subject to all comers; and—a prerogative inherent in law-giving—that he has a right to change his own opinions and the opinions of all who follow him as often and as capriciously as he thinks proper. We believe, also, that his numerous readers and disciples—not so numerous, we apprehend, as they once were—put implicit faith in him, accept reverently all that he vouchsafes to communicate to them, and note the less so because, too generally, what he propounds is wrapped in a flood and mist of words, which ordinary perceptions cannot hope to pierce, and enforced by arguments which scrupulously baffle all known rules of logical treatment. One thing, at least, may be said of Mr. Ruskin, his teachings, and his disciples, which, if not altogether satisfactory as regards results actually attained, is encouraging, as indicating ground to work upon for the future. The avidity with which his voluminous effusions have been received indicates a strong desire on the part of the public to know something about art; and, if the deference which has been paid to his dicta but proves how very much such education is still wanted amongst us, there is consolation, at least, in the reflection that the taste and aptitude for it exist, which may one day, in proper hands, be satisfactorily cultivated and turned to profitable account.

From what we have said above it may be judged that, looking upon Mr. Ruskin as a sincere and conscientious man, we believe that he has done all that he has done to the best of his ability, and in the firm conviction that he was rendering a great service to his fellow-men. Indeed, he assures us that the work before us, which he has been seventeen years completing, "has not been written for fame, or for money, or for conscience' sake, but of necessity." He wrote because he could not help it. he was impelled by an irresistible impulse which left him no moral control over his actions. "I knew not," he says, "how little or how much might come of the business, or whether I was fit for it." The cacoethes scribendi was on him, and he wrote whatever came uppermost, not knowing exactly what it meant or what it was worth; and what he wrote was printed, not because any publisher could be found to pay him for it in the usual way, but because he could himself afford to stand the risk of the printer's bill. To proceed further with Mr. Ruskin's account of himself and his qualifications for the task which "necessity" thus thrust upon him. He tells us:—

THE REVOLUTION IN NAPLES.—STREET SCENE IN NAPLES THE DAY AFTER THE ARRIVAL OF GARIBALDI.—FROM A SKETCH BY T. NAST.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 296.

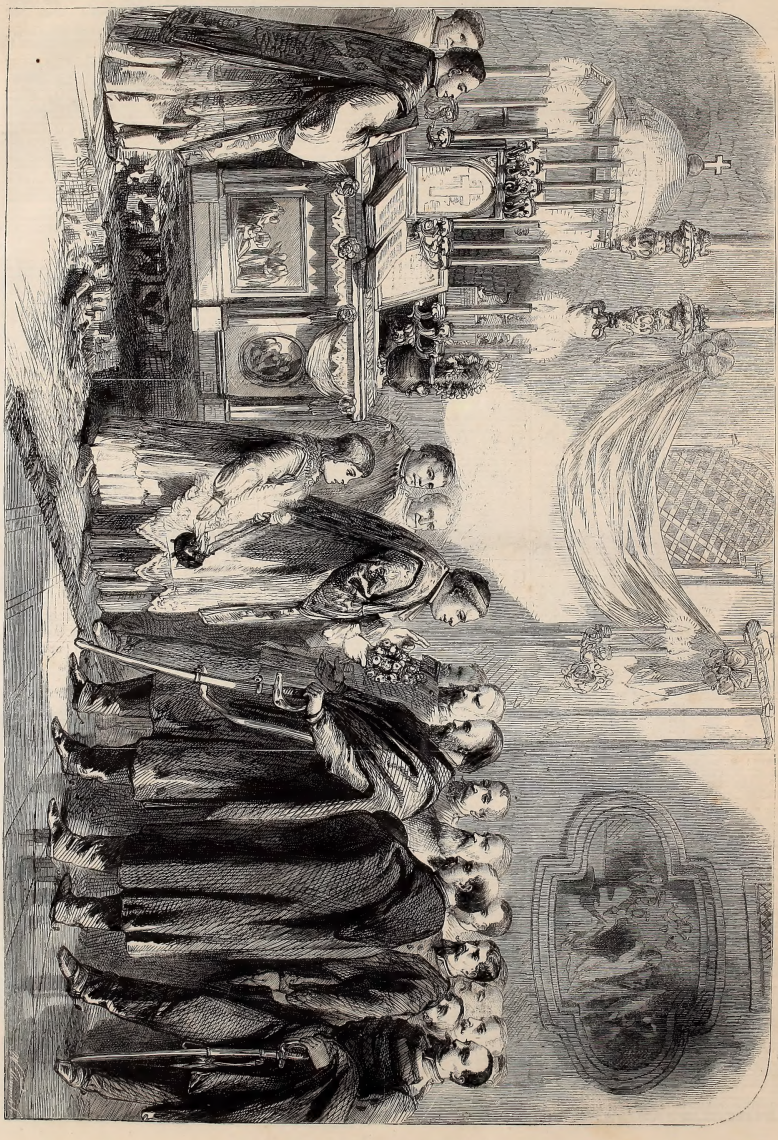
The first volume was the expansion of a reply to a magazine article, and was not begun because I then thought myself qualified to write a systematic treatise on Art, but because I at least knew, and knew it to be demonstrable, that Turner was right and true, and that his critics were wrong, false, and base.

Rather strong language, this; but let it pass. Suffice it that "An Oxford Graduate," fresh from his humanities, first discovered, he "at least knew," the transcendent merits of Turner, heretofore basely denied or under-estimated by the critics, and came prepared to defend them against all the world. Unfortunately, in that bold champion's view of the case, to establish the merit of Turner it became necessary to deny merit in any of the great landscape-painters—Claude, Salvator Rosa, Poussin, Cuyp, Berghem, &c.—who had preceded him; and this, regardless of consequences, he at once proceeded to do, heaping ridicule plentifully upon them and all who could see anything to admire in them. Nor in thus running counter to the mass of hitherto received opinions did he restrict himself to landscape-painters. The greatest names of the greatest age in historical painting—names held in reverence by men of education and mature judgment in all succeeding ages, Leonardo da Vinci, Michael Angelo, Raphael, Correggio, Titian, &c., were all pulled down from their pedestals, their pretensions rudely scrutinised—dashed with ribald jokes or coarse revilings, whilst one or two "modern painters"—Holman Hunt, Millais, &c., by name—who had been fortunate enough to come to the exact level of the great reformer's comprehension, were pointed to as worthy of engrossing the world's admiration and praise.

Did it never occur to Mr. Ruskin, when he ventured thus to assume the power of judgment over the whole range of art, that the task he undertook was one which called for an amount of education, besides natural endowments, which should have qualified the possessor, if he thought proper, "to write a systematic treatise on art;" and that when, "having engaged seriously" in this matter, he, "before writing the second volume," went "to study in Italy," he went a little too late? With astonishing complacency, however, he admits that in the course of the said subsequent visits to Italy (always "to study") he found occasion to reject or modify many of the opinions he had previously expressed very strongly in print. He tells us, for instance, that before this course of study he "had chiefly delighted in northern art, beginning, when a mere boy, with Rubens and Rembrandt," which is about as rational as it would be to talk of Italian art headed by Guido and Carlo Maratti. This profound and comprehensive northern inspiration, however, did not prevail long; for, as he next tells us, "the strong reaction from the influence of Rubens threw me at first too far under that of Angelico and Raphael, and, which was the worst harm that came of the Rubens influence, blinded me long to the deepest qualities of Venetian art, which the reader may see by expressions occurring not only in the second, but even in the third and fourth volumes, I thought, however powerful, yet partly luxurious and sensual, until I was led into the final inquiries above related." And again:—"The reader will, perhaps, on this ground forgive the strong expressions of admiration for Rubens, which to my great regret, occur in the first volume." And even so late as the winter of 1858, "with much consternation but more delight, I found that I had never got to the root of the moral powers of the Venetians, and that they needed still another and a very stern course of study. There was nothing for it but to give up the book for that year. The winter was spent mainly in trying to get at the mind of Tintoret—that a light winter's task of which the issue being in many ways very unexpected to me (the reader will find it partly told towards the close of this volume) necessitated my going to the spring to Berlin," &c.

And so he went on learning and unlearning, receiving impressions one day to be discarded the next, and with a complacency which is really nothing short of marvellous, promulgating each newly-accepted impression to the public as a discovery of incalculable value and undoubted authenticity. And now, at the close of this strange proceeding, when he calmly surveys the patchwork and discordant sesdnum, he pronounces it none the worse for its incongruous character:—



Those oscillations of temper and progressions of discovery, extending over a period of seventeen years, ought not to diminish the reader's confidence in the book. Let him be assured of this, that unless important changes are occurring in his opinions continually all his life long, not one of those opinions can be in any questionable subject true. All true opinions are living, and show their life by being capable of nourishment, therefore of change. But their chance is that of the tree—not of the cloud.

What is meant by the "cloud" allegory the author does not explain, nor do we pretend to understand, but the "tree" figure is thus dimly elaborated:—

So that as the work changed like a tree, it was also rooted like a tree—not where it would, but where need was; on which, if any fruit grew such as you like you are welcome to gather it without thanks, and so far as it is poor or bitter, it will be your justice to refuse it without reviling.

All which we humbly submit to be arrant nonsense. A tree is known by its fruit, and you cannot gather sweet fruit and bitter fruit, true fruit and false fruit, from the same stem. The changes which take place at successive periods in the life of a tree are those naturally incidental to growth and progress, and are never inconsistent with themselves or with "tree truth." On the other hand, the changes in Mr. Ruskin have been those incidental to a person of ignorant conceit, venturing without guide or instructor upon unknown paths, where he is arrested at every turn by novel appearances or suggestions, the true import of which, intrinsically and relatively with others, he has not the capacity fully to appreciate, and which may have unprepared judgment alternately into each extreme of error. Having perhaps, some lurking misgivings as to the balance which may one day be struck between the true and the false, the bitter and the sweet, in his writings, Mr. Ruskin says:—"Had I wished for future fame, I should have written one volume, not five;" which we would venture to amend by suggesting that, leaving future fame alone, had he cared to escape present and enduring obloquy and ridicule, he would have written none at all, or at least would have deferred publishing until he had got up his subject in some kind of consistency and completeness. In an economical point of view he has also his doubts; for "in this wealth-producing country seventeen years' labour could hardly have been employed with less chance of equivalent return," and a little further on, "It seems to me, and seemed always probable, that I might have done much more good in some other way." The last suggestion we are inclined to acquiesce in. And, after all, there is comfort—negative comfort—even in the maxim "ne sutor ultra crepidam;" and if Mr. Ruskin has wasted seventeen of the best years of his life in a pursuit for which he was wholly unqualified, there is no reason why he may not yet make up for lost time by industrious application to some vocation for which he may be gifted with capacity.

The preceding observations have reference to general ideas suggested by the author's preface: in a concluding article we shall notice some of the points in the text of this volume.

THE REVOLUTION IN NAPLES—GARIBALDI AT THE SHRINE OF THE VIRGIN OF PIEDIGROTTA ON THE 8TH INST.—FROM A SKETCH BY T. NAST.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 285.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Sept. 30.—17th Sunday after Trinity. Full moon, 0h. 44m. afternoon.
MONDAY, " 1.—Remigius. Pheasant-shooting begins.
TUESDAY, 2.—Aragu died, 1853.
WEDNESDAY, " 3.—Charles conquered, 1648.
THURSDAY, " 4.—Bishop Heber died, 1833.
FRIDAY, " 5.—New York Crystal Palace destroyed, 1858.
SATURDAY, " 6.—St. Faith. Peace with American proclaimed, 1815.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 6, 1860.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.	M. h. m.
30 11 11	1 11 56	2 12 41	3 1 26	4 2 11	5 2 56	6 3 41

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Miss Amy Sedgwick every Evening in the new Comedy—Monday, October 1, and during the Week, to commence with LOVE AND JEALOUSY. After which, the Lyceum Drama, in Four Acts, entitled SIN AND THE WORLD. After which, BOOTS AT HOLYWELL STREET. Miss Amy Sedgwick, Mr. Buckstone, Mr. Compton, Mr. Howe, and Mr. Chippendale. LAST NIGHT BUT FOUR OF MR. CHARLES DICKENS'S READINGS AT HANOVER SQUARE ROOMS, THIS EVENING, Thursday, September 27, at Eight o'clock. Tickets, Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Unreserved Seats, 5s. Mr. Dickens will read "The Trial from Pickwick" and "The Poor Relation." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Chimes." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Cricket on the Hearth." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Battle of Life." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Haunted Man." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Holly-Tree Inn." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Seven Poor Travellers." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Wreck of the Golden Mary." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Perils of Certain English Prisoners." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Somebody's Luggage." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Mrs. Lirriper's Lodgings." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Mrs. Lirriper's Legacy." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "No Thoroughfare." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Lamplighter." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Uncommercial Traveller." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Reprinted Pieces." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Mudfog Papers." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Sketches by Boz." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Pickwick Papers." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Oliver Twist." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Nicholas Nickleby." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Martin Chuzzlewit." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Dombey and Son." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "David Copperfield." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Bleak House." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Hard Times." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Little Dorrit." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "A Tale of Two Cities." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Great Expectations." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Our Mutual Friend." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "The Old Curiosity Shop." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Barnaby Rudge." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "American Notes." Mr. Dickens will also read, for the last time, his Christmas Story, "Pictures from Italy public dinner, took a different course—had nothing to say about Garibaldi, but adhered to agricultural-society topics with a pertinacity which makes his speech the dullest reading that has lately come in our way. Mr. Whalley, to be sure, has tried to get up a little sensation on behalf of some of the electors of his neighbourhood whom it has been sought to disfranchise in the regular manner, by means of objections before the revising barrister; but he does not seem to have made much capital out of the business, or out of a spirited communication of Popery which he ingeniously contrived to bracket with the electoral lists. Such things only tend to show how perfectly stagnant, for the hour, is the national mind upon political matters. The prospects of the half-garrisoned harvest, again interfered with by distressing weather, furnish perhaps the only theme on which people descant with earnestness.

Social science, or whatever array of heterogeneous subjects pass under that name, is being honoured at Glasgow, where Lord Brougham has been engaged, if not in throwing any new light upon science itself, at least in showing that age has as yet done nothing towards dimming his own faculties. His power of marshalling facts, and his marvellous resources of language, have seldom been more finely exhibited than at the Glasgow meeting. The warm and cordial tributes which the leading men of Scotland, of all parties, have borne to Lord Brougham's unequalled gifts do honour to those who have uttered them so ungrudgingly. We say this claiming Lord Brougham as an Englishman and an English Lord.

Mystic hints continue to be given upon the subject of the Road murder, and we are perpetually told that facts of a very significant character have transpired. But we are inclined to think that the clue to the labyrinth has yet to be discovered. It is so far satisfactory that every effort is being made to hit upon this clue. Most people have formed some sort of their own in relation to the crime, but it is probable that these theories arise rather from a natural impatience of uncertainty than from a careful examination of such evidence as is before us. We must be content to wait events: it is far from unusual in such cases that when the question has ceased to be popular, and there is the most inclination to abandon it, a trace is suddenly discovered, and the culprit is hunted down. In the case of the Stepney murder, in itself without any interest resulting from the character of the victim, there is little reason to doubt that even in one of those fits of folly which are frequently found in connection with crime, the guilty person has assisted justice by a device for implicating an innocent man. The missing links in the chain are apparently being rapidly supplied with fatal skill, and the destroyer of the wretched Reed, Mr. Ingram's woman of Stepney will ere long receive murderers' sentence.

We regret to say that the record of the week is marked by a large number of casualties. Several suicides have occurred, and fresh murders have been added to the history of every-day guilt. There have also been many terrible deaths by fire and accident. But the most painful case in England has been one in the manufacturing districts, where an immense gathering of the lower class had taken place on the occasion of some fireworks, and, on the return of the crowd through a bad, sloping part of the way, some of the bridges over which the crowd and the persons being forced upon them by the hurrying numbers behind, a lamentable catastrophe followed. Several poor little children became victims to the heedlessness and brutality of their elders, and were trampled to death, and some adults also perished. The casualty is a very sad one, but we presume such things must be accepted as among the conditions of the modern custom of assembling monster meetings for recreation, excursions, and the like. A very singular case is recorded in the Manchester papers of the fall of an iron bridge covered with passengers, all of whom, with a single exception, escaped without loss of life.

THE COURT.

VISIT OF THE QUEEN TO GERMANY.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort, with the Princess Alice, embarked at Gravesend in the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert at half-past five o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Her Majesty was attended by Colonel Bouverie (Lord Lieutenant of the county of Kent) and Commodore Superintendent the Hon. James Drummond, and the Major and Corporation of Gravesend. The Royal yacht left the pier at a quarter before six o'clock. The following vessels accompanied her: the Royal yacht Fairy, Black Eagle, Rosa, and the Trinity yacht Irene, which had on board the Deputy Master, Captain Digby Murray, Hon. Captain Cumming; Firebrand, Commander Bruce, bearer of the Trinity Standard; and the Salamander steam-tug, with the pilot-vessel and a number of the Scholars.

The Royal squadron anchored for the night at the Nore, the darkness rendering it inadvisable to proceed further. The yacht got under weigh at five o'clock on Sunday morning; and, after an unusually fine and rapid passage, passed off Flushing at half-past one o'clock. The Royal yacht was saluted by the forts at Flushing, and the English men-of-war manned yards and also saluted. The Prince of Orange, with his staff, in state rendered it necessary to slacken the speed of the yacht, and she proceeded slowly up the mouth of the river, and at a quarter to three o'clock came to anchor as the Royal yacht anchored at Antwerp the British Consul came on board to welcome her Majesty's arrival. In attendance on her Majesty on board the Victoria and Albert were Lady Churchill, Lady in Waiting; the Hon. Mrs. Bruce, Maid of Honour; Colonel Grey, Equerry in Waiting; Major-General the Hon. C. Grey and Colonel Ponsonby, Equerries in Waiting; Colonel Hon. Sir C. Phipps, Groom in Waiting.

On Monday morning, at half-past seven o'clock, the King of the Belgians, accompanied by the Duke of Brabant, the Duke of Saxe-Cobourg, and the Count of Flanders, proceeded in his Majesty's barge on board the Victoria and Albert. They were received by the Queen and the Prince Consort and the Princess Alice, and afterwards the Royal party entered the barge of the King and went on shore, landing at the quay, where a guard of honour was drawn up. Their Majesties were conveyed, together with the attendants upon their Majesties, in the carriages of the King of the Belgians, through the streets of Antwerp to the Station. The King and the Belgian Royal family accompanied the Queen and Prince to Verviers, where they were received by Belgian Royalty in waiting and unexpected intelligence of the death, at seven o'clock on that morning, at Laeken, of the Duchess Dowager of Saxe-Cobourg-Gotha, mother of the Prince Consort.

At Aix-la-Chapelle the Prince Regent of Prussia received her Majesty at the station. Count Royal Highness, together with his brother, Prince Charles, accompanied the Queen and her family as far as Cologne. There the Prince Royal Highness left to attend upon her Majesty to Hanover. Lord Howard de Walden, her Majesty's Minister at Dresden, travelled in her Majesty's suite from Antwerp to Verviers, where Lord Bloomfield, her Majesty's Minister at Berlin, awaited her Majesty's arrival. Sir Alexander Malet was in attendance from Mayence to Frankfort, to receive her Majesty's commands; and the British Consuls at the different towns upon Her route paid their respects to her Majesty.

At Frankfort the Princess of Prussia, with their Royal Highnesses the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden, received her Majesty, and afterwards dined in private with her Majesty, the Prince Consort, and Princess Alice. Prince George of Saxony called to pay his respects and to offer to the Queen on behalf of his Majesty the King of Saxony.

On Tuesday morning the Queen proceeded to Coburg, where her Majesty and the Prince Consort will live in strict retirement.

DEATH OF MR. HERBERT INGRAM, M.P. FOR BOSTON.

WITH a trembling hand and sorrowing heart we announce the death of Mr. Herbert Ingram, M.P., the founder and sole proprietor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, who, together with his eldest son, Herbert, perished on Lake Michigan in the lamentable disaster on the 8th inst. Exhausted by the fatigues of business and the labours of a long Parliamentary session, Mr. Ingram had resolved during the recess to pay a visit to the American continent, and there to seek, in company with his son, a brave and intelligent boy of fifteen, that relaxation he so much needed. They sailed from Liverpool in the North American on the 9th of August, and landed at Quebec in time to witness, after he had traversed the Lower St. Lawrence, the closing of the last rivet of the Victoria Bridge at Montreal by the Prince of Wales. It was here Mr. Ingram took leave of the party of friends who, on his landing, had attended him, stating that he "wished to be more quiet," and went on to the Falls of Niagara, where he staid some days, enjoying the grandeur of the scenery around him with the keenest appreciation. In one of the many characteristic letters received from him he says :—"Thank God, I have been to see the Falls of Niagara. The contemplation of them seems to exalt while it soothes me; and amidst these wonders of the creation I forget the realities and annoyances of life." From Niagara Mr. Ingram proceeded to Chicago, whence he had first proposed to travel across the Prairies, and to follow the Mississippi to New Orleans, and thence to New York, but more especially to Boston, which old associations of history had determined him to make the conclusion of his sojourn in the United States. In the last letter received from him, and dated Chicago, September 7, he states, however, that he had decided to visit Lake Superior, and to prolong his stay in America, proposing to return to England about the end of October. He left Detroit at midnight on the 7th of September, accompanied by his son;—and our readers know the sad sequel to the story. It should, however, be added that his body was washed ashore about sixteen miles from Chicago, and just at the time that one of his friends, Mr. Haywood, had arrived at the spot. Every effort was used to restore life, but in vain. Mr. Hayward states, in a most feeling letter, that Mr. Ingram's countenance in death "was perfectly calm and peaceful."

Herbert Ingram was in the forty-ninth year of his age. He was born at Boston, in Lincolnshire, and began an active career, at eleven years of age, as a printer, and both as apprentice and compositor he there did many a good, hard, day's work. He thus endeavoured to assist in the support of his family, which, old and highly respected, had enjoyed comparative riches. To the interests of Boston, as his native town, he devoted throughout life much of the labour of his indefatigable nature. The pure water which its citizens drink—the gas which lights them—the railway, recently opened, that connects the town with the great railway district of England—and many other "works which now remain," bear the impress of his fostering hand and kindly care. At Boston, as many of his friends are aware, he had intended to spend the evening of his days, resting from his many labours on the property at Swineshead Abbey. Boston was justly proud of him, and, through the many phases of his eventful life recognised his merits, and unceasingly gave him its confidence. Three times successively he returned as its representative to Parliament, and always by majorities most decisive and unmistakable.

His remains, which are expected to arrive in England in a few days, will be interred at Boston.

Peace to his ashes! He is worthy well so excellent a man—a kind husband, an indulgent parent, a faithful friend, and a good citizen!

As the founder of this Newspaper he originated another era in the diffusion of knowledge and in the popularisation and promotion of art. He introduced a new means of improved education,—a novel machinery, by which to chronicle, in pictures, as well as by description, past as it passes, the history of the world. This Paper was the object of his utmost care and greatest pride. Only yesterday we found preserved amongst his most valued documents a circle, inscribed by his own hand, apparently but a short while before the left England :

"First Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—II. L."

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will for the future be conducted on the principles which it has always advocated, and in the manner which its founder adopted and approved. The Journal will continue in the care of those he loved and selected, and in whom he had long placed the highest confidence. These will, of course, have the able assistance of the authors and artists who have conduced so much to the popularity of the Paper. It will be carried on for the benefit of his family (his widow being sole proprietor); and every endeavour may be relied upon to ensure a continuance of that support for which the late Mr. Ingram laboured so ardently and so successfully. The public has, indeed, already offered some assurance of this in the numerous expressions of condolence and sympathy his mourning family have received both from this country and from America.

LOSS OF THE "LADY ELGIN" ON LAKE MICHIGAN.

LATE on the evening of Friday, the 7th inst., the Lady Elgin left Chicago with four hundred persons on board, bound on an excursion up Lakes Michigan and Superior. The wind blew hard from the north-east, and a heavy sea was running. But the party was a happy one. There were music and dancing in the saloon, and "all went merry as a marriage-bell;" when, shortly after two on the morning of the 8th, there came a sudden shock. The schooner Augusta, making eleven knots an hour, came down on the doomed ship, struck her on the midships gangway, and then, having her sails set, and the wind blowing freshly, drifted off in the darkness.

In half an hour the steamer sank in three hundred feet of water; and of the four hundred persons on board only about a hundred were saved. Amongst the drowned are Mr. Herbert Ingram, the proprietor of this Journal, and his eldest son.

A clerk of the ill-fated vessel states :—

"Instantly after the crash of collision the music and dancing ceased, and the steamer soon hailed an hour after. Passing through the cabins, I saw the ladies in great trouble and alarm. There was no cry, no shriek on board—no sound of any kind but that of the escaping steam and surging waves. A boat was immediately lowered for examining the hole, which soon made itself known; but there was only two cents to row it with, and, unfortunately, at that moment some one had taken possession of one of them, and the other was not expected; consequently, on reaching the larboard wheel once, whereas the leak was, but were soon driven from it by the fury of the waves, and washed about in the wake of the vessel. There were only two other boats on board, the other two had sunk previously. From her, all of whom were saved. The other boat took eight persons, but only half that number reached land alive, the other four being drowned on the way. The Augusta herself was in a sinking state through the leak but extinguished the fires before I left the steamer, and the engines had ceased working. The schooner provided relief was lowered, and in such a direction as to keep the boats, bodies of the drowned, and fragments of the wreck up the lake, and not to drift out into Lake Michigan, which is the property of Wiseko. I watched I could see, from the beach to which I was drifted, fragments of wreck and the dead lounge floating about with the waves, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars :—

A short time after this the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think about fifteen miles from the shore—the cause of the leak was done immediately leaving the hurricane-deck floating. A great portion of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the boat went down. Most of them jumped off very soon, thinking that would sink. The hurricane-deck soon regained its level. There were twenty-five on the deck at the time in which I was. The captain was on this. There were some military from Milwaukee, and six or seven ladies. The whole four boats went off with a number on each. We held cabin-doors for sale, and came down smoothly as far as Waukesha. We were then about a mile and a half from the shore, and we got back on her, among them the captain and myself. The captain got one of the ladies back. As the boat was coming on off, I threw the last piece I was the last man on her. I heard him cheering the passengers. Another sea came, washed me off, and I struck out for the shore. Of the twenty-five who were on her only eight were saved. After the life-boat was launched a yawl, which was off, was picked up. The bodies were brought from the lake-shore each day. I knew only two men on the raft—the captain, and Mr. Wald, the clerk of the National Hotel, Milwaukee. When I left the shore in the life-boating the four rafts were in sight, and a great many floating on pieces of the wreck.

The commander, Captain Wilson, who acted throughout in a most gallant manner, was only one hundred feet from the shore when he perished.

Captain Malott, of the schooner Augusta, states :—

When I first discovered the steamer's lights—red and bright—I supposed her to be from a quarter to half a mile distant, and steering north-east. I was then steering S.S.W., and I kept her so for some time on her course out by south, until we saw a collision was probable, when we put the helm hard up. Struck the steamer two or three minutes afterwards just abaft the paddle-box on the port side. The steamer took on her starboard quarter in full speed. Heard cries of anguish around north, alongside the steamer, but they got separated in about a minute, when the cries died away. The steamer was then in a blaze from bowsprit to mizzen, and stanchions were carried away. We took in sail and cleared away anchor, supposing the steamer would sink. We then discovered the wreck and hove to; saw, on account in getting before the wind, and stood for land. We lost sight of the steamer in five minutes after the collision.

John Vorce, first mate on the schooner Augusta, gives the following evidence relative to the collision :—

At the time the collision took place I was the captain's watch on deck. The second mate was on deck when the squall came up. He called the captain, who got on deck as the squall struck her. This was about twelve minutes before collision. I was called by the man at the wheel, and struck the deck just as the squall struck the vessel. I was then taking in mainsail. About one-third of the mainsail and one-fourth of the mainsail were up when we struck the steamer. When I saw the steamer I called out, "Hard up, sir," "Hard up," and I jumped on the bulwarks, and saw the steamer crossing our bow. Should say the squall struck us about ninety feet from her. I don't think I knew of another vessel near one. I heard one of the crew say to the captain, "There's a light on the lee bow, Sir." After striking the steamer I ran aft and I jumped on the quarter. We struck the steamer nearly at right angles. From sight to twelve o'clock the wind was very heavy. The schooner was shoving the steamer on the sampson-post during my watch from eight to twelve. Don't know whether it was there or not when I went on deck. It was not there when I came on deck at one after I jumped on the lumber that the schooner struck. The Augusta steers pretty well—has a good helm—steers pretty well when under her own sail, steer so bad as some vessels, but is what we call pretty wild. Did not notice any change in the steering after the order was given. Heard the helmsman answer the order, "Hard up, Sir." It was not more than two minutes at the outside after the order was given that the vessel struck. Heard nothing by any one on the steamer. After we got clear of the steamer we dropped off, and I asked the captain if he should let go an anchor. He said, "Yes." I got the small anchor ready, and was waiting for the order to let go, when he sang out, "Hold on! there is no means for that collision." We were still in sight of the steamer. My object in preparing to let go an anchor was to bring the vessel to, so that we could see if we could render any service we would have a better chance to hang on to her bottom. We were keeping close in shore, because we could not carry sail to stand off into south-west. We heard no noise whatever from the steamer after the collision.

The Chicago Tribune of September 8 says :—

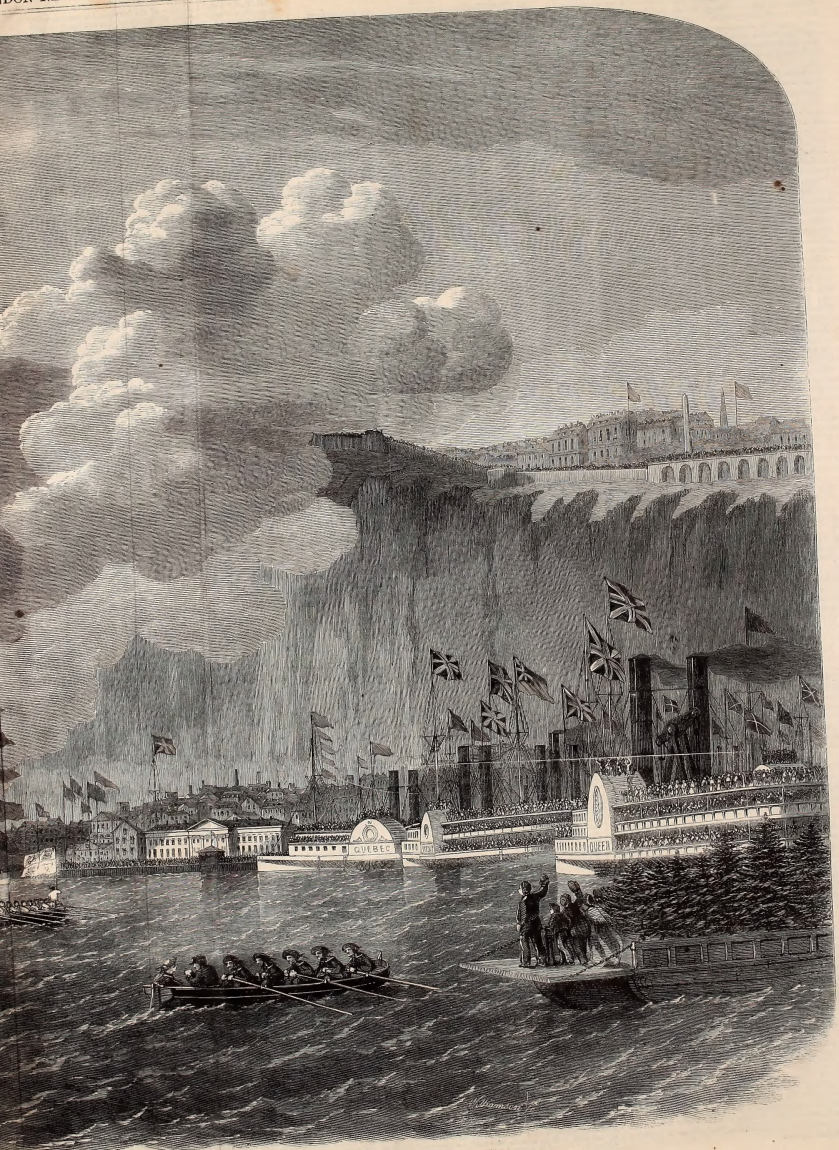
Our reporters, who went out on the Milwaukee road to Wiuetka, returned to the city on the half-past one train. They followed the beach for three or four miles. The lake in every direction was filled with fragments of the wreck, to which were clinging dead bodies, and occasionally a living person was first arrived. Only a few of these reached the shore. The surf run fearfully in shore, and the undertow was terrific. The cadaverous appearance of the rods of the shore, the heavy rollers would capsize them within sight and hailing distance of land, and the victim disappear forever. Captain Dan Scott, Buffalo, Bibical Institute, was especially prominent in his efforts, and plunged into the surf after all. He succeeded in reaching a number, and bringing them to a grave. The saving of David Erikson and wife, of Milwaukee, created the greatest excitement. The gallant fellow was seen struggling with the waves in the lee of the wheelhouse, holding his wife with one arm and clinging with his other to the boat. He left her in charge of a friend, and plunged into the lake, and its burden was out of sight for several seconds. When they rose the wife was in a senseless condition. Erikson, by a powerful effort, got the body of his wife, seized her, and again regained the wheelhouse. All on shore held their breath while these heroic efforts were made. Instant thanksgiving to the air, and the next wave buried out of sight beneath the terrible surges. At last the exhausted swimmer succeeded in reaching the beach, with his wife, with his wife in his arms, jumped off and commenced walking to the land. He had proceeded but a few steps when his wife was washed from his arms by the surf by Spencer, mentioned above—himself half buried in the surges—and drawn ashore.

The drummer-boy of the Milwaukee Life Guard was saved by means of his drum :—



But for the presence of mind sufficient to whittle a plug and close the six-cent, then lashing the drum to his shoulders, he trusted himself to the waves. He struck out from shore when the sea was running very high, and it is lost these, one after another, dropped off. The drum carried the boy nearly ashore, when a huge wave struck him on the back, and it flew from his grasp. The boy abandoned it, and, seizing a fragment of the wreck, succeeded in reaching the beach, and, after rescuing numerous others, and was returned to the boy whose life it had saved.

The jury empannelled at Chicago to inquire into the cause of the recent terrible disaster on Lake Michigan have commenced their labours. Several persons who were on board the ill-fated steamer were examined, and their testimony tends to throw the blame for the occurrence, if any, upon the schooner Augusta, and the testimony of the two mates of the schooner leads to the same conclusion. The steamer's lights, it seems, were discovered at least ten minutes before the collision took place, which was certainly time sufficient to have enabled those in charge of the schooner to avoid a collision against accident.

[Engravings of the Lady Elgin and the Augusta, from photographs just received from Chicago, will appear in our next Number.]

THE PRINCE OF WALES LANDING AT QUEBEC.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 299.

ETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS,—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 296.

public dinner, took a different course—had nothing to say about Garibaldi, but adhered to agricultural-society topics with a pertinacity which makes his speech the dullest reading that has lately come in our way. Mr. Whalley, to be sure, has tried to get up a little sensation on behalf of some of the districts of his neighbourhood whom it has been sought to disfranchise in the regular manner, by means of objections before the revising barrister; but he does not seem to have made much capital out of the business, or out of a spirited denunciation of Popery which he ingeniously contrived to bracket with Parliamentary Reform. Such things only tend to show how perfectly stagnant, for the hour, is the national mind upon political matters. The prospects of the half-garnered harvest, again interfered with by distressing weather, furnish perhaps the only theme on which people discuss with earnestness.

Social science, or whatever array of heterogeneous subjects pass under that name, is being honoured at Glasgow, where Lord Brougham has been engaged, if not in throwing any new light upon science itself, at least in showing that age has as yet done nothing towards dimming his own faculties. His power of marshalling facts, and his marvellous resources of language, have seldom been more finely exhibited than at the Glasgow meeting. The warm and cordial tributes which the leading men of Scotland, of all parties, have borne to Lord Brougham's unequalled gifts do honour to the country which appreciates so ungrudgingly. We say this claiming Lord Brougham as an Englishman and an English Lord.

Mystic hints continue to be given upon the subject of the Road murder, and we are perpetually told that the facts of a very significant character have transpired. But we are inclined to think that the clue to the labyrinth has yet to be discovered. It is so far satisfactory that every effort is being made to hit upon this clue. Most persons have pursued a theory of their own in relation to the crime, but it is probable that these theories arise rather from a natural impatience of uncertainty than from a careful examination of such evidence as is before us. We must be content to wait events: it is far from unusual in such cases that when the quest has seemed most hopeless, and there is the most inclination to abandon it, a trace is suddenly discovered, and the culprit is hunted down. In the case of the Stepney murder, in itself without any interest resulting from the character of the victim, there is little reason to doubt that, in one of those fits of folly which are frequently found in connection with crime, the guilty person has assisted Fisher to the device for implicating an innocent man. The missing links in the chain are apparently being rapidly supplied with fatal skill, and the destroyer of the wretched, hard, old, miserly woman of Stepney will ere long receive murderers' sentence.

We regret to say that the record of the week is marked by a large number of casualties. Several suicides have occurred, and fresh murders have been added to the history of every-day guilt. There have also been railway accidents, which have caused death. But the most painful case in England has been one in the manufacturing districts, where an immense mass of the lower class had taken place on the occasion of some fireworks, and, on the return of the crowd through a bad, sloping part of the way, some of the drunkards in the mob fell, and, other persons being forced upon them by the hurrying numbers behind, a lamentable catastrophe followed. Several poor little children became victims to the heedlessness and brutality of their elders, and were trampled to death, and some adults also perished. The casualty is a very sad one, but we presume, much things must be accepted as among the conditions of the modern custom of assembling monster meetings for recreation, excursions, and the like. A very singular case is recorded in the Manchester papers of the fall of an iron bridge covered with passengers, all of whom, with a single exception, escaped without loss of life.

THE COURT.

VISIT OF THE QUEEN TO GERMANY.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by Princess Alice, embarked at Gravesend in the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert at half-past five o'clock in the afternoon. Her Majesty was accompanied by Lieutenant-General (Lord Lieutenant of the county of Kent) and Commodore Superintendent the Hon. Augustus Liddell, and the Mayor and Corporation of Gravesend. The Royal yacht left the pier at a quarter before six o'clock. The following vessels accompanied the Royal yacht:—The steamer, Black Eagle, Trent, and the Trinity yacht Irene, which had on board the Deputy Master of the Trinity House. Her Majesty's ships Ariadne, Captain the Hon. F. Egerton; Emerald, Captain Cumming; Firebrand, Commander Bruce, and the Royal Mail steam yacht Fairy, commanded by the Queen and Albert, and awaited her arrival in the Schelde.

The Royal squadron anchored for the night at the Nore, the darkness rendering it unadvisable to proceed further, but the vessels were under way at five o'clock on Saturday morning; and, passing through the Queen's channel passage, arrived off Flushing at half-past twelve o'clock p.m. The Royal yacht was saluted by the forts at Flushing, and the Dutch men-of-war manned yards and also saluted. Upon entering the Schelde, the state of the tide rendering it necessary to slacken speed, the Royal yacht was brought closely slowly to accost the river, and at six p.m. anchored off Antwerp. As soon as the Royal yacht anchored at Antwerp the Prussian yacht Grille came on board to receive her Majesty's commands. In attendance on her Majesty on board the Royal yacht Albert were Lord Alfred Churchill, Major-General the Hon. Mary Bethel, Maid of Honour; Lord John Russell, Secretary of State; Major-General Grey, Private Secretary; and Colonel Phipps. Also on board was Colonel the Hon. Sir C. Phipps, and Dr. Ruly.

At half-past seven o'clock, by command of the King of the Belgians, accompanied by the Duke of Brabant, the Duchess of Brabant, and the Count of Flanders, the Queen of her Majesty's barge on board the Royal yacht Albert. They were received by the Queen, the Prince Consort, and Princess Alice. Shortly afterwards the Royal party proceeded to the pier, where they landed on shore, amidst the usual demonstrations of loyalty. A guard was stationed; and these were conveyed, together with the attendants and suite, to the railway station. The King of the Belgians, the Archduke Charles Ferdinand Antonio, and the King and the Belgian Royal family accompanied the Queen to the train. Very touching and loyalty received by the Royal personages; and as the train departed on the guard, at seven o'clock on that morning, the Gothic, of the Royal Standard of Saxe-Coburg, was deposited to the Prince Consort.

At Aix-la-Chapelle the Prince Regent of Prussia received her Majesty at the station. His Royal Highness, together with his brother, Prince Charles, accompanied the Queen as far as Duren. Colonel Stanley went with the Royal Highness to attend upon her Majesty to Mayence. Lord Howard de Walden, her Majesty's Minister at Brussels, travelled in her Majesty's suite from Antwerp to Verviers, where Lord Bloomfield, her Majesty's Minister at Berlin, awaited her Majesty's arrival. Sir Alexander Malet was in attendance from Mayence to Frankfort, to receive her Majesty's commands; and the British Consuls at the different towns upon thoroughfare paid their respects to her Majesty.

At Frankfort the Princes of Prussia, with their Royal Highnesses the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden, received her Majesty, and afterwards dined in private with her Majesty, the Prince Consort, and Princess Alice. Prince George of Saxony called in the evening to pay his respects to the Queen on behalf of his Majesty the King of Saxony.

On Tuesday morning the Queen proceeded to Coburg, where her Majesty and the Prince Consort will live in strict retirement.

DEATH OF MR. HERBERT INGRAM,

M.P. FOR BOSTON.

WITH a trembling hand and sorrowing heart we announce the death of Mr. Herbert Ingram, M.P., the founder and sole proprietor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, who, together with his eldest son, Herbert, perished on Lake Michigan in the lamentable disaster on the 8th inst. Exhausted by the fatigues of business and the labours of a long Parliamentary Session, Mr. Ingram had resolved during the recess to pay a visit to the American continent, and there to seek, in company with his son, a brave and intelligent boy of fifteen, that relaxation he so much needed. He sailed from Liverpool in the North American on the 9th of August, and landed at Quebec in time to witness, after he had traversed the Lower St. Lawrence, the closing of the last rivet of the Victoria Bridge at Montreal by the Prince of Wales. It was here Mr. Ingram took leave of the party of friends who, on his landing, had attended him, stating that he "wished to be more quiet," and went on to the Falls of Niagara, where he staid some days, enjoying the grandeur of the scenery around him with the keenest appreciation. In one of the many characteristic letters received from him he says:—"Thank God, I have been to see the Falls of Niagara. The sensation grows upon me, seems to exalt while it soothes me; and amidst these wonders of the creation I forget the realities and annoyances of life." From Niagara Mr. Ingram proceeded to Chicago, whence he had first proposed to travel across the Prairies, and to follow the Mississippi to New Orleans, and thence to New York, but more especially to Boston, which old associations of history had determined him to make the conclusion of his sojourn in the United States. In the last letter received from him, and dated Chicago, September 7, he states, however, that he had decided to visit Lake Superior, and to prolong his stay in America, proposing to return to England about the end of October. He left Chicago at midnight on the 7th of September, accompanied by his son—never our readers to see the sad sequel to the story. It should, however, be added that his body was washed ashore about sixteen miles from Chicago, and just at the time that one of his friends, Mr. Hayward, had arrived at the spot. Every effort was used to discover the boy's life, but Mr. Hayward states, in a most feeling letter, that Mr. Ingram's countenance in death "was perfectly calm and peaceful."

Herbert Ingram was in the forty-ninth year of his age. He was born in Boston, in which town he began his active career, at eleven years of age, as a printer, and both in science and commerce made that the field of a good, hard, day's work. He thus endeavoured to assist in the support of his family, which, old and highly respected, had enjoyed comparative riches. To the interest of a boy, as his native town he devoted throughout life much of the labour of his indefatigable nature. The pure water which its citizens drink—the gas which lights them—the railway, recently opened, that connects their town with the mid-districts of England—are among the many objects which continue to bear the impress of his fostering hand and kindly care. At Boston, as many of his friends are aware, he had intended to spend the evening of his days, resting from his many labours on his property at Swineshead Abbey, which was a favourite spot of his, and through the many phases of his eventful life recognised his merits, and undeviatingly gave him its confidence. Three times in succession was he returned as its representative to Parliament, and always by majorities most decisive of the confidence reposed in him.

His remains, which are expected to arrive in England in a few days, will be interred at Boston.

Peace to the ashes of so worthy and so excellent a man—a kind friend, an indulgent parent, a faithful friend, and a good citizen!

As the founder of this Newspaper he originated another era in the diffusion of knowledge and in the popularisation and promotion of art. He introduced a new means of improved education,—a novel machinery, by which to chronicle, in pictures, as well as by description, just as it passes, the history of the world. This Paper was the object of his utmost care and greatest pride. Only yesterday we found preserved amongst his most valued documents a relic, inscribed by his own hand, apparently but a short while before he left England:—

"PROSPECTUS OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—H. I."

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will for the future be conducted on the principles which it has always advocated, and in the manner which its founder adopted and approved. The Journal will continue in the care of those he himself had selected, and in whom he had long placed the highest confidence. These will, of course, have the able assistance of the talented artists who have produced so much to the popularity of the Paper. It will be carried on for the benefit of his family (his widow being sole proprietor); and every endeavour may be relied upon to ensure a continuance of that support for which the late Mr. Ingram laboured so ardently and so successfully. The public has, indeed, already offered some assurance of this in the numerous expressions of condolence and sympathy his mourning family have received both from this country and from America.

LOSS OF THE "LADY ELGIN" ON LAKE MICHIGAN.

LATE on the evening of Friday, the 7th inst., the Lady Elgin left Chicago with four hundred persons on board, bound on an excursion up Lakes Michigan and Superior. The wind blew hard from the north-east, and a heavy sea was running. But the party was a happy one. There were music and dancing in the saloon, and "all was merry as a marriage-bell;" when, shortly after two on the morning of the 8th, there came a sudden crash.

Thirty miles from Chicago and ten miles from land, off Waukegan, the schooner Augusta, making eleven knots an hour, came down on the doomed ship, struck her on the midships gangway, and then, having her sails set, and the wind blowing freely, drifted off in the darkness. In half an hour the steamer sank in three hundred feet of water; and of the four hundred persons on board not a hundred were saved. Amongst the drowned are Mr. Herbert Ingram, the proprietor of this Journal, and his eldest son.

A clerk of the ill-fated vessel states:—

Instantly after the second collision the music and dancing ceased, and the steamer sank half an hour after. Passing through the cabins, I saw the ladies pale, motionless, and silent. There was no cry, no shrieks—each one waited as if any kind but that of the escaping steam and surging waves. A boat was lowered for the purpose of examining the hole, which soon made itself known; but there were only two oars to row it with, and, unfortunately, at that moment a one cone had taken possession of one of them, and the pad was, consequently, useless. We succeeded in reaching the larboard wheel once, wherein the leak was, but were soon driven from it by the fury of waves, and washed ashore at the village of Winetka. There were only two other boats on the steamer. One of these took eighteen persons from her, all of whom were saved. The other boat took eight persons, but only half that number reached land safely, the other half being drowned on the beach when the boat drifted there. The rush of water through the leak had extinguished the fires before I left the steamer, and the boilers that caused scalding in consequence. The wind was blowing so hard and in such a direction as to drift the boats, bodies of the drowned, and fragments of the wreck up the lake, and most of these will probably be washed ashore in the vicinity of Winetka. I fancied I could see, from the beach, the steamer's hull drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the steamer the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

One of the passengers gives the following additional particulars:—

A short time after the the engine fell through the bottom of the vessel, I should think fifteen minutes after the schooner struck. The hull went down immediately, leaving the upper cabin floating. A great number of the passengers were on the hurricane-deck when the hull went down. Most of them jumped into the water, and swam to the cabin. The hurricane-deck soon separated into five pieces. There were twenty-five on the part on which I was. The captain of the vessel and two men were military officers, Waukegan, and six or seven ladies. The other four pieces went off with a number on each. We drifted about all night, and came down opposite the city of Winetka. When within a few rods of the shore the raft capsized; some of us got back on her, among them myself, my wife, and child. The captain got out of the ladies back on it. A big sea came and washed us off. The captain was the last man off. My wife and child were drifted, fragments of wreck and human beings struggling with the waters, drifting towards the shore.

The commander, Captain Wilson, who acted throughout in a most gallant manner, was only one hundred feet from the shore when he perished.

Captain Mallott, of the schooner Augusta, states:—

When I first discovered the steamer's lights—both red and bright—I supposed her to be from one to two or half a mile distant, and steering north-east. It was raining very hard at the time. We kept our vessel on her course and by what we took to be a collision was impressed that we put the helm hard up. Struck the steamer two or three minutes afterwards on the starboard side, about the fore part also. The steamer kept on her course, her engine in full motion. Headed the Augusta around north, then north-west, and then they got separated in the darkness, when the Augusta fell in the trough of the sea; all the head gear, jibboom, and mainstays were carried away. We took in all sail immediately another, supposing the vessel would fill. After clearing the wreck and getting up foresail, we succeeded in getting before the wind, and made for the Chicago side of the steamer in five minutes after the collision.

John Verre, first mate of the schooner Augusta, gives the following evidence relative to the collision:—

At the time of the collision it was the captain's watch on deck. The second mate was on deck with the captain also. He called me, and I came on deck as the vessel struck her. This was some minutes before the collision. I was called by the second mate, who reported the clock just as the vessel struck the vessel. The men were just taking in sail. About one-third of the foresail and one-fourth of the mainsail were set when I struck the steamer. About half an hour the steamer's lights I heard the captain sing out, "Hard up!" I jumped upon the lumber, and saw the steamer coming our way. Should judge the steamer was about north-north-west. The first that I knew of another vessel being near I heard one of the crew of the steamer say, "Here's a light on the bow, sir." After that the captain cried, "Hard up!" and I jumped on the lumber. We struck the steamer on the starboard bow, about the fore part of the cabin. the wind was north-east. The schooner was showing a white light on the mizzen-mast during the time of the collision. Don't know how the steamer is was there or not at the time of the collision. It was not more than a minute after I jumped on the lumber that the steamer struck. The second mate was on deck with me. I did not answer her helm very readily. She does not answer the helm so quick as she will presently. Could not say how many degrees in her course. When the order was given "Hard up!" the helmsman answer the order, "Hard up, sir." Should say not more than two minutes or a minute after the order that the vessel struck. Heard nothing said by any one on the steamer. After we got clear of the steamer we dropped off and asked the captain if I should let go an anchor. He said, "No." We were in the small anchor ready, and was waiting for the order to let go, when he sang out, "Hold on!" He gave no answer to the order. We were in sight most of sight of the steamer. My object in preparing to let go an anchor was to bring the vessel to, so that if she had sunk I should be able to save some of would have a better chance to hang on to her bottom. We were keeping close in shore, because the wind blew from the land from south-west. We heard no noise whatever from the steamer after the collision.

The Chicago Journal of September 8 says:—

Our reporters, on visiting the scene, first repaired to Winetka, returned to the city in the half-past one train. They traversed the beach for three or four miles. For the most part, the shore is rocky, with a narrow strip of beach, to which some fifty or sixty human beings were clinging when our reporters first arrived. Here and there a solitary man, with one arm and clinging with his other to the frail ark. As he reached shore a fearful surf cushed his raft, and its terrific force he was thrown upon the beach, bruised and faint. It was at some distance from the raft. The gallant fellow left it and swam to the wife, and her, and their children. All were rescued, but the mother in their breath while they approached. At one instant they appeared high in the air, and the next moment were dashed with the beach. Immediately after the last the wheelhouse grounded some distance from the beach, when the man, with his wife in his arms, and children clinging around him, waded in, and had proceeded only a short distance when he sank exhausted, but was caught by fragments of timber, and was thus buoyed up and floated in the direction of the shore.

The drummer-boy of the Milwaukee Life Guard was saved by means of his drum:—

He had presence of mind sufficient to whittle a plug and close the vent hole in the head of his drum, and then launched himself upon the waves. The drum supported him, and also four others who seized hold of it; but these were soon washed off. Finally, the boy, with his drum, reached the shore, when by some means one head was burst in, and it filled with water. The boy abandoned it, and, by the assistance of a log, succeeded in reaching the shore. The drum afterwards came ashore, and was returned to the boy whose life it had saved.

The jury empannelled at Chicago to inquire into the cause of the recent terrible disaster on Lake Michigan have completed their labours. Several persons who were on board the ill-fated steamer were examined, and their testimony tends to throw the blame for the occurrence, if any, upon the schooner Augusta, and the testimony of the two mates of the schooner leads to the same conclusion. The steamer's lights, it seems, were discovered at least ten minutes before the collision took place, which was certainly time sufficient to have enabled those on board the Augusta to take every precaution against accident.

[Engravings of the Lady Elgin and the Augusta, from photographs just received from Chicago, will appear in our next Number.]

PRINCE ALFRED AT THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

HIS Royal Highness Prince Alfred has landed at Cape Town, and he appears to have achieved as large an amount of popularity in the Cape Colony as his elder brother has in Canada. The Forerunner arrived Cape Colony as his elder brother has in Canada. The Forerunner arrived at Cape Town on the 24th of July, and the Prince landed on the following day, and made a public entry into Cape Town on the following day, attended by His Excellency the Governor, Sir George Grey, Major Cowell, and the Lieutenant-Governor, General Wynyard. The welcome which greeted the Royal Highness on his arrival, on his landing, and which greeted the Royal Highness on his arrival, on his landing, and which greeted him through the colony, has been of the most cordial, throughout his tour through the colony, has been of the most cordial, throughout his tour through the colony, has been of the most cordial, throughout his tour

ANCONA, IN THE PAPAL STATES.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON'S VISIT TO CORSICA: VIEW OF BASTIA.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

CERAMIC PAPIER MACHE,

A PLASTO SUBSTITUTE FOR WOOD CARVINGS.

We have had our attention drawn to a new description of plastic fibrous material, which appear to us, from specimens we have seen, and from the nature of its composition, to be capable of being most advantageously and economically manufactured into a numerous class of articles of high artistic merit.

This invention, which has been patented by Mr. J. C. Martin, of Barnes, has for its object the production in a plastic material of imitations of wood carvings, from which it is scarcely distinguishable, and that could be readily moulded, subsequently hardening into a close-grained, hard, tough, and durable substance, resembling wood, admitting of an after process of carving to produce the undercuts, and susceptible of the highest finish. The grain of various woods may be very exactly imitated by a proper and careful mixture of differently-coloured portions of the substance. The material of which this new substance is chiefly composed is paper, or rather the fibrous pulp of which paper is made, combined—among various other ingredients, with a resinous soap (that is, resin dissolved in alkali), to which is due its plastic qualities, and which enables it to be moulded, without the addition of an earthy or chalky substance, adds to its strength, and admits of the subsequent process of carving. We engrave the cover of a book manufactured of this material from a design, not unknown, to illustrate, in some degree, the exactness with which a wood carving may be imitated; and we have seen this material manufactured into highly-carved miniature-frames, blotting-book covers, inkstands, and architectural ornaments. Considering this new plastic substance as an improvement on the ordinary methods of manufacturing articles in papier-mâché or fibrous pulp—a material daily occupying more the attention of the manufacturer—and as a means of increasing the facilities for the reproduction of artistic articles of elegant design, as well as for the economical enrichment and decoration of interiors of building, we, from a close examination of the specimens we have seen, believe that this new manufacture will prove in every way a complete commercial success.

A BOOK COVER FORMED BY MARTIN'S CERAMIC PAPIER-MACHE PROCESS.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR OCTOBER.

THE month of October, especially that of the year of grace 1860, brings us into the autumnal season, which may be said to have prevailed ever since the month of May in this memorable summer year. Our Illustration in this day's Number indicates the transition period from moderately warm and genial weather to that when heavier toilet becomes necessary. We have been forced to abandon the reproduction of those charming costumes which generally characterise Parisian attire during a fine summer, and to represent such as are worn by the élite of French society, already returned in cool haste from their voyages to Ems, Baden-Baden, Savoy, or the Pyrenees.

The most striking features in the style of ladies' dresses at present is the amount of fluting employed for the ornamentation of the skirts, corsages, and sleeves. The extent to which it is used is quite remarkable, and its variety, in width and application, endless. Two of our Illustrations are devoted to dresses of this description. The general form is without change since our last; but robes of chequered pattern appear to have lost their recent vogue, at any rate for a time, although they are certainly neat and pretty.

Rice-chip or crape bonnets are much worn for weddings and visits of ceremony, but they still bear the stamp of simplicity that has characterised them throughout the present year. They are, however, occasionally ornamented with black ribbon and a rose or two, or by a small peacocks' feather. Swans' plumes are employed for the turned-up chapeaux, but these are especially suited to very young ladies.

As our Illustrations contain none of those garments, we reserve our observations on the subject of capes, shawls, paletots, and cloaks till next month, when we shall give one or two figures au grand complet.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Figure 1. Walking Dress.—This dress is of light green taffety, ample in the skirt, which is ornamented at the bottom by two flounces of box plaits. About four inches above the flounces there is a narrow edging, likewise of box plaits: this addition prevents what would otherwise be a too formal appearance in the dress, consisting, as it does exclusively, of one material. A similar trimming, but of smaller proportions, ornaments the sleeves and the corsage, to the latter of which it imparts the semblance of a berthe. The bonnet, is composed of velvet and tulle, trimmed with detached flowers, and having round the front edge narrow lace.

Fig. 2. Dinner Toilet. Slate-coloured silk dress, the skirt trimmed with two purple bands bordered on each side with a narrow guipure: on these bands are attached, at regular intervals, a series of rosettes, in the centre of each of which is a velvet button. The corsage is high-necked, and has a trimming corresponding with that on the skirt. The waistband, also purple, is edged with guipure, and terminated by a deep fringe. The sleeve consists of a single bouillon, on the edge of which is a narrow trimming in keeping with the other parts of the robe. White crape bonnet, trimmed with blonde, the tour-de-tête ornamented with small green leaves.

Fig. 3. Another Walking Dress.—Robe of rose-coloured taffety, somewhat resembling Fig. 1: in its general arrangement. The three fluted flounces are of unequal proportions, the uppermost one being wider than the other two together. The loose hanging sleeve is trimmed with fluting to match that on the skirt. The under sleeve is of blonde, fastened at the wrist with a black velvet band and silver clasp. From the waist descend two silk streamers, edged with black, and deeper in colour than the dress. Rice-chip bonnet, the cap consisting of blonde and roses.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR OCTOBER.

ANCONA.

ANCONA is a fort on the Adriatic, and the chief naval station of the Papal States, occupying a fine situation on the slopes which rise from the Adriatic, between the promontories of Monte Cirsaco and Monte Comero. It was founded by a Dorie or Syracusan colony, and held high rank as a port in the time of the Romans. The Emperor Trajan greatly beautified it, building the Mole, which is still in a state of perfect preservation. Upon this mole was erected in his honour a magnificent triumphal arch, now on the extreme left of our View) about A.D. 112, and which is perhaps the finest monumental arch now existing.

In the twelfth century Ancona had attained a first rank among the cities of the Lombard League. In 1174 it was besieged by Christian, Archbishop of Mentz. In the sixteenth century it was annexed to the Roman See, and has so remained, with little interruption to its bondage, ever since. In 1799 the Allies captured it, after a gallant defence by the French, who had taken it the previous year. Again it fell into the power of the latter; and in 1814 the Congress of Vienna gave it once more to the Pope. From 1832 to 1838 the French again possessed it. During the revolution of 1848, after a siege and bombardment of ten days it was taken by the Austrians; and since then, until the end of the Italian war of last year, it was occupied by an Austrian garrison for the Pope; and it is at the moment we write this undergoing another siege, the result of which will, there is little doubt, give it a new master, the "Re galantuomo."

Ancona has a population of some 50,000. The portion of the town occupying the high ground is the oldest, called the "Città Vecchia," and here the poor inhabitants chiefly reside. The streets are mostly narrow and tortuous. The modern part (Città Nuova) is built along the lower slopes and is occupied by the well-to-do classes. There are some fine public buildings scattered through the town, more especially the churches. Piscina, of course, there are, of the usual Italian character. The harbour is well defended by forts, and there are strong fortifications on the heights; but, invested as it is by sea and land, Lamoricière's mercenaries will not be able to hold out long.

BASTIA, IN CORSICA.

THE island of Corsica will ever be celebrated as the birthplace of that remarkable man who laid the foundation of the Napoleon dynasty. In the year 1612 that the first Bonaparte went there from Genoa, and established himself at Ajaccio, where the great Emperor was born, in 1769. This Mediterranean island now forms a single department of the French empire. Its climate is healthy, but the terrible sirocco often produces great ravages. The inhabitants are generally brave, sober, hospitable, and energetic; they are, however, animated by a remarkable independence of disposition, and are extremely vindictive, transmitting their quarrels from generation to generation as the most sacred portion of their legacy. A Corsican who has an injury or an insult to avenge is said to be en vendetta; he warns his enemy that from a certain day he will seek every opportunity to kill him. Sometimes the two champions are accompanied by relatives and friends, or they may carry on their murderous campaign singly. Formerly the Corsican en vendetta used to let his beard grow till he had murdered his victim; but this custom has disappeared, and it is much to be wished that the terrible revendetta itself should also be put a stop to. The powerful influence of the present French Emperor will no doubt be employed in bringing about this much-needed reform, for such a relic of barbarous times is no longer in keeping with the actual state of European civilisation, and is scarcely a stain which the mother-country would gladly see effaced. The language spoken in Cor-

cies is not French, but a sort of Italian dialect, with a mixture of many words of Arabian and Spanish origin.

The town of Bastia, in Corsica (of which we give an Illustration), is situated on the eastern coast of the island, nearly opposite to that other island of the Mediterranean—Elba—to which a great historical souvenir of the First Napoleon is also attached. It is a place of war of the first class, and contains 15,000 inhabitants. Prettily built, in the form of an amphitheatre, its general aspect is picturesque; but the entire view is much superior to the interior detail of the place. Bastia is the seat of a Imperial Tribunal and an Imperial College, founded in 1845, and carries on a considerable trade in wine, oil, leather, coral, &c. It was formerly the capital of the island. When Corsica formed two departments, it was the principal town of that division. Bastia also was taken by the English in 1748, and again in 1794; the Austrians and the Neapolitans had besieged it without success in 1745. In the upper part of the town there is a citadel for the defence of the port, near the entrance of which is a rock called by sailors Il Leone, on account of its resemblance to a lion couchant. The entire armament-ment of Bastia is at present composed of twenty cantons (the town counting for two) and 119 cannons, and contains 60,764 inhabitants.

A very fine high road connects Bastia with Ajaccio, in the beautiful undulated valley which leads to the latter place. The Emperor and the Empress Eugenie, arrived on the morning of the 14th inst. Their Majesties landed at midday, and were received by all the authorities of the department and an enthusiastic population. The Mayor of Ajaccio, as is customary on similar occasions, presented the keys of the town to the Emperor. M. Pietri, the senator-Corsican by birth, also presented the members of the Council-general, and, in an affectionate speech, made himself the interpreter of the unchangeable sentiments of devotion towards the Imperial family of the country which was the cradle of the Napoleon dynasty. It was the Empress's first visit to Corsica, and her Majesty was pleased to express, on the 15th inst., the joy she felt at the sight of the cathedral and other buildings in the town connected with the history of her august husband's ancestors.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

BEYOND the double victories of West Australian's son, East Stanley, who gave Virgilius 11lb. in one race, and received 15lb. from the once-vaunted Lanercost colt in another, and yet lasted to pass at Rockdmond. Newcastle was in sufficiently good humour to give that most accurate of all horses, Wizard, 5lb. for the Gold Cup, carried by Bell, of Leicester, where the townspeople—who seem much more sensible of his Lordship's liberality than the hunting men—gave to the East of Stamford and his Countess a most hearty reception on the 19th inst. Marvellous, Mr. Tom Parr reappeared in the saddle, after a two-years' absence, and won very cleverly on Lady Ann. Newcastle Autumn Handicap. Autumn campaign right well; and Dundee, who has known no rest since Epsom, had to run for it to get rid of Lord Lady in the Hopeful, at Wallace. Wallenstein only 5lb., and was beaten a length for third. The A.F. Grand Duke Michael was a curious commentary on Mr. Sargent's Ten Thousand Pound Investment, only 2 lb. both from The Wizard and Thormanby, and ran last of the six. True to his usual form, Thormanby (Wells) was very well, and could not overhaul The Wizard, who was well suited as regards the distance and won as he liked. Thormanby was second, and, like the pet of Yorkshire, carried 7 lb. extra. The Rover won the Three-year-old Triennial last year, was very loth to resign his honours on Wednesday's race-course, the most likely place after a most desperate Stratisuver ever made, just did him by a head after a most desperate race. It is very much to be regretted that you are should be cut-ts from the Whitewall stable, which shows how completely horses' forms will change. The very neat race for the Granby Stakes was marked by a display of great judgment and patience on the part of Challoner. Two distances from home he seemed to be completely beaten under the 7 lb. extra, but, waiting his time, he got up in the last stride, and by three-quarters of a length. The Wizard won the St. Leger in a trot, but his opponents were so bad that there is not the slightest opening to argue from this performance that he can stay. Epsom, York, and Doncaster have all told us the contrary far too decisively. The meetings for next week begin on Monday, Retford on Tuesday and Wednesday, and Carlisle on Wednesday. The Cesarewich has fifty-four acceptances, and Manchester Autumn Handicap has the name of Lord Clewd, near Rhyl, on Thursday and Friday, are the only fixtures for next week.

The cub-hunting is now pretty universal, and the Duke of Beaufort's hounds have commenced. Hampshire, Berkshire, and the fine country grown that have been seen in this hunt for some seasons. The young entry of rather more than twenty couple is a very splendid one, and the cross between the thoroughbred blood and the dash of the picked nine couple which Clarke brought with him at such a long figure from Mr. Morrell is in part highly fulfilled in appearance. The principal litter, of which three couple have been entered, is that by Wonder, from old Tubney Spangle, and another litter of them is gone out to walk.

MANCHESTER RACES.—SATURDAY, SEPT. 22.

Grand Stand Plate Handicap.—Rosegrove, 1; Lucifer, 2; Scout 3.

Northern Metropolitan Handicap Plate.—The Prophet, 1. Greta, 2. Stamford and Warrington Handicap.—Erica, 1. Fortella, 2. Two-Year-Old Stirling Stakes.—Keepsake, 1. Hope f., 2.

Lincoln Autumn Handicap.—Rosamond, 1. Bab at the Bowster, 2. Surry Handicap.—Rosamond, 1. Ladybird, 2.

NEWMARKET FIRST OCTOBER MEETING.—TUESDAY.

Trial Plate.—Malta, 1. Orlando, 2.

Sweepstakes of 100 sovs. each.—Minestrap, 1. New Forest Deer c, 2.

Handicap Sweepstakes.—Rattlesnake, 1. Rose Middleton, 2.

Innocent Handicap.—Lucifer Match, 1. Lady Ann, 2. Bankrupt, 3.

Buckenham Stakes.—Renee f., 1. Folkestone, 2.

Hopeful Stakes.—Dundee, 1. Little Lady, 2.

Grand Duke Michael Stakes.—The Wizard, 1. Thormanby, 2.

WEDNESDAY.

Eleventh Triennial Produce Stakes.—Mourvied'l, 1. The Rover, 2.

Granby Stakes.—Wizard, 1. Herper, 2.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 15 sovs.—Parquet, 1. Sister to Rosetta, 2.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 sovs.—Any Scott, 1. Tumbey, 2.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs.—Mousetrap, 1. Amy Robsart, 2.

Twelfth Triennial Produce Stakes.—Cape Flyaway, 1. Ebony, 2.

St. Leger Stakes.—The Wizard, 1. The Leprechaun, 2.

Fifty Pounds.—Rosamond, 1. Greta, 2.

THURSDAY.

Queen's Plate.—Mourvied'l, 1. Ochiltree, 2.

£50 Handicap Sweepstakes.—Sir Hugh, 1.

Thirteenth Triennial Stakes.—Folkestone, 1. Klarkoff, 2.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs.—Leonine, 1. Bentinck, 2.

Handicap Plate.—Lanercost, 1. Zaretan, 2.

Rouland Stakes.—Barbara f., 1. Cowley, 2.

WALSALL RACES.—WEDNESDAY.

Trial Stakes.—Greenwich Fair, 1. Ladybird, 2.

Two-year-old Stakes.—Bibby Nutts, 1. Archeress, 2.

Tradesman's Plate.—Rara Avis, 1. Emblem, 2.

Railway Handicap.—Griffin, 1. Wee Willie, 2.

Stand Handicap.—Rara Avis, 1. Biddy Nutts, 2.

THURSDAY.

Handicap Plate.—Scoggy, 1. Catherine, 2.

Two-year-old Stakes.—Bibby Nutts, 1. Archeress, 2.

Innkeepers' Plate.—Griffin, walked over.

Members' Plate.—Lady Bird, 1. Lady Lee, 2.

Bradford Handicap.—Emblem, 1. Miss Eleanor, 2.

CRICKET.—North of England v. The South: At Sleaford, on Wednesday week (the third day), this match was continued, and the North proved victorious by an innings. The following is the score:—North, first innings, 127; second innings, 63. South, first innings, 99; second innings, 47.

His Excellency the Marquis d'Azeglio has left town for Broadlands Park, on a visit to Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston.

The Duke and Duchess of Hamilton and family have left Hamilton Palace, Lanarkshire, for Brodrick Castle, Isle of Arran, where the noble Duke and Duchess will shortly receive a distinguished circle of friends.

At the Central Criminal Court, yesterday week, Mr. Frederick Augustus Dean was sentenced to six years' penal servitude for forgeries upon the Bank of England.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.
Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above sea, 24 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER:				WIND.		RAIN in the Day.
	Barometer reduced to 32° and Sea Level.	Dew Point Temp.	Direct Temp.	Relative Humidity.	Maximum of Temp.	Minimum of Temp.	Minimum on Grass.	Maximum in Sun.	General Direction.	Horizontal Motion.
	Inches.										Inches
Sept. 19	29.911	54·4	57·7	87	64·3	48·6	E. NE.	167			0·000
„ 20	29·931	54·4	49·6	95	8	46·0	S.E.	W.	166		0·000
„ 21	29·931	54·4	49·6	95	8	46·0	S.E.	W.	166		0·170
„ 22	29·722	52·3	57·1	87	69·2	51·8	SW.	WSW.	339		0·020
„ 23	29·7	52·3	57·1	87	69·2	51·8			339		0·020
„ 24	29·704	47·9	49·9	93	5	39·5	S.	S.SE.	186		0·063
„ 25	29·737	49·6	49·9	93	5	39·5	S.E.	S.SW.	3		0·294

* Rain-gauge out of order.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at 9 A.M. and 3 P.M.:—

	19th.	20th.	21st.	22nd.	23rd.	24th.	25th.
Barometer (in inches) corrected	29·61	29·78	29·95	29·717	29·726	29·715	29·674
Thermometer (Fahr.)	57·5	57·5	57·5	57·5	57·5	57·5	57·5
Temperature of Evaporation	54·7	54·7	54·7	54·7	54·7	54·7	54·7
Direction of Wind	...	...	...	SW.	W.	SW.	W.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

NOTWITHSTANDING that a very limited amount of business has been transacted on National stocks this week, both for Money and Time, and that the recent movements in Italy, viewed in regard to France and the actual position of the Pope, are regarded with much anxiety, the above quarter has continued firm, and no sales of consequence have taken place. The present state of the market is owing to various causes, principally, it would seem, to the opinion that Continental politics and treaties have failed to have their usual governing influence upon the money-market. Moreover, the imagined risk of our National Stocks is now held by bond-like investors, and not by the speculative class who, if some fluctuations in prices should arise, have frequently exercised too great a ruling influence over prices. The Unlunded Debt has continued to be more favourably spoken of as put for it.

The supply of capital in the hands of the bankers and bill-brokers continues in excessive quantity, and the demand for Money and Time, Loans, &c., is but there appears to be a reasonable prospect of money becoming cheaper. In the open market the quotations for the last three days are as follows:—

	For cash.			For cash.
Short bills	3⅞	4	Four-months' bill	4	4⅛
Three months' bills	3⅞	4	Six months' bills	4	4⅛

In the above rates the demand for accommodation has been adhered to, evidently to prepare for the 6th of the month.

A few purchases of Bullion were made from the Bank of England for export purposes, and some purchases of the late arrivals from America have been made for France. The amount of Bullion withdrawn on the 24th of the month, and £48,885 in silver, besides 1000 sovereigns for Alexandria.

At a special meeting of the Court of Directors of the Joint-Stock Bank of India, Australia, and China, a dividend was declared for the past half-year at the rate of seven per cent per annum, free of income-tax.

The following return shows the state of the note circulation in the United Kingdom during the past week, ending August 25, compared with the preceding week:—

Bank of England	£21,877,920
Private banks	2,803,747
Joint-stock banks	3,797,166
Scotland	4,114,175
Ireland	6,290,000
Total	£39,256,921

Compared with the corresponding period in 1859, these figures show a decrease of £198,146 in the total circulation. The joint-stock and private banks in England are now £1,429,974 below the amount.

The exports of Bullion and Specie, embracing the period during the eight months ending the 31st inst., were £8,907,189 against £36,480,885 in the same period in 1859, and £20,000,000 in 1858. The imports in 1860 were £20,000,000, and the increase is nearly 16 per cent. The total imports of bullion in that period in 1859 were £16,000,000, and in 1858 £16,762,568 in 1857, and £17,000,000. The shipments were £14,913,814, against £26,207,863 in 1859, and £21,443,718 in 1858.

Over one million sterling, chiefly in silver from Mexico, has come to hand—this dollar being the agent of the Bank of Commerce.

The dealings in the shares of the newly-formed companies have not increased; many are unsaleable, and the prices are merely nominal quotations. Ocean Marine Insurance has been 2 prem.; Thames and Mersey Marine, 1½ to 2; Crystal Palace Railway, 3–16 to 5–16 prem.; Land Credit and Mercantile, ¼ to ½ dis.

On Monday Exchequer Bills were flat, at about Saturday's closing quotations. Consols for Money, were done at 93¼ ; Ditto for Account, 93⅛ ; India Bonds, 1859, 1st issue, 98 ; Exchequer Bills, 1860, 1st issue, 98 ; Ditto, 2nd issue, 98 ; Exchequer Bills, 1st prem. to par. India Five per Cent Enfaced Paper was 96. The dealings in Foreign Stocks were unimportant, and Turkish Six per Cents, 83¾ ; Ditto for Time, 84⅛ ; India Five per Cents, 103¾ ; Ditto, Debentures, 1859, 98¾ ; Exchequer Bills, par ; India Stock was 221 ; and Bank Stock for Account, ex div., 228. There was rather more firmness in prices on the following day ; but the variations were unimportant. Consols for Money were 93¼ ; Ditto for Account (Settlement 11), 93⅜ ; India Five per Cents, 103¾ ; Ditto, Debentures, 98, 99 ; Exchequer Bills, 1st prem. to par. India Five per Cents, 96 ; Bank Stock, ex div., 228. There was rather more firmness in prices on the following day ; but the variations were unimportant. Consols for Money were 93¼ ; Ditto for Account, 93⅜ ; Indian New Loan was 103¾ ; Ditto Five-and-a-Half per Cent Paper, 96 ; Exchequer Bills, 1st prem. to par ; India Bonds, 1st prem. to par 98. Bank Stock, 228.

There is considerable inactivity to notice in the market for Foreign Bonds. The fluctuations in prices have been quite unimportant, and the quotations for most descriptions remain unaltered. Brazilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 97½ ; Brazilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents have realised 97½ ; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 63 ; Ditto Four per Cents, 98 ; Ecuador Bonds, 12 ; New Granada Active, 17½ ; New Granada Active, Three-and-a-half per Cents, 16½ ; ditto Deferred, 4½ ; Peruvian Four per Cents, 78 ; Portuguese Four per Cents, 45 ; Russian Five per Cents, 104½ ; Ditto Committee's Certificates of Coupon, not funded, 84 ; Turkish Five per Cent Six months' Bonds, 84 ; Ditto Six per Cents, 1861, 104 ; Venezuela Coupon-and-a-Half per Cents, 24½.

The dealings in Railway Stocks have been exceedingly limited, but at about previous rates. English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered have marked 121 ; Great Northern, Original, 103 ; Ditto, A Stock, 104 ; Ditto, B Stock, 104 ; New South Wales, 84 ; Union of Australia, 42 ; and Union of London, 24½.

Colonial Government Securities continue firm in price, with a moderate business doing. Canada Six per Cents, Government, 1860, 104 ; Ditto, Six per Cents, September, 1118 ; New Brunswick Six per Cents, 1864 ; New South Wales Five per Cents, 1871, 104 ; Ditto, Five per Cents, Debentures, 1870, 99 ; and Victoria Six per Cents, 110.

The transactions in Miscellaneous Market have been to a fair extent, and prices, generally, have been well supported. Anglo-American Telegraph shares have sold at 4½ to 4 13–16 ex div. ; English and Continental Telegraph, London General Omnibus, 14 ; Hudson's Bay, 13½ ; Imperial Ottoman Bank, 3 to 3 1–16 ; Peninsular and Oriental Steam, 73 ; Red Sea and India Telegraph, 4 to 4 1–16 ; Royal Mail Steam, 73 ; Royal Mail Steam, New, 3 to 3 1–16 ; Scinde Railway, 54 ; Lambeth, 92 ; West Middlesex, 102 ; London Docks, 94 ; St. Katherine Docks, 100 ; London and South-Western, 91½ ; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 49½ ; Midland, 124 ; Ditto Birmingham and Derby, 91 ; North British, 45½ ; North-Eastern—York, 88 ; Newcastle, 84½.

LIKELY ALREADY AT FIXED RENTALS.—London and Greenwich, 6½ ; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, 3.

PREFERENCE STOCKS.—Eastern Counties, No. 2, 108 ; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 127 ; London and Brighton, Five per Cents, 118 ; Ditto, Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 1912, 107½ ; Ditto, Four per Cents, 1910, 98 ; London, Chatham, and Dover, 92 ; London and South-Western, 151 ; Midland—Birmingham and Derby, 91 ; Ditto, Bristol and Birmingham, 120 ; South-Eastern—Reading Annuity, 24½ ; West Midland—Oxford 1st guarantee, 51 ; Scinde, 56.

FOREIGN.—Antwerp and Rotterdam, 5⅞ ; West Flanders, Five-and-a-Half per Cent Preference, 5⅞.

Friday Evening.

The English funds in Home Stocks to-day is only limited, at drooping prices. Consols for Money, have marked 93¼ ⅛ ; for Account, 93⅜ ⅛ ; Indian Bonds remain very steady, and there is rather more firmness in the Foreign and Share Markets.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Fresh up to-day very little English wheat reached us, owing to fine and favourable weather, and the general quality of the samples was inferior. The few fine parcels of new wheat on sale were taken off at previous prices. Foreign wheat, both red and white, sold more than a full quarter, at this day's currencies. The imports of foreign wheat have exceeded 20,000 quarters; nevertheless, the demand for all kinds, both for town and country use, was steady, and the quotations almost generally had an upward tendency. Floating cargoes of grain were in request, and good useful wheats were, to-day quarter dearer. Barley was in fair request, at full prices. Malting qualities were in good demand, and useful grades were rather dearer. There was only a moderate business doing in oats and late quotations. Oats, the supply of which was rather limited, were firm, and the turn dearer. Beans, peas, and flour were unaltered, with a fair demand.

Arrivals this Week.—English: wheat, 1930 ; barley, 300 ; malt, 1340 ; oats, 80 ; flour, 1070 sacks and 1000 barrels. Irish: wheat, 1000 ; barley, 1000 ; oats, 1000 ; flour, 1000 sacks. Foreign—wheat, 20,000 ; barley, 1000 ; oats, 1000 ; beans, 1000 ; peas, 1000 ; maize, 1000 ; flour, 1000 sacks and 1000 barrels.

Mark-lane.—Monday.—Fair average business. Wheat, 1s. to 2s. rise ; grinding barley, 2s. to 3s. rise ; distilling ditto, 2s. to 3s. ; malting ditto, 2s. to 3s. rise ; malt, 2s. to 3s. rise ; oats, 1s. to 2s. rise ; beans, 2s. to 3s. rise ; peas, 2s. to 3s. ; Kingston and Ware, 1s. to 2s. rise ; Chevalier, 2s. to 3s. ; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire beans, 2s. to 3s. rise ; tick beans, 2s. to 3s. rise ; white peas, 2s. to 3s. rise ; grey ditto, 2s. to 3s. rise ; flour, 1s. to 2s. rise. Tuesday.—Fair average business. Wheat, 1s. to 2s. rise ; barley, 2s. to 3s. ; malt, 2s. to 3s. ; beans, 1s. to 2s. ; peas, 1s. to 2s. ; flour, 1s. to 2s. rise. Wednesday.—Moderate business. Wheat, 1s. to 2s. rise ; barley, 2s. to 3s. rise ; malt, 2s. to 3s. rise ; oats, 1s. to 2s. rise ; beans, 1s. to 2s. rise ; peas, 1s. to 2s. rise ; flour, 1s. to 2s. rise. Thursday.—Fair average business. Wheat, 1s. to 2s. rise ; barley, 2s. to 3s. rise ; malt, 2s. to 3s. rise ; oats, 1s. to 2s. rise ; beans, 1s. to 2s. rise ; peas, 1s. to 2s. rise ; flour, 1s. to 2s. rise. Friday.—Fair average business. Wheat, 1s. to 2s. rise ; barley, 2s. to 3s. rise ; malt, 2s. to 3s. rise ; oats, 1s. to 2s. rise ; beans, 1s. to 2s. rise ; peas, 1s. to 2s. rise ; flour, 1s. to 2s. rise.

Seeds.—Linseed, in fair request, at full prices. Most other seeds are a dull inquiry, at barely previous quotations.

Linseed, English, crushing, 56s. to 58s. ; Calcutta, 56s. 6d. to 56s. 6d. ; hempseed, 40s. to 42s. ; canary, 60s. to 62s. ; rapeseed, English, pale, new, 40s. to 42s. ; foreign, 38s. to 40s. ; brown, 36s. to 38s. ; coriander, 18s. to 20s. per bushel ; English red, 28s. to 30s. per quarter. Linseed cakes, English, £9 10s. to £10 per ton ; Foreign, £9 to £9 5s. ; rapecake, £5 10s. to £5 15s. ; cotton, £5 10s. to £6 ; poppy, £5 10s. to £6 ; English rape oil, £34 per tun ; refined, £35 per tun.

Potatoes.—The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6d. to 8d. ; of household ditto, 6d. to 7d. per 4lb. loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 38s. 3d. ; barley, 38s. 3d. ; oats, 23s. 9d. ; rye, 36s. 7d. ; beans, 40s. 8d. ; peas, 39s. 8d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 40s. 3d. ; barley, 35s. 4d. ; oats, 24s. 8d. ; rye, 37s. 6d. ; beans, 40s. 8d. ; peas, 39s. 8d.

English Provincial Markets.—Wheat, 52,653 ; barley, 4138 ; oats, 6784 ; rye, 328 ; beans, 1984 ; peas, 291 quarters.

Fat.—Our market is in a moderately supplied state, at the rate of 1s. last quoted on time-bustive, at about previous quotations.

Coals.—Our market has undergone no important change hands to a moderate extent, at full prices. Stewart and Hetton, 16s. 6d. ; Hetton, 16s. 6d. ; Lambton, 16s. 6d. ; Harton, 16s. 6d. ; Wylam, 16s. 6d. to 16s. 6d. ; Haswell, 16s. 6d. ; Hetton Medium, 15s. 6d. ; Braddyll, 15s. ; Hetton Coal, 15s. 6d. ; Hetton Medium, 15s. 6d. ; Hetton Coal, 15s. 6d. ; Braddyll, 15s

NEW BOOKS.

The New and Enlarged Edition of PRE-ADAMITE MAN, published by Messrs. SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO., is now ready, and may be had of all Booksellers.

"The book is in every respect one of the most remarkable that has appeared for a considerable period."—Morning Post.

"Whether our readers relish the writer brings to bear on the subject render the book valuable to men of more than ordinary attainments."—Morning Herald.

"The book possesses a fascination which we believe few of its readers will be able to resist."—Public Ledger.

NEW BOYS' BOOK.

This day, price 9s., with 20 Engravings, pp. 408, crown 8vo, gilt,

THE ILLUSTRATED BOYS' OWN BOOK, containing the most instructive, amusing, and valuable gift-book for boys is totally dissimilar to all other boy's books, and keeps the attendance of boys perfectly illustrated.

WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, price 2s., with Map and numerous Illustrations of Coast-scenery, fcap. 8vo,

HEALTH-RESORTS OF BRITAIN; and How to Use Them. By CHARLES J. SHEAT, M.D. This work is invaluable to the Physician, Invalid, and the Over-wrought Worker desirous of Recreation or Restoration to Health.

London: SIMPKIN and MARSHALL, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, price 8s. 6d., profusely Illustrated, crown 8vo,

LIFE IN THE SEA: A Popular Account of the Nature, Habits, and Functions of Marine Animals. By LASCELLES WRAXALL.—HOULSTON and WRIGHT.

NEW NOVELS.

UNDER A CLOUD. By FREDERICK and JAMES GREENWOOD. 3 vols. post 8vo. (This day.

THE TRADDLETON PEERAGE; Who Was Who, and Why Were They. By GEORGE ALGERNON HALL. 1 vol. post 8vo. (On the 30th inst.

CARLE LEE. By CHARLES WALKEMYER. 1 vol. post 8vo. (This day.

CHARLES J. SKEET, 10, King William-street, Charing-cross.

This day, 1s. 30 wide-page Engravings, fcap 8vo, 1s.

ILLUSTRATED LIFE AND CAREER OF GARIBALDI; containing full Details of his Conduct, During Emancipation, Campaigns, and Services.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, with Illustrations by "Phiz," cloth gilt, 6s.

LADY CHERRIFELDS'S LETTERS TO HER DAUGHTER. By Q. A. SALA, Author of "The Building Fraternity," "Twice Round the Clock," &c. Contents:—

This day, crown 8vo., price 3s. 6d., strongly bound, cloth gilt,

FRENCH WINES AND VINEYARDS, AND HOW TO TREAT THEM. By OTTER RIDDLE.

London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT, 65, Paternoster-row.

This day, price 1s. 6d., neat profusely Illustrated Boards, gilt,

THE GIRL'S BIRTHDAY BOOK, Uniform with "The Boy's Birthday Book."

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

This day, with Illustrations by "Phiz," cloth gilt, 6s.

LADY CHERRIFELDS'S LETTERS TO HER DAUGHTER. By Q. A. SALA, Author of "The Building Fraternity," "Twice Round the Clock," &c. Contents:—

This day, crown 8vo., price 3s. 6d., strongly bound, cloth gilt,

FRENCH WINES AND VINEYARDS, AND HOW TO TREAT THEM. By OTTER RIDDLE.

London: HOULSTON and WRIGHT, 65, Paternoster-row.

A BEAUTIFUL BOOK FOR BOYS.

Illustrated with 100 Engravings. Cloth gilt, 3s. post-free.

THE BOYS OF A SHIP FROM HER CRADLE TO HER GRAVE. By GRANDPA BEN.

A favourite book to present to the full with excellent engravings, illustrations, and diagrams, explanatory of the mysteries of a ship. It is a genuine, pleasing, treasure to boys, and should become possessed of a copy.—The Standard.

London: W. KENT and CO., 51, Fleet-street, and 187, Piccadilly.

This day, 1vop 8vo,

A GUIDE TO THE ISLE OF WIGHT, ITS APPROACHES, AND PLACES OF RESORT; with Historical Notices and Excursions; and a general Description of its Topography, Agriculture, Products, and Manufactures. By WILLIAM HILLS, Author of "Sketches of Natural History," "Rambles in Search of Health," "Rambles in Search of Amusement," &c. With Maps, Illustrations, and other coloured Local Notabilities. With Maps, containing popular References to Remarkable Localities, Antiquities, Landing-places for Boats, &c., and Plans of the Principal Towns. Also, Illustrations of Fossils, and the Adjacent Coast-scenery, and Geological Diagrams. Price 5s. 6d.; or, with the Map mounted on linen and in a separate case, 6s. 6d.

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 6, Charing-cross, S.W.

Now ready, in 1 vol., No. 1—July, 1860,

PHOTOGRAPHIC QUARTERLY REVIEW. Edited by THOMAS SUTTON.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE, and RIVINGTON, 188, Fleet-street.

NEW SERIAL.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD. Conducted by CHARLES DICKENS.

Office, 12, Fleet-street, London.

Now ready, price 3d.,

POPULAR ABSTRACT of the REFRESHMENT HOUSES and WINE LICENSES ACT, with Notes, By a PARLIAMENTARY AGENT.

To whom all communications are to be addressed, 15, Hampden-road, Upper Holloway, Ancl-street, Strand. 1860.

Now Ready, Illustrated Magazine of Fashions,

LA MODE ILLUSTREE, Journal de la Famille, published every Saturday, and containing the most fashionable Modes of the Week. Subscription, Quarterly, Crowned, Seven Shillings.

Annual Subscription, ... 28s.

Edited by good Irish Poet. ... ... 12s.

A Specimen Number may be had on application.

Fourth Edition, published, price 6d., or by post, 7d.,

DISEASES OF THE SKIN: a Guide to their Treatment by Simple Remedies. Illustrated by Cases. By THOMAS HUNT, Surgeon to the Western General Dispensary, Author of "Plain Directions for the Management of Infancy," &c. Also, just published, price 6d., or by post, 7d.,

DISEASES OF THE BRAIN: their Nature, Symptoms, Diagnosis, Treatment, and Prevention. By FORBES WINSLOW, M.D., D.C.L.

"A most valuable exposition of every anomalous phase which cerebral disease in its physical and psychical operations has been found to assume, and which will be found a most useful work of reference in the treatment of cases in relation to the medico-legal questions of the mind and obscure and insidious diseases of the brain."—The Lancet.

London: J. CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

Just published, in 8vo, with seven steel plates, Third Edition, price 12s.,

CORPULENCY, and its new Self-dietary Cure. By WILLIAM BANTING. Edited by MONCK MASON, M.R.I.A. and M. PRATT, 42, Tavistock-street, Finden, S.W.

Just published, 8vo by post three stamps,

GABRIELLE'S TASTE on the New and only Effectual Mode of Supplying ARTIFICIAL TEETH, without Springs or Wires.

110, Regent-street, W.; 33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

NEW EDITION OF THE AUTHOR OF "THE LADDLE LECTURES."

This post free, the Author kindling prize 10s. 6d.,

THE BROWNRIGG PAPERS, by the late JOHN BROWNRIGG, embodying many of the interesting Letters from the pen of this admired writer, first collected, is ready at all Circulating Libraries and Booksellers.

London: JOHN CAMDEN HOTTEN, Piccadilly.

THIRTY-SIX ILLUSTRATED BIBLE STORIES, with twenty 300 Bible Pictures, a Pictorial Sunday-book for the young, handsomely bound and gilt edges, 6s. 6d.; originally published at 10s. 6d.; post-free from FIELDS' Great Bible Warehouse, 65, Regent-street, London. Every family should have this pretty book.

50,000 BIBLES, Prayer-books, and Church Services, Atlases, Scientific Books, and Standard Authors, on Sale, in every variety of Binding, at FIELDS' GREAT BIBLE WAREHOUSE, 65, Regent-street, W. Catalogues (3 stamps) free. Established 30 years.

ILLUSTRATED FAMILY BIBLES, Pocket Bibles, Prayer-books, and Church Services. The greatest variety in London, at FIELDS' GREAT BIBLE WAREHOUSE, 65, Regent-street, W. Catalogues (3 stamps) free. Established 30 years.

THE AQUARIUM.—LLOYD'S DESCRIPTIVE LIST, 1s. 6d.; and 80 cuts, 2s. 6d. Postage-stamps. Apply direct to W. Lloyd, Liverpool, Portland-road, W.

NEW MUSIC.

HENRY FARMER'S VOLUNTEER RIFLE-CORPS MARCH, for the Pianoforte, composed for the Quadrille Band of the Volunteer Rifle Corps, London. Price 2s. Lamborn Cock, 23, Holles-street.

HENRY FARMER'S GEMS OF CHRISTY MINSTRELS, nightly arranged for the Pianoforte, in 8 numbers, 2s. each. Lamborn Cock, 23, Holles-street. Order of any Music-seller.

HENRY FARMER'S JUPITER QUADRILLE. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Solo, Duet, or Duo, 4s. 6d.; Orchestra, 5s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Mile-street, E.C.

HENRY FARMER'S BLANCHE VALSE. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Solo, Duet, or Duo, 4s. 6d.; Orchestra, 5s. Septet, 3s. 6d.; Octobers, 3s.

London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Mile-street, E.C.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW PIANOFORTE ALBUM, containing the most fashionable Dances now being performed at the Court and Public Balls. Price 6s.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S RIFLE GALOP, by GEORGE HUTCHINSON. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Solo, Duet, or Duo, 4s.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside; and 5, Mile-street, E.C.

THE FRIEND'S GIFT: a Collection of the Best Tunes, Hymns, and Chants, in every key and elegant manner, and fingered for the Piano. By J. BRUNNER. In Twelve Books, price 1s. each. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside; and 5, Mile-street, E.C.

THE MODERN SINGING-MASTER ON THE ART OF SINGING. By F. BUSCH. Illustrated with 130 Examples. Price 2s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

OH, FAIREST ITALY! Barcarole. Words by ALFRED BUNN. Music by C. COTTRELL. Price 2s. Second-ed.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Mile-street, E.C.

THE MOUSQUETAIRE'S MESSAGE. Sung by Mr Sinclair, encored at the Surrey Gardens. Words by E. MILLS, Band-master.

NEW POLKA.—THE LADIES' RIFLE POLKA. Price 2s. By J. BERNARD. Author of the Galopy Band Quadrilles, the Scots' Greys Polka, &c. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours by "The Ladies' Rifle Corps." From the pen of this distinguished Artiste, who may be pronounced as one of the best that has appeared for a long time.

London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Mile-street, E.C.

NEW SONG.—OLD FRIENDS AND OTHER DAYS. Composed by W. VINCENT WALLACE. Price 2s. The words are from the pen of the distinguished Comedian, Mr. Charles Mathews, and the music, which he has written for this Fanny Herbert, set will be found a perfect gem by all executive Vocalists.—JOHN BOOSEY, 28, Holles-street.

NEW CAVATINA, THE SPIRIT OF MORN, composed by C. HOLMES. Price 2s. Sung by Signor Gardoni, with immense success, in the quaint character of Henry "The Minstrel," in the new opera of "Matilda of Hungary," and a little beyond ballad will be pleased with this composition.

London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Mile-street, E.C.

ROBERT COCKS and CO'S LISTS, CATALOGUES, and PRICES CURRENT of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

CATALOGUE of Vocal Music, Pianoforte Music, Music in the MONTHLY LIST OF NOVELTIES.

Catalogue of Organ Music.

Catalogue of Concertina Music.

Catalogue of Harmonium Music.

Catalogue of Instruction-books for various Instruments.

Catalogue of Musical Instruments.

Catalogue of Pianofortes.

Catalogue of Drawing-room Music, Plates and Vocal.

Handel's Messiah Instructive Edition.

Handel's Modern Instructive Edition.

Hullah's Method for Singing.

Hullah's Method for Singing, Part II.

Hamilton's Dictionary of Musical Terms, 6th Edition, 1s.

Hamilton's Modern Instructions for the Pianoforte, 280th Edition, 4s.

Hullah's Exercises for Singing, 1s.

Hamilton's Dictionary of Musical Terms, 6th Edition, 1s.

Hullah's Exercises for Singing, 32nd Edition, 1s.

London: ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street; and of all Music-sellers.

FREDERICK DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker to the Queen and Prince Consort, and maker of the Great Clock for the Exhibition Tower, 1851, begs to call attention to his Stock of Gold and Silver Watches, Clocks, &c.

SAEL and SONS, 17 and 18, Cornhill, respectfully solicit a visit to their magnificent Establishment. Every article is more particularly adapted for Presents. Ivory and Gold Dressing, Gold and Silver Watches, and Fine Gold Chains. Their Stock of Jewellery is the largest in London, and consists of every novelty in the newest and most elegant designs. In the magnificent Showroom is displayed a large and beautiful stock of Clocks, the manufacture of which has been in the hands of the family many generations. Sael and Sons have also fitted up a separate Department for Plate, in which will be found a choice assortment of Desks suitable for Presents.

Sael and Sons, 17 and 18, Cornhill.

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturing Silversmiths, 14 and 15, Cornhill, and 9, Regent-street, beg to call attention to their SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, which are of the highest quality, and strongly plated on nickel. Many other patterns recently finished, plain or highly ornamented.

Fiddle Pattern	£1	4	0	£1	16	0
Old English	1	10	0	2	15	0
Double Thread	2	0	0	3	0	0
King's Pattern	2	10	0	3	15	0
Old English Thread	2	15	0	4	0	0
Lily Pattern	3	0	0	4	10	0
Bead Pattern	3	10	0	4	15	0
Honeysuckle	3	15	0	5	0	0
Antique Pattern	4	0	0	5	5	0

Tea and Coffee Services, Cruet Frames, Dish Covers, Corner Dishes, Waiters, Candlesticks, Candelabra, Chimney-piece Ornaments, Inkstands, Tea Trays, Urns, Kettles, Lamps, Baskets, Cutlery, Table Knives, Fenders, Fire-irons, Bronzes, Marble Clocks, Dressing-cases, Portmanteaus, Bags, Writing-cases, Envelope-cases, Despatch-boxes, Work-boxes, Ladies' Companions, Tea Caddies, Tea Chests, Tea Urns, Tea Kettles, Coal-boxes, Table Cutlery, Razors, Razor-strops, Pocket-knives, Scissors, Penknives, Tea Trays

NEW MUSIC.

D'ALBERT'S OBERON QUADRILLE, Another Edition of this favourite Quadrille is just published, price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES or ST. JAMES'S GALOP. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated with a Portrait (in Colours) of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales by BAXTER. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S GARIBALDI GALOP. Splendidly Illustrated with a Portrait of the great Chief by BLAETTLER. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S QUEEN OF HEARTS. New Waltz, just out, beautifully Illustrated in Colours, with Portrait of the Queen. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S HERO AND LEANDER. New Waltz. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. With Cornet Accompaniment. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S FLORIMELLE. New Waltz. Just out. Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. With Cornet Accompaniment. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLE. A new Quadrille on the most favourite of Moore's Melodies. Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ. A new Waltz on the favourite song of 'Kathleen Mavourneen.' Splendidly Illustrated. Splendidly Illustrated. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S ITALIAN CAMPAIGN QUADRILLE. A new Set. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S NEW POLKA, THE BIG SHIP OR GREAT EASTERN POLKA. Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for VIOLIN. Just published, a Second Series of One Hundred Dances for the Violin, principally from the Operas of the above celebrated Composer. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for ORCHESTRA. Just published, "Alida (Verdi) Quadrille," "Big Ship Polka," "Princess Royal Waltz," and "Prince of Wales Waltz." Price 2s. each. Full Orchestra. Also, "Garibaldi Galop," price 2s. 6d. each small Orchestra. In Catalogues of this popular Composer's works may be had gratis and postage-free on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, brilliant Variations on the favourite Air by the above popular Composer. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LAST PIECE, "Come sol d'accordo," the favourite Song from "Almina." Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and cheapest of all. Containing Scales—Accompanying elementary lessons, exercises, and a great variety of the most popular pieces as progressively arranged. Sixty pages, full music size, price 4s., post-free. "A List of Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NEW OPERATIC FANTASIAS. Just published, KUHE'S DIAMANS DE LA COURONNE, 3s. 6d. KUHE'S DOMINO NOIR, 3s. 6d. KUHE'S MARTHA, 3s. 6d. KUHE'S DON GIOVANNI, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

INDAHL'S FETE DES VIGNERONS. The last new piece for the Pianoforte by this popular Composer. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GLUCK'S IPHIGENIA complete, for VOICE and PIANOFORTE. A new and beautiful Edition, adapted to each. Price 10s. 6d. Also, "Iphigenia" for Violin, in one book, price 3s. 6d. Also, "Iphigenia" for Violoncello, in one book, price 3s. 6d. Just published, in duet, price 10s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE LAST GOOD-BYE. Sung by Mdme. Lucia Easter, for whom it was expressly composed by W. V. WALLACE. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LILY BELLS. Expressly composed for Mdlle. Emma Lucia, and sung by her in the popular Composer of "Lurline," &c. &c. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE BELLRINGER. Sung by Mr. Santley. Their first duet of this beautiful Song, by WALLACE, which has created such a furore at the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, &c., is now ready. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LURLINE and VICTORINE. All the Airs from these favourite Operas arranged for the Violin, in one book, by FRANZ NAVA. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

LURLINE and VICTORINE. All the Airs from these favourite Operas arranged for the Cornet, in one book, by FRANZ NAVA. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ENGEL'S NEW DUETS for HARMONIUM and PIANOFORTE, just out—
No 1. Lurline ... ... 4s.
2. Il Trovatore ... ... 4s.
3. Il Don Giovanni ... ... 4s.
In the press, Grand Duo from "Oberon." CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S CELEBRATED TUTOR. A Concise and Easy Book of Instruction for the Harmonium, with a Selection of Pieces from Eminent Masters. In Quadrilles and Co., 30, New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S NEW VOLUNTARIES. Expressly suited to small Churches and Chapels. In duets, 3s. each; or in single Nos., 2s. each. New Bond-street.

RIMBAULT'S 200 CHANTS, from the Books of the various Cathedrals. Arranged for the Harmonium in duets, price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

I LOVE YOU, New Song by BALFE, composed expressly for Mdme. Rudersdorff, and sung by her with enthusiastic success at Mdme. Salmon-Dolby's concert at St. James's Hall. Price 3s. Also, "Good Night, Beloved," Duet, sung by Mdme. and Signor Gardoni. Price 4s.

NOT A MINUTE TO SPARE—A Sacred Song. By TOLLIT. One of this popular Composer's best productions. A Song in every lover of harmony and good poetry will admire. Price 2s.—H. TOLLIT, 87, King William-st., City.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BEAUTIFUL DUVE. The latest and most fascinating production of this charming Composer. Price 3s. The above delightful melody as a Song at Vocal Duet.—H. TOLLIT, 87, London-bridge, City.

MUSIC HALF PRICE and Postage-free.—Mr. ALL'S Catalogue of Music forwarded to any part of the Kingdom on receipt of a post-paid stamp, to the amount of half the published price. Catalogues gratis. The Profession and Trade supplied on selling terms.—Holland Bridge," at publisher, 201, Regent-street.—SEYMOUR and Co., 38, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, London.

NEW MUSIC.

ASCHER'S CLOCHES du VILLAGE. Fantasia, Brilliant, and Easy, on Favourite Opera, "Les Noces de Jeannette." Price 4s. Just published. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LEOPOLD de MEYER'S SOUVENIR de NAPLES. Fantaisie Originale, as performed by the Author, by command of the Queen, at Buckingham Palace, and in all the Concerts of the season. Price 4s. Just published. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

NOTRE DAME. Romance for the Pianoforte by ÉMILE BERGER. Founded on a very beautiful subject by Virginie. Price 3s. Illustrated by Kaby. Published this day by ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

KUHE'S ROBERT LE DIABLE. The newest Fantasia of this favourite Composer. Price 3s. Published this day by ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' RIFLEMEN FORM. MARCH, performed by all the Volunteer and Military Bands. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours by KABY. Price 3s. Just published. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LAURENT'S SANTA LUCIA VALSE on L'Album. Joseph Mazas's celebrated song is published this day, price 3s. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' VIOLIN CLASSICA. Just published,
No. 1. De Beriot's Scena Ad Arie (1 to 7) complete ... 1s. 7d.
2. Kreutzer's 42 Studies or Caprices ... ... 1s. 6d.
3. Rode's 24 Caprices complete ... ... 1s. 6d.
4. Fiorillo's 36 Studies or Caprices ... ... 1s. 6d.
ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

KUHE'S DOMINO NOIR, 3s.; Kuhe's Zampa, 3s.; Kuhe's Signilda, 3s.; Kuhe's Semiramide, 3s.; Kuhe's Estrella, 3s.; Kuhe's Diamants Valse, 4s. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

Just published, price 4s.,
RAMSGATE SANDS QUADRILLE. A Comic and Characteristic Set. By Frederic Allen. The Introduction and Finale in Colours by BLAETTLER.
No. 1. The Excursionists.
No. 2. The Bathers. No. 3. Rampsgate Sands!
No. 4. The Rescue
ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

GARIBALDI. March for the Pianoforte by EMILE BERGER. Illustrated with a Portrait of General Garibaldi in Colours by BLAETTLER. Price 3s. Just published. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S SANTA LUCIA: a Fantasia on Themes from the Opera of the celebrated Composer, Gaetano Donizetti. Price 3s. Just published. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE SHADOW AIR from DINORAH. This is the celebrated Air in the Shadow Scene in the various forms of—1. A popular Edition for Amateurs, with English and Italian words, price 2s. 2. For Violin and Pianoforte, 3s. 3. For Violin, Violoncello, and Pianoforte, 4s. 4. For Violin and Harmonium, 3s. 5. For Flute and Piano, 3s. 6. For Violin and Piano, 3s. ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CHRISTY MINSTRELS' NEWEST SONGS, Darling Willie ... ... Price 3s.
Come Mind Words by J. Bruton ...
Ella is Coming in the Spring ...
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 33, Great Marlborough-street, W.

YES OR NO. New Song by STEPHEN GLOVER. "Yes or no" is a question which will become one of the most popular of the year. Price 3s., post-free. METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 33, Great Marlborough-street, W.

ROSES BLOOM IN SUMMER ONLY. By STEPHEN GLOVER. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours by BLAETTLER. Price 3s. METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 33, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SPRING-TIDE. New Vocal Duet. By R. F. HARVEY. "Spring-tide" is one of the most popular by this well-known composer." Price 3s. 6d., post-free. METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 33, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MALAGA VALSES. By T. BROWNE. Illustrated with a Portrait of the Author in Colours. With highly-finished Coloured Illustration. Price 4s., post-free. METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 33, Great Marlborough-street, W.

ULLIEN'S ADIEU VALSE. One of his most popular sets, and with the only Portrait of this celebrated Composer. Price 4s. METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 33, Great Marlborough-street, W.

LE BENGALI. French Romance. Sung by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby. Price 3s. Illustrated by KABY, with highly-finished Portrait. METZLER and CO., 37, 38, and 33, Great Marlborough-street, W.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANO-FORTE, price Fifty Guineas.—This instrument has (unlike the Cottage Pianoforte) the full compass of seven octaves, and is constructed on the principle of the Grand Pianoforte, which renders it the most suitable for the greatest amount of tone, and to stand perfectly in any climate. The touch is elastic, and the check action by which tone is sound, full, and rich; and the power equal to that of a Grand Pianoforte. The case is of solid rosewood, with carved fronts of wood, the touch ivory, and the pedals complete. Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure its standing well in tune. Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.—The Queen, Her Majesty's Theatre, and manufactory, for the Foreign Model, having secured that extensive and valuable premises, Messrs. Chappell have removed to the Queen's Concert Rooms, 3, Hanover-square, where the Foreign Model (and all desired) catalogued within twenty months of the purchase.—50, New Bond-street.

HARMONIUMS at CHAPPELL'S.—The HARMONIUM by ALEXANDRE is the only instrument of the kind which has received the approval of the Académie Impériale de Musique, and is used by singers at the Opéra, and is also sanctioned for the Church, Chapel, School, or Drawing-room.
No. 1. In mahogany case, one stop, 12 guineas.
2. In mahogany case, two stops, 14 guineas.
3. With 2½ octaves of pedals, two rows of keys, 16 guineas.
4. With 2½ octaves of pedals, two rows of keys, and 8 stops, 25 guineas.
5. Eight stops—oak, 35 guineas; rosewood, 39 guineas.
6. Ten stops, percussion action, in oak, 40 guineas.
7. Ten stops, and percussion action, in oak, 42 guineas.
8. Twelve stops, percussion action, in oak, 50 guineas.
9. Twelve stops, percussion action, in oak, 60 guineas.
10. Twelve stops, percussion action, in rosewood, 45 guineas.
11. The new patent model—13 stops, percussion action, expression & la main, &c.—the most perfect Harmonium ever made, in handsome oak or rosewood case, 60 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE PATENT DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 60 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues of Harmoniums and Pianofortes, with Opinions of the Press, forwarded on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; or 13, George-street, Hanover-square.

TO PURCHASERS of PIANOFORTES.—CHAPPELL and CO. have now ready for delivery a NEW CABINET PIANOFORTE for Sale, by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ERARD, and CHAPPELL, in Rosewood and Walnut-tree cases, of every description.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TENTH THOUSAND.—THE PIANOFORTE—Its Tone, Touch, and Mechanism. By JAMES W. DAVISON. With 100 Musical Examples. Second edition, enlarged and improved. Post 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. "The only Pianoforte-tutor manufactured expressly for the million."—Musical World. "Worth its weight in gold. In elegant design, including cases, 40 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues forwarded on application.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TOLKIEN'S PIANOS.—Public attention is respectfully invited to the Manufactory of Messrs. Tolkien, Renewed and Walnut-tree Cottages and Pianos, 42 octaves, with the Trichord Treble, Check Action, and Trapwork. The Tone and Touch May be purchased, on easy terms, at 87, King William-street, London Bridge. Illustrated Lists forwarded on application.

TOLKIEN'S 25-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, with easy terms of purchase, cornet stanges, and various woods, 42 octaves, is superior to any English or Foreign Piano at the price. Twenty-five pounds has not proved the truth of this. Illustrated Catalogue gratis.—87, King William-street, London-bridge, EC.

EVANS'S HARMONIUMS with PEDALS.—EVANS'S HARMONIUMS, with two rows of keys, two octaves, and a third of German pedals, with independent pedal reeds, are now ready. The musical profession are invited to call and inspect these Harmoniums, the newest approach to an organ that has yet been attempted.
ROOSEY and SONS, Holles-street, London.

THE UNIVERSAL CIRCULATING MUSICAL LIBRARY is the largest in the world. The classified Catalogue contains one hundred pages, and is forwarded free on application. Annual Subscription, Two Guineas. Prospectuses and oblique Subscribers to the Quicksilver Mail, Bell's Life, Reynolds's Newspaper, Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, and the Illustrated London News, and Quicksilver Mail, Bell's Life, Reynolds's Newspaper, and 44, Tottenham-court-road. Prospectuses on Newspaper-street, and 44, Tottenham-court-road. Prospectuses on application.

HOSPITAL for CONSUMPTION and DISEASES of the CHEST, Brompton, K.W.—Subscriptions are earnestly solicited towards the support of this Hospital, which is entirely dependent upon the charity, which has no endowment. PHILIP SCOTT, Hon. Sec. HENRY BODKIN, Sec.

THE IRON BRIDGE ASSOCIATION, 58, Pall-mall, London, manufacture and erect Iron Bridges, Piers, and Landing-stages, and have for sale the patented Iron Gutters, Iron Sashes, Hammocks, &c.

THE AGRICULTURAL ENGINEERS' COMPANY (Limited), Cross-lane, Upper Thames-street, London, E.C., Manufacturers of AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS, Steam Engines, Railway and Contractors' Plant, Hydraulic Machinery, Machine Machinery, Machine Tools, Machinists, Brass Machinery, and every description of Tools and Machines. Prices and full information upon application.

PATENT CRYSTAL WINDOW-BARS, for shop and domestic windows, conservatories, observatories, &c. Apply to the Patentees, WILLIAMS and HALL, Park Gateway, No. 19, Parkes-street, Upper Holloway.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, with all the recent Improvements, strong Fireproof Safes, Cash and Deed Boxes. Complete Lists and Prices may be had upon application. CHUBB and SON, 57, St Paul's-churchyard, London.

DON'T BEAT YOUR CARPETS.—They can be thoroughly cleansed by the most inquisitive, and the softest revived, 3d., 4d., per yard. Artizan removed from all parts of the Kingdom. 27, Bedford-street, Strand.

THE COMPANY have devoted an entire department to the thorough CLEANSING and PURIFYING of every description of CARPET. 27, Bedford-street, Strand.

SOILED LACE, MUSLIN, and DAMASK CURTAINS, Shawls, Dresses, and Gentleman's Dress Blended, Cleaned, or Dyed in a better manner than has yet been known. 27, Bedford-street, Strand.

SOILED CHINTZ and CRUMB-CLOTHS Cleansed and Glazed equal to new. Dresses, Shawls, and Gentlemen's Dress Cleaned or Dyed. 27, Bedford-street, Strand.

BLEACHING and DYEING are brought by this Company to a high state of perfection, which, combined with very moderate charges, specially recommends itself to the Nobility, Gentry, and general public. 27, Bedford-street, Strand. BLEACHING and DYEING COMPANY. FAIRY, Manager.

CHINA and GLASS.—Mr. PEARCE, having now completed his alterations and improvements for entering on a larger stock of China and Glass, invites inspection of his new and extensive Stock of Dinner, Dessert, Breakfast, Tea, and Toilet Services, Ornamental Articles of Cut Table Glass, Crystal Chandeliers, Gasoliers, &c.
Quality, quality, taste, and low prices.
27, Lisle-street, Leicester-square, Facing Hemming's Hotel.

TO NOBLEMEN, GENTLEMEN, and CONNOISSEURS. JOHN MAPLE and CO. respectfully announce that they have in stock a most BEAUTIFUL SIDEBOARD. Price 15l. guineas, not a quarter its real value. 145, Tottenham-court-road.

MAPLE and CO.'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the prices of every article required for furnishing, may be had gratis, or sent by post. It is the largest and most convenient furnishing establishment in the world. J. MAPLE and CO., 145, 146, Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO., 145, Tottenham-court-road, CARPETS. Magnificent Brussels, 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard. 145, 146, 147, Tottenham-court-road.

HEAL and SON'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE contains Prices and Plans of 150 Articles of BEDROOM FURNITURE, as well as of 100 Bedsteads, and prices of Bedding, sent free by post. 196, Tottenham-court-road. Bedstead, Bedding, and Bedroom Furniture Manufactories, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

HANDSOME BRASS and IRON BEDSTEADS.—HEAL and SON have the largest assortment in London to select from, and supply them at the lowest possible prices. Handsome Bedsteads with Brass Mountings and elegantly Japanned; plain Iron Bedsteads for Servants: every Bedstead warranted, and fitted with their Patent Sacking. Heal and Son's Illustrated Catalogue contains Prices and Plans of 100 different Bedsteads, with Bedding complete, as well as Descriptions of their Bedroom Furniture Manufactories, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, CHIMNEY-PIECE, and TABLE, consisting of ALABASTER, BRONZE, and DERBYSHIRE SPAR ORNAMENTS.—Manufactured by HEAL and SON, 196, Tottenham-court-road, W.

SCIENTIFIC PRESENTS.—Collections of Minerals, Rocks, Recent Shells, and Fossils, in Illustrated Cabinets, from 1l. 1s. to 100 guineas. Also, Microscopes, from 1l. 1s. to 50 guineas. CHARLES TURNER, Mineral Lecturer, 149, Strand, London.

SOLID GOLD CHAINS.—A large and beautiful Stock of Gold Chains, from the most approved Patterns, manufactured by Messrs. Benson, Watchmakers to the Queen, Goldsmith, 149, Regent-street (four doors below Beak-street), W. The New List of Prices sent free.

DENTS CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS.—M. F. DENT, 33, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, and 61, Strand, Manufacturer of Chronometers and Watches to Her Majesty the Queen and the Royal Family.

BROADBAND and BAKER, 31, Gracechurch-street, City, established 1800, Chronometer-makers to the Admiralty, Trinity House, and Honourable East India Company. Duplex and Lever Watches, of the most improved construction, at moderate prices. Astronomical Clocks, Compasses, &c.

AUNT SALLY, Croquêt, Jack's Alive, and every other kind of out-of-door as well as in-door Games, to be had, Illustrated with most perfect Directions, at Wholesale Toyshop, Cheapside (corner of Paternoster-row).

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—The Field Service Portfolio, Dressing-case, and Writing-desk, combined, Portmanteau, Bag, and Knapsack, Portfolio, Dressing-case, and Writing-desk, combined with great power, FIELD, BACKGAMMON, OFFER, and other GAMES, and a new and elegant Portable Pianoforte and PERSPECTIVE GLASSES, weighing only four ounces each, constructed on entirely new principles, and of extraordinary power and clearness, by appointment, to be had only of the Inventor and Manufacturer, J. AMADIO, 26, Regent-street. Opera and race glasses in endless variety, of larger and all sizes, with increasing powers, and are sensed by Field Officers in the Eastern Palace.

A SMALL POWERFUL DAY and NIGHT WATERPROOF-POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to be had of the Inventor and Manufacturer, J. AMADIO, 26, Regent-street. Sole MAGIC LANTERNS and DISSOLVING VIEWS AGENT for the Exhibition of Photographic Pictures. Lists of Prices sent Free. MAGIC LANTERNS and DISSOLVING VIEWS AGENT.

SPECTACLES.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at an advanced age to read with ease, and to prevent failure with extreme old age.—Messrs. BLAIR and SON have invented SPECTACLE LENSES of the greatest transparent power, and of the most perfect adaptation to the sight, which will retain beauty, and preserve natural and strengthened, very aged persons will be able to employ their sight at the most minute occupation; can see with these lenses of a much less magnifying power, and they do not require the frequent change, to the dangerous effects of extreme old age.—Observatory, 3, Adelaide-street, Strand.

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme cases of Deafness, called the Sound Magnifier, Organic Vibrator, or Head Resonator. It is the size of an ear-trumpet, and is so constructed as to concentrate a number of sonorous waves in the head in entirely removed. It affords instant relief to deaf persons, and enables them to hear in a manner perfect to deaf persons, and enables them to hear in a manner perfect to nature. Sold by the Inventor and Manufacturer, Professor W. HEARDER, Optician, 24, Cockspur-street, Piccadilly W.

THE NEW WASHING BAREGE is GRENADAYNE.—HEWELL and CO., Compton House.

THE NEW FRENCH REAL CASHMERE SHAWLS, introduced in various styles. HEWELL and CO., Compton House.

THE RICHEST MOIRE ANTIQUES manufactured, 41 Guineas the Dress. HEWELL and CO., Compton House.

FRENCH SILKS imported under the New Tariff. New Styles, 40s. 44s., 3l. 11s. 6d. per yard. HEWELL and CO., Compton House.

SOIES DES FEES, Gaze de Chambéry, Gaze Victoria, Grenadine de Paris, and other new Fabrics for Evening Dress. HEWELL and CO., Compton House.

EVENING and BALL DRESSES in the NEWEST MATERIALS. The Skirts made and trimmed complete. HEWELL and CO., Compton House.

HOUSEHOLD LINEN DEPARTMENT.—The Proprietors of the LADIES' EXCHANGE, 21, Sloane-street, Hyde-park, Illustrated Lists of fifty years, will send gratis and post-free, on application or personal visit, a large RUN DOUBLE DAMASK TABLE-CLOTHS, with Napkins and Slips alike to match, diaper and damask, 2 yards square, 10s. 6d.; 2½ yards square, 12s. 6d.; 3 yards square, 14s. 6d.; 3½ yards square, 16s. 6d.; 4 yards square, 18s.; tea-towels, medical, Baden-Baden, roll towellings, glass and knife cloths, dusters, &c., linen sheeting, pillow-case linen, and counterpanes. Carriage paid upon amounts above 2l. Families waited upon at home in town.

SILKS, Rich, Plain, Striped, and Checked Glacé, 40 Guineas per Dress of 12 yards, well worth the attention of families. Also, Rich Brocade Moire Antiques, and other Fashionable Fabrics. Patterns free.—HOWELL, JAMES, and CO., 4, Lodgate-hill. Established upwards of 50 years. Carriage paid upon amounts above 5l.

FRENCH SILKS, MOIRES ANTIQUES, at Two Guineas and a Half the Dress for nine yards, or any quantity cut. Patterns free.—HOWELL, JAMES, and CO., 4, Lodgate-hill. Have just received several cases of these goods in all colours, and a large quantity of Black and Coloured Glacés, well worth the attention of families.

REAL BRUSSELS LACE!! R. W. SEWELL has now on Sale, at one-half the usual prices, a Choice selection of Real Brussels Flounces, Lappets, Veils, Scarfs, Laces, Handkerchiefs, Collars, Sleeves, &c. Also, real Black Brussels Lace Veils, 3 yards long, 1 yard deep, elegantly bordered.—W. SEWELL, 364, Oxford-street, W.

CHRISTENING ROBES, 2l Guineas. Bebtist Cloaks, 1 Guinea. Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR. Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR.

BABIES' BERCEAUNETTES, 35 Guineas. Baskets to match. Cox Gobien. Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR, 3, Baker-street.

MARRIAGE OUTFITS. Cotton Hosiery, 4s. 6d. White Cambric Pocket Handkerchiefs, 2s. per dozen. Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR, 3, Baker-street.

LADIES' RIDING TROUSERS. Cassock Trousers, with black feet. 23, Baker-street. Mrs. G. TAYLOR.

LINSEY RIDING-HABITS for LITTLE GIRLS, 35 Guineas. Ladies' Riding-Habits, 4 Guineas. Mrs. W. G. TAYLOR, 3, Baker-street.

VERY IMPORTANT to LADIES.—The LADIAPTE DOMESTYLES is now in full detail at moderate prices, and is universally allowed to be the most economical, unique, and beautiful waist-body ever yet introduced. Registered.

THE BABY'S CLOTHES PROTECTOR saves much trouble, and prevents the usual amount of trouble and vexation. Sold at all Baby Linen Warehouses. Wholesale, Mrs. TAYLOR and CO., 36, Regent-street, Piccadilly.

JUVENILE CLOTHING.—Probably no Firm in London has paid more attention to Juvenile Clothing than Messrs. Cave and Wortzapph. This branch is an ever-increasing one, and they are making in our changes in accordance with the Establishment.
N.B. Fixed prices, in plain figures. Cash terms. No deviation. Registered Juvenile Dress Coat, 21s. Edgware-road.

OUTFITS for INDIA and CHINA supplied by THRESHER and GLENNY, 152, Strand, London.

THE FASHIONABLE FRENCH STRAW BONNET, Registered, No. 56, 5s. 6d. Ditto Black Paris Chips, 8s. Military Bonnets equally moderate.—Mrs. TAYLOR, 3, Baker-street, Portman-square. Registered.

BONNETS.—MARKS and GAVELL, from Paris, have just received a large assortment of every colour, superior to all others for fitting the head, at 10s. 6d. Registered Crown Bonnet, 21s. Edgware-road.

SYDENHAM TROUSERS, 17s. 6d. Of worth, though oft repeated, yet untold; the price only 17s. 6d. Made only by SAMUEL BROTHERS, 29, Ludgate-hill.

DRESSING-CASES, DRESSING-BAGS, and WRITING-DESKS, in every material and of every variety. Every-handed Table Cutlery. Every requisite for the Toilet and Travelling. Illustrated Lists sent free.—MECHI and BAZIN, 4, Leadenhall-street, and Cornhill, London.

NO CHARGE MADE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with ARMS, CREST, or INITIALS. ILLUMINATED ADDRESSES, Albums, Heraldic Works, Seals, Dies, Steel Note, Fall size, free quires for 4d. Thick Note, free quires for 3s. 6d. Perfumery, 2s. per box. T. CULLETON, 25, Cornhill.

WEDDING CARDS, WEDDING ENVELOPES, Invitations to the Ceremony, Dejeuner, and Ball, Programmes of the Day, Breakfast and Dinner Bills of Fare, Menus, Monograms, Crests, and Addresses Engraved and Printed. Cards Printed for 4s. 6d. All HENRY RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS.—Dressing Cases, Dressing Bags, Writing Desks, Writing Cases, Jewel Cases, Ladies' Retiring and Travelling Cases, Work Boxes, Envelope Cases, Envelope Boxes, Tablets, Albums, and a large assortment of Ivory and Pearl Goods, suitable for Presents, at the lowest possible prices. Illustrated Lists forwarded on application. JAY, 217, Regent-street, W.

BENZINE COLLAS CLEANS GLOVES, &c. It is in constant use at the Palace for removing grease and dirt from Carriages, Harness, Chimneys and Furniture, 1s. 6d. Grant, Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

GREY HAIR RESTORED to its NATURAL COLOUR and BEAUTY.—The Hair Restorative, or MAGNETIC BRUSHES, 10s. and 7s. Combs, 5s. 6d. to 20s. Offices, 23, Basinghall-street, City. Pamphlets gratis and post-free.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES for the ITALIAN REFUGEES.—Mr. and Mrs. JOHN INGLIS, 30 and 30, Strand (opposite Somerset House), W.C., continue giving highest prices for Ladies' and Gentlemen's Wearing Apparel, Jewellery, Gold, Silver, Plate, Watches, Books, Bed, Table, and Miscellaneous Goods, Furniture, Musical Instruments, Property, &c. Offices and Residence, 30 and 30, Strand, opposite Somerset House, W.C.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Furniture, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest price in London or Liverpool waited on by addressing to Mr. or Mrs. D. HYAM, 19, Bear-street, Leicester-square, W., or Parsons being sent, the utmost value in cash immediately remitted. Established 1760.

INFANTS' NEW FEEDING-BOTTLES.—From the "Lancet."—"We have seldom seen anything so beautiful as Dr. Protheroe-Smith's feeding-bottle."—Sold by ALLEN, 156, Oxford-street. Any quiet nurse-bottle, 2s. 6d. each.

TO LADIES NURSING.—ELAM'S NEW RIPPLE-SHIELD for taking away all pain whilst nursing, prevents the nipple becoming inflamed, 1s. 6d. and 2s. 6d.—BENJAMIN ELAM, 190, Oxford-street, 86 doors E., by post 9d. extra.

THE CHAPEL ROYAL, PALERMO.

We have already noticed one remarkable feature of Palermo in connection with art — the very ornate exterior of the Cathedral. We now present an ecclesiastical interior, than which no remnant of antiquity is more interesting — the splendid Capilla Reale, or Chapel Royal, which may be said to unite three styles together — the Greek, Romanesque, and Saracenic, a combination only to be found in Sicily.

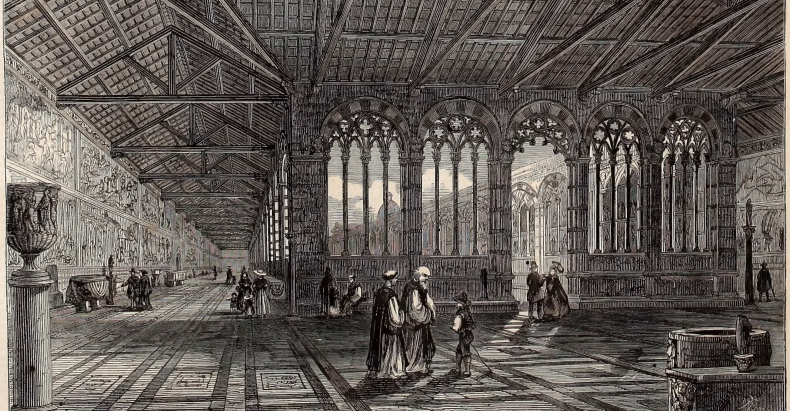
This celebrated chapel is attached to the Palazzo Reale, a huge pile of building of various styles and ages, dating from Norman times. It was built by Roger, the first Norman King of Sicily, and was finished in 1132, and doubtless both Greeks and Saracens were employed in its construction, as their styles predominate over their conquerors, the Normans. It occupies the whole length of one side of the Palace, and, together with the principal rooms, is on the third story, the princes and offices for domestic use being below. It possesses all the features of a large church — a nave, side aisles, and three apses. It is in the long Latin form, with a Greek cupola at the intersection of the cross. The pillars of the nave are probably taken from earlier buildings: some are of granite, others marble. Their capitals are not alike: the arches they support are pointed. The windows are small in size and few in number — no doubt partly owing to the necessity of excluding the sun, partly to obtain a sombre effect.

The dark wooden roof is very elaborate and peculiar, and, being fashioned in the Moorish style, naturally reminds one of Moorish relics in Spain. It is composed of a series of stalactite figures, in a double row, with pendants between them, and encircled by inscriptions in Cuphic characters. These inscriptions are an enumeration of excellent qualities attributed to the Sovereign in a style of Oriental hyperbole, similar to the Alhambra.

The greater part of the interior of this architectural gem is entirely covered with mosaics, on a gold ground, and, as may be imagined, the effect is wonderfully rich, though, owing to the small amount of light admitted, as already mentioned, by no means gaudy or meretricious. The gigantic half figure seen over the high altar represents the Almighty. The floor is inlaid with coloured marbles, in patterns. Beside the granite pulpit, also inlaid with marbles, stands a marble candelabrum, copied from the antique, with Norman ornament intermixed.

This Royal chapel is in a state of perfect preservation. On the outside wall is inserted an inscription which records that once existed there a clock, put up by King Roger, at a time when clocks moved by a pendulum were very rare.

Attached to the chapel is the sacristy and depôsitory of archives, in which are preserved sundry curious charters and deeds relating to the chapel from its foundation: some of these are in Greek and Arabic.



THE CHAPEL ROYAL, PALERMO.

THE CAMPO SANTO, PISA.

The Cathedral, Baptistry, Campanile (commonly known as the "Leaning Tower"), and the Campo Santo of Pisa are perhaps as remarkable and interesting a group of buildings as any in the world. It has been well remarked concerning them that they are "fortunate in their solitude and their society," for they stand alone in a large open space called the Piazza del Duomo, removed from the business and pleasure of the town, looking like a part of some splendid but deserted city. It is with the last named, the Campo Santo, or Cemetery, that we are now concerned, and of which we give an Engraving, as it was brought prominently into notice at the end of April last, during the King of Sardinia's visit to his new dominions, owing to an interesting and significant occurrence which took place therein, and which may indeed claim the dignity of being termed historical, and forms, as it were, a sequel to an event that happened nearly six centuries ago — we mean the restoration by the city of Genoa to Pisa of the chains taken from the entrance of the Porto Pisano, the Pisan Harbour, which were carried off to Genoa in 1290, after the destruction of the port by Conrad Doria. This ended the wars between the two cities, which had lasted, with interruptions, for more than two centuries. So many prisoners were taken to Genoa with the chains that this proverb became current through Italy, "Those who want to see Pisa must go to Genoa."

These chains were to have been restored after the events of 1849 gave hopes of a united Italy. Such hopes were then nipped in the bud, to reform and blossom forth as we now behold. On the 25th of April last, then, a deputation from the sister city delivered to the municipal authorities of Pisa the long-abstracted chains, and with due form they have been hung upon the walls of the glorious Campo Santo, there to remain, we hope, as an emblem of union between former rivals. This famous cemetery was founded by Archbishop Ubaldo, at the end of the twelfth century, who, on his expul-tion from Palestine by Saladin, took in his forty-three ships by way of ballast a quantity of earth from Mount Calvary. This earth was said to have the peculiar property of reducing to dust in twenty-four hours bodies buried therein. He purchased the site of the present building, and there deposited the earth, but the structure was not commenced till 1278. It is a parallelogram 420 feet in length, 148 feet in width, and 46 feet from pavement to roof, with an arcade or cloister running all round the interior, the walls of which are covered with frescoes, chiefly by Gozzo, Gozzoli, Benozzo Gozzoli, and Memmi. As will be remarked, the tracery of the arches of the cloister is Gothic. This portion was not completed till the latter end of the fifteenth century. It is believed the original intention was to have glazed it with stained glass.

THE CAMPO SANTO, OR CEMETERY, PISA.

The collection of sepulchral monuments in the Campo Santo is large and interesting: a great number of them have been brought from the adjoining cathedral and other Pisan churches. Many of the sarcophagi, the work of early Roman Christian artists, were appropriated by the Pisans in mediæval times as receptacles for their illustrious dead, and it is curious to observe the Gothic adaptations and alterations made in them. Among the most interesting of these sarcophagi are the tomb of the Countess Beatrice, mother of Matilda, standing near the middle of the north cloister. It is supposed to be of the age of Hadrian.

Of modern monuments the most noteworthy is a beautiful bas-relief, by Thorwaldsen, in memory of a celebrated surgeon of Pisa, Lawrence Mascagni, who died in 1815.

Besides the sepulchral memorials there are many fragments of sculpture of various ages ranged round the walls, such as statues, basreliefs, columns, capitals, &c. In the floor of the ambulatory are numerous slabs of ancient Pisan families, as those of the Gualandi and Mozzi, the painter of Laura and friend of Petrarch. He illustrated the life of St. Ranieri, a native of Pisa, on the north wall. It is in his honour the lunaura is held, when the whole of the Lung' Arno is illuminated. This fete took place during the late visit of the Queen.

The cloister was succeeded by Veneziano and the two Orcagnas: those strange pictures "The Last Judgment" and "The Triumph of Death" are by the hand of Andrea Orcagna. Then came Benozzo Gozzoli: but the finest and most numerous frescoes are by Benozzo Gozzoli, a native of Siliano, Lombardy, and a pupil of Angelico. Interesting from the fact that they show the architecture and costumes of Florence in the painter's time. They occupied him from 1469 to 1485. Many of the figures are very graceful and characteristic, and some are evidently portraits of the artist's contemporaries.

STREET-SCENE IN NAPLES ON THE 8TH INST.

On the state of frantic excitement into which the Neapolitans were thrown by the entrance into their city of General Garibaldi our columns have been no stranger; and here is a graphic, though horrible, scene in Naples, sketched on the day after Garibaldi's arrival, to bring the matter more vividly before our eyes. A correspondent writes from Naples:—"We will not, at present, describe just such a scene as is here depicted:—We had yesterday a sort of political carnival, which was prolonged to a late hour. Besides the ordinary and insane mumbling, a prey to a Bacchanalian fury which I should be sorry if I were to describe, I saw, in the afternoon, a most frightful rabble, with a sprinkling of men and women of the middle orders. It was a flag and torch procession, with cries and shouts, such as can only be uttered by Neapolitan throats. Besides the universal, deafening 'Viva Garibaldi!' 'Viva Garibaldi!' and a hundred other distortions of the name of the hero of the day, there began to be accustomed, the cry was 'Una—una—una, Viva l'Italia Una.' Vogliamo l'Italia Una.' 'We want United Italy.' Another and an occasional exclamation of 'Death to the Bourbons!' For the rest the huge mob did not know what it wished or what it was about. But it did not care—it swarmed, and edited, and bolted, and babbled about like the waves at Charybdis—throng of men, throng of men, throng of women, with brandishing naked swords, or waving flags or hats: the women bareheaded, dishevelled, with disordered garments, clenched teeth, and kissing a red flag passed each other, like so many victims of a rabid drunkenness, in which, however, drink had no part. There was a mingling of thousands of classes and sexes in the throng—beggars and pickpockets to noble honest citizens and patriots: yet the many-headed monster was in the best humour. It was not in search of actual drunkenness, nor did we hear of a row or fight, or any other accident or offence."

GARIBALDI AT THE CHURCH OF SANTA MARIA DI PIEDIGROTTA, NAPLES.

On the day after Garibaldi's entry into Naples occurred the great fête of the Piedigrotta, which is second only to the Festival of the Liquefaction. This great festa was originally instituted more than twenty-seven years since by Carlo III., to commemorate the expulsion of the Austrians from his dominions. On the present occasion it was held in a manner extraordinarily combining the associations of the day following the entrance of the Dictator and flight of the last of the Neapolitan dynasty. The Neapolitans are a superstitious people, and this combination had an extraordinary effect on their minds. Garibaldi went on a pilgrimage to the church of the Virgin of Piedigrotta, after the manner of the Bourbons. The whole of the National Guard were under arms, and lined the streets from the Palazzo Reale to the end of the Riviera di Chiaja. They formed with his Staff drove down in carriages, and was received with shouts and delight, as he passed along the ranks, which he reviewed in person. The Church of Santa Maria di Piedigrotta is situated near the entrance to the Grotta di Posilipo. According to local tradition it was erected, in 1353, on the site of a much older chapel in consequence of a dream which led to the discovery of an old image of the Madonna which is to great an object of devotion at the present day to which it owes its name. The church has undergone a general restoration of late; and in the first chapel on the left, gaudily restored, is the old image, richly clothed in modern style, and loaded with jewels, in acknowledgment of cures supposed to have been operated by the intercession of the miraculous image of the Virgin.

The Festa di Piedigrotta, says "Murray's Handbook," is one of the most singular displays of national character and manners which can be met with at the present day in Europe. This festa, which is commonly believed to have been instituted by Charles III. in commemoration of the victory of the Spaniards over the Austrians at Velletri, in 1744, dates at least so far back as the middle of the sixteenth century, and the Spanish Viceroys used to visit the church in great state on the 8th of September, being the Chiaia with soldiers, as in our times, in honour of the day. Every year, on the evening of the continental dominions, amounting often to 30,000 men, are marched into the city, and, after having defiled before the King and Royal family in the balcony of the palace, they proceed in the same manner to the palace to the church of Piedigrotta, including the long line of the Chiaia. Here they halt, and his Majesty and his Staff, in their full state carriages, attended by the ministers and the great officers of the Court, and preceded by flying footmen, wearing cocked hats and hats set out in procession through this double line of soldiery, whose brilliant uniforms give unusual gaiety to the scene. Each Prince proceeds in a separate carriage, and in the order in which he would succeed to the throne. After performing their devotions at the church, his Royal family return to the palace in the same order; and the rest of the day is a scene of unrestrained rejoicing to the thousands of gaily-dressed peasantry who come from all parts of the kingdom to swell the throng of merrymakers in the city. The Villa Reale is on this day open to all classes, and is full of country people from the environs, in their gay national costumes. It was formerly the practice among the common people of the environs to liquidate in marriage that the bride shall be taken to this festa.

THE LANDING OF THE PRINCE OF WALES AT QUEBEC.

Our Special Artist in Canada has forwarded to us a striking picture of the landing of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at Quebec, which is engraved on page 289 of this week's Impression. Although accounts of the Prince's reception at Quebec by our own Correspondent and from other sources have appeared in this Journal, we give, in connection with our illustration, some particulars of the Prince's landing at Quebec, abridged from the graphic description supplied by the Times correspondent:—

"His Royal Highness has at last commenced his Canadian tour. The landing and the whole reception at Quebec was on a scale worthy of the occasion. The weather, which has got under way on the 16th ult., a whole fleet of river steamers came down from Quebec, all dressed in colours and crowded with festive excursionists. At 10 A.M., or by two o'clock the squadron got under way. The Hero led, followed by the Laviolette and Fleur de Lis. The batteries and military posts on the banks of the river were decked with flags, and the spattering, irregular fire of guns and small arms never ceased along the route. As soon as the Prince was descried, the guns on the citadel, the steamers, and squadron, the St. Lawrence seemed on fire from one end to the other.

"Just before the Prince rounded Point Levis in sight of Point Levi, and then slowly on the other side of the river, the steep rugged heights of Lauzon, on the south shore of Quebec—the highest in North America—rose gradually into view. The appearance of this quaint old city from the bay is always imposing. Its old French associations and houses and its lofty and heavy tiers of houses rising one above the other, with their bright tin gable roofs contrasting with the antique brownness of the building materials, which, in fact, are heavy outlines, the walls of the fortress wind up and down with all the engineering accidents of the ground, and the Citadel crowns it. It is with a considerable portion of the old and the new, of a peaceful, prosperous town built in and out of a tremendous citadel—a melange of modern business, police, artillery, and fortification—that the picturesque old houses of tin and pine wood—as make it resemble no other place under the sun. The lower part of the city, which is the Wapping at Guernsey, and a few of the old houses at Abbeville, stew it here and there with log houses, roof it all over with tin, pave some of the main with round logs, and on an inclined plane they cover all the streets profusely with dirt, and stick the whole on one of the hills over Edinburgh, and you have a tolerable conception of the old metropolis, and then you have Quebec. Everything here is in an anomalous state—the footpaths are ladders and the house roofs are alleys. The Parliament building, which is to be used, as there is no Parliament with which to fill it, there are good squares, which are always empty, and which obviously are the finest streets, were it not for the fact that English the name of Quebec is indissolubly associated with the fame of Wolfe, Montcalm, and Montgomery, and with the more magnificial point of view I should say the shops of Quebec are the keys of the position, for batteries loom over the roofs of dismantled fortifications, and bastions, and ramparts, and the visitor is constantly finding your movements impeded by huge open-mouthed guns which lurk in ambush at every corner. Add to this picturesque an immense quantity of huge stacks of chimneys. Of its kind I should say Quebec must be unique, and I am glad to think that it is to have a new lease of life, become more commercial, and prosperous without either activity or cleanliness. But from the water, as I have said, and before the Prince landed, I have seen nothing like it. Not from the water alone, I do. All the chief buildings were decorated with flags, the houses, docks, and wharves were thronged with people, and every one of the streets the points of triumphal arches could be seen with their bright decorations still flaunting, though rather dulled of their splendour by rain and wind. The guns on the summit of the town the forts began to salute from the citadel, the terrace, and the batteries over Wolfe's Cove, where the Prince was to land, and the whole of the squadron fired with his men is still to be seen. The effect of this repeated cannonade, as it wreathed over the whole place in white clouds of smoke through which the steeples dimly shone, was very fine, and seemed to bring its old character for war and glory more strongly out than ever. The Prince landed at half-past 10 o'clock, all the guns of the fleet saluting with manned yards, and giving three grand cheers for his Royal Highness as he passed the ships. A platform, in front of the St. Louis gate, on his way to Cataraqui, the residence of Sir Edmund Head, the Governor-General of Canada. In the evening Quebec is illuminated, and a more effective or more general display of this kind I have seldom seen. It was not quite equal to that at St. John, but the effect, owing to the natural advantages of the city, was infinitely greater. To see Point Levi on one side of the St. Lawrence, and Quebec on the other, and the river between, was a most magnificial spectacle. Every house had lights in its windows, all the chief buildings were lit up, and the tiers of streets, rising one above another in the grandest manner, were all ablaze. The walls were vividly reflected back by the river, made a kind of quadruple display which one can neither easily describe nor forget."

GRASS TO THE WINDOW.—There is all the difference in the world between the cheerful and unsightly window in a room which a hundred yards of box, and the green shady little spot that comes up to your very window. Let the poor, if they will, have window-gardens, but the whole of rural tastes; the latter is almost irresistible. A hundred yards are a long way to go to see the finest prospect of country, and nothing like the green earth. After having walked even a hundred yards, you feel that you have earned a right to sit down and rest, and you do so. But you do not see them at the end of a vista of washing your hands, and putting on another collar, and brushing your hair, and dressing to go home. You sit down on the little patch of grass, the three or four shady trees, the quiet corner of the hedgerow, and you feel that you have got into the country at once, and without even the formality of passing through the hall and out by the front door. If you are a lover of nature in the common acceptation of the term this little thing. What stout old gentleman but knows that when he is seated under his well-shaded porch, with his pipe and his glass, and his cool and road many pages in a volume which lay within reach of his arm, that he is as much a lover of nature as the tourist who has come to the end of infinite trouble of rising from his chair and walking to a table half a dozen yards off? It is the same with the poor man who has a window-garden. He is a lover of nature; other-wise, on a hundred occasions, all sorts of little fanciful hindrances will arise to prevent him and her husband enjoying the fresh air together.

EVIL INFLUENCES OF OUR DAYS.—All the voices which have any real influence with us Englishmen in any circumstances combine to stimulate a single class of qualities—energy, activity, and the power to extol his wisdom by assuming that the average intelligence which he represents is, under the present public system, the ultimate and infallible standard of the nation. The novels which he and his family devour with insatiable appetite—the literature of the day—the periodicals which he reads—all minister. They are pictures of the every-day life to which he has always been accustomed, and which he understands and appreciates. They are mirrors reflecting to anything which does not support the status quo. Society is the one subject of which the human mind has considerable exhaustion in the three-decker—the middle-class mind, that is to say, which, as I have already insisted upon, our Homer and Aschylus, were superior, in some important respects, to the millions of Englishmen who at their inmost hearts prefer Pickwick to Shakspeare. Even the religion of the present day is made to suit the level of commonplace Englishmen. There was a time when Christianity meant the embodiment of all truth and holiness in the midst of a world lying in wickedness. It afterwards included law, liberty, and knowledge, as opposed to the energetic ignorance of the northern barbarians. It now too often means philanthropic societies—excellent things as far as they go, but rather small. Any doctrine now is given up if it either seems uncomfortable or likely to make a disturbance. It is almost universally assumed that the truth of an opinion is tested by its consistency with cheerful views of life and nature. Righteous indignation is the only practical vice which remains, and that serve to spice the enjoyments which they would otherwise destroy.—Cornhill Magazine.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

QUEBEC, September 10.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS has reached the principal city of Upper Canada, Toronto, which he will leave to-day en route for the extreme western boundary of the province. On departing from Montreal, the Prince proceeded directly to Ottawa, the site of the Parliament of the United Province, and, after a most loyal reception, formally laid the corner-stone of the new Houses of Parliament, now in course of erection (circumstances hereafter necessitating the performance of such a ceremony by the Heir Apparent to the Crown would invest the formality with a degree of interest worthy of more than a passing record; but, considering the peculiar combination of events under which Ottawa came to be selected as the capital of United Canada, and the additional importance attaches to it, it is not to be wondered that the majority of your readers are aware of the circumstances under which Ottawa came to be selected as the capital of United Canada, and, at the risk of being tedious to the better-informed minority, it may be as well to recapitulate briefly those which led to this step. From the union, in 1840, of the till then distinct provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada until the year 1858, national rivalries, fanned by party factions, had rendered it impossible so to fix a permanent seat of legislature being agreed on. The members from Lower Canada, representing mainly a people of French extraction, and attached to the Roman Catholic Church, insisted that some place in the eastern section, either Quebec or Montreal, should be named. The members from Upper Canada, on the other hand, almost exclusively of British descent, and attached to some Protestant denomination, were equally peremptory in advocating the claims of the western section to be the favoured honour. For nearly a score of years the question came up periodically before the Legislature, and occasioned the most acrimonious debates, in which national and religious animosities were roused, and producing, of course, a severe strain upon the tie which to this day has not entirely lived down. Each succeeding Ministry found this difficult question a lion in its political phase, and those only made political advantage by it whose public career had probably terminated with it. Keeping alive the worst passions and most dangerous prejudices of the connected provinces, it was at length, during the session of 1857, that each section stand up for the claims urged by its own people, that a few of these agitators were able to hold the fate of a Ministry in its hand when that Ministry, on the 14th of May, in a temporary minority of an everyincreasing difficulty, a singular compromise was effected. A "permanent" seat of Government for the United Province was declared quadrennially from one end of the province to the other. Under this ridiculous plan the Government was to be "open" question, which in this year at Quebec, almost at the eastern extremity of settlement in the lower section, was last year at Toronto, which is still nearer the western boundary. The difficulty which cost entailed by the repeated moving of all the Government staff, together with other considerations, at some future time, would also absurd, at length forced upon the Government the necessity of checking a system surrounded with so many disadvantages, and of electing the site of a permanent capital was one which no Ministry could be found bold enough to undertake, and it at last came before the House in 1857 as an "open" question. The result of the appeal was, as might have been foreseen, unsatisfactory to all parties, but as the Ministry were consented to leave it to Her Queen herself, asking her Majesty to exercise the Royal prerogative and name some permanent seat of Government for the province. This request was graciously acceded to, and Ottawa was selected. Measures were immediately taken for carrying out the Imperial decision by the erection of the necessary buildings, and the Prince was on a few days ago had the first proof of the obedience with which her Majesty's subjects in this province have responded to her decision by the step he was just been called upon to perform towards the now far-advanced structure.

The details of the reception given to his Royal Highness on his arrival at Ottawa have no doubt reached you from another quarter. That large portion of the Province of Canada which extends to the east of the great lumber trade of the Ottawa, a trade far exceeding in its productive value all others, not even exclusive of the result of the labours of the agriculturist. The Ottawa is the great water staple of this country, and it centres principally at Ottawa. Hence it was that the Prince's reception was more extended by the presence of a multitude of the staunch lumbermen who find in the adjacent forests, and of inexhaustible supply of timber. The Ottawa lumbermen, a hardy raftsmen and the skilful voyageurs poured down in thousands from the remotest backwoods to do honour to the son of the beloved of Severity. The Prince, on his arrival, formal reception of Courts was awaiting, an honest, hearty welcome, dearer far, assumed its place. As to the visit to the Chaudiere, we not had to have been so far pleasing, as it was certainly entirely novel, to the Prince, did not pass off without an incident calculated seriously to mar the enjoyment of the whole event. On the occasion his Royal Highness was the first contretemps—but, unhappily, not the last—which befallen him to have his arrival in Canada marked. Owing to some misunderstanding, the Freemasons of Canada had believed that the "ancient craft" would be allowed to take part in the ceremony of laying the stone of the new Parliamentary buildings with their accustomed formalities. Accordingly, acting under summons from the highest authority recognised by that body, the Freemasons came from all part near with the view of assisting on occasion possessing so much historical interest. The Prince, however, was informed at a late hour that the Prince's advisers could not recommend his Royal Highness to recognise the existence of any secret society, and that it would be against the wishes of the Prince if they presented themselves with banners, drosses, and emblems, distinguishing them from any other of her Majesty's subjects. The decision thus signified to the Masonic association was made not so much for the purpose of checking the intended Masonic demonstration as for that of preventing one that of impartiality a line of conduct which the circumstances of the hour, as well as the policy of the Imperial Government, had made necessary. But, had it been allowed to take place, the disinclination of the Prince to receive them in their masonic capacity been a mere caprice, it might have been overlooked in the excitement of the hour; but the fanatic of the mystæ is" that they would have deferred graciously to the expressed wishes of the illustrious guest. For, with infinite tailing as much discretion and good-breeding, the Masons accepted the intimation made through the Duke of Newcastle with very bad grace, walking off in a body, and even publishing their view of the excellent lunch prepared for the Prince, and to which their leading members had been invited as guests.

This was the first cloud that had dimmed the Royal progress: it was but the precursor of a storm about shortly to break. Leaving Ottawa the Prince arrived on the shores of Rondeville, meeting there the same enthusiastic reception he had everywhere experienced since his arrival of the Province of Quebec. The Prince's landing. After a short stay the illustrious traveller proceeded towards Kingston, and shortly after his departure from that city in the capacious and beautiful harbour on whose shore is seated the ancient capital of Upper Canada. And now events occurred which ended in the instant refusal of his Royal Highness to receive the municipal formalities in the temporary of the Royal party without setting foot on shore. The place at which the Prince was to land was to be occupied by dense crowds of members of the Orange society; an Orange flag formed from the City Hall; Orange party cars resounded through the streets. Orange banners and devices were displayed in motley confusion in a large body of the citizens of a mixed population, stood in the most prominent spots during the procession. All this was known, and had some days before come to the knowledge of the Prince's advisers that similar demonstrations were intended by the Orangemen of Hamilton, Belleville, Cobourg, Toronto, Hamilton, London, and other important points. It had also been intimated that such display were calculated to lead to bloodshed, while they would certainly mar that unanimity in the enthusiasm of the reception which would otherwise await the Heir Apparent. For not a single Roman Catholic would under any circumstances think of taking part in a procession so intended; while to very many Protestants, even members of the Orange order, the idea was hardly less distasteful. The Duke of Newcastle, therefore, no doubt after due deliberation, informed the Mayor of Kingston that the Royal party would not land at all unless the obnoxious arches were stripped of their offensive decorations, the procession entirely banished of its Orange complexion, and party tunes and cries stilled. On this fell news great dismay awoke the Kingstonians—especially the belles of that place, famed far and wide for the beauty of its citizenesses, before whose visions the magnificent ball, for which everything was already prepared, loomed up enchantingly in the near future. A special meeting of the Council was called; deliberation was held, negotiations, even, with his Grace opened; but opposition was found to be as far as Belleville, and the Ball and Supper by a perpetually-sustained concert of party tunes. On landing at Belleville they immediately inspected the local "lions;" of that Belleville they immediately inspected the local "lions;" of that Belleville they immediately inspected the local "lions;" of that

PROGRESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.—VIEW OF PART OF THE CITY AND RIVER OF OTTAWA, FROM THE BARRACK HILL, THE SITE OF THE NEW PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

THE CRATER OF MOUNT ETNA—FROM A DRAWING BY S. READ—SEE NEXT PAGE

THE CRATER OF MOUNT ETNA.

ETNA, celebrated from the most remote antiquity for its magnitude and its volcanic eruptions, is situated in the north-eastern part of Sicily, close to the seacoast, between the towns of Taormina and Catania. Its height is about 11,000 feet, and its base covers a base of nearly ninety miles. The number of this Journal for July 8, 1858, contained three Engravings of the cone and crater of Mount Etna, as they then were, and an interesting account of a visit to the crater of Etna, from which we gather a few particulars in connection with our Illustration on the preceding page:—"We now prepared for the final trip—the ascent of the cone. Its height is now about 1000 feet. Brydone thus describes it as it was in May 29, 1770:—'It is of a very regular figure, and rises equally on all sides. Its circumference cannot be less than ten miles. We found this mountain excessively steep, and covered with snow from its base quite to the summit; and over with a pretty thick layer of ashes thrown out from the crater. Had it not been for the snow that melted from the sides of the cone, but not at the base. It looked like a yellow sugarloaf, with here and there darker shades of the ashes; and occasional projections of rock appeared very distinctly, but we were disabled from looking down to any considerable depth into the crater, by the dense clouds of smoke, which filled the whole circumference until they arrived within a few yards of the crater's brim. Then the air began to act upon them; and as we were, of course, led by our guides to the very edge of it from under the wind blew, we saw a considerable portion of the inner crust of the walls formed on the inside of the south side of the upper crater.'

The dimensions of the crater have been very variously stated by different travellers; the circumference is found to be a half to four miles, and the depth from six hundred to eight hundred feet. The height of the cone, and the diameter and depth of the crater, are liable to constant changes from the eruptions.

A grand banquet was given on Monday night at Fort Pitt Hospital, Chatham, to Professor Longmore, of Netley, by the Army in this country, on which occasion all the medical officers of the port and garrison, and a large number of gentlemen, were assembled to do honour to the distinguished surgeon.

AN ARTIFICIAL VOLCANO IN THE PARIS CATACOMBS.—The Paris catacombs, once visited by all the strangers who went sight-seeing to the French capital, and now closed to the public as a dangerous place, as many people are doubtless aware, old quarries, extending under a portion of the Latin Quarter, on the south side of the Seine, in the districts of St. Jacques, and others, also under the Pantheon, the Observatory, the Odeon Theatre, and other large buildings, and which were the source of much of the stone to be imagined, from the weight it supports, of great thickness and solidity, but in certain places it has been excavated by the Paris "miners" to the extent of some feet received human remains. A quantity of bones were removed thither from the cemetery of the Innocents. During the years 1785 and 1786 they carried as burial-places to numerous victims; and from 1792 to 1811 large quantities were deposited there. Many bodies, also, from other cemeteries were pulled down and from cemeteries that were closed. These staircases led into the catacombs, the principal entrance being at the Barrière d'Enfer. Every day falling in of the ground, and the place is watched and kept in repair. A few days ago, at the Barrière d'Enfer, one of the doors, by which the air is changed in one of the galleries, went down with a locksmith, his apprentice, and an architect. A terrible cloud of smoke, he could not see, and was obliged to a distance of more than a quarter of an hour's walk from the catacombs, and some of the party had matches! They had scarcely reached a spot where they could work when a puff of wind extinguished the light. In the dark there was little hope of retracing their steps, for the turns and windings are innumerable. Here they remained, terrified by the fear of being forgotten, they suddenly heard a voice inquiring what they were doing there. Some matches were thrown down to them, the candle was lighted. They found they were just below the street of Dauphin Tronin. It appeared that a compositor going to his home in that street at the usual hour, two a.m. heard faint cries, which seemed to come from beneath his feet. In the noisy daytime they would have been inaudible. Unable to account for the phenomenon, he hurried off to the nearest police station, whence some agents de ville accompanied him to the spot. These men knew that the catacombs passed under that district, and it was through a draught-hole communicate to the compositor's house that they were able to communicate with the prisoners.

NEW ACTS OF PARLIAMENT.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHARITIES.—The new Act to amend the law relating to charitable foundations, and to certain charities, has just been printed. It declares that charities for lawful purposes are not to be invalidated by the addition of unlawful trusts, but the property may be apportioned by the Court of Chancery, and the whole applied to lawful purposes. The proceedings at law or equity are to be conducted in all dealings with Roman Catholic charities prior to the 2nd and 3rd Wm. IV., c. 115. Deeds for Roman Catholic charities are not to be void if executed within twelve months from the passing of this Act, and the expense of the enrolment is to be defrayed out of the property comprised in the deed to which the same may relate. The term "charity" is to have the like expression as declared by the statute 43rd Elizabeth, c. 4.

FORTIFICATIONS.—The Act for defraying the expenses connected with the defences of the country, and for other purposes therein specified the Royal assent on the day of the prorogation. The sum of two millions is to be raised by the Commissioners for the Consolidated Fund, and to apply the sums to making the fortifications mentioned in the Act and in providing a proper armament. The Treasury is to cause the expenditure of annuities to be created under the Act for every contribution of £100.

STREETS.—On the 1st of October the new Street Spirits Act takes effect. The statute is long, and contains ninety-one sections, and seven schedules. It is entitled "An Act to regulate the Sale by Retail of Spirits in Public Streets, and to amend the Law relating to Distilling, Rectifying, and Dealing in Spirits." Some of the provisions of the Act are as follow:—Every person who shall sell by retail any spirits, or obtain a person hawking any spirit for sale, and give him into custody, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5, and the spirits so sold or hawked are to be acquitted by the convicting Justice, and by the next preceding Justice, and the proceeds paid to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue. The penalty is not to be paid, or remitted, or diminished by any composition. The reward is not to exceed £10. Further, the Act provides that unmet persons opposing or violently rescuing persons in charge of spirits, or assaulting a person in the execution of duty, to be deemed guilty of felony, and liable to seven years penal servitude. Any constable may apprehend without warrant and bring to a Justice of the Peace any person who, in his view, is liable to forfeit £20. The penalties are to be levied by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, and to be paid to the Receiver of the United Kingdom in regard to the distillation and dealing in spirits. It received the Royal assent on the day of the prorogation. (See page 307.)

LAW AND EQUITY.—The Act for the further amendment of the process, practice, and mode of pleading in and enlarging the jurisdiction of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster, has been printed. It is to come into operation on the 10th of October, and may be cited for convenience sake as the "Common Law Procedure Law Procedure Act, 1860." In the case of every ejectment for a forfeiture under the Act, the tenant is to be liable to pay the landlord a sum or a rule or summons to give relief in a summary manner, subject to an appeal as to the payment of costs. The Act is to continue in force for five years, and no further.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS.—The new Act to further amend the Law of Property, freehold, copyhold, and customary estates are to proceed in the same manner as if the proceedings had been in a cause to be registered. No judgment is to be entered up after the passing of the Act, nor any writ of execution issued, but the party is entitled to go to a bona fide purchaser or mortgagee, although execution or other process be issued and be executed. The Act is to continue in force for one year, and no longer. It received the Royal assent on the day of the prorogation.

THE LAW OF PROPERTY.—By the new Act to further amend the Law of Property, freehold, copyhold, and customary estates are to proceed in the same manner as if the proceedings had been in a cause to be registered. No judgment is to be entered up after the passing of the Act, nor any writ of execution issued, but the party is entitled to go to a bona fide purchaser or mortgagee, although execution or other process be issued and be executed. The Act is to continue in force for one year, and no longer. It received the Royal assent on the day of the prorogation.

ATTORNEYS.—The Act for Compelling Conveyancers.—The Act passed on the 28th ult. to amend the law relating to attorneys, solicitors, proctors, and certificated conveyancers, contains some important alterations. Persons having taken articles of clerkship, and who have served the clerkship required by the Act, and persons who have been at the Bar are to be admitted after the same period of service. Persons who have been called to the Bar, or admitted solicitors, or proctors for five years, may be admitted after three years' service under articles. A service of five years in the Queen's Bench Office is required, the term being reduced to three years. The Judges of the superior law courts may require examinations in "general knowledge" either before or after the service of articles, and may extend the time for the service after examination. In case of neglect for a year to renew the certificate, an order of the Court of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, or of the Lord Chancellor, is to be considered as struck off of all the courts. A penalty of £20 is to be imposed on any person practising without a certificate. There is a provision in this Act giving great privilege to attorneys and solicitors. An attorney or solicitor is not to be compelled to answer personally or by an attorney or solicitor employed to prosecute or defend to the amount of the taxed costs, fees, charges, and expenses, and the property, recovered or in property, and all conveyances to defeat payment, unless made to a bona fide purchaser, without notice, are to be considered void. The Act is to be open to declaration charging property for any such debt barred by the statute of limitations. The Act is to continue in force for one year. (See page 307.)

CUSTOMS DUTIES.—The Customs Duties Consolidation Act of 1860 has just been issued. It contains the whole of the rates and charges of the Customs Duties now payable, and repeals all former enactments. The customs duties are divided or comprised under twenty-six general heads, some of them having numerous subdivisions. Under the head "Ale and Beer," for example, in addition to the various qualities into which that article has been classified, there are the following provisions, and others of minor importance, for combs, confectionery, preserved ginger, marmalade, preserved plums, and candied peel, and other articles of confectionery, 30 per cent. Currants are also largely subdivided, so that the rates are in fact more numerous than they appear. Under the head of "Spirits" we now have, for the first time, colonial rum, 9s. per gallon; but there will be reduced on the 1st of January next to others coming from the East Indies. The Act contains an important clause, to the effect that "all goods composed of any article liable to duty, as wholly or in part manufactured, shall be considered as charged with the duty payable on such article, and shall be liable to the same duty." Wood, is now subject to duty, yet furniture is regularly admitted free. Pictures, and articles of virtu, have been also exempted from duty without charge. Other things might be named, but these show the folly of the clause in the Act which says that "any clause contained in any Act relating to the Customs is, therefore, inconsistent and illegal. The Act also embodies the Warehousing Act, and is to come into operation on the 1st of October, relating to collecting the customs duties, and the majority of which still seem to be condemned with great unanimity by the trading classes.

ROBBING A BLIND BEGGAR.—A blind beggar, named Pete Jean, who sits on the Pont des Arts, appeared on Monday before the Tribunal of Correctional Police to complain that one Manon, who was placed at the bar, had robbed him. "On the 4th of this month," said he, "I was seated on my bridge according to my custom, when a young man——" "How did you know he was young?" asked the President. "By his step and his voice. The young man, then," he continued, "asked me to give him change for a piece of 20c., and keep one sou for myself. I counted out nine sous, and handed them to him, and he slipped something into my hand and hurried away. Within I was telling the piece, a little boy said, 'Do you know what he has given you? It is not a sou, but a piece of a sou-piece.' It was a button, and I begged the boy to run after the man and give him into custody." The President condemned Manon to six months' imprisonment.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The freedom of the city of Glasgow was yesterday week presented to Sir John Lawrence, the "saviour of India."

It has been resolved to present the freedom of Paisley to Lord Brougham.

It is rumoured that Sir George Grey, Governor at the Cape, will be appointed to the governorship of Jamaica, in the room of Sir E. Ward.

The visit of the Japanese Embassy to America cost the United States' Government 25,000 dollars.

The Surrey Iron Railway have agreed to erect a sixty-ton crane at the Birkenhead Docks, at a cost of £3500.

An official return shows that in Spain there are 1000 miles of railway open for traffic, 1200 in course of execution, and 210 projected.

Mr. Corrie, of the Clerkenwell Police Court, will succeed the late Mr. Jardine at the Bow-street Police Court.

The Leeds Mercury states that Dr. Bennett has accepted the office of conductor of the Leeds Triennial Festival in 1861.

It is said that Baron Rothschild's yacht will leave a conference at Cobenta on the 9th of October with Lord John Russell.

An infants' school for the deaf and dumb, at Old Trafford, adjoining the old school, was inaugurated on Wednesday forenoon.

The remains of the late Mr. Joseph Locke, M.P., were on Wednesday interred in the Kensal-green Cemetery. The Council of Civil Engineers were present at the funeral.

Some curious frescoes have been discovered in the Church of St. Urbain, Troyes. The subject is "Purgatory." The paintings are well executed, and the colours, after the lapse of centuries, still fresh.

An island, supposed to be of volcanic origin, has been discovered about eight miles off the coast of Chili, in about 31° 40 S., long. 73.25 W., having the appearance of a whole mass fifteen miles long.

Mr. Whampoa, Esq., of the Hong Kong Dockyard, Singapore, was baptised, a short time since, by the Free Church of Scotland minister at Penang, Rankine.

Recent letters from Marsala speak unfavourably of the vine crops, and it is feared that the vintage in Sicily will this year be considerably below the average.

The first sod of the Inverness and Ross-shire Railway was cut on Wednesday week. The line extends from Inverness to Invergordon, a distance of thirty-one miles.

It has been announced by a contemporary that the first supplementary convocation for filling the vacancies in the new Forest Act will be published in an early number of the Gazette.

A jute mill, manufactured by Mr. John Thompson, Seinfield Works, Dundee, said to be the finest specimen of its kind of manufacture per produced there, has been sold for transmission to the Royal Arsenal, Berlin.

Sir Francis Desanges, who had been Sheriff of London and Middlesex, and also of Oxfordshire, died last week in the Queen's Prison. He had also been for four years Governor of the Sheriffs' Ward Poor.

At a late meeting of the Bristol board of guardians, a man named Samuel Shipton, who has attained the age of 102, was among those to receive relief.

News from Japan to the 22nd of July announces that the prosperous appearance of the commercial affairs at Kanagawa daily had sailed for Shanghai with a cargo valued at half a million dollars.

The accounts from Ireland of the potato crops are most unpromising, but the appearance of the agricultural crops is rather encouraging.

The Presse of Vienna states that the two lordships of Lissa and Benatek, in Bohemia, formerly the property of Count Thun and the Prince of Metternich, have been purchased by the Duke of Toscana.

Mr. Slack's examination of the members of Mr. Kent's household terminated last Saturday. It was conducted with the greatest secrecy. secrecy. Mrs. Kent was not present at the time.

The Official Gazette of Vienna of the 14th publishes a decree calling on 114 persons of the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom to return to their country before the 16th of October, under pain of having all their property confiscated.

Telegraphic lines are being rapidly established across the late Pontifical territory; on the 20th they had reached Macerata; thence they were continued to Ancona. On Sunday, the 23rd, they were at the Neapolitan limit.

A brief letter from Mr. Cobden announces that his task will not be completed until the end of October; and that, after having acknowledged the presentation of the freedom of the City at the Guildhall, he will appear before his constituents at Rochdale.

At the Middlesex Sessions, on Monday, Cinnas, the Queen of Spain's jeweller, whose attempt to swindle a London pawnbroker out of a piece has been already noticed in this Journal, was sentenced to eighteen months' hard labour.

The next anatomical examination for the membership of the Royal College of Surgeons will be for the 1st of November, instead of Monday; and the next surgical or pass examination for the 1st of November and following days.

It is stated that the council of the Medical Benevolent Fund—who have made a direct appeal to the professions for aid, in place of holding their usual biennial dinner—have received in answer to that appeal, from all their expenses, the sum of £930.

An accident has happened to the Queen of Spain. She was under a tent erected upon the deck of the ship the Princess of the Asturias, when one of the supports of the tent suddenly gave way. The Queen escaped with a few slight bruises upon the head.

The lad Giles, who decamped on Tuesday week with from £6000 to £8000 worth of property, the property of his master, Mr. Mendoza, of Regent-street, London, has been apprehended in Paris. The whole of the property, it is said, was found in his possession when taken.

At an influential meeting held at Worcester, on Thursday week, under the presidency of the Right Hon. Lord Lyttelton, a society was formed, to be called the Worcester Book-bearing Society, for the purpose of circulating, by means of licensed hawkers, literature of an instructive character.

A little after two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, a fire broke out at the shipbuilding-yard of Vernon and Son, Brunswick Dock, Liverpool. The premises were completely destroyed, together with their valuable contents. The loss is considerable.

The visitors at the British Museum last week numbered 16,008. On Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday (free days), there were 3972; on Monday and Tuesday (free evenings), 4372; on the three students' days (admission to the public, 6d.), 1521; students' evening (Wednesday), 1143.

On Thursday week the workmen engaged in making a road in Sandwell Park, West Bromwich, struck an ancient urn about one hundred and thirty Roman coins. The urn was unfortunately broken by a stroke from a pickaxe.

The dispute between the Government and the Presbyterian General Assembly relative to the appointment of Army Chaplains may now be considered at an end. The Assembly has withdrawn its protest, and is prepared to sanctioning the appointment of a Presbyterian Chaplain to the Dublin Garrison.

The hearing of the return to the writ of habeas corpus obtained on the part of Mr. Lumley, manager of Her Majesty's Theatre, for detaining her in custody, and preventing her returning to the Adelphi Theatre, took place before Mr. Justice Wightman yesterday week. Mr. Lumley was ordered Mrs. Price to be restored to her husband.

The Colonial Secretary of the Mauritius has offered a reward for the recovery of several of the crew and passengers of the St. Abb's, which was wrecked on the reef of St. Joan Nova some five years ago. A portion, at least, of the missing persons are supposed to be now living in the island in question on the east coast of Africa.

The Courrier de Odessa gives a new reading of the Muzimy Act. A man of the 2nd Life Guards has been discharged from the regiment for having quarrelled with his colonel. He has, it is said, been offered by the latter vigorous exercise of authority will not lead to a repetition of the offence of giving cheek.

Four persons were killed yesterday se'nnight in a colliery at Westfeld, the property of Messrs. Beaty and Company. Where they being drawn up out of the pit in a cage; the banksman omitted to let down the machine which covers the pit mouth, and a jerk was occasioned which broke the chain, the cage falling to the bottom of the pit.

The Courrier de Odessa states that towards the end or last month the Mirbine, a steamer of the Austrian Lloyd's, arrived at Scutari, with 360 Bulgarian families, who were going to Bessbe to work in the coal-pits, and that 1000 others of the same nation were to follow. It is said that as large a number of persons would give a great impulse to the colonisation of the Crimea.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE MARCHIONESS OF DONEGALL.

The Most Noble Harriet Anne, Marchioness of Donegall, whose death occurred at Paris, on the 14th inst., after a short but severe illness, was the eldest daughter of Richard, first Earl of Glengall, by his wife, Emily, youngest daughter of James St. John Jeffreys, Esq., of Blarney Castle, in the county of Cork, and was sister of Richard, the second and last Earl of Glengall (in this title the extinction took place at his death, in 1858). Her Ladyship was born on the 1st of January, 1799, and was married on the 8th of December, 1818, to the Most Noble Sir George Augustus Frederick Percy, K.T., G.C.H., Marquis of Donegall, and has had issue by him, Frederick Richard, Earl of Belfast, who died unmarried at Naples in 1853, and a daughter, Lady Harriet Augusta Anne Seymour, now the wife of Anthony Lord Ashley, eldest son of the Earl of Shaftesbury.

COUNTESS MANVERS.

The Right Hon. Mary Lætitia, Countess Manvers, whose death occurred on the 7th inst., at one of the family seats, Thoresby Park, Nottinghamshire, was the eldest daughter of the late Anthony Hardolph Eyre, Esq., of Grove Park, Notts, by his wife, Francesca Alicia, eldest daughter of the late Richard Wilbraham Bootle, Esq., of Lathom, Lancashire, and was the niece of Edward, the Lord Chancellor. The Ladyship was born in 1783; and was married, on the 23rd August, 1804, to Charles Augustus, second and present Earl Manvers, and has had issue two sons, Charles Evelyn Viscount Newark (who died unmarried, in 1849), and 22nd August, 1805, Lady Augusta Mary Herbert, present Viscountess Newark, and two daughters—the Hon. Frederica Elizabeth Harriet, Countess Percy, and the Hon. Georgiana Augusta Frances Byng, wife of the Hon. George Byng, eldest son of Viscount Strafford.

viz., Lady Mary Francis, married in 1845 to Edward Christopher Petre, Esq., M.P., brother of Lord Petre; Lady Agnes Catherine, married in 1851 to Charles Walker, William Wynn, Esq., M.P., son and heir of the late Right Hon. Charles Watkin Williams Wynn.

VICE-ADMIRAL HEWSON.

Vice-Admiral George Hewson, whose death occurred at his residence, in the neighbourhood of Exeter, on the 19th inst., entered the Navy at an early age under Sir Hyde Parker; was midshipman of the St. George at the siege of Toulon and reduction of Corsica, and was in the Juno frigate at Calvi's action. He was, in 1795, Lieutenant of the Inconstant at the capture of the French line-of-battle ship, Le Tigre; and, subsequently, was in the fleet at the destruction of a convoy in the Passage du Raz, and was officially noticed for having cut out a lugger of six guns from under the batteries of St. Malo's—Hewson commanded a division of boats cutting out from Corunna the Spanish ship of war Argonia, of twenty guns. He was First Lieutenant of the Dreadnought at Trafalgar; the Superb at Copenhagen; and commanded the Pilche at the Dardanelles. Nelson, in recommending Hewson for Lord Collingwood, said, "I knew Hewson to be a gallant fellow." He became a Vice-Admiral in 1857. Admiral Hewson was married, in 1811, to Miss Hewson, of Ruinmore House, Listowel, by his wife, Margaret, eldest daughter of Lucius Bodkin, Q.C., and D.L., of Kilcornan, in the county of Limerick, and was grandson of John Hewson, J.P. and D.L. He was first cousin of the late Right Hon. Maurice Fitzgerald, and second cousin of the late Admiral Montagu. He married Grace, eldest daughter of William Marshall, J.P. and D.L., of Templemore Hall and Great Connell, in Kildare. The lady, who died in 1851, was first cousin to the present Colonel Sir Edward Bracebridge, and to the late Sir John M. Bracebridge, first cousin of Sir William Ainscotte Ingilby, Bart., and the late Duke of St. Albans.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR MICHAEL CREAGH, K.H.

Major-General Sir Michael Creagh, K.H., Colonel of the 73rd Regiment, who died at Boulogne on the 14th inst., was the fifth son of John Creagh, Esq., of Limerick, by his wife, a Miss Purcell, of Altmaha, in the county of Cork. He entered the British Army in 1802, and saw, and shared in, much severe and honourable service in India, Africa, and the Mediterranean. Creagh was in the expedition under Sir David Baird against the Cape of Good Hope, and was wounded in the action of the Blue Berg. He was also severely, dangerously wounded by a cannon-shot, which carried away a part of his left shoulder and killed all the men, at the attack of the batteries before the Castle of Scylla, at Bourbon. In 1817 and 1818 he was actively employed in the 86th flank, during the Mahratta and Pindaree wars. In 1819, by the appointment of Lord Interior of Ceylon, he commanded the flank companies of the 86th and other detachments, and received the repeated thanks of Governor Sir Robert Brownrigg for his conduct against the enemy. Creagh was for ten years Lieutenant-Colonel of the 86th Foot, and was Deputy Quarter-Master-General of the 11th Foot, from which command he retired in 1845. He was knighted in 1852, and was made a Knight of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order in 1837. He became a Major-General on the 20th of June, 1854. In the January of the present year the gallant General was appointed Colonel of the 73rd Regiment. Sir Michael married Miss Osborne, only daughter of the late Right Hon. Charles Osborne, a Lord of the Queen's Bench in Ireland, by whom he died in 1833. The family of Creagh, of Limerick, to which Sir Michael belonged, is of ancient and honourable standing. Sir Michael's father was Mayor of Limerick, and that office was afterwards filled by men of his house on thirty occasions. In 1460 Sir William Creagh was Sheriff of Limerick, and, in 1483 Dr. David Creagh was Archbishop of Cashel, and a Dr. Richard Creagh was Primate of all Ireland. Dr. Richard Creagh died while residing work "King James's Army List," by D'Alton, a Sir Michael Creagh appears as Lieutenant-General of James II.'s Irish forces, and Colonel of one of his regiments of infantry.

JOSEPH LOCKE, ESQ., M.P.

This eminent engineer and undoubtedly self-made man was the son of J. Locke, Esq., of Attercliffe, near Sheffield, and was born at Attercliffe in 1805. He was educated at Barnsley Grammar-School, where he early took great capacity for scientific knowledge and the practice of engineering. He obtained employment under the great engineer, George Stephenson, and on that distinguished man, he became himself a constructor of railways, and rose rapidly to the highest rank among the engineers of the age. Mr. Locke was a member, and latterly President, of the Institution of Civil Engineers; a member and director of the London and North-Western Railway was founded, and attained a high state of prosperity. Mr. Locke received the honour of the Lieutenancy of Hampshire, and represented in the House of Commons. Mr. Locke died on the 18th inst., at Moffat, in Dumfriesshire, and his death created the same chase of Stephenson and Brunel is the more to be felt as a severe national loss.

GEORGE ANTHONY LEGH-KEKE, ESQ.

This gentleman, who died on the 6th inst., was the second son of Anthony James Keck, Esq., of Stanghton Grange, in the county of Leicester, by Elizabeth, second daughter and co-heir of the late Rev. George Legh, of Cheshire. He was born on the 16th of July, 1774; and married, in 1809, his cousin, Elizabeth, second daughter and co-heir of the late Peter Legh, Esq., of Atherton Hall, Leigh, Lancashire; but by her, who died in 1837, he had no issue. Mr. Legh-Keke was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant of Leicestershire. He succeeded his elder brother, Peter Anthony Keck, Esq., in the Stanghton property in 1797; and inherited the same by succession to the estate of Bank Hall, in the county of Lancaster, pursuant to the entail in the will of his grandfather, Peter Legh, Esq., of Lyme, who left peculiar instructions that he should assume the additional surname and arms of Legh, which he did, and became Mr. Legh-Keke. The Bank estate, to which Mr. Legh-Keke succeeded under the will of his grandfather, now passes (the intervening persons in the entail having died without issue) under that will to Lord Lilford, eldest grandson of Harriet (wife of R. Vernon Atherton, Esq.), and eldest daughter of Peter Legh, Esq. Mr. Legh-Keke was for fifty years Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of Prince Albert's Own Leicestershire Yeomanry Cavalry. In 1852, at the age of 78, in his 23rd year, he was elected M.P. for the county of Leicester, on the Tory interest, on the death of the Hon. Astheton Pens Curzon, and he continued to represent the county till the dissolution of 1857.

The remains of Mr. Legh-Keke were interred in the family vault at Stanghton, on Tuesday, the 11th inst., by the side of his wife.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. T. S.—The set of chessmen presented by the "Old Man of the Mountain," or Sheik of the Bassorins, to King Louis IX. of France, in 1250, are made of crystal and jasper, and may be seen in the Museum of Antiquities at Paris. The Sheik, who was a Mahometan convert, signified to have been given to Christianity by a favourite of the Lion-hearted Emperor Irene or her successor Nicephorus—as preserved in the Bibliotheque de Roi at Paris.

REX.—I. Yes; can no, no doubt, obtain any or all of the works so often mentioned at H. G. Bohn's, York-street, Covent-garden. 2. Mr. Staunton's work on the Chess Tournament is now in course of publication by Messrs. Routledge. 3. A good copy of Cozio will probably cost you £30 in this country.

I. GILBERT.—Next week, if possible.

F. R. KEYWOOD.—Many thanks; the best shall have a place shortly.

J. S. B.—Your solution of the Enigma is correct, although your having been omitted last week from the list of names reserved for insertion in the annual review. In future it will be well if you furnish the prospectus a fortnight or more before the day appointed for the meeting.

ALPHA.—The "Handbuch des Schachspiels," published by Mayer & Zeller, Vienna, is a Leobschutz-ster.

E. B. COLE.—Your letter, and other challenging Mr. Horwitz and the other foreign players of note, to visit Scotland, has been forwarded to Mr. Staunton, and will appear in our next. Mr. Kolisch has gallantly offered to go over to America, on the occasion of the great Chess Congress and other fine arrangements, but Mr. Staunton, we fear, will not be able to accompany him, and the congress have made arrangements for promising a contest between those two players.

A. N.—The game is certainly very showy, in many instances exceptionally clever and ingenious, but assuredly not comparable with the magnificent match games of Lo Saavedra and Morphy, or Morphy and Anderssen, at the Paris Congress.

T. D.—Received, with thanks, and acknowledged by letter.

T. R. D.—The present month, when the metropolitan and provincial chess societies are preparing to resume their winter campaigns, is the very time for commencing a new and startling your projected club. Why not, as a preliminary step, call a meeting of the three or four players residing in your neighbourhood, and consult with them?

A. R., Bradford.—The chess-artist mania is rife in the Lancashire capital, and Liverpool and Manchester is understood to be under the able superintendence of Mr. C. H. Stanley, whose return to the locality, after a long residence in the Old World Dublin, we notified some weeks back.

J. H. Dublin.—An excellent facsimile of Cazzoux's "Book of the Chess" was issued two or three years ago by Messrs. Pagan, the type-setting of which copies may be had of Mr. Russell Smith, publisher, Soho-square.

SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEMS.—No. 863, by Dunfoldshire, G. T. S., Limerick, F. and D., Skye, Derby, T. P. C., Lacey, M. E., Beverley, R. A., Milan, D. W., Clerk, Pedro-Cross, Dax, Rev. J. W. D., Dublin, Rev. J. A. P., Ayr, Rev. J. C., Ayr, Rev. J. C., Ayr, Rev. J. C., Ayr, W. C., Shields, Moore, W., Baker, English, E. D. E., L. Simpson, Turnbull, Argyll, Derryname, G. F., T. Y., Perry, Dean, Old Jon, F. P., Queen, Shagbird, Forester, A. Bowman, C. P. A., E. H. B., Rev. M. S., Rochester, Philidor, Rev. A. Lady, Perry, Perrault, Spectator, J. R. L., F. R. S., Twiddy, C. W., Gascon, Dorothy, Tim Bobbin, R. F. Macbeath, J. H. D., Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, J. H. D. R., T. Tree, Ringsted, Sam, Finkleton, H. A. Walton, Whitmore, Rev. J. Owen.

MUTTERINGS OF PROBLEMS.—No. 863, by Dunfoldshire, G. T. S., Limerick, F. and D., Skye, Derby, T. P. C., Lacey, M. E., Beverley, R. A., Milan, D. W., Clerk, Pedro-Cross, Dax, Rev. J. W. D., Dublin, Rev. J. A. P., Ayr, Rev. J. C., Ayr, Rev. J. C., Ayr, W. C., Shields, Moore, W., Baker, English, E. D. E., L. Simpson, Turnbull, Argyll, Derryname, G. F., T. Y., Perry, Dean, Old Jon, F. P., Queen, Shagbird, Forester, A. Bowman, C. P. A., E. H. B., Rev. M. S., Rochester, Philidor, Rev. A. Lady, Perry, Perrault, Spectator, J. R. L., F. R. S., Twiddy, C. W., Gascon, Dorothy, Tim Bobbin, R. F. Macbeath, J. H. D., Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Owen, J. H. D. R., T. Tree, Ringsted, Sam, Finkleton, H. A. Walton, Whitmore.

* We are driven by stress of space to defer the Answers to many Chess Correspondents until next week.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 864.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to Q Kt 3rd (ch)	K takes Kt.	4. R to Q Kt 6th (ch)	B takes R
2. Q to R 3rd.	K take Q (best)	5. P to Q Kt 3rd.	Mate.
3. R takes P	P to K 3rd

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 865.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to B 7th	Kt to Q 5th	3. Q to Kt 4th (ch)	R takes Q
2. Q takes Q P	R takes R (best)	4. Kt mates.

PROBLEM No. 866.

By Mr. B. B. WORMALD.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

CHESS AT CAMBRIDGE.

The annexed Game, a very interesting one, was played between Mr. KOLISCH and Mr. C. H. STANLEY in the prize tourney at the Cambridge meeting.

(Q's Kt Opening.)

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. K.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P
4. Q to R 5th	P to Q Kt 4th
5. B to Q Kt 5th	P to Q R 3rd
6. P to Q R 4th	P to Q 5th
7. Kt to K 2nd	P to Q B 4th
8. Kt to K B 3rd	P to Q 3rd
9. Castles	Castles
10. P to Q 3rd	Kt to Q R 3rd
11. P to K 5th	Kt to Q 2nd
12. Kt to K 3rd	Q to Q B 2nd
13. P to K R 3rd	P to K 5th
14. Q to Q 2nd	P to K B 4th

This opening, though occasionally adopted in England since the publication of Mr. Staunton's work, is not to be found in any of the foreign compilations, and has apparently recently been brought from the precincts of the Danube.

2.	Kt to K B 3rd
3. P to Q B 4th	P to K 3rd
4. Q to R 3rd	P to Q Kt 4th
5. B to Q Kt 5th	P to Q R 3rd
6. P to Q R 4th	P to Q 5th
7. Kt to K 2nd	P to Q B 4th
8. Kt to K B 3rd	P to Q 3rd
9. Castles	Castles
10. P to Q 3rd	Kt to Q R 3rd
11. P to K 5th	Kt to Q 2nd
12. Kt to K 3rd	Q to Q B 2nd
13. P to K R 3rd	P to K 5th
14. Q to Q 2nd	P to K B 4th

A move of singular ingenuity, which relieves White from some inconvenient, but not serious, threats to a very important extent.

14.	P takes P
15. B takes Kt	Kt takes B
16. Q to R 5th (ch)	Kt to K sq
17. Kt takes K P	Q to Sq

This apparently, but best move, taking the K. would probably have cost his Queen.

18. Q to K 7th	P to Q Kt 5th

(Tempting, but very perilous.

19. Q to K 5th	P to Q Kt 6th

(White must now sacrifice a piece, but he gains in return a strong attack.)

20. B takes Kt P (ch)	K to Q sq
21. Kt takes B (ch)	K to Kt sq
22. Kt to K 6th (ch)

(Better to have taken the Bishop, and then to have played to Q B 4th, the game afterwards would have been nearly equal.)

22.	P takes Kt
23. Q takes B	P takes Q P
24. P takes P	B takes P
25. Kt to K sq	B to K Kt 3rd
26. Kt to Q 3rd	P to K 6th
27. Q to K sq	Kt to Kt 2nd
28. P to Q 4th	Kt to Q sq
29. P to K B 3rd	Kt to K B 4th
30. B to K 3rd	Kt to K 6th
31. Q to K B 2nd	Q takes Q Kt P
32. Q to Q 3rd	P to Q Kt 7th
33. Q to Q R 5th	Kt to K 4th
34. Q to Q Kt 5th	Q to Q Kt 6th

(The beginning of the end.)

35. Q to K 3rd (ch)	Kt to K 3rd
36. R to Q Kt 8th	R to Q B sq
37. Kt to Q 4th	Q to K B 3rd
38. R to Q sq	R to Q Kt sq
39. Q to K B 2nd	Q to K B 2nd
40. Q to K 5th	Q to Q Kt 6th
41. R to Q B 8th	Q to K B 2nd
42. K to K B 2nd	P to Q Kt 8th

(Becoming a Queen.)

43. R takes Q	B takes R
44. P to Q 6	P to Q 7
45. P to K Kt 3rd	Q to Q B 7th
46. P to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
47. K to Q 2nd	Q takes Q R 7

and, after a few moves, White resigned.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 1167.—By Mr. LEQUESNE (La Régence).

White: K at K B sq, Rs at K Kt 8th and K B 7th, B at K Kt sq, Kt at K R 5th; Ps at K Kt 6th, K B 2nd, and K B 3rd.

Black: K at K 5th; Ps at K Kt 5th, Q Kt 3rd, and Q R 2nd.

White to play and mate in four moves.

No. 1168.—By Mr. LEQUESNE (La Régence).

White: K at K R sq, Q at Q R 8th, B at K Kt 7th, B at Q B 5th, Kt at Q 2nd and Q Kt 4th; Ps at K R 2nd and Q B 3rd.

Black: K at K 4th, Q at Q Kt 2nd, B at Q 8th, Kt at K 6th; Ps at K 4th, Q 3rd and 4th.

White, playing first, mates in three moves.

No. 1169.—By Mr. C. BAYER (La Régence).

White: K at K Kt 5th, Q at Q 7th, B at K sq, Kts at K 2nd and Q 8th; Ps at K R 2nd, Q 2nd, and Q B 4th.

Black: K at K 4th, Rs at Q R 8th and Q B 7th, Bs at K Kt sq and Q R 8th, Kts at K B 8th and Q 7th; Ps at K 4th, K 2nd and 3rd, Q 3rd, and Q Kt 2nd.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

On Wednesday se'nnight the Mayor of Sheffield entertained one-half of the police force of that borough at dinner in the Council Hall. The remainder were similarly treated yesterday week.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

A NEW PLANET was discovered in the constellation of the Whale by M. Chacornac, of the Imperial Observatory, Paris, about 1'43 on September 13 last.

THE ICE PHENOMENA OF THE DANUBE are described by the eminent geologist of Vienna, W. Haidinger, in a report printed in the new volume of the "Memoirs of the Imperial Academy," illustrated by plans and diagrams, exhibiting in profile the state of the river at various times and under varying circumstances.

THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ECLIPSE of July 18, taken by Father Secchi, at Rome, are found to correspond in all the essential details with those taken by Mr. Warren De La Rue, which appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of August 25, with an interesting letter by that eminent astronomical photographer. We would again refer to the letter sending amongst astronomers as to the reality of the phenomena of the corona, prominences, &c., as it seems impossible to explain the phenomena of the diffraction-spectrum identical at points distant nine minutes of time.

THE SHOOTING STARS observed in Rome in August by Father Secchi attained their maximum on August 10, when 134 were seen. The number on the 9th was fifty, and on the 11th twenty-five only. The months of August and November are remarkable for the abundance of shooting-stars.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF BELGIUM, in 1845, was charged by a Royal Decree with the publication of a National Biography and a National Biography of Belgium. The idea was happy, but the execution difficult. However, after fifteen years' delay, the work is about to begin—the Academy having appointed a commission of fifteen eminent persons, chosen from the three classes of its members. An alphabetical list of remarkable persons will be printed in the first instance. The publication of a collection of the great writers of the Low Countries, in the Flemish and Dutch, is also proposed.

"NARATHEAN AGRICULTURE" is the title given to a presumed Babylonian MS., cited for the first time in Europe by Thomas Aquinas, and subsequently still further referred to by quotations in the Christian and Jewish writers of the middle ages, especially by Maimonides. The much mutilated original MS. has now been recovered by M. Quatremère, who thinks it was written between the time of Belesis and Cyrus (b.c. 876-538.) It has been translated into Arabic by one Ouahschiyah, a Nemra, with regard to what is found in it respecting Greek science, the Institutions of the Persians under the Achæmenidæ, and Babylonian literature. An abstract of this very interesting memoir appears in L'Institut, "The Treatise on Agriculture," by Ibn-el-Awam, the author of the above-mentioned work, was published by Banquet, at Madrid, in 1802.

THE ACTION OF CHLOROFORM, CHLOROFORM, &c., on the nervous system has been investigated by MM. Lallemand, Perrin, and Duroy, who have had an account of their experiments before the French Academy of Sciences. All these agents, especially chloroform, ether, and amylene act directly upon the nervous system, which seems to be their sole or principle point of attack. They produce, first, insensibility, and thereby determine sensibility and motility. Chloroform is the most rapid in its operation with M. Flourens, who states (we say that in ordinary asphyxia the nervous system loses its excitability before the heart, while in chloroform it loses its oxygen) ; but in etherisation the nervous system loses its power, at first, by its direct action, and the heart by the impression determined in the nervous centres.

METAMORPHISM, &c.—The production of crystalline rock forms the subject of an elaborate article in the last number of the Annales des Mines, by M. Daubrée, containing account of the author's own experiments, and a résumé of the researches of other eminent mineralogists, with details of the artificial production of crystals.

LOSS OF THE PRECIOUS METALS IN ASSAYING.—M. G. MARGUE (in Mining Review) shows how small comparatively are the losses of gold and silver are lost by volatilization in the fluxes, and by dissolution in the nitric acid employed. These small quantities, he states, become important in the vast amounts that are passed through the hands of the assayer.

PALÆONTOLOGISTS will be interested by the accounts given in L'Institut of the extraordinary discovery of fossil mammals discovered by Dr. Sosky, a Belgian army physician, during the excavation made at Liatry for the defences, assisted in her search by a dog, Dr. Sosky asserts and maintains that these bones include the remains of eight individuals representing the following species—Elephas primigenius (mammoth), the Rhinoceros superbinus, the fossil horse, a species of dog, and the fossil stag (Cervus primigenius). The Belgian Academy, M. Dumont reports, has Dr. Sosky's report not referred, doubt the correctness of his conclusions.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY.—Part II. of the Transactions of the "Proceedings" of this illustrious body chemistry is represented by no less than nine papers. Of these, Dr. Stenhouse's contribution is devoted to the history of ammonia and the phosphorus bases; a paper by Dr. E. Frankland on Boro-Silicic acid, and a paper by Messrs. Williamson and Odling on the compound nature of hydrocarbons derived from the destructive distillation of coal-tar and other substances. Dr. Miller's paper is devoted to the spectra and physical papers by the Chief Baron (Sir F. Pollock), Sir J. Herschel, Admiral Smyth, and Messrs. Galton and Stevenson. The geological portion of deceased fellows includes Hallam, Brunel and Stephenson, Humboldt and Ritter, Heinrich Rose, &c.

LAWS OF COLOURS.—At a recent meeting of the French Academy of Sciences, during a conversation respecting the optical phenomena of the relics of the day, M. Chevreul remarked that the theory of harmonies of complementary colours, and stated that he was then printing in the Society's Memoirs a memoir on the subject.

THE ACCLIMATISATION OF THE ALPACA AND LAMA is progressing vigorously. M. Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire, in a report made to the French Academy of Science the recent arrival of thirty-three alpacas, nine lamas, and one vicuna, which have been safely landed at Havre. The last had brought from Peru and Bolivia by M. Rochin. The mortality was occasioned by the long voyage and unfavourable weather. M. Rochin has brought with his also bands the whole wool most probably have perished. In 1765 Buffon recommended the introduction of the valuable wool-yielding animals of Peru, "a conquest, saying," I think that these animals would be an excellent acquisition for Europe, and that they would prove more useful to us than those of the New World." In relation to this, M. St. Hilaire refers to the increasing numbers of these animals in France, England, Spain, Cuba, and Australia.

ENGAGEMENT BETWEEN THE "BORRONE" AND THE SHIP-GUN BATTERY, FARO.

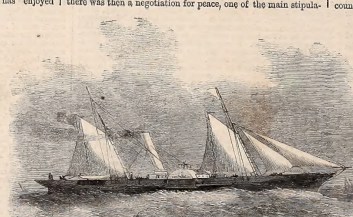
On the 22nd of August the Borrone, a large Neapolitan screw-steamer, passed the Faro. She hoisted the French flag, and under its protection came close to the batteries raised at Faro by the Garibaldians, when she opened with her guns upon them. The guns were apparently not out in the batteries, but in the village of Faro. Previous to firing she had passed within 200 yards of the batteries, and fired a broadside. The batteries, although thrown off their guard, answered, but could make only little impression, as the Borrone was soon out of range for a full force of her steam power, and of she current. The next day she came up again, sailing one ana and wounding three; but, without passing the Straits, she returned to Naples. Report says that the Borrone, when the Faro, indignant at the trick which had been played on them the day before, resolved to take good care not to be taken in again. And in fact, when, the next day, a Neapolitan brigantine passed laden with forage, and hoisting the French flag, she was fired at by and, when the Garibaldian gun-boats were sent towards her which sunk her. It was only when the gun-boats approached that she hauled down the French flag and hoisted the Neapolitan. The Special Artist in Sicily took a Sketch (engraved on the next page) while the action was going on between the Garibaldian battery in the foreground and two of the Vilore's 64-pounders, served by seamen. The engagement was pretty sharp while it lasted; although the Borrone kept well off, and did not seem inclined to go in for anything but long shots.

CALCUTTA CITY IMPROVEMENTS.

The Calcutta Municipality has commenced clearing the European quarter of the town from old and native houses, and the view with which we present our readers shows the result of their efforts in carrying out the extensive improvements which they have in hand. The identical locality known by the name of the Dunkin Bustee, and situated in the heart of Chowringhee, was covered with a cluster of native huts, which, with their narrow and tortuous lanes, formed a blot which was so closely huddled together as to be actually inaccessible to conservancy carts. The Calcutta Municipality resolved that this spot should first cleared it of all the huts, and, after appropriating a sufficient area for the excavation of a tank and the formation of a road, should sell the remaining portion for the express purpose of building European residences thereupon. One stately mansion has been finished, and is already occupied by Dr. Woodford; another is nearly completed, and arrangements are in progress for the construction of two other houses. Thus the locality has been cleared of its dirty inmates, the residents of the neighbourhood have a supply of good tank water, while Park-street itself has benefited in appearance. We understand that the Town Commissioners are now engaged in the clearance of two other plots of ground occupied by native huts, and the principle is to be extended to the whole of the European quarter of Calcutta.

ENGAGEMENT BETWEEN THE "BOURBONNAIS" NEAPOLITAN STEAM-FRIGATE AND THE SHIP-GUN BATTERY, FARO, AUGUST 23.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

IMPROVEMENTS IN CALCUTTA: THE DUNKIN BUSTEE, IN CHOWRINGHEE.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.



LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE O. LEIGHTON, 198 Strand, Aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1860.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 1053.—VOL. XXXVII.] SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1860. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

CHINA.

THE most recent advices from the Far East show that we are once more about to neutralise the cant phrase that, with the exception of the contest with Russia, England has enjoyed more than forty years of peace. Perhaps, for the future, it would be better if the chronicler of events since 1815 was to amend this almost proverbial expression, and henceforth to state that England for more than forty years had never realised the idea of war. Every now and then we took into the region of actuality a Kaffir war or a New Zealand war when we found the expenses of those hostilities discussed in the consideration of the Army Estimates; in fact, when we came to pay the bill for them. But our Indian wars, grand in their dimensions, and bloody in their results as they have been, caught a kind of impalpability, firstly, from the effect of that enchantment—which may be of two kinds, be it remembered—which is caught from distance, and still more from the fact that their cost fell on the revenues of our Eastern empire, and made no direct appeal upon the Imperial exchequer. Even our former belligerent encounters with the Chinese did not rise in the imaginations of Englishmen at home—toned down as they were by the ignorance of result of the events which accompanied them—to the dignity of war. A few battalions of infantry and a light battery of artillery were supposed to have swept before them a disorganised mob of weak Asiatics who could hardly be called armed in the modern European sense; there was then a negotiation for peace, one of the main stipulations of which was the payment of a few waggon-loads of specie silver, which in due time were to be seen wending their way towards the Bank of England. We believe that we in this country have now formed other and, looking to the circumstances of the case, more accurate notions of a Chinese war. Of a certainty, unless the prospects are very much belied by eventualities, few of us at this moment think that Great Britain is about to enter on a little war. That our administrators and authorities have in the main not undervalued the necessity of the situation is shown by the fact that a very large force, relatively speaking, has been organised by the English Government with a completeness and efficiency which has been recognised by every unprejudiced observer who has had an opportunity of examining the army which has been, for some time before the departure of the last advices from the place of rendezvous, lying in readiness for immediate action. Whether, as regards her military or her naval preparations, England enters on this expedition with every appearance of a due sense of its importance, and with a determination of purpose which augurs well for its skilful conduct and its ultimate success. Besides this, the combination of the forces of France with our own gives an expansion and an extent to the contemplated operations which, as far as ordinary calculation goes, affords an assurance that a serious effort is now to be made to settle once for all the vexed question of the relations which are to exist between the Chinese empire and the chief Western Powers of Europe. It is not for us now to discuss the policy which has dictated the alliance of France and England in the carrying out of this war, but one deduction may be drawn from the circumstance of the united action of those two nations in this matter, and that is, that this time it will be necessary to be done is to be done thoroughly, and any rate, whatever is to be done is to be done thoroughly, and that when the time arrives for negotiation, the hands of our diplomatists will be so strengthened as to leave them no excuse for the alliance with its subject-matter, and to ensure them the prestige which is necessary to an arrangement so broad, and at the same time so complex, as to leave little or no chance for future shuffling even to Chinese acuteness in deceit.

THE "FAIRY QUEEN" PADDLE-WHEEL DESPATCH-BOAT FOR GENERAL GARIBALDI. SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 320.

NEAPOLITAN LANCERS. COL. PEARD. MAJOR WORTLEY. COL. BAKER.

THE REVOLUTION IN NAPLES.—CHARGE OF NEAPOLITAN CAVALRY ON THE NATIONAL TROOPS BEFORE CAPUA, ON THE 19TH OF SEPTEMBER.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN ITALY, FRANK VIZETELLY.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 319.

Long ere this the fourth hostile encounter between Europe and China has begun, the departure of an expedition for Pehtang, a point to the north of the Peiho, having been fixed for the last week in July. An alteration in the plan of the campaign has been made, the intention that the French should operate from one quarter and the British from another having been abandoned; and the first attack is to be made not only simultaneously but co-operatively by the forces of the two nations. It has been ascertained from experience that Chinese troops of the north are not such despicable opponents as the disparity in numbers of our own force over that of the French has its compensation in the fact of the mixed character of the men of which ours is composed. All accounts, however, testify to the soldierlike qualities of the native employed, and there is no doubt that they will do good service. It is, on the other hand, unreasonable to suppose, even if the Chinese troops which are engaged against the Anglo-French army are found to be foemen worthy of their steel, that the first operations will result in a victory, that should be decisive in its character, and large in its results, the question will arise whether that moment should be chosen for opening negotiations, or whether it should be followed by a march upon Pekin. Of course this will depend a good deal on the character and circumstances of the case as it will then arise, and the decision must rest solely on the discretion of the Plenipotentiaries. Opinions which are entitled to weight have been hazarded that, considering the nature and extent of the military preparations for resisting the invaders made by the Chinese in a single blow, if the thorough and shattering enough, will suffice to clear the way for diplomacy, and offers to treat will come from the Imperial Court itself. We sincerely trust that this may be the case. It is in vain to attempt to disguise from ourselves that the prosecution of a campaign which involves an attack upon the capital of the Celestial Empire involves considerations of the most serious character.

In the first place, it may be permitted to those who can only claim to be lookers-on to doubt whether the allied armed force now in China, effective and admirable as it is in every respect, is adequate to operations on such a scale as a march upon Pekin would imply, even if a primary victory should be gained only at such an expense of life and matériel as have hitherto been the forfeit paid by Europeans to Chinese military capabilities. Still greater would be the difficulty and the responsibility of more extended operations, in the not unlikely event of a battle won, with the consequence of heavy loss on our side. We have no reserves organised within immediate reach of the whereabouts of the troops was so good as to be abnormal almost to the miraculous in reference to the hygiene of armies. But is there any assurance that no ill effects connected with climate may not follow a prolonged harassing march over the line of country which must necessarily be traversed? Again, too, while our admiration and pride are excited by the statements which have reached us of the splendid condition of our troops, we must not forget that this condition has been attained by a large pecuniary expenditure, which will expand more and more as the expedition spreads in its dimensions, and becomes more pretentious and permanent in its character. For every reason, by all means including those considerations of humanity which teach us to shrink from the slaughter of our fellow-creatures and the devastation of territory, we most earnestly hope that the struggle will be short and decisive, however sharp it may chance to be. Something has been whispered of Russian influence being exercised, and even of Russian material aid having been lent to the Chinese, in order to strengthen them in their resistance to this last attempt to bring them into satisfactory relations with the Western Powers. No doubt it is the policy of Russia to keep English or even French influence away from the north of China, towards which direction hitherto her own diplomacy has directed a desire for the establishment of undue interest. course with the north proper of China, that Russia might see the prudence of counselling concessions which, while they would satisfy the demands of England and France now, might by no means be sufficient or satisfactory in the event of, say, an occupation of Pekin by a victorious Anglo-French force.

For the reasons which we have endeavoured to indicate, we venture to express a hope that the possession of the Peiho and the defensive works on its banks by the allied forces will be found sufficient to obtain a treaty containing such provisions as will place the diplomatic relations and the commercial intercourse between the Western Powers and China on a footing which will be satisfactory to both, and mutually advantageous in its future results. That for the preservation of faith with us we should claim and obtain fitting material guarantees there can be no question. Our policy being settle, it is clear that the work which has been now begun must be done thoroughly—so work which has been now begun must be done thoroughly—so thoroughly and so effectually that the present generation at least, and, we hope, many a generation to come, will hear no more of a Chinese war.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

THE FRENCH OCCUPATION OF ROME.

We read in a Paris letter that M. de Cadore, Secretary of the French Embassy at Rome, had arrived in Paris, bringing an ultimatum of the Pope. It is believed to be to the effect that if the French Government does not interfere against Piedmont his Holiness will at once excommunicate Victor Emmanuel. The Duke de Cadore contained the quit Rome, which has been given to the French troops, and which, it is said, has already deplored more than the Emperor the course pursued by Cardinal Antonelli. After several days' consultation, the ultimatum by Cardinal Antonelli. After several days' consultation, the ultimatum by Cardinal Antonelli. After several days' consultation, the ultimatum

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams were received through Mr. Reuter's office yesterday (Friday):—

DEFEAT OF THE NEAPOLITANS.—Genoa, October 4.—According to advices received here, Garibaldi has sent the following despatch to Naples, dated —

"Headquarters, October 1.—Victory along the whole line! The Royal troops are being pursued."

AUSTRIA.—VIENNA, THURSDAY.—The name-day of the Emperor of AUSTRIA was celebrated to-day by a solemn ceremony in the cathedral of St. Stephen's, and by a military parade of the garrison. This evening a grand dinner of the Imperial family takes place at Schoenbrunn.

Venice, Thursday.—The wives and families of the Generals and officers of the Austrian army in Venetia have received orders to depart thither immediately.

PARIS, THURSDAY.—Prince Metternich will return to his post as Austrian Ambassador on the 20th inst.

Pesth, October 3.—It has been announced by the Rector that the University of Pesth will remain closed during the whole year.

THE PAPAL STATES.

ANCONA has fallen after a seven days' siege. On Saturday morning last General Lamoricière capitulated, and "he and the whole garrison are prisoners of war. The rapid fall of ANCONA was chiefly owing: it seems, to the co-operation of the fleet. The batteries of the port having been dismounted by the fire of the vessels, and the army thus rendered open from the seaside, the defenders had no safe place of retreat left, for the capture of the detached forts permitted the Sardinian General to bombard the fortress, even the cathedral and the town, which thus became open for occupation, from the side on the Porta Pia as well as from that of the sea. The surrender of the garrison must have been almost one at discretion, though some sort of a capitulation was drawn up.

It is stated that ANCONA was alike attacked and defended with admirable courage. The besiged had altogether only 120 pieces in battery, whereas the armings of their works was not terminated when the siege commenced; but it was not until every gun had become unfit for use that General Lamoricière abandoned the unequal contest. The Piedmontese artillery, which was very good and numerous, was perfectly well served; its fire, both from land and sea, having been formidable.

The Official Gazette of Turin gives the following particulars of the operations of the Sardinian fleet before ANCONA. It consisted of the Maria Adelaide, Vittore Emanuelle, and Carlo Alberto, screw-frigates; the San Michele and Governolo, paddle-steamers; frigate Governolo and Costituzione, and the corvette Mancandone. On the 18th ult. the battery Scrima immediately opposite the lighthouse fort, although barely within range; the other batteries, Monte Murano, Capucini, and Monte Gardetto soon followed. The fleet did not reply for some time, but at length, at its fire did become effective, Monte Murano battery suffered most; it had three guns dismounted, four artillerymen killed, and many wounded. All the fortifications were considerably damaged. When the fire had ceased the galley slaves were sent to the shore, together with a detachment of artillery, into the service by the military. None of the vessels suffered any serious damage. Unfortunately a few projectiles fell into the town and killed a woman and a child. Admiral PERSANO was soon informed of this, expressed the greatest regret, and gave the strictest orders to prevent the recurrence of any such misfortune. On the 29th several transports arrived with stores and provisions. On the 22nd Admiral PERSANO received the following: "The fire of the enemy vessels like hail: the Carlo Alberto alone was hit forty times, and the others more or less." On the loss of the Piedmontese we have no details, being only one man killed and five wounded. On the night of the 18th seven boats were manned, and sent, under the command of Captain Cucchi, to destroy some of the defences of the port. They did considerable damage, and only retreated when a heavy fire was opened upon them. Only one of their officers, a Lieutenant, was wounded."

A despatch from ANCONA, dated Monday, states that "General Lamoricière, wishing to express his admiration of the bravery of the Sardinian fleet, offered to surrender to Admiral PERSANO. The Admiral sent him a written reply, and ordered the whole army to march past him military honours. The Admiral also offered his own cabin to the General, who was deeply touched by the courteous offer. Lamoricière will embark on board the steamer Count Cavour, which will carry him to Genoa, where he will remain for a few days."

The portfolio of General Lamoricière has fallen into the hands of General Fanti, and it is stated that it contains letters of the most compromising kind, and the most positive proofs of the intrigues which have entered into with the Legitimist, and even the Red Republican, party against the Government of the Emperor NAPOLEON.

An allocution pronounced by the Pope on the Roman question had been modified on receipt of news from France. Consequently it was not hoisted the French flag at a distance of five miles from Rome. The French garrison will be increased by two regiments. The provinces of Umbria, Viterbo, and the Marches are lost to the Papal Government. Subiaco and Ariscli have risen in insurrection.

The sanitary wing of the Sardinian army is said to have advanced as far as Teroli, the well-known point of excursion from Rome in the Sabine mountains. The capois of St. Peter is now in sight of the Sardinian soldiers, and the inhabitants of Rome have the opportunity of fraternising with them in their pleasure trips.

AUSTRIA.

At the final sitting of the Reichsrath, on Thursday week, the Assembly voted on the principles of constitutional reform proposed by the majority of the committee, which were agreed to by 34 against 16 votes in favour of the proposition of the majority. Count RECHBERG thanked the Reichsrath, in the name of the Emperor, for its "self-devotion and activity," the Archduke-President in the name of Majesty had been pleased to direct him "to prorogue the enlarged Council of the Empire. The Assembly thereupon replayed its loyalty by raising a loud cry of "Long live the Emperor!" The Emperor and Austria received the members of the Reichsrath on Saturday in a final audience, at the close of which he was told by Count RECHBERG that action concerning their propositions would be promulgated. He would meet with their approval, and get credit for his constitutional views, and that he would obtain their energetic support for the inauguration of popular institutions.

The military classes of 1840-39-38-37-36, comprising young men of the age of sixteen years, have been called to service. The levy will terminate on the 31st of December next.

Numerous arrests have taken place in Hungary on account of the disseminations of revolutionary proclamations. It is stated that should not the former Constitution of Hungary be restored by the Emperor, a refusal to pay taxes will be organised throughout the kingdom.

By order of the Military Governor the highlands of Croatia, the port, and the Venetian littoral has been surrapsed until further instructions. The measure is said to be due to the Archduke Ferdinand Maximilian. The reason assigned for this order is that Garibaldian agents secretly entered the lagunes at night in order to take soundings.

TURKEY.

Certain continental journals have lately circulated reports that the Turkish Government suspected Sir Henry Bulwer of instigating a plot against the Sultan, because he had by mistake boarded the yacht of the Sultan's brother instead of El Hami Pacha's, and they have not failed to insinuate that there were grounds for the suspicion. Among other things, they asserted that Ali Pacha had assured the Austrian Charge d'Affaires that he personally spoke of Sir H. Bulwer's complicity in a plot. It is now, however, announced that Ali Bey's story formally denied the whole story, which he justly termed "absurd and blearly untrue."

PROGRESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS IN CANADA.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales arrived at London, Canada West, on the 12th ult., as stated in our last Number. Here the Prince was most enthusiastically received. Some 20,000 visitors were in the town. A telegram from that town says:—"The torchlight procession included some fifteen hundred firemen and several hundred Indians, the latter of whom formed a circle in front of the Prince's house, and danced and manœuvred like so many fiends. Since he arrived for the occasion by one of their number, who is 104 years old. At Guelph and at Hamilton, he received addresses, and a thousand Sunday-school children also greeted him, and sang the National Anthem very beautifully. At Hamilton the Prince was sung to by twenty young ladies, whom he rewarded by presenting, among the daughter of the Mayor for them all. Some way called out "Langara!" and he was the members of the suite moved on amid cheers from the rosties.

The Prince left for Sarnia on the 13th. This town is the extreme western terminus of the Grand Trunk Railway, where its long line of 1100 miles of road may be said to rest upon Lake Huron. 500 persons had assembled, and also 200 Chippewa Indians from the Manitoulin Islands, in full costume, painted and feathered. The principal chief delivered an harangue to the Prince, to which the latter replied through the interpreter. The Prince distributed medals, and the Indians presented his Royal Highness with a tomahawk, bow, and arrows, moccasins, &c. The Prince then lunched, and viewed the neighbourhood, and returned to London, where he held a levée, which was numerously attended, and went to a ball in the evening.

"Passing through more little towns, with large Old World names, always received with vociferous welcome, the Prince made his way to the great wonder of America and of the world, the Falls of Niagara, which he reached on the evening of the 19th. On the 20th the Prince received an address from the magistrates of the county. The Honorable Full was lighted up with blue lights and Bengal fires, producing a beautiful effect.

"On the 11th the Prince of Wales visited Niagara Falls, with his suite. The inhabitants generally thanked Heaven that the visit was paid first and here, and went near the sheet of falling water. In the afternoon he went to witness the performance of Blondin on the tightrope, who carried the Prince of Wales on his back across and back—a feat which he has never before attempted. On the 17th the Prince visited the Indian village of the Six Nations Grand River Reserve, and where the heartiest cheers."

The special correspondent of the Times gives an interesting description of the scene at Niagara on the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales:—"Here the Prince has cast off pomp and state, and there is a temptation to think that Hook Heath and Virginia Water reviews, processions, state balls, and dirty Orangemen. The Prince lives privately in the house of Mr. Clifton, Mayor of Niagara, the suite are accommodated at the little cottages which fill the beautiful garden to the Clifton House. State and pomp, as I have said, are therefore scattered to the winds. The Prince has come here, and he said to be here in private. He rides out and walks out without a mob at his heels, and can thus see the sights for hours consecutively and look around him. It is just as well, perhaps, that state is dropped before Niagara. The Falls are not to be seen by the side of anything, would look poorly beside this great altar of Nature, where a misty incense is always rising to heaven, and the e ernity of water spoke only of God. As the Prince walked down the steep and winding path that leads behind the curtain, and succeeded in entering the tavern of the Cave of the Winds, immediately in the rear, he received from the boldest visitor to the great cataract. "His first view of the cataracts was from the Canada side, and he could not see the sun as it seem them before, and as they will probably never be seen again—he saw the Falls of Niagara illuminated. At the first idea it seems to me that the Falls are a huge mass of water, with the two outpourings of Lake Erie; and Mr. Blackwell, when he started the idea, was thought to be a well-meaning fool. But it is not necessary to use the mildest term. Mr. Blackwell, however, persevered, and had some 200 Bengal lights placed in the river above the Falls, and also visible to manufacture. About twenty of these were placed in a row under the cliffs, beneath Clifton House, and facing the American Fall; twenty more were placed under the Canada Fall; and the effect was that the sheet of water itself, the entrance to which from the Canadian side I have already described. At ten o'clock all the lights were lit, and their effect was something grand, magical, and brilliant beyond all power of words to describe. The immense sheet of water, seen through glowing as if inundescent in the intense light, seemed turned to molten silver. From behind the fall the light shone with such vivid brilliancy that the whole mass of water, which, seen by day, is of a dark green glass, a cascade of diamonds, every head and stream in which leapt and sparkled and flashed in the glare over the whole mass of the most lighted phosphorus. The boiling rapids underneath dimly reflected back the vivid gleam as from a mirror, lighting up the trees and rocks and all the rich and luxuriant foliage of the islands which are dotted along out the old grey ruins of Table Rock like a huge dilapidated tower. In the middle, the Canada Fall, with its immense body of water, and with the cataracts in a luminous cloud that it seemed as if the Niagara was in a blaze from end to end. Above all, the Bridge of Suspension seemed as nothing to the effect produced when the lights were changed from white to red. Niagara seemed turned to blood in colour, but so bright as that of the deepest crimson. The effect was grand, and every bellish fire seemed to have taken the place in an instant of these cold, green terrors. The Prince looked down the stream of blood, the blood-red mass, dark-looking and clotted in the centre, without a feeling of awe. The crimson lasted only a few minutes, and Simon, now move your gaze from the blazing cauldron underneath the falls, from the river seemed in its frothy red foam like boiling blood."

On the morning of 20th his Royal Highness the guest stone of Brock's Monument on Queenstown Heights, and received an address from each of the municipalities of the neighbourhood, and also in the American War of 1812. From Queenstown Heights the Royal party drove to the edge of the river, where they embarked on board a steamer and sailed down the stream for Chippewa, the scene of the Niagara, where were many tasteful arches. This place was formerly the capital of Upper Canada, and was visited by the Governor-General, thence to Point Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario, where they again took the railroad and proceeded to Hamilton, the Prince's route from St. Catherine's to Hamilton was, says the Times correspondent, "all the country of Upper Canada, fertile, rich, and picturesque, as undulating and as much down the mean as the finest parts of Devon." His Royal Highness got a grand reception at Hamilton, the pretty little capital of which is the centre of a magnificent district. At 7 P.M. the Prince attended a philharmonic concert; and on the following day, besides attending a grand ball, he visited the public schools and held a levee at the Royal Hotel. On the 23rd, after the Prince had had a private view of the great Agricultural Exhibition of Upper Canada, which he formally opened on the 24th, he left for Toronto, the capital of Canada, and with this ceremony may be said to end his progress as Prince of Wales in Canada, though he visited Kingston, Prescott, Windsor, situated on the Detroit River; and here the progress of his Royal Highness in Canada came to a close.

THE PRINCE AS BARON RENFREW, IN THE UNITED STATES.

His Royal Highness has commenced his tour in the United States under the most favourable auspices. A telegram, dated Detroit, Sept. 26, thus records the proceedings in that city:—"The Prince reached Windsor at 4 A.M. by railroad train from Hamilton. The Royal party were escorted on board the Detroit and Milwaukie ferry from Windsor, which was gaily decorated with flags and evergreens. Here the steamer reached American waters Mayor Boil, on behalf of the city of Detroit, welcomed the Prince to the soil of the United States. Arranged in the river, and covering a space of nearly a mile in length, was a large fleet of river and lake vessels, beautifully rigged with variegated lamps, and decorated with banners and emblems inscribed with words of greeting. As the Royal steamer passed through the first each vessel sent forth a perfect shower of rockets and fireworks, and the warehouses fronting the river were splendidly illuminated. Fireworks were also let off from the docks, and the whole river was one complete flame of light, making one of the grandest displays ever witnessed. The Royal party landed at the foot of Woodward-avenue, Detroit, and in the following order proceeded to the railroad depot. An escort for the Royal party, composed of the firemen of the city, bearing torches, and most of the city military, was intended, but the crowd was so great it was found impossible for the procession to form. After some delay, and the greatest confusion, the Prince was taken away in a close carriage, and driven to Russell House unrecognised. His suite followed, escorted by firemen. The Royal party will remain here until ten o'clock to-morrow, when they will leave for Chicago by the Michigan Central Railroad in a special train. A gorgeous car for the Prince's use has been provided by the superintendent."

A Detroit despatch of the 21st says:—"From an early hour this morning the streets in the vicinity of Russell House have been densely packed with people, all eager to get a peep at the Prince. Just before ten o'clock a.m. he made his appearance, with four aides, also Mayor Bail, the whole party intending to take a drive through the city before proceeding to Chicago. The magnificent open carriage, drawn by four splendid white horses, had been provided. The party seated themselves in the barouche, when the immense crowd gathered around and blocked up the streets so much so quickly as to make it impossible for his Royal Highness to proceed. Cheer after cheer was given for the Prince, and the enthusiasm prevailed. Such a reception was followed by immense crowds on foot, many hanging to the wheels, while streets and every available spot were literally blocked with people, who intercepted the Royal party at every turn.

After driving through a few of the principal streets the Royal party proceeded to the depôt, and took their departure for Chicago amid the firing of a royal salute and other hearty demonstrations. In this city, which was reached in the afternoon, he was received with the most gratifying and cordial enthusiasm. All the Royal party were in excellent health, and the Prince for three days after shooting on the Prairies between Chicago and the Mississippi, and thence to St. Louis, thence to Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Harper's Ferry, and Washington, arriving by rail on the banks of the Potomac on Wednesday 3rd inst., where five days were to be spent at the White House as guests of the President. Thence on to Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, in which city a week will be spent. Thence to Boston, via Albany, two days more at Boston, and then Montreal, and thence to Portland, arriving there on the 19th or 20th, when the Royal squadron will be in readiness to bring the Royal party home.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

Major-General Brooke: The will of Major-General Horatio George Brooke, of Gloucester-place, Hyde Park, who died in London on the 20th of September last by his executors; the personalty being sworn under £12,000. He devises his land and houses in Suffolk to his son Horatio Brooke, subject to an annuity of £50 to his relict: and to her he leaves an immediate legacy of £2000, and all the furniture, plate, and other personal effects, during her widowhood, bequeaths to her for her life the life interest arising from the residue of his estate, real and personal, and to her he also gives the power to his said son Horatio. The testator has left small annuities for the lives of three widows. The will is dated the 11th of June, 1859.

The will of Nathaniel Goldsmid, Esq., barrister-at-law, of the Inner Temple, and late of Upper Gloucester-place, Dorset-square, Regent's Park, where he died on the 19th of August last, aged fifty-three, was proved in London, on the 15th of September, by Mrs. Goldsmid, Mr. Goldsmid and James Young, Esqrs. The will was made in London in 1858, and two codicils in Paris, dated the 15th of July and 7th of August, 1860, whereby, which, together with his real estates, and interest and income from the property under settlement for his wife, he bequeaths to her for life, and then to the two sons. His daughter, who has an interest under a marriage settlement, is a ward of the Court of Chancery, and the testator appoints the guardians whom he has appointed over his children to exercise the greatest care that they are brought up in the Jewish religion.

BARON SUMAN: A special probate of the will of Baron Denis Moses Suman, late of Park-place, Cheltenham, who died there at St. Anne's, Regent's Park, on the 7th day of the 30th of September last by the London Court of Probate to the Right Honourable Sir Edward Ryan, Knight, one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas at Dublin, the sole executor. The will was executed in the English form, and bears date the 6th of July, 1859, and was read properly sworn in the personalty under £200,000. The testator also investments in foreign securities, in Greece, Turkey, Brazil, and the Argentine Republic, besides a large amount of property in the funds. He has secured a large interest in this property during her life, and annuities to his sister and to his brother-in-law, and to a boy of twenty-five, a daughter who has recently married, he has amply provided for. The wife is appointed his residuary legatee, and she receives also the real and personal of his real estate for life. The freehold is devised to his eldest son. There are some legacies to his clerks and to his late groom, and to the Synagogue the Royal arms of Portugal, he leaves in the possession of his wife, and on her decease to his eldest son, the testator directs that they shall go with the family. The Baron had also obtained the Royal license to take the name of "De Vahl;" property being maintained in the family on its assumption.

SINGULAR SUICIDE IN PARIS.—A young man, named ARSENE, a grocer's apprentice, recently hung himself in Paris, leaving the following remarkable letter to his master, which he had sent to the post-office:—"I always think of that caricature representing a grocer standing on the threshold of his door, and exclaiming, 'Behold me!' I have a mania and considered to become a grocer. He who thus judged our calling was in the right. I feel that I am not made for a commercial life. I have tried, and have found out, books which I don't understand. All this troubles my head, and I can't sleep. I am worn out with study every day. For the last three I have not eaten. Now, I remember to have read somewhere that a man thought apply his intelligence to what he was not made for, and I shall never be fit for anything. To weigh sugar, cocoa and plums, I have made up my mind to go to another world. I have spoken of it to no one, and you may be sure that I shall not be missed. I say nothing of my brother, speaking in this disparaging way of our common profession. My object is to point out a mistake which parents make in wishing to bring up their children in a higher position. There are plenty of manufacturers who have become millionaires, and who are not ashamed to call themselves grocers, but who like me have happened to a grocer. For these reasons I have determined to hang myself. I beg that you will not attribute my suicide to my memory, and to inscribe upon it these words, 'Born to be a man; died a grocer.'"

THE COUNTRY ROUND TUNBRIDGE-WELLS.—In the afternoon, we took the road to Speldhurst, a most delightful part of the country. Outside the town are villas with large gardens, in which we saw vines and peaches ripening, and the fruit of the former here ceases to be sour. The soil is richer than in our Manchurian camp, and the cultivation equally good. Not an inch of ground is lost, and this is a way to satisfy Mr. Mechi.

Time was, he said, on England's grich bogus,
When all the land was cultivated in that way;
The things are changed indeed, for now 'tis found
That Mechi's system is the only one.

This is literally true here. There are no fences; few wide roads. A footpath leads from the village to the farmhouse, so that all may see it. We see small fields of corn, beans, and the crops are most abundant. We ascend a height, and look over a plain, which is bounded by a range of hills, and behind is a fine range of hills of the other. Beyond these hills are the Sussex coalfields, the inhabitants of which, we were told, have come to barter their produce for Kentish manufactures. Here, then, is the true principle of exchange. The soil of Manchester is not sought to be taken from the south, but an enormous trade with the north of England and Scotland is carried on by means of railways. Descending through large cockades of apple, pear, and plumb trees, we ride along a lane with high hedges, and on the opposite side of the hedge we see fire on the trees, "wildflowers scent the air, the cuckoo is heard in the distance, bees, butterflies, and insects are sporting around us, and circling round the sunny hedges. We pass through a large farmyard, and arrive at the house of Mr. Beenher Landells.—Letter from China in the Times.

MR. BEENHER LANDELLS.—It is with much regret that we have to announce the death of this gentleman, which unfortunately took place at Brompton on Monday last, after an illness of some weeks' duration. Mr. Landells was for many years engaged on the staff of this journal, subsequently in his fifty-third year when he died. Shewing, whilst yet a boy, a taste for art, he became a pupil of the late Mr. Bewick, engraver to the University; and it is not too much to say that some of his early engravings show much of the taste and skilful touch of that celebrated artist, whose unrivalled works to which he contributed was Holland's "British Angler's Manual," a copy of which is in the possession of the engravings is a work of the highest and purest excellence. Mr. Landells came to London about thirty years ago, and soon established himself in the position he occupied during the remainder of his life, and which he has since accomplished such important results, as will cause his name to be remembered as long as the art he loved so well. It was one of the earliest to secure the copyright of wood engravings, and to him is due much of the present prosperity of that branch of art. Time he employed upon the publication of the Illustrated Times, recently incorporated by the proprietor to sketch all engrave the scenes and incidents of the Russian war, which he accomplished with success. He also appointed himself to the entire satisfaction of his employers and the delight and admiration of the public, who had never before known recent occurrence, in which they all took interest, so speedily realised through the medium of the press. Encouraged by this success, he afterwards followed her Majesty's steps on her memorable visits to Belgium and Germany, as well as to various places in her own dominions, on all which occasions he fully accomplished everything that was expected or could be desired of him. He also took part in originating some other illustrated periodicals, with more or less success; evincing on every occasion considerable artistic taste, originality of view, and untiring energy. In private life, in the circle of his friends, and in the sanctity of his home, he was known as an intelligent and genuine companion, a good husband and father, and an honourable man. His remains were interred privately at Highgate Cemetery, in presence of a numerous assemblage of artistic and other friends.

LITERATURE.

GATHERINGS OF A NATURALIST IN AUSTRALIA. Being Observations principally on the Animal and Vegetable Productions of New South Wales, New Zealand, and some of the Austral Islands. By GEORGE BENNETT, M.D., F.R.S., &c. Van Voorst.

Dr. Bennett is one of the oldest living settlers in New South Wales, and has for nearly half a century been assiduous in collecting from personal observation the valuable materials presented in this volume. His many contributions to our annals of natural history stamped him as a painstaking observant naturalist; and a very agreeable book from the same pen, "Wanderings in New South Wales," is doubtless well remembered by the reader. Dr. Bennett once more returns to the home of his youth, laden with spoils gathered from field and flood, the passage is taken by the overland route from Sydney to Southampton, which occupies but a few short weeks of the time set apart for the holiday. We have, and truly too, "that, as a necessary consequence of such facility of intercourse, the relations between the mother country and the Australian colonies are becoming every day more and more important; commerce is rapidly extending its friendly intercourse, and the natural sympathies which exist between parent and child, and between colonies and their offspring, which is able to make an abundant return for the fostering care whereby it has been raised to its present prosperous condition." This return is not to be looked for in the old-established fields any more than from its pastoral and agricultural capabilities, which, it would appear, are equally suitable for the cultivation of the vegetable productions of every other part of the world as those indigenous to the soil. "The sunny islands of Spain and Italy do not produce oranges, and other fruits of the citron tribe, in greater perfection than the northern parts of the Australian continent. The tea-plant of China; the cotton-tree, coffee-tree, sugar-cane, and other tropical productions; the firs of Canada, and the English oak, thrive equally well, mingled with the trees of America and the vegetable products of India.

From the level of the sea to the summit of the highest mountain pastures are to be found extending for hundreds of miles—now undulating smoothly and almost imperceptibly, then extending, in broad, flat plains, through forests of the stately gum-tree (Eucalypti), peopled with the most beautiful of the feathered races; or a succession of round-backed hills, broken with rocky ranges, over which the flock-master may drive his flocks for days—nay, for weeks—without failure of the pasture on which sheep and cattle thrive so well. In the interior and regions of Australia—of which at present little is known—is seen, besides the Eucalypti, Banksiæ and other trees of the southern coast, dense forests of canes, mangroves, &c. Each district has a zoology peculiarly its own. For instance, the Banksiæ are everywhere tenanted by the trees melighonus birds, the Eucalypti by the trichoglossi and philedi, the towering figs by the regent and satinbirds, the palms by the fruit-eating pigeon tribes, and the grassy plains by the ground-pigeons and grass-parrakeets."

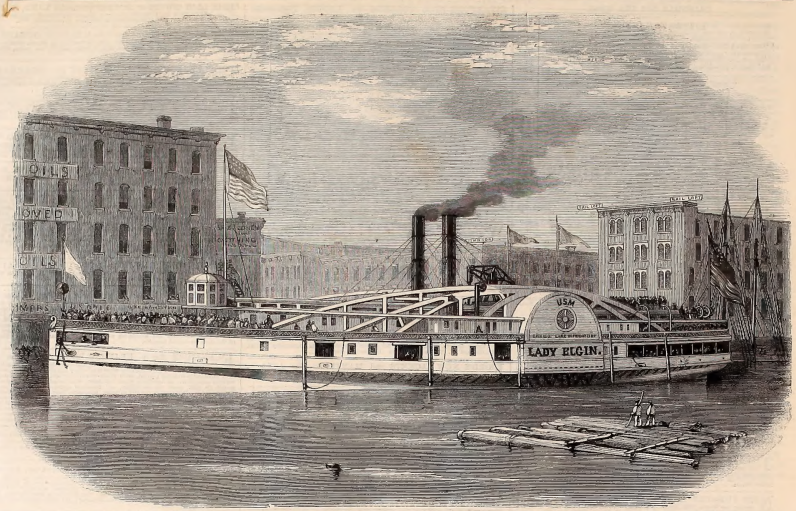
The coasts of the Australian continent abound in curious marine productions, both vegetable and animal. Dr. Harvey, during a recent visit to these coasts, collected upwards of 600 species of Algæ. Innumerable, attractive, and as yet imperfectly described, forms of life present themselves well calculated to arrest the attention of the observant naturalist. Dr. Bennett describes one of a beautiful group of Asalepæ, commonly known as the "Portuguese man-of-war" (physalia), attractive to the naked eye from its delicacy of form and brilliancy of colours. He confirms the stinging power attributed to the long tentacula of these creatures. The property has been frequently denied to them; but upon himself the effects produced were severe, lasting for nearly three-quarters of an hour, and during the whole day a peculiar numbness was felt in the limb, accompanied by an increase of temperature—"It is a very interesting sight to observe the action of the tentacles while the physalis is placed in a large tub of sea-water. They are then seen to form submarine organs of prehension, agitating the water day as the smaller and more numerous species, the greenbull, or "Nelly" of sailors, the mollymaux or yellow-tail, and the sooty albatross. These, with the prettily-marked Cape pigeon, the more intensely black Cape hens, and many other sea fowl, may be seen enjoying the delightful repose of nature during light winds, sunning their wings in the mid sky, or laving them in the briny wave, exciting our admiration by the purity, chasteness, and simplicity of colour displayed in their plumage.

"Of all the Australian mammalia none has received so much attention as the Platypus, water-mole, both from its peculiar form and the great desire evinced to ascertain the habits and economy of so singular a creature. Perhaps no animal, on its first introduction into Europe, ever gave rise to greater doubts as to its classification, or excited deeper interest amongst naturalists (an interest fully maintained to the present day) respecting its habits and economy, than this enigmatical creature, which, from its external appearance as well as internal anatomy, is believed to form a connecting link between quadruped, bird, and reptile; and when first a preserved skin was sent to England it excited as much distrust as Barnum's mermaid." An animal compounded of a mole's skin, to which a duck's mandibles and seal's feet were appended, certainly was open to grave suspicions." Nevertheless, it is a veritable living animal, and one on which Dr. Bennett has bestowed considerable time and attention. His description of its habits and peculiarities is most interesting.

The vast and dense forests, luxuriant in vegetation, abounding in varieties of food, which grow rapidly, are very rich, as may be imagined, in ornithology, the number of species already known equals that of all Europe besides. It is only a couple of years since a living representative of the most extinct group was discovered by Dr. Bennett—this was a species of cassowary, named, in honour of its discoverer, Casuarius Bennetti, Moorok. One of the most useful and easily-domesticated birds is the pigeonlike kingfisher, or laughing jackass, also called the settlers-clock. This bird attracts attention more by the extraordinary notes which it utters than by any colours of plumage or resemblance to our European species. It is the first bird heard in the dawn of the morning, when the woods resound with its peculiar cry. One will commence a gurgling laugh; this is generally followed by the scream of a second; a chirrup will then take up the cry, and bark away until they all chime in with the most extraordinary compound of noises. They feed upon reptiles, beetles, and insects of any kind, and, when kept in the house or garden, worms. Its small game like a cat. Dr. Bennett adds that "for many years this was a doomed bird, merely from ignorance of its natural habits?" and we are glad to find him emphatically raising his voice against the destructive propensities of ignorant persons in relation to both birds and animals, some of which are even now nearly exterminated, to the ultimate loss of the country. Our author's admirable descriptions are materially aided by many excellent drawings from the pencil of Mr. G. F. Angas, a well-known delineator of objects of natural history.

The botanical characters of Australia are as peculiar, and quite as remarkable as the ornithological. The baobab-tree resembles a gigantic palm-tree, and attains the largest size of which measures 80 feet in girth. The lofty and gigantic stinging-nettle-tree rises from its base "by a series of buttresses of singularly regular outline, gradually tapering, without a branch, to the height of from 50 to 140 feet; the trunk then divides into a regularly-formed, wide-spreading head, exciting admiration by its extraordinary size. The leaves, which attain a breadth of from twelve to fifteen inches, are of a beautiful dark green colour. The poisonous fluid secreted from the younger leaves is exceedingly virulent; producing great suffering, not unattended with danger." The wooden pear-tree is peculiar to Australia, but is more remarkable for its ornamental appearance than its fruit. There are three or four varieties of the oak, some of which bear much resemblance to the English oak. The Christmas-tree is an elegant tree, used, like our holly, as a decoration at Christmas, although it bears no resemblance to it whatever. "In November it is covered with small white blossoms, which in the following month, about Christmas time, assume a pretty red colour, as if the flowers had changed suddenly from white to red." The native cherry-tree is remarkable for its small fruit, of a bright red colour, the stone or seed being placed outside. The banana-tree, with its broad, shady, elegant foliage, grows rapidly, and yields a quantity of fibre "of a beautiful white silky texture, great length, capable of being manufactured into the coarsest or finest of fabrics," and is an object of commercial importance to the colonist, as well as the castor-oil-tree, which yields him excellent oil for his lamp. The native apple-tree, which in attains the height of eighty feet, bears a small, dark fruit, disagreeable to the flavour of most palates. The palm tribe flourish; the splendid cabbage-palme, with their erect stems, grow to a height of from seventy to one hundred feet, forming groves not to be surpassed in beauty, the unexpanded fronds of which are prepared by immersion in boiling water, dried, and used in the manufacture of durable hats. Although the wild flowers are numerous and beautiful, yet few possess any odour. To remedy this loss the colonist has introduced and succeeded in naturalising a large number of our favourite European flowers, whose fragrance is now diffused over every garden, and at present even the wild plants and grasses of England may be seen in New South Wales intermingled with those of the south of Europe and the tropics.

This handsomely got-up volume will, we are sure, be largely read. The general reader will find in it an instructive and agreeable companion.



THE LATE MR. HERBERT INGRAM, M.P., FOR BOSTON.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY JOHN WATKINS.

THE MAGAZINES.

The current number of Fraser is very agreeable. If we were compelled to select articles for recommendation we would refer to Mr. Whyte Melville's "A Ride for the Ring," and "A Last Word on Lord Macaulay," by Shirley, which contains the fine testimonial written in 1847, just after Edinburgh had rejected the historian as its member, and which, although published in the posthumous collection of his works, have not attracted as much attention as they deserve. This selection from the subject-matter of the magazine is entirely without prejudice to the other papers, which are above the average. We may expect a new epoch in the Cornhill shortly, inasmuch as "The Four Georges" and "William Hogarth" are brought to a close, while "Framley Parsonage" must be far advanced towards that point in the narrative which would occupy the penultimate chapters of a third volume. The question of inexplated vessels of war is ably discussed in a paper entitled "England's Future Bulwarks;" and there is a graphic article on "Chinese Pirates," which probably comes from the same hand which has already contributed papers relating to the Celestial Empire to this serial. Mr. Baskin's remarkable papers under the heading "Unto This Last" are continued in the manner which may be expected. When we say this is a good number, of course we feel that we are guilty of a phrase of supererogation—some people ought to say impertinence; but what we mean is that it is certainly better than that of last month. In Macmillan the Rev. H. G. Robinson, of the Training College, York, has produced a very able and a very interesting dissertation "On the Use of English Classical Literature in the Work of Education," the tendency of which is to show that, whereas good "classical" scholars, in the ordinary sense of the term, are often met with, good English scholars are scarce; by English scholars meaning not merely those who have a general knowledge of their country's authors, and who write and speak their mother tongue with correctness and elegance, but rather those who have studiously investigated the origin, development, and constitution of their native speech, and have nightly and daily revolved the great exemplars of their native literature. There are in all the writings in this serial essential marks of capability, and therefore we are willing to compound for a comparative lack of brilliancy; but this decision hardly applies to "Tom Brown at Oxford," which, we cannot but think, drags somewhat wearily along.

The statistical information in reference to the armaments of France and England which is given in the first article in the Dublin University Magazine would alone suffice to make it a valuable contribution to the number, even if the working out of the subject was less able than it is. Three recent books touching the experiences and habits, the reminiscences and the peculiarities, of clerical life are made the basis of a somewhat light paper entitled "Personalities." The comparative interest of the books—technically so called—of England, Scotland, and Ireland is discussed under the heading of "The Irish State Papers;" and it is urged that the review is brought in a manner which one expects in a magazine, as distinguished from a review, using the word in its more elaborate sense.

In Bentley's Miscellany we have a paper on "The Progress of New Zealand," to which recent circumstances will incline the reader to turn his eye first on opening the volume. It is statistically very full, although it occupies a brief space, and its statements are derived from official sources. It seems a somewhat premature conclusion that "the Maories have d'un Amiral, par le Contre-Amiral Juriou de la Gravière," by the words "Recollections of an Old Salt." Whether the author of the above publication was peculiar to the sailor of the Anglo-Saxon race, and was not applicable to a Frenchman. However, the adventures of a distinguished French naval officer are here compressed from the original work into the reading of ten minutes. There is plenty more readable matter besides. The usual solid, sensible provision for its readers is to be found in the Eclectic; Sir Charles Napier, done to the life, is the subject of Mr. Ritchie's Parliamentary portrait in the National; and a steel engraving by Bourne of Mignard's picture in the Royal collection of "Henrietta, Duchess of Orleans, daughter of Charles I.," Turner's "Opening of the Walhalla," from the picture in the National Gallery, engraved by Cousens; and an engraving by G. Stodart of a statue by Ernst Hähnle, entitled "Medicine," are the chief illustrations of the Art-Journal.

THE LAKE STEAMER "LADY ELGIN," AS SHE LAY AT HER WHARF AT CHICAGO ON THE DAY BEFORE SHE WAS LOST.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY S. ALSCHULER.

THE "LADY ELGIN" AND THE "AUGUSTA."

THE Lady Elgin was a Canadian-built boat, and was constructed some nine years ago. She was a boat of 300 feet in length, and 1000 tons burden, and had the reputation of swiftness, which made her a favourite with excursionists and travellers generally. Before the completion of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada the Lady Elgin carried the Canadian mails along the northern shores of the lakes, and after its completion she was sold to the Chicago firm of Hubbard and Co., by whom she has since been owned, and who kept her employed in the Lake Superior and Michigan trade of mails, passengers, and freight. Her most western port was Bayfield, on Lake Superior, and the eastern terminus of her voyage was Chicago. Bayfield is about 100 miles east of the head of navigation on Lake Superior. There are copper-mines there and at most of the ports along the shores of that great lake at which the steamer used to call. The Lady Elgin usually made three annual excursions on Lake Superior, starting from Chicago; and it was while she was proceeding on the last of her three excursions for the present year that she met her fate. The captain of the unfortunate steamer was Mr. John Wilson, who had commanded her since she changed ownership and was a most popular and favourite master among passengers and pleasure travellers to whom he was known. He had considerable experience in the navigation of the lakes, having been engaged in it for some ten years. He leaves a family to lament his sudden and unexpected decease.

The Augusta schooner, the vessel which ran into the Lady Elgin, is owned by Mr. George W. Bissell, of Detroit, and commanded by Captain Malott. She did not escape scathless in the collision, all her head-gear, jibboom, and stanchions being carried away. Indeed, it was supposed the vessel would fill, and sail was taken in and the anchor cleared away under fear of this result. The coroner's inquiry into the loss of the Lady Elgin was still proceeding at the departure of the last mail. Captain Malott had been examined, and his evidence, according to the Chicago journals, left scarcely any room to doubt that the deplorable calamity was one over which he at least had no control.

According to the best authority, the number of persons on board the Lady Elgin when she left Chicago was 393, including the crew. Of these 114 are reported as saved. This would leave 279 lost, of which the bodies of only 67 had been recovered up to the 14th ult.

THE SCHOONER "AUGUSTA" IN PORT AT CHICAGO AFTER HER COLLISION WITH THE "LADY ELGIN."—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY S. ALSCHULER.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Oct. 7.—18th Sunday after Trinity. Moon's last quarter, 11h. 4m., p.m.
MONDAY, 8.—Arvina locusts entered before Schastopol, 1854. [p.m.
TUESDAY, 9.—Trenches opened before Schastopol, 1854.
WEDNESDAY, 10.—Gunpowder and Colonel Sam Sapples.
THURSDAY, 11.—Vast Indian discovered, 1492. New Moon, 2h. 37m., p.m.
FRIDAY, 12.—Foundling Hospital established, 1749.
SATURDAY, 13.—Translation of King Edward the Confessor.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE EVENING OCTOBER 10, 1860.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
8 34	9 19	10 3	10 47	11 31	0 13	0 59

POSTAGE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Copies bearing the impressed stamp (which must be exposed to view) circulate FREE through the Post Office. For those sent from the desk of the publication, to all parts of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands; unless addressed to persons within the free delivery of London, or to those resident beyond the limits of the United Kingdom, for which the postage must be prepaid by stamps, the following rates of postage, viz.:—

Unstamped copies should have two penny postage-stamps affixed to each.

FOREIGN PARTS.

The impressed stamp is of no service for copies which are sent to be read abroad; there must have postage-stamps affixed to them according to the following rates:—

Belgium, West Coast of—Penny Stamp
Canada—Penny Stamp
Eastern Coast—Penny Stamp
Brazils—Penny Stamp
California—Two Penny Stamps
Canada—Penny Stamp
China—Two Penny Stamps
China—Two Penny Stamps
Constantinople—Penny Stamp. This paper
Denmark—Penny Stamp. This paper
Egypt—Penny Stamp. This paper
Germany—Penny Stamp. This paper

Hanseatic Towns—Penny Stamp. This paper
India—Two Stamps. This paper
Mexico—Penny Stamp
New Zealand—Penny Stamp
Nova Scotia—Penny Stamp. This paper
Russia—Penny Stamp. This paper
Sardinia—Two Stamps. This paper
Spain—Two Stamps. This paper
Sweden—Penny Stamp. This paper
Switzerland—Penny Stamp. This paper
United States—Penny Stamp
West Indies—Penny Stamp

An edition is printed on thin paper especially for foreign postage. The postage of this edition is Twopence, and it must be prepaid by stamps to the amount above which requires, as marked in the above list, to be affixed to the unstamped copies. The British Postal Agent for the transmission of the Paper, published quarterly by Kelly and Co., Old Boswell-court.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Miss AMY SEDGWICK and DENS HE LOVE ME? every Evening. Also, first time, a new Comedy, entitled MARRIED AND SINGLE, written by Mr. Chas. Mathews, and produced at the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden and Olympic, and in which he will make his first appearance at this theatre on Monday, and during the week. Box-office open from ten until five. Doors open at half-past six. Commence at seven. Mr. Buckstone, Manager. Private boxes, stalls, and places may be secured of Mr. Mitchell, Bond-street, and at the box-office of the SUN AND THE WIND.

ROYAL ENGLISH OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN, under the Management of Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. W. Harrison, this Evening, SATURDAY, Oct. 6, and during the week, the new and successful Opera, entitled THE SICILIAN BRIDE. Mr. Harrison, Mr. Corri, Mr. Weiss, Mr. Aynsley Cook, Mr. Wilbraham, Mr. Corri, G. Kelly, and W. Harrison; Miss Leffler, Miss Alberton, and Miss Louisa Pyne. Conductor, Mr. Alfred Mellon. Stalls, 5s.; Private Boxes, £1 4s. 6d., £2 2s. 6d., £3 3s. 6d., £4 14s. 6d., £5 5s. 6d.; Dress Circle, 3s.; Amphitheatre Stalls, 2s. 6d.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Doors open at half-past six; the Opera to commence at seven. Box-office open from 10 till 5. Private Boxes on the first tier, £1 1s. per evening, to be had only—and on the second tier, for 10s. 6d., four persons. No charge for booking. Stalls can be secured in advance. Private Box-office open from 10 till 5.

THEATRE ROYAL, LYCEUM.—Sole Lessee and Directress, Mrs. CHARLES.—On Monday, and during the Week, the performances will commence with the Drama, entitled MAN AND WIFE. Mrs. Charles; Mr. Addison; Mr. Frank GODDEN RHIM will appear. THE ABBE VAUDREUIL.—The Misses Collinson and Miss Cicely.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—On Monday, and during the Week, THE RIVAL BRIGADE.—Mr. W. Smith and Miss Woolgar; THE CHILDREN IN THE WOOD.—Mrs. Scarsbrook, D. Fisher, Frederick Vokins, Miss Agnes Robertson, Miss Woolgar. And MUSIC HATH CHARMS. Commence at Seven.

EASTERN OPERA HOUSE, New Pavilion Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Rice. Every Evening with ENGLISH OPERAS. Supported by Messrs. W. M. Parkinson, Edmund Bellair, Beaumont, Bradbury, Bowyer, Miss Turner, and Miss Rose Leclercq. Followed by ARTHUR AND MARY. Commence at Seven.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY.—On Monday, October 8, 32, positively will Positively have her Benefit, and will appear in her unrivalled Equestrian Performances by arrangement with Mr. Batty. Mr. James Costello, Mr. Lewenber Buckingham. BALLY, at Three; every EVENING at Seven, and at Eight. The Box-office is now open from Ten until Four, where Stalls, numbered and reserved, can be taken, at 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s.

WASHINGTON FRIEND'S ENTERTAINMENT will positively CLOSE on Saturday, October 13.—St. Martin's Hall, Piccadilly.

THE SISTERS SOPHIE and ANNIE will have the honour of appearing in their new and highly-successful Entertainment, entitled MERRY MOMENTS, on Wednesday, October 8 and 9; Gosport, 10; Fareham, 11; Southampton, 12. Musical Director, Mr. W. Corbin.

CORREGGIO'S "ECCE HOMO," the long-sought Replica of the Original Picture, which the most eminent Judges have declared to be the finest painting in this country, IS ON VIEW, from 10 till 6 (admission 2s.), at GAMBIER'S, 119, Oxford-street.

MINERALOGY.—King's College, London.—Professor TENNANT, F.G.S., will commence a COURSE OF LECTURES ON MINERALOGY, with a view to its application to the Fine Arts, and to Architecture and Mineral Embellishment in the Arts. The Lectures will begin on Friday, October 5, at Nine o'clock, a.m. They will be continued on Tuesday, October 9, and Friday at 9, a.m. Fee, £1 1s.

EVENING CLASSES.—KING'S COLLEGE, London.—The evening WINTER SESSION will OPEN on FRIDAY, October 12, with an INTRODUCTORY LECTURE by Professor MARTIN'S. H. REYNOLDS, M.A., at Seven. Any gentleman presenting his private card, or his card of admission to any part of the course, will be admitted.

A prospectus may be obtained, free of expense, from J. F. RIGAUD, M.A., Secretary and Registrar. London, 1st day of October, 1860. The session will be from the 12th of October to the 15th of December, inclusive.

MADAME OURY has RETURNED to TOWN for the SEASON, 16, Rue de Rivoli, Boulevard, 3, Leicester Square, Haymarket, W.

FOR FAMILY ARMS send to the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE Name and Country. Arms Painted, Sculptured, and Quartered. Sketch, 3s. 6d. Engraved Seal of Pedigree, 15s. 6d. Crest, Engraved on Seal or Ring, 7s. 6d. Manuscript Pedigree, Illuminated, £5 5s. Lineage and Arms, 10s. 6d. Boundary-street, Leicester-sq.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The established office for authority in England, which for many years has furnished Arms, Crests, &c., with that authority known throughout Europe.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

CAUTION ON HERALDRY.—The Errors committed by Artists, Engravers, Heraldists, and others, are many, that bankrupts, gentlemen, merchants, the married, and the maiden widowed, The public are solicited, for their own interests, to apply at the Heraldic Office, 2, Inverness-terrace, Bayswater, where the Arms of all Families, Cities, Towns, Guilds, and Companies, are correctly ascertained.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—Engraving on Stone, Silver, Embossing, &c., in accordance with the laws of Garter, King of Arms. Crest on Seal or Ring, 6s. 6d. Book Plate Arms, 10s.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

TOLKIEN'S 25-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, with easy terms of purchase, elegant designs, and various woods, 6½-octaves, is superior to any English or French, for tone and touch. Twenty-five guinea Cottage Pianoforte, 80 guinea Illustrated Catalogues gratis.—27, King William-street, London-bridge, E.C.

TOLKIEN'S PIANOS.—Public attention is called to a large assortment of Pianofortes in England, Rosewood and Walnut-tree Cottage and Pianino, 6½-octaves, with all the latest improvements, some a little used, from 19 to 35 guineas. Six, Seven, and Eight guinea ware, at 27, King William-street, London-bridge. Pianofortes for Hire. Illustrated Catalogues gratis.

TOLKIEN'S INDIAN PIANOFORTE.—This Piano, with all the recent improvements, is of massive proportions, and perpetually tuned. Also several trials in the EAST and WEST INDIES, to be the only Pianoforte ever manufactured capable of resisting the climate and damage of those climates. Eighty guinea Pianoforte, compact designs, including cases, 25 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues gratis.—27, King William-street, London-bridge, E.C.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOTS, 56, Cheapside, and 33, Ludgate-street, for the sale of NICOLE'S celebrated MUSICAL BOXES, playing Clementi Smallwood and Sacred Music, at 21 airs, £5 5s.; 24 airs, £6 6s.; 30 airs, £8 8s.; 36 airs, £10 10s. Catalogues of Tunes and Prices gratis and post-free, on application to WALES and MCCULLOCH, as above.

A GOLD PEN for TWO SHILLINGS!!!—or, in a neat case—a gold pocket Pencil-case, both for 5s. 6d. This is a first-class article, with very hard; is warranted for twelve months; and thirty words write the price. To be obtained at PARTRIDGE and COZENS', Wholesale Stationers, 192, Fleet-street, E.C.

STAMFORD-HILL COLLEGE for LADIES, High-street, Stoke Newington.
President—The Rev. JOHN JACKSON, M.A.
Mich. Term.—The Pianoforte Lessons will be resumed by Mr. Harrold Thomas (Pupil at the Royal Academy of Music), on the 11th inst. Fee, Three Guineas per Term. Application to be made, at the College, to HIRE DARLEY, Lady Resident.

CITY of LONDON COLLEGE for LADIES, No. 8, City-road, Finsbury-square.
President—The Rev. CHAS. MACKENZIE, M.A.
Mich. Term.—The Pianoforte Lessons will be resumed by Mr. Winsbury Hoper and Mr. Harrold Thomas on the 11th inst. Fee, Three Guineas per Term. Application to be made, at the College, to HIRE DARLEY, Lady Resident.

TO WIDOWERS and SINGLE GENTLEMEN.—A Lady, of good family, wishes to undertake Housekeeping; is desirous of obtaining a Situation as Parlour Housekeeper, or Housekeeper to Boys' Gentlemen. Address, A. B., care of Mr. Hunt, Bookseller, Market-head, Ipswich, Suffolk.

TO INVALIDS.—A Physician, occupying a commodious house, with a very large and beautiful part of the Pleasure Grounds, to which invalids of position and social advantages can be enjoyed, will be happy to receive into his family an Invalid Gentleman, or Lady, requiring the comforts of a home, and the best medical care in cases of general debility, from whatever cause arising. Address (as the first instance) to M.D., Post-office, Hampstead, Middlesex, N.W.

A YOUNG SURGEON, aged Twenty-six, a Scholar, Gold Medallist, and Prizeman of his College, having completed his Professional Studies, is desirous of meeting with a Gentleman requiring a respectable physician's assistant; he desires no remuneration beyond a comfortable home and liberty to practise. He will feel most grateful personal obligation to any one (in confidence) indicating the same. Address 26, Bedford-row, London.

The advertiser would accept the post of attendant to an idle lad, travelling or otherwise.

WANTED, a SECRETARY for the UNION CLUB, Trafalgar-square. He can be seen at Messrs. Gunter's, at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James's-street, on or before the 10th inst., with such testimonials as the committee may require. Salary £200 per annum.—October 3, 1860.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-street (private or carriage entrance in Sherrard-street). Open from Ten till Four, for general or carriage entrance in Sherrard-street). Open from Ten till Four, for general or carriage entrance in Sherrard-street). Open from Ten till Four, for general

OCT. 6, 1860.

THE ATLANTIC and GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY,
CONNECTING NEW YORK and ST. LOUIS.
By the Junction of the New York and Erie and the Ohio and Mississippi Railways.
CONSTITUTED Six-foot Gauge.
Twelve hours' start of all competing lines of carriages.
Issue of One Million Dollars First Mortgage Bonds, bearing Seven per Cent Interest, Payable Half-yearly, on the 1st of January and the 1st of July, at the Bank of London, Threadneedle-street, London; and at the Banking House of Messrs. Duncan, Sherman, and Co., New York. The first Coupon for Interest will bear the guarantee of the Bank of London, and will be payable on the 1st January, 1861, a settlement against any possibility of default during the construction of the Lines in Pennsylvania and Ohio.
DIRECTORS.
William Reynolds, Esq., Mansfield, Pa.; | Hon. J. Lowber, Esq., New York.
President. | Augustus Schell, Esq., New York.
Hon. Lloyd Church, Mansfield, Pa. | Hon. Thurlow Weed, Esq., New York.
Hon. Samuel Hoyt, Esq., New York, Director | W. L. Marcy, Esq., Dansville, New York.
Baldwin Norris, Esq., Director | A. J. Fenton, Esq., Jamestown, New York.
New York and Erie Railway. | D. C. Evans, Esq., Cleveland, Ohio.
William Fisher, Esq., London, Director New | Hon. John Dick, M.C., Meadville, Pa.
York and Erie Railway. | Marvin Hunt, Esq., Meadville.
Marvin Hunt, Treasurer, Office in New York—Sandford Smith, Secretary.
BANKERS.
The Bank of England, London. | Messrs. J. Herrod and Co., Liverpool.
The Bank of London, London. | M. L. De Cazales, Paris.
BROKERS.
Messrs. Hendrie and Powell, London. | Mr. R. F. Schuttenbach, London.
Messrs. Hope, Simpson, and Co., London. | Messrs. Charles Schmidt, Frankfort.
CONSULTING ENGINEER.
Ex. Senor Don Jose de Salamanca. | Worthy S. Scrasser, Esq.
ENGINEERS.
Thomas W. Kennard, Esq., C.E., 36, Great George-street, Westminster.
Tompkins Collins—(1), St. Helen's-place, Bishopsgate, London.
The Atlantic and Great Western Railway—378 miles in length—in the middle track of a great valley, with a fertile range, 100 miles wide, on each side, and intersecting with the great Eastern and Western Railways of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, at St. Louis, and with other railways at Fourteen counties in the State of Ohio, with more than one million of inhabitants, and a taxable property of 300 millions of dollars, and accommodating a population of 2,000,000 in New York and Pennsylvania, becomes without rivalry, route, and Ohio, through which the Lines, running entirely through populous districts in Pennsylvania

THE CENTRAL COURT AND ARCADES OF THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY MUSEUM.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 320.

CAMP OF THE SIKH CAVALRY AT COWLOONG, OPPOSITE HONG-KONG: PROBYN'S HORSE AND PANE'S HORSE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CHINA.—SEE PAGE 317.

THE COURT.

THE QUEEN IN GERMANY.

The Queen and the Prince Consort reached Coburg at five o'clock on the morning of Tuesday se'nnight. At the station the Duke of Coburg and Gotha and Prince Frederick William were waiting to welcome the Queen and Prince. The Duke's carriages were in attendance, and the Queen and Prince at the Palace, where they were received by the Duchess of Coburg and Gotha, the Princess Frederick William of Prussia, the Princess Hohenlohe (sister of Prince William, her infant son. Their Royal Highnesses appeared in excellent health. The Royal personages resided in the ladies and residence of the suite. The served in another apartment for the ladies and peerageantly fine.

Weather during her Majesty's visit to Prince Consort and Princess

On Wednesday se'nnight the Queen, with the Prince Consort and Princess Alice, incognito, visited the Duke of Coburg and Princess Frederick William in a walk to the Convent of Rosenau, where the Princess Consort, the Duke and Duchess of Coburg, the Queen and the Prince Consort, the Duke and party in the evening. Princess Frederick William, Princess Alice, the Duchess of Coburg, Prince John Russell, and the ladies and gentlemen of the household of her Majesty and of the Duke of Coburg. Prince Hohenlohe, who is the held of her Majesty's court in Coburg, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses Prince Hohenlohe and Prince William of Prussia, and the Princess Alice, and the Duke of Coburg to Gotha for the purpose of attending the funeral of the late Dowager Duchess of Saxe-Gotha, the Princess Royal, Princess Frederick William, and Princess Mary, Consort.

On Thursday se'nnight the Queen attended a special service in the Royal Chapel of the Palace, at which a funeral sermon was preached in honour of the late Duchess of Saxe-Gotha. The Queen, the Prince Consort, and the ladies and gentlemen of the suite. The Duchess of Coburg and Princess Frederick William of Prussia were likewise present. The Royal family dined in private, there being no addition to the party but Count Mensdorff, who was previously invited to dine with the Duke of Saxe-Coburg.

On Friday se'nnight the Prince Consort, the Duke and Duchess of Coburg-Gotha, Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, and Princess Alice drove to the Cistern of the Callenberg. Lord John Russell accompanied their Royal Highnesses. Her Majesty drove out in a private carriage, with her by the same Royal party, and walked in the environs of the town. In the evening Prince Albert and the Duke of Coburg-Gotha rode out on horseback, afterwards joined the Royal dinner party.

On Saturday se'nnight the Queen, the Prince Consort and Princess Alice, accompanied the Duke and Duchess of Coburg, and the Princess Frederick William of Prussia, to the Castle of Ehrenburg, where luncheon was served to the Royal party. Several hours were spent in the gardens and grounds of the palace, which are extremely beautiful. The Queen returned to Coburg. The Royal dinner party included the Queen, the Prince Consort, Princess Frederick William, Princess Alice, the Duke and Duchess of Coburg-Gotha, Prince Victor Hohenlohe, Prince Ernest of Wurtemberg, Count Mensdorff, and the ladies and gentlemen of the suite and household.

On Sunday the Queen, the Prince Consort, Princess Alice, the Duke and Duchess of Coburg-Gotha, and the Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, attended divine service in the Church of St. Moritz. The Royal party afterwards joined the Royal and ducal households were in attendance. Lord John Russell and Count Mensdorff were also present. On Monday the Queen, Prince Consort, and Princess Alice, drove through the Court garden for a short distance. The Royal party then walked in the gardens of the Palace (the glasshouses were the Duke of Coburg-Gotha and Princess Alice, the Duke Princess Frederick William of Prussia, and the Princess Frederick William, and the Prince Consort, and Princess and Princess Frederick William. It was at her Royal Highness's request that this visit was made to the gardens, which is the chapel of the palace at Coburg on the morning of the funeral of her Majesty's mother-in-law, the Dowager Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. The Duchess Alexandrine of Coburg-Gotha, who had not left her chamber for some days on account of indisposition, was able to be present at the service in the Queen and her Royal daughter.

Lord Lieutenant will arrive at Berlin, will arrive at Coburg a few days before the Queen commences her homeward journey, in order to accompany her Majesty through Germany.

ACCORDANT TO THE PRINCE CONSORT.

On the return of the Prince Consort on Monday to Coburg from shooting the heroes of the Callenberg, the Duke of Coburg-Gotha jumped out, but was not hurt beyond a scratch on the face. The Prince's general health has been affected by the fatigue of the Royal Highness had so far recovered on Wednesday as to be able to resume his usual pursuits.

PRINCESS ALICE.

The Allgemeine Zeitung, under the date of the day next after that on the return of her Majesty from Coburg the betrothal of her Royal Highness Princess Alice with Prince Louis of Hesse Darmstadt. The Prince, who is the eldest son of the late Grand Duke of Hesse Darmstadt, now states that this intelligence is only inexact as to the place and time. Prince Louis was born at Darmstadt on November 25, 1837, and is the son of Prince Charles (brother of the reigning Grand Duke) and Princess Elizabeth of Prussia (daughter of the late King of Prussia). He is a Lieutenant and was born on September 12, 1857. The same journal further states that her Majesty will visit the Rhine in all its glory at that time, and that the Grand Duke of Hesse has been selected for the Royal sojourn. Whether these arrangements may be changed on the death of the Princess Dowager of Prussia (Saturday) is not known, but there can be no doubt that such was the intention previous to that untoward event. The Count de Grote Minister at Frankfort, and Count Malé, continues to make preparations for a great banquet to be held at his house on the arrival of the Royal Family.

The Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, attended by Lady Augusta Bruce and Sir George Couper, arrived at Frogmore Lodge, near Windsor, on Tuesday, from Laurieton Castle, in Perthshire, where the Duchess at York on Monday, and proceeded to Windsor on the following day. Her Royal Highness Hotel has been selected for the Royal sojourn. Whether these arrangements may be changed on the death of the Princess Dowager of Prussia (Saturday) is not known, but there can be no doubt that such was the intention previous to that untoward event. The Count de Grote Minister at Frankfort, and Count Malé, continues to make preparations for a great banquet to be held at his house on the arrival of the Royal Family.

The marriage of Lady Mary Patty Fitzmaurice, only child of the late Lord Henry Petty and Sir George Couper, arrived at Frogmore Lodge, near Windsor, on Tuesday, from Laurieton Castle, in Perthshire, where the Duchess of Kent has been sojourning for the last fortnight. Her Royal Highness proceeded to Windsor on the following day, and proceeded to Windsor on the following day, and proceeded to Windsor on the following day, and

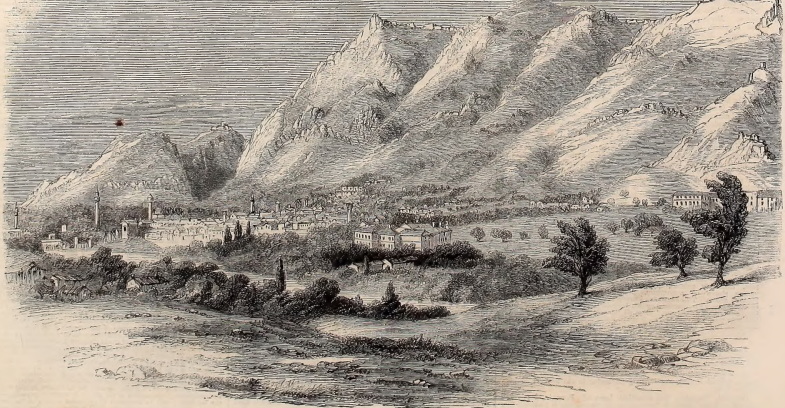
MUSIC

COVENT-GARDEN THEATRE, as an English opera-house, was opened by Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. Harrison on Monday last. This event was the commencement of the fifth season of their active and prosperous management, which has every prospect of continuing with undiminished success. They have begun their campaign, not by the production of a new piece, but by the resumption of Vincent Wallace's "Lurline," which it will be remembered was in the very height of its vogue and popularity when its "run" was stopped by the closing of the theatre last spring preparatory to its occupation by Mr. Gye. From the crowded audience drawn by the announcement of this piece on the Monday, and from the warmth of its reception, there is little doubt that it will have another run as long and brilliant as the last. The opera, Miss Fyne and Mr. Harrison, in "mounting" this work, have carefully turned them to the possible account. They have not only enriched, formerly made upon an opera representative the merits of which the public of the public have explicitly pronounced. Mr. Wallace's music—the melodious, graceful, animated, full of expressive strains and striking effects—has not only been retained in full, but kept afloat a drama more than usually ponderous, and has obtained indulgence for a greater quantity of dulness and absurdity than in any other opera in English. "Lurline" has been replaced upon the stage with even more than its former splendour. The scenery and dresses of the Royal Italian Opera, Miss Fyne and Mr. Harrison, in "mounting" this piece, have

SIR HOPE GRANT AND THE STAFF OF THE BRITISH EXPEDITION IN CHINA.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY SIGNOR F. BEATO.

CHINA.

The whole of the British forces departed from their rendezvous at Talien for the Peiho on the 26th of July: the French force to leave Chefoo at the same date. Lord Elgin paid a visit to Chefoo, accompanied by the General and Admiral, and returned to Talien about the 29th; and the embarkation of the troops commenced on the 24th. The British force is very complete in every respect; but the China Mail says the French are very defective in numbers, are short of artillery, and have not cavalry, and no sufficient means of transport. Altogether the allied force will number about 260 vessels, inclusive of transports, and it is thought that this imposing force may cause the Chinese Government to come to terms at once. But Lord Elgin, it is believed, has determined to take the forts before treating. The forces will rendezvous at the Sha-ley-tien Islands, about fourteen miles from the Peiho. The landing will take place at Pehtang; and the first division, under General Mitchell, consisting of the 1st, 2nd, 31st, and 60th Regiments, and a Punjaub regiment, will land at first simultaneously with the French force for the attack. It is believed that every effort will be made to prevent our forces wintering in the north, and that after the forts are taken the Chinese will not be pressed very hard for terms.



The rebels are said to be withdrawing themselves to Soochow. They are also said to have taken the city of Nan-Tsin, in the centre of the silk districts.

Shanghai remains in the same unsettled state. A serious misunderstanding has occurred between her Majesty's Consul and the Commissioners of Customs.

At Foochow a flash of lightning set the Model Tower on fire, and it was reduced to ashes. The Model Tower was situated a few miles out from the city and was one of the sights to be seen by foreigners. The fact of its being burnt down on the Emperor's birthday was regarded by the natives as rather ominous.

The people of the prefecture of Chowchow, of which Swatow is the port, are becoming very inimical to foreigners, and have been issuing placards, the tenor of which is "kill, kill." The cause of their animosity is said to have arisen from her Majesty's Consul having sent word to the Taoutai that he would shortly pay him a visit in a gunboat; and also the arrival of two heavily-armed junks to enforce the payment of duties by native trading-boats under the new custom-house system.

Matters at Canton remain quiet. The Governor and Tartar General paid a visit lately to the new French Commissioner to congratulate him on his appointment. Sickness is very prevalent among the troops at Canton. The rebels are said to be in possession of some important passes, which prevents provisions coming down.

THE CITY OF ANTIOCH.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 329.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Among the Sketches which have been forwarded to us by our Special Artist in China, Mr. Wirgman, is one (engraved on page 311) of the Camp of the Sikh Cavalry at Cowloong, near Hong-Kong, taken shortly before the British expedition proceeded to the north. It shows Probyn's Horse in the foreground, and Fane's in the background. In the distance a part of the harbour of Hong-Kong, with the French fleet riding at anchor. The situation of this camp was very beautiful, and the atmosphere delightful—much cooler than at Hong-Kong.

A correspondent speaks thus of our light cavalry in China—"Probyn's Horse" and "Fane's Horse"—"Both men and beasts are in splendid condition. Indeed, out of 1680 horses there are but 40 sick. Colonel Mackenzie understands how to disembark horses; not one was lost, and but two or three suffered injuries of any consequence. What a beau-ideal of light cavalry those irregulars afford, and how their marches would astonish our so-called light dragoons! Probyn and Fane started nearly at the same time from Cawnpore and Lucknow to embark at Calcutta. They marched one against the other and performed the distance—700 miles—in less than a month. Probyn outmanœuvred Fane by leaving the main road about 200 miles from his destination and making a flank march across country; but he only won the race by a couple of days."

The Times correspondent writes as follows of the Sikh Irregulars in China—"Why do not the military authorities utilise these Sikh Irregulars elsewhere than in India? They have no prejudices of caste or race; they will eat and drink whatever you give them, are hardy and robust, accustomed to a climate much like our own, and, when properly looked after, not inordinately given to loot. Their conduct here has been exemplary, and they are the very men for outpost and picket duty. France has her Spahis and Russia her Cossacks. The Sikhs are superior to either, and India will afford many a Probyn and Fane to lead them. After the cavalry had defiled we had tilting at the tent-peg. A peg is hammered firmly into the earth, about three inches only being visible; at this the horseman, armed with a long spear, rides full tilt, his object being to pierce the peg en passant, and bear it off on the point of his lance. This exercise requires a firm hand, a good eye, a steady seat, and a strong wrist. A 'mull' will stick his spear into the ground, and will then either bring its point between his horse's legs or its top against his own head, his wrist being violently sprained into the bargain. Your accomplished tilter raises the spear as he pierces the peg, and, waving it round his head, rides on triumphant. Probyn led and Fane followed, but both missed the peg, their horses being out of practice. Then came a Sikh, with body extended and spear all but sweeping the ground. His shouts and yells urged his horse to the very top of his speed. As he passed the peg he struck it right in the centre, and bore it off amid great cheering. Both officers and men soon got into practice, carrying off the trophy five times in succession. A stick was then stuck loosely in the ground, with a small piece of cucumber at the top. Probyn, at full gallop, sliced off the top. Fane made an equally good cut; and a third officer completed the work—the stick never having been moved. Their sabres are like razors, they have never been acquainted with a steel scabbard, and in the hands of such swordsmen are most deadly weapons."

A correspondent of the Daily News writing from Talien Bay says—"On the 15th of July Sir H. Grant, Lord Elgin, Admiral Hope, and the French Commander-in-Chief, General Montauban, went over to Odin Bay to review the cavalry brigade and Armstrong guns, and I was lucky enough to get a passage over with them. On our approaching the shore three salutes were fired one after the other, and we then proceeded to the sands, where the cavalry were drawn up in line, with the K.D.G. on the right, Probyn's Horse in the centre, and Fane's Horse on the left. To the right of all the cavalry was Barry's battery of Armstrongs, and to the left Stirling's of Royal Artillery. The appearance of the Irregular Horse was very fine, especially Probyn's Horse, who in their dark blue uniform and blue puggies looked as dashing a body of men as I have seen anywhere. Fane's Horse seemed better mounted, but the men were not so good as those of Probyn. The King's Dragoon Guards looked as English cavalry always do—i.e., very grand and imposing—but there was a stiffness about them which did not tell favourably on me. The Correspondent of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS took a picture of the cavalry brigade drawn up in line, and I am told it is capital; however, you will be able to judge for yourself when it appears at home. Lord Elgin expressed himself much pleased with the riding of the Irregulars."

SCHOOL FOR DEAF AND DUMB INFANTS AT OLD TRAFFORD, MANCHESTER, OPENED ON WEDNESDAY WEEK.

At page 314 we engrave Portraits of the Commander and Staff of the British Expedition to China, from a photograph by Signor Beato, of Crimean and Indian celebrity. General Sir Hope Grant is seated; and the members of the Staff are as follows, taking them in order from left to right:—Capt. Fitzgerald, Capt. Hornby, Major Lowe, Col. Stephenson, Hon. Major Dormer, Major Wilmott, Commandant Reboul, Capt. Grant, Lieut.-Col. Bruce, Major Taylor, Hon. Major Anson, Lieut.-Col. Woolsley, and Lieut.-Col. Rose.

SCHOOL FOR DEAF AND DUMB INFANTS AT MANCHESTER.

On Wednesday week the school for the infant deaf and dumb which has just been erected at Old Trafford, adjoining the adult institution there, was inaugurated in the presence of a numerous company, consisting chiefly of ladies. In one of the rooms an assortment of fancy and useful articles was exhibited for sale.

The Rev. Canon Clifton, the president of the institution, occupied the chair. In commencing the business of the morning, he said the duty he had to perform was a most agreeable one, and at the same time one of a rather unusual character. They had not met to hear of any deficiency in their funds, but to celebrate the opening of a new branch institution—a branch designed by his friend Mr. Turner, the establishment of which had been his anxious wish for years. The congratulations of the meeting, he was sure, would be offered that Mr. Turner had been spared to witness the completion of his project. He should mention that the infant branch of an institution like that was entirely a new idea. There never had been one of that description, the rule generally being not to admit children before they were seven or eight years of age. The consequence was that when children were admitted they were found, for their age, more backward and less susceptible of rapid improvement than children under other circumstances. This, of course, did not betoken greater deficiency in the natural powers of the deaf and dumb, but might easily be explained from other causes. The institution was opened to supply a very great want. Children would be admitted at the early age of three years; accommodation being at present provided for fifty children from that age to seven years. To show how ready the parents of these children were to avail themselves of the institution, he might mention that they had more applications for admission than the building would just now accommodate. £11,000 had been contributed since the proposition for this branch was first made public. Of that amount, £4500 had been given in donations for the purpose; but the magnificent sum of £7000 had been procured through the exertion of those ladies who had so liberally befriended the institution, and he was sure they all rejoiced to see that day which had so signally crowned their efforts with success. As to the building itself, it did honour to the architect, both with regard to design and stability; and it was something to announce that the estimate had not been in the least degree exceeded. Every means of administering to the comfort of the children was supplied, and particular care had been taken to protect them from the peril of fire. Their chief purpose that morning was to inaugurate the opening of the building, to declare that it was now in a fit condition to receive its inmates, and to pass the rules for its future guidance. The Chairman read letters from the Lord Bishop of Manchester and Mr. T. Bazley, M.P., excusing their absence on the ground of unavoidable engagements elsewhere. A letter had also been received by Mr. Turner from the Earl of Ellesmere, regretting his inability to attend the inauguration.—The Rev. Thomas Buckley read the proposed rules, which were adopted unanimously.—Mr. Ernest Reuss, chairman of the building committee, stated the net proceeds of the bazaar to be £6903 14s. 8d.; donations and subscriptions, £3025 3s. 4½d.; collected previously by himself, £1554 12s. 7d.; making a total of £11,483 0s. 7½d. in favour of the extension fund. The total cost of the building was £9253 3s. 11d., and there was a surplus of about £5000, designed partly for the extension of the present building and the remainder for investment.—The Rev. T. Buckley read a list of twenty-six candidates for admission to the school; and, as there were vacancies for that whole number, and no objections were raised to any, they were unanimously elected.

Mr. Thomas Turner said the first duty which devolved upon him, now that the rules had been passed and the inmates elected, was formally to declare that the school was open. He thought it a very glorious occasion, and one in which every feeling heart must sympathise. He had been referred to as the originator of the scheme, and he might state that the initiative was taken sixteen years since, at a meeting in the Townhall, Manchester; but it was not until about four years ago that active steps were taken, by Mr. Reuss and others, to carry out the project. To Mr. Humphrey Nicholls they were also indebted for £1000, and to Mr. Nixon for £500. Mr. Turner then went minutely into detail, showing the many advantages which a school for the infant deaf and dumb would confer.

Thanks were accorded to the chairman, to Mr. Ernest Reuss, Mr. Nixon, Mr. Redfearn (one of the building committee), Mr. Redford (the architect), and to the building committee, for their exertions in promoting the interests of the institution, and the proceedings terminated.

The building covers an area of 577 yards, yet, from the form and position of the ground, a frontage of only 20 yards could be obtained. It comprises sheltered playgrounds in the lower story; and, above, a schoolroom, 40 feet by 25 feet; a dining-hall, 29 feet by 20 feet; male dormitory, 40 feet by 25 feet; female dormitory, 48 feet 6 inches by 20; a chamber for the sick, and one for the convalescent; nurses' room, linen-closets, bath-rooms, lavatories, committee-room, also apartments for the housekeeper and domestic servants. The walls are hollow, as a preventive of damp; the façade is of stone; the staircases throughout are fireproof; all the carpentry of floors, dormitory room, &c., is exposed, and stained and varnished; the schoolroom has dwarf wainscoting, the panels being of slate, upon which lessons are taught. The dormitories contain 700 cubic feet of space for each child, and every regard has been paid to the comfort and convenience of the intended inmates, to the proper admission of pure air, and the escape of the vitiated. The architect is Mr. Giles, style which distinguished the reign of the eighth Henry, and the endeavour has been to harmonize the infant school with it as much as possible. The builder is Mr. Holliday. Messrs. Bowden, Edwards, and Foster were the builders.

FARINA, WITH A MAN ON HIS BACK, CROSSING THE NIAGARA ON A TIGHT-ROPE.—FROM A SKETCH TAKEN BY THE LATE MASTER H. INGRAM, FROM CLIFTON HOUSE BALCONY, AUGUST 23, 1860.

SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 329.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Now that the St. Leger settling is over, the Doncaster Church window committee and the ladies' organ committee at St. Albans may be pronounced to be the winners in their way as much as any. After winning their great race the Marquis of Ailesbury sent a £100 cheque to the former. This gave a cue to the fair diplomatists of St. Albans, of which they were not slow in availing themselves. They forthwith represented to his Lordship that he had passed a great slight on their borough (whose members he historically had) by making his son of Bribery after its name, and argued with infinite tact that some forfeit was most clearly due in the circumstances. The reasoning was not very logical, but it was highly successful, and received a gallant answer in the shape of another £100 cheque. After such an auspicious beginning of the Prince of Wales's project to have gentle pressure put upon him to restore St. Albans to its place among boroughs whenever the time shall be ripe, there would be little room left for a political deputation in crinoline some of these fine mornings.

The Leger week, including Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, and the Second October Meeting at Newmarket from Monday to Friday, will take next week to themselves. The Newmarket, Monday, has not many events, but they are a wonderful lot for the money. The names in the Royal, but the Clearwell has Dundee (9lb. extra) among his thirty-three. Only fifty and the pair to the Brunswick, and several of them have been heavily backed, without any one getting a decided look in. The Rous Memorial has been "kept" for this race like anything like an approximation to their real forms is impossible: Cotsarpic (st. 11lb.) is remarkably well in, judging from his Ascot form; but Old Calabar (7st. 11lb.) must be lengthened considerably, seems to attract no notice whatever. Diophantus is in the Belfort Stakes on Wednesday, and Mr. Merry Thomas, the manager, in the Select Stakes, for which, after the proof of Buccaneer's short-distance powers at Doncaster (Lambton Cup, extra) is not likely to start. The latter is engaged against Tom Bowline (to whom he gives 5lb.) on Thursday in a 500 sov. sweepstake, R.M.; and on Friday Dundee and Diophantus are in the Jubilee handicaps.

The Sporting Magazine for the current month is illustrated by a picture of Voltaire, who died a few months ago, and by a portrait of a horse, who is the sire of some of the finest hunting stock in the country, we mean Mr. Jackson Wheeler's cream-coloured horse, went there; and, although he was rising twenty-four when he died, he had all the mettle of a colt. His owner, Mr. Fahey Smith, quite declined, in the same generous spirit that he ever showed in the year he used always to carry him a leaf of the finest flour at two a.m. In the same month Mr. Fahey Smith was elected a member of the Jockey Club, of the "Exmoor Ponies." It seems that they were originally introduced by the Phœnicians, but that the stock was perfectly preserved till the father of Mr. Knight, M.P., the present owner of the greater part of Exmoor, brought over some sixteen-hand Dongolas from Dubia. Eighteen years ago Mr. Knight bought up all Viscount Portman's, consequently used, and then Cascapa, a grandson of Velocipede; so that the present stock is of very high character indeed. Mr. Knight's stock, in the spring, consists of about 400, which are principally bays and bulky bays with mealy noses, as well as a few greys, browns, blacks, and roans, and the average height is about twelve hands and a half. The last sale was in 1858, when the average price for the lot was £13 15s. The Exmoor sheep are of the Cheviot fall, and the smallest of them can carry a heavy herdsman through a tenhours' day's work on the moors. The next meet of the Devon and Exmoor Pack (seven miles from the Great Western station at Tiverton), on Thursday, October 25, as well as thirty-two Exmoor colts, grays, and greys, belonging to Mr. Knight, of Simonsbath, Exmoor. Some of the colts and galloways measure fourteen one, and are by thoroughbred half-bred sires from Exmoor ponies. Nearly all Mr. Smith's lot are broken; but Mr. Knight's are brought direct from the hills, and the majority of them are rising five.

Bailey's Monthly Magazine has an excellent portrait of the Earl of Derby in its gallery of sporting celebrities, accompanied by a memoir, which is only too short to be read. The article "Sporting and Pleasure-seeking Tearing in France" gives us an insight into Lord Cowley's Pleasantry at the Court of the Tuileries. Anything like the number of the guests 2775 pheasants this year under 225 hens. The hens sit on their fifteen eggs each, in a dark box, and when they leave their nests for twenty minutes per diem to be fed. During the first five days the young pheasants eat nothing but black ants' eggs, with which the estate abounds, and which are procured fed on ants' eggs, chopped hard-boiled eggs, stale breadcrumbs, and bruised wheat, and barley, up to the sixth day, when they are fit to put out in the woods. Then the rearing, on an average, costs five francs.

Mr. Anderson opened the coursing season well by dividing the St. Leger Stakes at Biggar with his Faldonside and Cover. Four out of Mr. Borrow's half-dozen went down in their first course; and Mr. Gibson's Ida Scott, winner of four we believe in the last Kelso Rebel beat both Canopy and Blue Design in the Douglas Cup, which his owner eventually won by Blue Bird. The Ardrossan Open (Sharpshill) stands for Tuesday, Auillem (O) for Wednesday, and Bo'der Rob Farnhglaire for Wednesday and Thursday. The entry for the Open Derby at Ayr, which takes place on Tuesday, October 23, and the Eleven seem to have no notion of a trip to Australia to fill up the recess. The head averages of the Surrey batsmen in their county matches are Caffyn, nineteen and two over, and C. G. Lane, Esq., seventeen and nine over, is rather remarkable as being the only matches played between this county and Nottingham, each should have won five.

MALTON RACES.—TUESDAY.

Two-Year-Old Stakes.—Scrubbing Brush, 1. Caller Ou, 2.
Selling Plate.—Ivy Specular, 2.
Malton Handicap.—Prelude, 1. Sophra, 2.
Fitzwilliam Plate, 10l.—Dr. Dunsterville, 1. Clonee c., 2.
Hunt Cup.—Pirate, 1. Tarnish, 2.
Northcliffe Plate.—Eideon, 1. Hercule, 2.

WEDNESDAY.

Birdsall Plate.—Lioness colt, 1. Lucienne, 2.
Members' Plate.—Portia, 1. Cambaula, 2.
Rangtoa Stakes.—Caller Ou, 1. Stanton, 2.
Welcome Stakes.—Lord Lyon, 1. Baby, 2.
Nursery Plate.—Caller Ou, 1. Ladybird, 2.

BEDFORD RACES.—WEDNESDAY.

Consolation Stakes.—Ladybird, 1. Rattlemahat, 2.
Two-Year-Old Stakes.—Southport, 1. Commodrum, 2.
Town Stakes.—Maypole, 1. The Fawn, 2.
Grand Stakes.—Lord Lyon, 1. Sophra, 2.
Preparation Stakes.—Rattlemahat, 1. Foretop, 2.

THURSDAY.

Stratton Park Stakes.—Newstead, 1. Lady Bird, 2.
Surrey Handicap.—Juliet, 1. The Don, 2.
Selling Stakes.—Longhope, 1. Ivorissing, 2.
Queen's Plate.—Ben Webster, 1. Predator, 2.

CARDIFF RACES.—THURSDAY.

Revival Handicap.—Speculator, 1. Brise, 2.
Principality Stakes.—Tonic, 1. Wortham, 2.
Cardiff Stakes.—Lucienne, 1. Rose, 2.
Selling Stakes.—Reverie, 1. Midnight, 2.
Aberdare Plate.—Gift, 1. Yorkshire Rose, 2.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.
Lat. 51° 28′ 40″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 45″ W.; Height above sea 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOMETER.			WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours. Read 9 a.m.
	Barometer Reduced to 32° and Sea Level.	Dry Bulb.	Wet Bulb.	Dew Point.	Elastic Force of Vapour.	Humidity. Saturation = 100.	Highest in the Day.	Lowest in the Night.	General Direction.	Hourly Velocity in Miles.
	Inches				Inches
Sept. 26	29·760	59·7	47·1	·83	·3	59·1	59·4	E. SE.	238	6·19
„ 27	29·844	64·4	51·1	·73	·4	59·1	59·4	S.S.W.	191	4·78
„ 28	29·772	52·3	50·2	49	10	61·2	54·4	N.N.	321	·202
„ 29	29·772	52·3	50·2	49	10	61·2	54·4	N.N.	321	·202
„ 30						42·9	53·7		147	·003
Oct. 1	30·365	59·7	47·3	·83	10	47·4	59·3	W. NW.	135	·000
„ 2	30·317	54·9	49·2	·84	7	46·4	55·9	WSW. WNW.	135	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, at 9 a.m., and half-past 9 p.m.:

	26th.	27th.	28th.	29th.	30th.	1st.	2nd.
Barometer (in inches) corrected ...	29·761	29·799	29·778	29·761	29·805	30·350	30·300
Temperature of Evaporation ...	52°	52°	51°	51°	51°	46°	47°
Temperature of Evaporation ...	52°	52°	51°	51°	48°	47°	51°
Direction of Wind ...	E.	S.	N.	N.	W.	W.	W.

MEXICO continues to be the scene of an internecine struggle. By the latest mentions Miramon was at the capital, which he left more than once, awaiting the attack of the Liberals, who were advancing upon him with an army 20,000 strong. Vera Cruz was blockaded by the fleet of the American Republic in search to be deplored, and makes us think that even absorption in the great northern confederation would be a less evil than a chronic state of civil war.

GALE IN THE GULF OF MEXICO.—There was a furious gale on the 10th ult. in the Gulf of Mexico, involving a great destruction of property. Nearly every house in Belize was carried away, and several lives were lost, including Captain Kinney, pilot of the New York and Havannah Steam-ship Company. The following vessels were driven on shore: the brigs Wm. Reid and Tourist, bound out, were all blown ashore at the Passo; Mexican brig Independencia, Captain Pinchaud, from Vera Cruz, ashore on the wharves damaged. It is reported that all the wharves and hulkhouses on the Lake shore are destroyed; there are a wreck of the brig Tourist. The town of Biloxi, Miss., is in ruins. At Mobile the storm was severely felt. All the wharves in the lower part of the city were submerged during the gale.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

THE declaration on the part of the Government, not her intention to attract either Rose or Venetia (as given much satisfaction to those immediately interested in the sale of the Crown property, and the statements about to the effect that the late differences between Garibaldi and the Neapolitan Government are adjusted, have had the effect of causing a further rise in the value of Government securities, the prices of which have had an upward tendency. The amount of Money taken out by Messrs. Overend, Gurney, and Co. for public business has been done for Time than in several previous weeks.

The Money Market continues to be abundantly supplied with cash, for which there has been a steady demand at the annexed rates for the best commercial paper:

	Per cent.		Per cent.
Short Bills	2½ to 3	Four Months' Bills	3½ to 3¾
Three Months' Bills	3 to 3½	Six Months' Bills	4 to 4½

The Bank of Austria, at Vienna, has raised rate from 5 to 5½ per cent. With this exception, money is very low in price throughout the Continent; at Hamburg it is 3 per cent; at Frankfort, 3½ per cent; at Paris, 2 and at Frankfort, 1½ per cent.

The late heavy importation of silver has been partly disposed of, chiefly to the English and French Governments, at to 1½ per ounce, being a decline of 1½ compared with the previous week. The Bank of England has £10,000 in silver has reached Vera Cruz from Mexico. The imports of gold this week have been £100,000 from Australia and £30,000 from the United States; the latter has taken out £80,000, all in silver except £4,000. The amount sent to Calcutta is only £21,000, the remainder having been sent to Bombay. The Bank withdrawals have continued trifling.

The failure of Messrs. Strahan and Co., Greek merchants, of Manchester, has been announced. The liabilities are about £40,000.

The reports from the manufacturing districts state that very little business is doing in goods for export to India. For France and Germany, however, there is a fair demand, and prices are steadily maintained. Spinners, however, in this country have no alternative but to submit to the deduction. It is, however, very satisfactory to find that the cotton trade, as a whole, is placed on a regulated by an unwise attempt to destroy a good market.

The Bank of Liverpool, at Liverpool, has announced an issue of £2,000 100 new per cent Debentures, which are to bear interest from July 1st, the issuing price to be 101. The object of the issue is to give power to authorities to enlarge the premises in Castle-street and South. The bonds now offered are to be a first mortgage on the property. The last work which was undertaken by the Bank was the Post Office Company—to which this line will be of the utmost importance in a financial point of view. The Bank has paid a dividend for the last year of a bonus of 10 per cent on all traffic during the first five years from the commencement of the line, and 5 per cent on the remaining five years, which will be redeemable in twenty years, and the interest will be paid in London. The last four quarters' dividends have been at the rate of 10 per cent.

We understand that the Great Ship will be detained at Milford Haven during the whole of October, for the purpose of completing repairs. Only 1,000 shares have been done at 8s. 3d. to 8s. 9d.

On the whole the Stock Exchange and general companies have been in somewhat improved request, at mostly full quotations:—Ocean Marine Insurance shares, 10 paid, 9 to 9½; Thames and Mersey Marine, 10 paid, 9 to 9½ pens.; Universal Marine Insurance, 5-16 to 3 pens.; London and Provincial Marine, 1 to 1¼ pm.; Crystal Palaces, 6½ to 6¾ pm.

The transactions in Home Stocks on Monday were very moderate: nevertheless, on the closing of business the prices of the leading descriptions were the same as on the previous Saturday. Consols for Account, 93¼; India Five per Cents, 103¾ to 104; India Bonds, 3l. to 4l. pm.; Exchequer Bills, March, 1860, 1s. to 2s. pm.; India Five per Cent Paper was 85½. On Tuesday, Consols ruled at 93¼ ¾; Ditto for Time, 93¾; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 93¾; India Stock, 220 to 222; India Exchequer Bills, par to ½ premium. India Five-and-a-Half per Cent Debenture Paper was 103½ to ¾. On Wednesday, the Funds were steady at the above prices, and the quotations had an upward tendency. Consols for Transfer left off at 93¾ ¼; Ditto, for Account, 93¾; India Stock, 220 to 222; India Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 2s. pm.; Ditto Bonds, 1l. to 3s. dis.; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. pm. India Five per Cent Paper was 85½ to ¾. On Thursday, Consols ruled at 93¾ ¼. On Thursday the market, generally, was firm. Consols for Money touched 93¾; for Account, 93¾; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 93¾; India Stock, 220 to 222; India Bonds, 1l. to 3s. dis.; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. pm. India Five per Cent Paper was 85½ to ¾. On Friday, Consols left off at 93¾ ¼.

In the Foreign House the transactions have been far from numerous. Brazilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 97½ to ¾; Buenos Ayres Six per Cents, unchanged with last week, have been unimportant. Brazilian Four-and-a-Half per Cents have been done at 97½ to ¾; Chilian Six per Cents, 103½ to ¾; Peruvian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 86½. New Grenada Active Three-and-a-Half per Cents, 19; Ditto Deferred, 9½; Portuguese Four per Cents, 43½ to ¾; Russian Five per Cent Stock, 104½; Portuguese Three per Cents, 43½; Russian Four-and-a-Half per Cents, 97½; Spanish Three per Cents, 43½; Russian Four-and-a-Half per Cent Stock, 97½; Spanish Passive, 23½; Ditto New Deferred, 20½; Ditto Passive, 21½; Ditto Committee's Certificates, 9½; Turkish Six per Cents, 103½; Ditto Four per Cents, 91½; Ditto Three per Cents, 71½; Ditto Four per Cents, 101½; Venezuela Three per Cents, 34½; Ditto One-and-a-Half per Cents, 19½.

Joint-stock Bank Shares have been in steady inquiry, and prices on the whole have ruled firm. Agra and United Services, 3½ to ¾; Australasian, 88 to 90; Chartered of India, Australia, and China, 30½ to ¾; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 15½; London Chartered of Australia, 3½ to ¾; London Joint-stock, 28½; London and Westminster, 6½ to ¾; National, 2½; South Australian, 2½; Union of Australia, 42; and Union of London, 20½.

In the Railway Shares Government Securities have alternately ruled, as reported. The transactions in them, however, have been somewhat restricted:—New Brunswick, 104½; Anglo-American, 16½; New South Wales Five per Cents, 1871 to 1876, 99½; Ditto, 1888 and upwards, 99½; and Victoria Five per Cents, 99½ to ¾.

Miscellaneous securities have continued in limited request, as follows:—Crystal Palace, 6½ to ¾; Anglo-American Telegraph, 16½; Australian Agricultural, 1½; Ditto, New, 1½; Madras Irrigation and Canal, 3¼; Netherlands Land Right Certificates, 2½; Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation, 97½; Royal Mail Steam, 93½; Scottish Australian Investment, 1½; Submarine Telegraph, 6½ to ¾; Waterford, Limerick, and Athlone Railway, 1½; Ditto, Western Midd'ance, 16½; Waterloo Bridge, 2½; East and West India Docks, 64½; Ditto, Canal, 72; and Victoria, 104½.

City of London Gas Shares, 4, have been done at 2; Imperial, 83; New Ditto, 64½; Westminster Chartered, New, 13½; Western, 113; Ditto, New, 2½; County Insurance, 8½; Eagle, 7½; Guardian, 3½; Indemnity Marine, 1½; Legal and General, 15½; Ocean Marine, 1.

Notwithstanding that the dealings in the Railway Share Market have not been to any extensive, prices, almost generally, have ruled firm. The London and North-Western traffic returns shows an increase of £1,000; the Great Northern of £1,000; the Great Western of £1,000; and the London and Brighton an increase of £500, when compared with the corresponding week in 1859. The following are Thursday's official closing quotations:—

ORDINARY SHARES AND STOCKS.—Caledonian, 93½; Eastern Counties, 23½; Great Northern, 116½; Ditto, A Stock, 109½; Great Western, 74½; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 103½; London and Blackwall, 6½; London and Brighton, 111½; London, Chatham, Dover, 9¼; London and North-Western, 101½; London and South-Western, 93½; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 43½; Midland, 130½; North British, 62½ ex div.; North-Eastern—Berwick, 104½; Ditto, Leeds, 99½; Ditto, York, 91; North Staffordshire, 14½; Nottingham and Grantham Railway and Canal, 63½; South Devon, 6¼; South-Eastern, 84½; Sweden and Nottingham, 7½; Ditto, 20; Victoria Station and Pimlico, 11½; Waterford and Kilkenny 12½; Ditto, Limited—Sixths, 4½.

LINES LEASED AT FIXED RENTALS.—Chester and Holyhead, Five per Cent, 114; Hull and Selby, 120; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, 9½; Northern and Eastern, 56; Shrewsbury and Hereford, 103½; Wilts and Somerset, 93.

PREFERENCE SHARES AND STOCKS.—Caledonian Five per Cent, 103½; London and Brighton, Seven per Cent Stock, 152; Londonderry and Enniskillen, 1½; North-Eastern—Berwick, 104½; Ditto, Leeds, 102; South-Eastern, Limited Annuities, 14; Waterford and Kilkenny, 45; West Midland—Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 45.

BRITISH FUNDS.—Annuities, 93¾; Bank Stock, 220; Exchequer Bills, 2s. to 3s. pm.; Exchequer Bills, 1858, 1s. pm.; India Bonds, 1l. to 3s. dis.; India Stock, 221; Long Annuities, 14; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 93¾; Three per Cent Consols for Account, 93¾; Three per Cent Consols for Money, 93¾; Three per Cent Reduced, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1726, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1751, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1853-55, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1858, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1859, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1860, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1861, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1862, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities, 1863, 93¾; Three per Cent Annuities,

NEW BOOKS.

Now ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols., 31s.,

TRAITS of CHARACTER: being Twenty-five Years' Literary and Personal Recollections. By COLIN KENNAQUHOON, Esq., Author of "Random Recollections of the House of Commons," &c.

THE VALE OF ST. JOHN; or, Life in a Colony. By SAM SLICK. Price 3s. bound and illustrated.

THE HUNDRED FIRES. By the Author of "Rannoch," &c. 3 vols.

ROBERT and BLACKETT, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Second Edition, 2 vols. 21s. cloth,

MESSRS. SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE SKELETON IN THE CUPBOARD. A Novel. By Lady Scott. 3 vols.

HELEN. A Romance of Real Life. 7s. 6d.

THE LIFE OF GEORGE FOX, the Founder of the Society of Friends. 7s. 6d.

CHARLES AUCHESTER. A Tale. 10s. 6d.

THE LIGHTHOUSE. A Naval Novel. 21s.

WORTH NOTICE—5th Thousand. New and Enlarged Edition, price 1s. 6d. cloth, or 2s. 6d. gilt edges, post-free,

THE DICTIONARY APPENDIX and GUIDE to CORRECT SPEAKING and WRITING, containing upwards of 7000 words not found in the Dictionary, comprising the Particular Use, Pronunciation, Spelling, and Derivation of Words. "I write a letter should be without it."—Bell's Life.

J. F. HOPE and CO., 16, Paternoster-row.

THE PRAIRIE FLOWER. By GUSTAVUS AYMARD.

See "WESLOWE HURST," reduced to 10 pages, 3d. weekly. Illustrated Weekly Volumes, 6d., Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers.

This day, fcap 8vo, price 3s., ornamental boards,

MAKE YOUR GAME; or, the Adventures of Two Young Gentlemen, the Situ Southmoor, and the Man with the Iron Hand. By CHARLES AUGUSTUS SALA. Illustrated by J. McConnell, Augustus Mayhew, and the Author.

Tilt and Bogue, 86, Fleet-street, and 29, Haymarket.

In Weekly Numbers, Threepence;

Monthly Parts, One Shilling; and Half-Yearly Volumes, for Six pence, splendidly illustrated.

No. 1, price 3d., and Part 1, price 1s., will both be ready Oct. 15, 1860.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

An Illustrated Record of Voyages, Travels, and Adventure in all parts of the Globe. Edited by W. F. AINSWORTH, F.R.G.S., M.R.C.S., Author of "The Lost Ship."

Office, 5, Bouverie-street, and all Booksellers.

LONDON.—STANFORD'S NEW LONDON GUIDE, containing full information under the following heads:—Topography, Population, Public Conveyances, Hotels, Steamboats, Steamboat Piers, Railway Stations, Railway Companies, Cabs, Water, Gas, Roads, Bridges, Antiquities, Public and Private Buildings, Law Courts, Club Houses, Markets, Theatres, and other Places of Amusement, Churches and Chapels, Literary Institutions, Scientific Institutions, Banks, Docks, Wharfs, Warehouses, Exchanges, with Excursions on the Thames, Richmond, &c. &c., with Map, Index, Plan, &c., in this elegant Guide.

London: EDWARD STANFORD, 6, Charing-cross, S.W.

HERBERT INGRAM, ESQ., and ILLUSTRATED LITERATURE.—The First-class Weekly Newspaper, price 6d., stamped 7d., is "The Metropolitan Drainage Works."—Saturday Review.—"The Sidewalks."—Spectator.—"The Sewage" (with) Illustrations.—Mr. Ingram and Illustrated Literature.—Free Trade.—Mr. Ingram and Free Trade.—Mr. Ingram and Parliamentary Reform.—Mr. Ingram and Public Meetings.—Mr. Ingram and Public Amusements.—Mr. Ingram and Railway Accidents.—Mr. Ingram and Public Health.—Mr. Ingram and Public Health.—Approximately to Truthful Statistics.—Mr. Ingram and the Provincial Press.—Mr. Ingram and Provincial Press.—Provincial News.—Competitions, &c.

Office, 7, Milford-street, Coventry-lane; and all Booksellers.

PICTORIAL SUNDAY READINGS, Commencing a Complete Series of Scripture Subjects, lucidly, fully and critically treated, with especial adaptation to the wants and requirements of families; and forming a comprehensive, instructive, and valuable Commentary on the Holy Scriptures.

The Illustrations are executed by the choicest powers in the Engraving Department.

In Monthly Parts, 1s. each, containing Four Coloured Engravings and Thirty-two pages of Letterpress.

JAMES HOGG and SONS, 9, Paternoster-row; and all Booksellers.

DR. HUNT on VOICE and SPEECH.—Just published, price 2s. 6d. post-free, A MANUAL OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF VOICE AND SPEECH, in connection with Public Speaking. By THOMAS HUNT, Ph.D., F.R.A., F.R.A.S., &c.

London: LONGMAN and CO.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE HUMAN BODY: its STRUCTURE and FUNCTIONS. Illustrated by Dr. Lindley's Ingleian Diagrams, containing 183 Coloured Figures. Adapted for the Use of Schools. By JOHN MARSHALL, F.R.S., Surgeon to the University College Hospital, Lecturer on Anatomy in the Medical School, and Demonstrator. Sixth Knowledge. In Two Volumes, 8vo, 1,000 pages, with 183 Coloured Figures, 30s. The Coloured Diagrams are arranged in a Separate Volume. Price of the two volumes, 3l. 10s. Will be ready October 1.

London: Longman and Son, Lithographers to the Queen, 3, Cockspur-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

In 8s., or thirty-two stamps, Fourth Edition,

CORPULENCY, and its new Self-dietary Cure, By WILLIAM BANTING, MOORE, M.R.C.S.

A. and M. BYASS, 42, Tachbrook-street, Pimlico, S.W.

Just published, price 1s. 6d. sent free for 18 stamps,

AN HOMŒOPATHIC BOOK.—THE WILL OF GOD TO THE INVALID, as Revealed in the Scriptures, Book Way of Restoring Health and Retaining it when Restored.

London: Dr. GUNN, 32, Regent's-park-road, N.W.

VARICOSE VEINS AND THEIR TREATMENT. Price 2s. 6d. Also, Third Edition, 8vo, 6s., THE NATURE AND CURATIVE TREATMENT OF ULCERATIVE ERUPTIONS ON THE LEG without confinement. By HENRY T. CHAPMAN, F.R.C.S., &c.—JOHN CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

MORTON'S LINCOLNSHIRE ALMANACK for 1861, price 6d. Ninth year of publication. Now ready. London: J. S. MORTON, 1, Warwick-square, E.C.

CLIMATES FOR INVALIDS.

A COMPARATIVE INQUIRY as to the INFLUENCE of the CLIMATES of PAU, ROME, NAPLES, MADEIRA, and the RIVIERA; with a Description of Pisa, Florence and their Watering-places. By A. TAYLOR, M.D., F.R.S.E. 8vo, 10s. 6d. cloth.

A. and C. BLACK, 27, Soho-square, London.

500 Engravings, Prayer-Books, Church Manuals, Poetry, and elegantly-bound volumes for presents, are exceptin the largest collection of Family Bibles in the kingdom, at JOHN DICKS'S, Great Bible Warehouse, 65, Regent-street.

THE PRETTIEST GIFTBOOK EVER PUBLISHED.—The PICTORIAL POCKET BIBLE, with 300 beautiful Engravings, and Concordance, Maps, &c., elegantly bound for 1s., at JOHN DICKS'S, 313, STRAND; and JOHN FIELD'S Great Bible Warehouse, 65, Regent-street.

THE CHEAPEST PRAYER-BOOK PUBLISHED.

THE ILLUMINATED BOOK of COMMON PRAYER, large type, and with sixteen whole-page Illustrations, printed on toned paper, and bound in cloth, price 1s. Post-free, 13 stamps. JOHN FIELD'S Great Bible Warehouse, 65, Regent-street.

Just published, post-free, three stamps,

THE TRUE WAY, GABRIEL ON THE LOSS and ONLY RELIEF. MODE OF RESTORING THE TEETH, with indestructible consistency and flexible elasticity, the set lasts longer than three ordinary sets, and can be skipped, worn, and used as the natural teeth. Sold by Messrs. Sanger, Strand, and many opposite; only by Mr. Rosse, Dental Depôt, 329, High Holborn, London. Pamphlets, 1s., Rose-street, Dundee; 2, Upper Lodge-hill, Lambeth; 1, Cambridge-terrace, Stoke-street. "Gabriel's system excels all others in point of economy, and in the perfection of its mechanism."—Medical Circular. Morning Herald. Reference to patients who have had sets in wear for years, and the medical profession. American Mineral Teeth, best in Europe, from four to eight guineas per set.

THE AQUARIUM.—LLOYD'S DESCRIPTIVE PRICED LIST, with practical instructions for the Construction of Aquaria, 12 pages, and 16 Engravings, free for 4 stamps. Apply direct to W. J. LLOYD, Portland-road, Regent's Park, London, W.

JUST PUBLISHED, Greyness, Baldness, and other Diseases of the Hair, Their Cause and Remedy, with Hints on the Hair, its Care and Culture. By F. M. REMAING, 38, Basinghall-street, London. Post-free, 6d.

CHEAP BOOKS at BULL'S LIBRARY.—Surplus copies of "Friends in Council," "M'Clintock's Arctic Voyage," "The Missing Link," "Bishop Wilberg's Life," and many other books now offered at greatly-reduced prices.

Bull's Library, 19, Holles-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.

NEW BOOKS.

THE LIBER ALBUS, or WHITE BOOK of the CITY OF LONDON, is now ready, price, to subscribers, 6s. 6d. cloth. To be had post-free, of 21, Colman-street, London. The Subscription-list will shortly close.—RICHARD GRIFFIN and Company, 10, Stationers' Hall-court.

Oct. 1, 1860.

ILLUMINATED by GOWN JONES and HARRISON, BARNES and the PERI, from the "Lalla Rookh" of Thomas Moore, with a number of 34 Illustrations, printed and tinted to form the most elegant and splendid gift-book of the season, and which has just received from the art of chromo-lithography. Price bound in cloth, 21s.; or, with Gilt Edges, Extra Gilt Back and Sides, 25s. Also, the Lithographs to the Queen, 5, Cockspur-street, London.

A MANUAL OF ILLUMINATION. By J. W. BRADLEY. With an Appendix by F. GODWIN, B.A., and Two Lithographic Facsimiles. Post 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. BELL and DALDY, London, W., and all Booksellers and Artists' Colourmen.

Price 1s.; postage-free, 13 stamps. Second Edition, Illuminated Wrapper,

HINTS on ILLUMINATING; with Directions for Producing Gold and Silver. By Mrs. MERRIFIELD. London: J. BARNARD and SON, 4, Bouverie-street.

Sixth edition, with Illustrations, 6s.; in boards, 5s. 6d.

ILLUMINATING. Dedicated to the Countess of DUDLEY. By D. LAURENT DE LARA. "Infinitely better than the Illuminating Books."—Literary Gazette.

MECHI and BAZIN'S DESPATCH-BOX and WRITING-CASES, in russia and morocco leather, are made in the newly-discovered Despatch-Box Lock, which defies the Cleverest Thief. Also, others of a cheaper description. Price from 21s. to 5 guineas. Mechi and Bazin, Manufacturers of Portable Writing-desks, Dressing-cases, Envelope-cases, Stereting Knives, Pocket-books, and Spirit Flasks—113, Regent-st., W.; and 4, Leadenhall-st., E.C.

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers by Special Appointment to the Queen, Dealers in Gold, Silver, and Jewellery, Opticians, Clock and Bronze Manufacturers, 11 and 12, Cornhill, and 47, Parade, Coventry. Watches for all climates, adapted to all sea voyages, warranted for accuracy. Chronometers, Duplex, Lever, and Repeating Watches, Gold Chains, Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, Ear-rings, Necklaces, Lockets, Crosses, Pencil-cases, Seals, Keys, Pins, Studs, Sleeve-links, Albert Chains, Guards, Jewellery, Silver Watches, Electro-plate, Clocks, Bronzes, Table Cutlery, Dressing-cases, Work-boxes, Envelope-cases, Writing-cases, Dressing-bags, Portmanteaus, Travelling-bags, Shawl-straps, Despatch-boxes, Purses, Pocket-books, Card-cases, Tea Trays, Tea Caddies, Tea Urns, Tea and Coffee Pots, Cruet-frames, Liqueur-frames, Dish-covers, Corner-dishes, Cheese-toasters, Bread-baskets, Cake-baskets, Fish-carvers, Venison-dishes, Candlesticks, Candelabra, Lamps, Gaseliers, Fenders, Fire-irons, Kitchen Utensils, Culinary Articles, Stoves, Kitchen Ranges, Lamps, Baths, Beds, Bedding, Bed-hangings, Mattresses, Blankets, Quilts, Sheets, Carpets, Rugs, Hearthrugs, Floor-cloths, Table-covers, Portable Buildings, Clothes-horses, Clothes-lines, Clothes-pegs, Clothes-baskets, Mangles, Wringing-machines, Washing-machines, Drying-machines, Knife-boards, Boot-jacks, Brushes, Mats, Matting, Cocoa-nut Fibre, Cocoa-nut Matting, Cocoa-nut Mats, Cocoa-nut Brushes, Cocoa-nut Fibre Brushes, Cocoa-nut Fibre Mats, Cocoa-nut Fibre Matting, Cocoa-nut Fibre Sheeting, Cocoa-nut Fibre Screens, Cocoa-nut Fibre Dusters, Cocoa-nut Fibre Bags, Cocoa-nut Fibre Sacks, Cocoa-nut Fibre Rope, Cocoa-nut Fibre Cordage, Cocoa-nut Fibre Netting, Cocoa-nut Fibre Nets, Cocoa-nut Fibre Hammocks, Cocoa-nut Fibre Cables, Cocoa-nut Fibre Ship's Fenders, Cocoa-nut Fibre Mattresses, Cocoa-nut Fibre Beds, Cocoa-nut Fibre Bedding, Cocoa-nut Fibre Bed-hangings, Cocoa-nut Fibre Blankets, Cocoa-nut Fibre Quilts, Cocoa-nut Fibre Sheets, Cocoa-nut Fibre Carpets, Cocoa-nut Fibre Rugs, Cocoa-nut Fibre Hearthrugs, Cocoa-nut Fibre Floor-cloths, Cocoa-nut Fibre Table-covers, Cocoa-nut Fibre Portable Buildings, Cocoa-nut Fibre Clothes-horses, Cocoa-nut Fibre Clothes-lines, Cocoa-nut Fibre Clothes-pegs, Cocoa-nut Fibre Clothes-baskets, Cocoa-nut Fibre Mangles, Cocoa-nut Fibre Wringing-machines, Cocoa-nut Fibre Washing-machines, Cocoa-nut Fibre Drying-machines, Cocoa-nut Fibre Knife-boards, Cocoa-nut Fibre Boot-jacks

NEW MUSIC.

DALBERT'S MILANESE POLKA. Just published, beautifully illustrated in Colors by BRANDARD. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NAPLES QUADRILLE. A new Edition of this celebrated set of popular Italian Airs. Illustrated with View of Naples, and Scene of Carnival. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S GARIBALDI GALOP as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Jullien Festival. Founded on the favourite Italian air of this great Chief by BRANDARD. Price 3s., post-free.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLE, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Jullien Festival. A new Quadrille on the most favourite of Moore's Melodies. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Jullien Festival. Founded on the favourite song of "Kathleen Mavourneen." The Waltz is a Presentation Copy. Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NELLY GRAY VALSE, with Cottage Accompaniment. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES or ST. JAMES'S GALOP. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours, in honour of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by BRANDARD. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S CAMPBELL MINSTRELS' QUADRILLE. Just published, the new set, introducing Nelly Gray and other favourite songs sung by them. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for PIANOFORTE. Just published. Victoria Valse, Victoria Quadrille, Louise Valse, Prevenire Mazurka, Kathleen Mavourneen Waltz, Nelly Gray Valse, Nelly Gray Quadrille, Campbell Minstrels' Quadrille, Garibaldi Galop, Garibaldi, Big Ship Polka, Ellen Polka, Erin go Bragh Quadrille, and Andante (Verdi) Quadrille, price 3s. each; small Dalbert Polka, 2s. Dalbert's Popular Composer's Series may be had gratis and postage-free on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FASHIONABLE DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing 400 Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas, Galops, Mazurkas, and Country Dances. Composed by CHARLES LAMOTTE, JULIEN, Lanner, Labitzky, &c. Edited by FRANZ NAVA. Not price, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S STANDARD DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing one hundred Country Dances, Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas, Galops, Mazurkas, and Contra Dances. Composed by JULIEN, Strauss, &c. Arranged by FRANZ NAVA. Not price, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL, 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, a brilliant Fantasia on this favourite Air by the above popular Pianoforte Composer. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

LUDERS' ONE PETITE FLEUR.—Newport Market Polka. 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' NELLY GRAY, the last Pianoforte Piece by the popular Minstrels, arranged for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and cheapest of all Instruction Books—containing elementary Instructions, exercises, and studies, and a great variety of the most popular airs arranged in progressive lessons. Sixty pages, full music size, price 3s., post-free 24 stamps.
N.B.—A Specimen Page of this popular Tutor will be sent on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NEW OPERATIC FANTASIAS, Just published.
KUHE'S DAMANS DE LA CYCHONNE. 3s. 6d.
KUHE'S FANTASIA from LE PROPHÈTE, with 2d. Accompaniment for Violin. 4s.
KUHE'S HOT AIRS. 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE JUVENILE ALBUM.—Just published, a COLLECTION of FAVOURITE MELODIES Arranged for the PIANOFORTE by E. F. RIMBAULT. Price 1s. each, post-free.
No. 1. Home, Sweet Home (Payne) | No. 14. The Last Rose of Summer (Moore)
2. Overland Mail Galop (D'Albert)
3. Schell, Schell aus Fahne
4. Canadian Boat Song
5. The Harp that once (Moore)
6. Sir Roger de Coverley
7. Sligo Valse (D'Albert)
8. Bell Galop
9. Ye do forget
10. Nelly Gray Valse (D'Albert)
11. Bells, bells
12. Carnival of Venice
13. Lilliput Polka (D'Albert)
14. The Last Rose of Summer (Moore)
15. Good News from Home
16. Genevieve Valse (D'Albert)
17. Ora e Sempre
18. Queen Victoria Valse (D'Albert)
19. Lily of the Valley Valse (D'Albert)
20. Oh! Divine Agnes
21. Bell Valse (D'Albert)
22. Reigning Beauty Valse (D'Albert)
23. Auld Lang Syne
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S CHEAP WORKS FOR CHILDREN. Price 6d. each, post-free.
VIOLIN.
Chappell's 100 Dances (arranged by D'Albert's).
Second Violin and Bass Part to ditto.
Chappell's 100 Popular Quadrilles.
Chappell's 100 Popular Country Dances.
Chappell's 100 Popular Songs.
Chappell's 100 Airs from "Lurline" and "Victoria."
Chappell's 100 Hymntunes, Rests, Sigs, &c.
Chappell's 100 Airs from "Norma."
Chappell's 100 Airs from Bellini's Operas.
Chappell's 100 Christy-Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
FLUTE.
Chappell's 100 Dances (arranged by D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Popular Songs.
Chappell's 100 Airs from "Lurline" and "Victoria."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy-Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
CORNET-A-PISTON.
Chappell's 100 Dances (arranged by D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Airs from "Lurline" and "Victoria."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy-Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
ENGLISH CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Dances (arranged by D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Airs from "Lurline" and "Victoria."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy-Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
GERMAN CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs, Songs, Dances, &c.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
CLARIONETT.
Chappell's 100 Popular Songs.
Chappell's Popular Songs, with Guitar Accompaniment, in two books.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
CHAPPELL'S HARMONIUM.
Chappell's 100 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 50 Secular Melodies.
Chappell's Harmonium Instruction Book.
Care should be taken to order CHAPPELL'S Cheap Works, as they alone contain D'Albert's and other popular copyright works.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S MARIANA VALSE. The value of the season. Price 4s.; free for stamps.
COOTE, 6, Conduit-street, W.

COOTE'S "GREAT EASTERN" POLKA. Upon Edition of the popular Polka now ready. Price 2s.
COOTE, 6, Conduit-street, W.

TUNNEY'S EVELYN VALSE. Price 4s. Another success by the popular Dance Writer.
COOTE, 6, Conduit-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

HENRY FARMER'S MERRY MIDNIGHT POLKA. Illustrated in Colors. Post-free, 18 stamps.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street.

HENRY FARMER'S HYDE PARK GRAND MARCH. REVIEW MARCH. Illustrated in Colors by Brandard. Price 3s.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street, E.C.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW PIANOFORTE TUTOR.—"The most useful and best instruction-book we have seen." Price 3s.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S RIFLE GALOP, splendidly illustrated by BRANDARD. Solos, 4s.; Duets, 5s.; Septett, 5s. 6d.; Full Orchestra, 7s. 6d.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, Warehouse, 5, Milk-street, E.C.

VIOLETTE, I DREAM OF THEE! Ballad, Words by Mrs. GEORGE LINLEY. Music by HENRY FARMER. Price 3s. Can be had either in the key of A or C.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street.

C. H. R. MARRIOTT'S NEW VALSE, "JESSICA. Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Price 3s. Solos, 4s.; Duets, 5s.; Septett, 5s. 6d.; Full Orchestra, 7s. 6d.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street.

BIRD FLY FROM HENCE (C'Voglein Fly). Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Price 3s.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street, E.C.

WILLIAMS'S 100 DANCES FOR THE VIOLIN. Williams's 100 Popular Songs for the Violin. Arranged by HENRY SHUMMELLS. Price 1s. 6d. each.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street.

MERRILY OVER THE SNOW (Key of C). By A. H. ADAMS. Also, in Key of E, for Contralto Voice. Sent free for 18 stamps.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street.

THE QUEEN OF THE SEA. The popular Ballad. By A. SCHLOESSER. Price 3s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S LIST OF NEW and POPULAR MUSIC.
W. Vincent Wallace—Duets of Derivation. From Beethoven's Works (Concert Duets) ... 4 0
Brinley Richards—The Plough Boy. For Piano ... 3 0
Brinley Richards—Nelly Gray. Illustrated Song. Poetry by GEORGE LINLEY ... 3 0
Brinley Richards—Thou must Sing To-night. Song. Poetry by HENRY FARNIE ... 3 0
E. M. Lott—Idyll. For Piano ... 3 0
E. Pauer—Souvenir de Haydn. Duet, not easy ... 5 0
Charles Coote—Mariana Valse. Illustrated ... And other melodies of the Christy Minstrels ... 3 0
T. Henry Phillips—Oh! Sing to me Home Here. Varied for Piano ... 3 0
T. Haskins—Weep not, lovd Mount. Song. Poetry by W. Hills ... 3 0
T. Haskins—Sing, Sing, Sing. Song. Poetry by W. Hills ... 3 0
Charles Gounod—Ave Maria. Arranged for Piano ... 3 0
G. F. West—Duets for Beginners. From Vol. 1 "Travelers." For Piano ... 3 0
H. Rodwell—What's Trumpet? Comic Song ... 3 0
T. Haskins—Oh! Sing to me Home Here. Song. Poetry by W. Hills ... 3 0
R. Mullen—Gondola Song. Poetry by R. Lincoln Cocks ... 2 0
G. F. West—Duets for Beginners. From Vol. 2 "Travelers." ... 3 0
S. Stigwan—La Perle de l'Allemeire. Polka de Concert. For Piano ... 3 0
Charles Glover—I cry my Eyes out. Illustrated Comic Song. Poetry by Horace Bleet-Bull ... 3 0
T. T. Waghorn—Sing, Sing, Sing to Pinnero. Song ... 3 0
Brinley Richards—Why do Summer Roses Fade? For Piano ... 3 0
G. F. West—Duets for Beginners. From Vol. 3 "Travelers." ... 3 0
Robert Cocks and Co.'s Quadrille Band Journal, No. 1 ... 3 0
For Piano ... 3 0
Le Lutrec—Le Retour de Normandie. Morceau de Salon ... 4 0
A. Ledue—Le Jeunesse. Quadrille celebre, illustrated ... 3 0
G. F. West—Duets for Beginners. From Vol. 4 "Travelers." ... 3 0
G. F. West—Duets for Beginners. From Vol. 5 "Travelers." For Piano ... 3 0
Airs complete, 2s. 6d. ... Sacred Song, 2s. 6d. ... Duets, 3s. 6d.
Thompson—Illustrated Duets (no title). Sacred Song. Words by Thompson. Illustrated title ... 3 0
T. Haskins—Oh! Sing to me Home. Song. Words by J. R. Cocks ... 3 0
Charles Johnson—The Sparkling Polka ... 3 0
G. F. West—Duets for Beginners. From Vol. 6 "Travelers." ... 3 0
G. F. West—Duets on No. 1 "Lucia." For Piano ... 3 0
G. F. West—Duets on No. 2 "Lucia." For Piano ... 3 0
Barbara's Minuet de la Cour. Arranged for the Pianoforte by Sola and Rosetti. 17th Edition ... 3 0
Rimbault, Dr., R. T.—The Pianoforte: its Origin, Progress, and Construction, with early Specimens of Music, Royal 8vo ... 16 0
Robert Cocks and Co., New Burlington-street, Regent-street, W.

NOTICE.—FRANK MORI'S New Ballad, A WATCHWORD, now ready, price 3s. Also, the popular Song (recently sung by Mr. Sims Reeves), WHERE ARE YOU GOING, MY PRETTY MAID, price 3s. Sent free for 18 stamps.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

DOWN BY THE SEA. New Song by J. W. CHERRY. Price 3s. 6d. The most popular song of the season. Sung by Miss Dolby with great success.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

KUHE'S New Piece, POUR LES ATTRAITS, in No. 4 of Kuhe's Journal for the Pianoforte. Price 2s. 6d.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

SNOW-WHITE BLOSSOMS. New Ballad. Composed by GEORGE BARKER. Sung at the London and Provincial Concerts with great success. Price 3s.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

COOTE'S QUEEN OF THE HARVEST VALSE. Third Edition of this popular composition now ready. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
HODGSON and CRAW, 65, New Bond-street.

CHRISTY MINSTRELS' NEW SONG and BALLAD, with Piano accompaniment, by the most eminent tenor. As Solo or Quartet, price 3s. post-free.
MATTHEW and SON, 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

CHRISTY MINSTRELS' NEW SONG, "SHE IS COMING WITH THE SPRING. Sung by them on their provincial tour. As Solo or Quartet, price 3s. post-free.
MATTHEW and SON, 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE DEAR DELIGHT OF DANCING. By the Author of "Sing by all the pleasant streams." Sung by her nightly to crowded audiences at the Polytechnic. Price 3s. post-free.
MATTHEW and SON, 37, 38, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

GARIBALDI POLKA. By T. BROWNE. Performed at the Floral Hall Concerts with great success. Illustrated in Colours. Solos, 4s.; Duets, 5s.; Septett, 5s. 6d.; Full Orchestra, 7s. 6d.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 5, Milk-street, E.C.

NEW SONG.—OLD FRIENDS AND OTHER DAYS. Composed by W. VINCENT WALLACE. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves at the Floral Hall Concerts, published Complete at the Musical Repository of Messrs. Keith, Prowse, and Co., 48, Cheapside. Miss Fanny Huddart, and will be found a perfect gem by all contralto voices.—Keith, Prowse, and Co., 48, Cheapside.

NEW SONG.—THE DREAM OF OTHER DAYS. Composed by Henri Colonel BRUNE, Grenadier Guards. Price 3s. Colonel Brune has published several songs, but "The Dream of Other Days" will eclipse them all. Mille. Parepa will sing it at the Crystal Palace Concerts.
KEITH, PROWSE, and Co., 48, Cheapside.

NEW SONGS.—Words by J. E. CARPENTER; the music by STEPHEN GLOVER. Price 3s. each.—In the strawberry season. Sung by Miss Poole at the Surrey Gardens, and encored the SONGS OF THE SEASONS. No. 1, THE STRAWBERRY GIRL. No. 2, THE HAYMAKERS. No. 3, THE SKATERS. No. 4, THE SAILOR, are just published. These charming songs will be lasting favourites in every family.—KEITH, PROWSE, and Co., 48, Cheapside.

MUSIC HALF PRICE and Postage-free.—All full-priced Music forwarded to any part of the kingdom in exchange of postage-stamps to half the published price. Catalogues gratis. The Profession and Trade supplied on all half prices.
DITTMARS & Co., 76, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE, 14s. per Month, 42 octaves. No hire thought of purchased in six months. The Pianoforte Warehouse, 104, New Bond-street, corner of Brook-street. Pianofortes for hire in every part of the kingdom.—Apply to DITTMARS and Co., 76, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, W.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price Fifty Guineas. This Instrument has lately been in ordinary College practice. Three Octaves and the fullest chord of C, with the Pedal for the Bass Notes only. It is of the same compass as Mozart's two greatest instruments of tone, and by exact perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description, and the case is neatly, but not richly, inlaid. The power equal to that of a Broadwood Cottage. The case is of the most elegant description, in the Italian style, with fret-work front, and the whole of the materials presenting the appearance of durability. In sending out an Instrument, Chappell and Co. especially invite the attention of the public, the Profession, and the Nobility, to the Foreign Model, having received the highest commendations from the Nobility and Gentry to whom it has been sent in the country. Chappell and Co. have also in their Warehouse, 50, New Bond-street, London, a large assortment of Pianofortes, by the most eminent makers, for SALE or HIRE, on the most reasonable terms.

HARMONIUMS at CHAPPELL'S.—The HARMONIUM at CHAPPELL'S is the only Instrument of the kind that remains in tune; from the simplicity of its construction it is not liable to get out of order, and it admits of alike adaptation for the Church, Chapel, Concert-room, or Drawing-room.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE PATENT DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 60 guineas. Illustrated Lists of CHAPPELL'S Harmoniums and Harmonichords upon application to CHAPPELL and Co., New Bond-street; or 15, George-street, Hanover-square.

TO PURCHASERS of PIANOFORTES.—CHAPPELL and CO. have a large stock of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ALLISON, &c., at very reduced prices. Also, new Instruments of every description, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, nearly (if not quite) as good as new, at nearly one-third their original cost.—50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE, Carriage-free, with the option of purchase. An extensive assortment of every description at moderate prices.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

PEACHEY, Maker, 73, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C.

WHEATSTONE'S HARMONIUMS manufactured by them exclusively for sale, are remarkable for strength and purity of tone, and for the full compass of five octaves, from CC to F in alt. Their varieties of touch are also unrivalled. Prices and Descriptions from CC, double pedals ... £6 6s.
With one stop, 14 set of vibrators ... 10
With one stop, 18 set of vibrators ... 14
With two stops, two sets of vibrators ... 18
With three stops, two sets of vibrators, and two sets of reeds ... 22
With ten stops, three sets of vibrators, and two sets of reeds ... 30
Two Manuals, with Pedals, and Sixteen Stops ... 50
Illustrated Lists may be had on application to CHARLES and Co., Harmonium and Pianoforte Manufacturers, and all the latest improvements.
CHARLES and Co., 20, Conduit-street, Regent-street, W.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 1, King William-street, London. Established 1834 Paid-up Capital, Three Hundred Thousand Pounds.
Assurances of every description undertaken on the most liberal and favourable conditions.
Money advanced on Mortgage and Reversionary Interests, and on all other securities in connection with Life Assurance.
Responsible Agents wanted. Apply to the Secretary.
M. E. DIVET.

THE AGRICULTURAL ENGINEERS' COMPANY (Limited), 3, Victoria-street, Upper Thames-street, London. Established for the SALE of AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS, Steam, Horse, and Hand Power Machinery, Hydraulic Engines, Mining Machinery, Brick and Tile Machines, Sawing Machines, Corn-dressing Machines, Corn and Machine Mills, and all miscellaneous varieties of Machinery.

FRODSHAM and BAKER, 31, Gracechurch-street, City, established 1806, Chronometer-makers to the Admiralty, Horological Instrument-makers to the Honourable East India Company, Dealers and Lecture Watches, of the most improved construction, at moderate prices. Every watch skilfully timed and warranted.

BEDSTEADS of every description, both Wood, Iron, and Brass, fitted with Furniture and Bedding complete. J. MAPLE and Co., 145, Tottenham-court-road. An illustrated Catalogue gratis.

J. MAPLE'S NEW CARPET ROOMS. MAGNIFICENT CARPETS, 1s. 9d. to 5s. per yard. Inexpensive, 1s., Tottenham-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S Superior HOUSEHOLD FABRICS.
FABRICS REQUIRING LINEN should inspect this Stock, yet unequalled for style and economy. Every article of make will then be supplied, looking more glossy than before washing. Sample Parcels forwarded to any part of the country. J. MAPLE and Co., 145, Tottenham-court-road. Every article with Linen Stocks, and first to any railway station in England, on the receipt of an order for £5.
J. MAPLE and CO., 145, Tottenham-court-road, and 1, 2, 3, 4, Tottenham-place.

F. and C. OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, W., Crystal Glass Chandeliers, for Gas and Candles.
Wall Lights and Ornamental Glass Lustres, Glass Globes, Table Glass and Glass Dessert Services complete.
Ornamental Glass Shades, Vases, and Fittings, suitable for Presents. Moss, Regent, and Furnishing Orders promptly executed.
Illustrated Price Lists forwarded free. Established 1807.

GARDNER'S LAMPS are the BEST.—The largest, most elaborate and cheapest assortment in London. Moderator Lamps, 4s. 6d.; Palmer's Candles, 7d.; Sperm Candles, 8d.; Best Mould Candles, 8d.; Patent Night-lights, 1d.; Portable Gas Lamps (for Improvement in Rail Majesty), established 168 years, 453, Strand, Charing-cross, W.C.

HORNIMAN'S PURE TEA "is always good and cheap." Purchasers are supplied with preferred wine grocers the Chinese passing of the low-priced brown autumn leaves as the best. Prices 2s. 8d., 3s., 3s. 4d., 3s. 8d., 4s. per lb. Pamphlets, Purnell, 86, Strand.
Moderator Lamps, 4s. 6d. Magnet-street.
Patent Night-lights, 1d. Hull-street, Blackman-street.
Purse, High-street, Islington. Cooper, Tottenham-court-road.
Horniman's Agents are very keen in the Tea Trade.

ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY, for making quickly and at small cost superior Barley Water; also recommended as an excellent diet for infants, invalids, and persons of weak digestion.—ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and Co., 64, Red Lion-street, Holborn, London. Established 1764.

ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS.—OATMEAL PORRIDGE.—Recommended by the Faculty as the most valuable food for infants, invalids, and persons of weak digestion.—ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and Co., 64, Red Lion-street, Holborn.

BROWN AND POLSON'S PATENT CORN FLOUR. The "Lancet" states,
"This is superior to any thing of the kind known."
First of the kind manufactured and Prized by the United Kingdom and Royal Family. Sold in 1 lb. and 2 lb. packets by Grocers, Chemists, and Oilmen.
Manufactory, BROWN and POLSON, to her Majesty the Queen, by order from Buckingham Palace.

BED CANDLES, to Burn Half an Hour only. Sold by Wax, Tallow Chandlers, and Grocers. Wholesale of the makers in the Kingdom, and the Inventors, WHITMORE and CHANDLER, 31, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, E.C.

EXTRAORDINARY MERIT must belong to that which
IS USED BY EVERY ONE,
And such is the case with
OLDRIDGE'S BALM.
Sold by Chemists and Perfumers.

WOTHERSPOON'S VICTORIA LOZENGES, imparting to the breath the fragrance of violets. Sold in tins at 1s. 6d. and upwards, by Grocers, &c. Wotherspoon and Co., Glasgow and London.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT. Established in 1778.
LADIES' WEDDING OUTFITS sent to all parts of the country.
Descriptive Lists, with Prices, sent free on application.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, Grosvenor-street, London, W.

Sent post-free, Descriptive Lists of COMPLETE SETS OF BABY LINEN, Hosiery, Baby Linen, Caps, Robes, Dresses, and Materials.
UNDERCLOTHING FOR HOME, INDIA, AND THE COLONIES, for Ladies and Children of all ages.

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN BY APPOINTMENT. Established in 1778.
BABIES' LAYETTE OUTFITS, Trimmed and Furnished ready for use, complete in every detail, and warranted free of carriage.
BABIES' BASSINETTES, Trimmed and Furnished, and Carriage Paid.
CAPPER, SON, and CO., 69, Grosvenor-street, London, W.C.
Descriptive Lists, with Prices, sent free by post.

CHRISTENING ROBES, 2l Guineas, Ladies' Cloaks, 2 Guineas.
Baby Linen, Caps, Hosiery.
Mrs. W. C. TAYLOR.

BABIES' BERCEAUNETTES, 2l Guineas.
Basket Carriages, 2 Guineas.
Mrs. W. C. TAYLOR, 33, Baker-street.

MARRIAGE OUTFITS
Cotton Hosiery, 3s. 6d.
White Dressing Gowns, 1 Guinea.
Baby Linen, Caps, Hosiery.
Mrs. W. C. TAYLOR, 33, Baker-street.

LADIES' RIDING TROUSERS, Chamois Leather, with Side-Seat.
33, Baker-street.
Mrs. W. C. TAYLOR.

LINSEY RIDING HABITS for LITTLE GIRLS, 21 Guineas.
Little Girls' Habit, with Trousers, 3l 3s.
W. C. TAYLOR, 33, Baker-street.

LADIES' LINEN, one-third less than the usual charges. Every Requisite for Infants, best materials, lowest prices, at 37 CORNHILL, corner of Finch-lane, established, exhibiting the Cocoa, Oxford-street. Infants' Cloaks, Seaforth, 21s.

MOIRES ANTIQUES.
NEWTON and SON,
Resolt MOIRE ANTIQUES in London
Patterns and Prices Current free by post.
CORNHILL and REGENT PALL-street, London.

HOUSEHOLD LINEN DEPARTMENT.—JOHN SELWAY, KING and CO., 8, Leicester-square, respectfully invite attention to their Stock of Linen Goods, which, from inspection or comparison, at their well-known DAMASK TABLE CLOTHS, with Napkins to match, Sheeting, Shirting, and Long Cloths, by the yard, 6-4, 7-4, 8-4, and 10-4 wide; sheetings in width from 2 yards to 3 yards 6 inches; Long Cloths, 24 inches to 36 inches wide; Linen Cambrics, Lawns, Muslins, Quilts, Counterpanes, Towels, Dusters, &c., made up and marked upon the shortest notice. Carriage paid upon amounts above £5. Families waited upon at home in London.

SILKS, Rich, Plain, Striped, and Checked Good, at the lowest prices ever known, with the attention of families. Patterns sent free by post. Also patterns and prices of their unrivalled BLACK SILKS, at 1s. 6d., 2s., 2s. 6d., 3s., 3s. 6d., 4s. per yard, Lyonnaise.—Jay's, 247, Regent-street, London.

PARISIAN MANTLES.
MESSRS. JAY have the honour to announce that they have received from their Agents in Paris the earliest information of their establishment, the Original Model of the Mantle, which is universally admired, and will be sold at less than cost price.
The London General Mourning Warehouse,
247, 249, 251, Regent-street.
JAY'S.

JAY'S MANUAL OF FASHION will be published in the course of a few days, and forwarded gratis on application.
The London General Mourning Warehouse,
247, 249, 251, Regent-street.
JAY'S.

MILLINERY FOR MOURNING WEAR.
MESSRS. JAY have the honour to announce that they have received from their Agents in Paris with the Newest Modes for Mourning Wear.
The London General Mourning Warehouse,
247, 249, 251, Regent-street.
JAY'S.

EIDER-DOWN PETTICOATS are warmer, lighter, and more elegant than any other. To be had only of
J. and H. NICOLL'S Establishments for Ready-made Clothing, 114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, W.; 22, 23, 24, Cornhill, E.C.; and 50, Cross-street, Manchester.

WINTER HOSIERY of every quality of Wool, Cotton, and Silk, and every description, suitable for Home Wear, Yachting, Shooting, Hunting, and Travelling, at the lowest prices consistent with perfect workmanship and reliable quality. Read's Hosiery Establishment, 147, Regent-street, ROBERTSHAW, 190, Oxford-street. Established 1777.

PRINTED FLANNEL DRESSING-GOWNS, Quilted Petticoats, Flannel Shirts, Hosiery, &c. Sole Luxury Eiderette and Quilted Petticoats.—ROBERTSHAW, 190, Oxford-street. Read's Establishment, 147, Regent-street.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS and RIDING JACKETS, Gentlemen's Overcoats and Inverness Capes. Patterns free by post.—ROBERTSHAW, J. R. and W. PHILLIPS, 97, High-street, Shrewsbury.

H. J. and D. NICOLL'S Establishments for Ready-made Clothing, 114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, London; and 50, Cross-street, Manchester.

THE CAPE PALETOT, INVERNESS CAPE, and WATERPROOF, as used in private life, as well as for Yachting, Shooting, &c.
H. J. and D. NICOLL, 114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, W.; 22, 23, 24, Cornhill, E.C.; and 50, Cross-street, Manchester.

CLOTHING for YOUTH.—The ENTICKERCOCKER, the Highland Dress, Ladies' Travelling Mantles, Riding Habits, and Furniture in Leather, with much novelty and general excellence, H. J. and D. NICOLL have just published a Book of Engravings, with Prices attached, which will be forwarded free to any part of the kingdom that the Book will be reserved to the rear of the old establishment.

VISITORS to the SEASIDE and TOURISTS will find the new and elegant Waterproof-coloured Linen Coats, fastened by one or more buttons, with Trousers and Vest, all of one material, to be the most complete Dress. Price of Coat, 21s.; Trousers, 12s. 6d.; Vest, 7s. 6d. Observe the Address—H. J. and D. NICOLL, 114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, W.; 22, 23, 24, Cornhill, E.C. Every Article of Dress Morning Coat, a fine Cloth, 21s. Every Article of Dress and Mackintosh Cloaks, Capes, and Coats, and not somewhat to a fitting-coat, and is getting into general use.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Naval and Military Outfits, Gentlemen's Wardrobes, Theatrical Dresses, Ladies' Habits, Furniture, &c. Ladies or Gentlemen waited on by addressing to Mr. or Mrs. STRAUS, 41, Monmouth-street, Seven Dials, where parties may be assured value in cash immediately remitted. Established 1811.

WANTED LEFT-OFF CLOTHES for AUSTRALIA.—Mr. and Mrs. JOHN ISAACS, 319 and 320, Strand (opposite Somerset House), W.C., continue giving the highest prices in cash for Ladies', Gentlemen's, and Children's Clothes, Regimentals, Uniforms, Naval Outfits, Theatrical Dresses, Furniture, &c. Ladies waited on. Parcels from the country, the utmost value returned per return. Established 1817.

INFANTS' NEW FEEDING BOTTLES.—From the "Lancet"—"We have seldom seen anything so perfect as Mr. Silver's Infants' Feeding Bottle."—Sold by Silver, 162, Oxford-street. They are quite unbreakable. 7s. 6d. each.

THE REVOLUTION IN NAPLES.—BEFORE CAPUA, SEPT. 19: SEVERE FIRE ON THE NATIONAL TROOPS FROM THE GUNS OF THE FORTRESS.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN SOUTH ITALY.

THE BATTLE NEAR CAPUA.

CAPUA is situated on the left bank of the Volturno, which partly surrounds it. The place is entered from the Naples side by a drawbridge, over a deep ditch, and is quitted on the Gaeta side by a bridge over the river. Garibaldi was desirous of cutting off the communications between Capua and Gaeta, and to effect this he was forced to pass the Volturno at some point in order to occupy the heights which command the right bank of the river and the high roads of Torre del Lebera. The Volturno was, however, watched, and defended by considerable forces, and it was, therefore, necessary to draw off the attention of the enemy. To do this, General Türr sent a strong column against Capua, as if to make an assault on the town, and that column was immediately attacked by 10,000 Royalists. During that time other corps of Garibaldians quietly crossed the river, and established themselves on the heights of Cajazzo. This, in a few words, is a history of the affair of the 19th before Capua, of which our Special Artist in Naples has forwarded to us two sketches—the accompanying one and another on the first page of this week's Number.

Some details of the attack by Garibaldi's forces on the Neapolitan positions on the Volturno are thus given by the correspondent of the Times:—"Garibaldi's battalions have, during the past week, been passing in succession through Naples on to Caserta, and towards the village of Santa Maria, which occupies the site of ancient Capua, and is about two miles from the present city of that name. Let me attempt to give you an idea of 'how the land lies.' The road from Caserta to Capua passes through Santa Maria and approaches Capua from the south-east. It is also the line of the railway. The extreme outpost of the attacking force is placed at the picturesque old archway which formed the entrance to the ancient city. A spirited sketch of the arch, barricade, and groups of 'Red-shirts' has been sent home to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS by their Special Artist, F. Vizetelly. The Royal outposts are not more than 500 yards down the road, and a hen half a mile from the walls of their forts. So much for the road. The left is kept up by detached posts on the west as far as the sea, on the east up to the spur of a steep range of hills. This was the situation at daybreak, and the day's work was, as far as I can gather, cut as follows:—A sharp attack was to be made from the main road, which was to be aided by another along the direct road from Naples, which approaches Capua from due south. This auxiliary attack was confided to General Spangaro. General Rustoff commanded the troops at Santa Maria. The whole movement was merely a feint to engage the attention of the guns and garrison generally, while Garibaldi and Türr crossed the Volturno, and got round to the north-easterly side of Capua, to reconnoitre and obtain possession of Cajazzo, where the high ground entirely commands the city. The Volturno runs nearly due west, and right up to the walls of Capua. To General Eber was confided the task of keeping open the line of communication between Turo's division and the main body. It must have to themselves the events that happened on the extreme right, saying no more than that Garibaldi succeeded completely in that he desired to effect, and I must return to the outposts at Santa Maria, where I was an eyewitness of what took place. Considerable anxiety, I heard, prevailed among those who had power for officers to know how the new troops would behave, now for the first time most of them, confronted on the open plain with disciplined troops and heavy artillery. The result has certainly proved some weak points, though of the greatest gallantry of the men; but there every reason to be proud. The advance of skirmishers was made about half-past six o'clock, and the Royalist outposts, whose loose horses within the walls, after losing five or six, were driven in, whose loose horses came galloping into our lines. The Garibaldians moved forward not in any compact order, but extended in skirmishing order, immediately brought up two guns, 12-pounders, which opened their fire, which now began to radiate across the bare walls to exercise their rifles upon, nor could they catch even a glimpse of the blue coats of those who were pouring on them a most deadly fire. Intelligent officers reasoning it themselves all the time on the inutility of such a waste of life, and making a rapid estimate of the number of men killed and lost in the transaction. And yet, with a few paraded—fit and fine in the wrong sense—for a short time, and with banks on either side from an unseen force—so enemy in sight to shot dropping upon them from an unseen force—so enemy in sight to keep up their ardour; while all behind kept up a constant fire to assist the gallant few, and the officers, and the bravest of the men, were carried to the rear. When they emerged at the foot of the hill, where they found nothing but the stone

LANDING OF A PORTION OF THE NATIONAL ARMY AT THE MARINA DI PALMI, CALABRIA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN SOUTH ITALY.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

LITERATURE AND ART.

Who has not known some genius—author, artist, journalist, painter poet, philosopher—to whom the public obstinately refuse to listen? One may be as learned as Bayle, as witty as Swift, as passionate as Chatterton, sometimes, and the manyheaded monster won't have anything to say to you. If such an unlucky genius comes to town with a thing to say to you, at least as long if not so sublime as "Paradise Lost," a sneering publisher tells him that poetry is a drug in the market, suggests the trunkmaker's or the butterboy as his fittest markets, or brutally asks him—as the lilliputle asked Johnson—why he does not utilise his talents whether by carrying a sprat's hook. He may procure thousand theories, but people won't listen to them. He may make discoveries, but the world declines to be enlightened. He may befriend mankind, but mankind declines to be befriended. He may be injured, but it is to empty benches. He may preach, but it is to a sleeping congregation and an organ loft full of charity children, who don't know what he is talking about. He may have his upon a care for cancer, but society won't think him capable of higher medical faculties than drawing a tooth or a penny-worth of peppermint. He may stand and when he has finished a picture which he himself intends to rival Landseer's "Insubjugable" or Millais's "Black Brunswicker," a humble individual refuses to receive the canvas or thrust it upon a hanging committee refuse to receive the canvas or thrust it upon a hanging committee refuse to receive the canvas or thrust it upon a hanging committee refuse

THE PRINCE OF WALES LAYING THE LAST STONE OF THE VICTORIA BRIDGE OVER THE ST. LAWRENCE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CANADA, G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE PAGE 334.

THE PRINCE OF WALES CLOSING THE LAST RIVET OF THE VICTORIA TUBULAR BRIDGE OVER THE ST. LAWRENCE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CANADA, G. H. ANGLEBERT.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE PRINCE OF WALES COMPLETING THE VICTORIA BRIDGE.

On the two preceding pages we illustrate, from Sketches by our Special Artist in Canada, the ceremony of the Prince of Wales laying the last stone and cleaning the last rivet of the Victoria Bridge over the St. Lawrence.

His Royal Highness, who landed at Montreal on Saturday, August 25, proceeded first to open the Industrial Exhibition. The Prince then rode over to the brink of the Grand Trunk Railroad, where a great crowd had assembled to witness the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the Victoria Bridge. The approach to the bridge was lined with seats, for which persons were admitted only by ticket. Inside the abutment were seats for the higher classes, covered with red cloth, while the gallery above was reserved for the fashionable populace. A scaffold was erected for the Prince near the corner-stone which was slightly raised, together with an apparatus of the British Museum kind. Trains with invited guests came first. The Prince and suite having ascended the platform, the ballad of the bridge by Mr. Gilmore having succeeded the platform, the ballad of the bridge by Mr. Gilmore having been sung, the engraving of which appeared in this Journal for August 25). The mortar having been placed under the stone by the masons, the Prince of Wales with mortar on the trowel, it lowered it under the stone. The stone was then lowered, and the Prince tapped it three times with a wooden mallet. The ceremony being completed, cheers and salutes thundered out upon the air.

The Prince, having laid the last stone of the gigantic pier, entered the car and proceeded through the bridge to perform the second part of this twofold ceremony—of which the following description, itself a picture, is supplied by the Times correspondent:—"The whistle had ere bellowed and rumbled like thunder as the train progressed, and the opening in which it had entered grew wider and wider, until it only shone faintly in the distance like a pale blue star. As last a dim twilight appeared ahead and the engine gradually emerged. It was in the centre of the bridge where the Prince was to drive the last rivet, so there was a general scramble out, and all the party stood lettering with a feeling almost of awe as the hoarse unfettered voice of the engine moving away went echoing up and down the dark tube, which seemed to quiver and vibrate as the noise went rolling and backwards and forwards, striving for escape from its hollow iron prison. His Royal Highness went outside to one of the openings in the masonry of the centre tower and looked down on the St. Lawrence rushing past at one grand stream far below, sweeping under the bridge in eddies and whirlpools, or tearing with the spirit of angry foam at the projecting and sharp edges of the granite masonry. None could look down on this great river which has locked down on the site of the tube which tapered away at each end in the distance till it seemed a mere reed of metal, without feeling astounded not only how such a design was ever carried out, but how it could ever have been conceived in practicable. The formality of completing the bridge was now gone through. Four rivets had been left unfinished, and these were closed with them by two workmen. The last, a silver rivet, was clinched by the Prince himself. The ceremony was concluded by the Prince rushing pale of

OUT-DOOR AMUSEMENTS.

OCTOBER.

The summer sports are ended, the yachtsman has laid up his vessel for the winter, and the carman and sculler have a seven months' rest from their labours: the cricketer's "occupation's gone," although he may still "shoulder his bat and show how scores were won" the fisherman can no longer kill his eighteen pound salmon on the banks of the Spey, the Tay, or the Leven, amidst the wild romantic scenery of Scotland; and the Thames angler has ceased to row up and down, or sitting for hours in a punt under a scorching sun or a pitiless storm, filling his basket with roach, dace, barbel, and gudgeon, in the vain attempt of capturing a legendary chub, that only existed in the minds of the Doldrum boatmen; the archer has unstrung his bow: the fox-hunter have had only three days' cub-hunting together in their green, pluched hats, and gauntlets, signing to higher prize than those gained by their sterling prowess at the "meet" or the "cover side;" and finds his pursuits coming to a close by fat races giving way to steeplechases. It is true that he has the second October meeting at Newmarket for the Cesarewitch, after an idle fortnight, and Warwick, Lewes, and the Houghton, usually called the hay and corn Meeting, to look forward to. If, however, the season is not marked by shooting, stalking, flybfishing, angling, archery, and the principal racing, it over, there are even more active and exhilarating pursuits in store for the lover of the manly pursuits of "merrie England," for pheasant-shooting commences on the 1st. Partridges, too—albeit a little wild, are plentiful; and the woodcock may be met occasionally. While upon the subject of this migratory bird, we will quote a piece of advice given by the late Mr. Wilson, of Tickhill, Yorkshire, to his son:—"If you have a friend to dinner, and a woodcock is served, plead weakness of order, and ask your companion to help you to a bit of toast; if you must give him the choicest part, whereas if he helps it, he must give it to you." The new system introduced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer respecting game certificates has given a wide and liberal trial as to one of its most important features—viz., the source of revenue to be derived; but it is questionable to a great extent to the public, for many a man whose avocations prevented him enjoying more than a week or two of a pottering cop-a-per kind of shooting, will not feel disposed to pay four pounds for so brief a period; while under the new arrangement, forty shillings up to the first of October, or the same amount from the first of November to the end of the season, will not be felt. If the Government tax formed the only expense, people would not grumble; but with a good gamekeeper, and a boy to carry the whelp aswell the sum amazingly—powder, shot, cartridges, copper caps, and last, not less, fees to keepers and landlords, where your own servant does not act in that capacity. We own that, as the public grounds, we are opposed to the system of giving gratuities to servants; and if we even extended the practice We should protest against the system as most inequitable manner in which they are administered. Take, for instance, a man-servant who attends the shooting parties of several friends and hunts mas. If a friend gives you a mount the "master of the horse" of the latter expects a sovereign for one with the foxhounds, and half for one with the harriers, yet you, perhaps, only ride by sufferance, in the order and after the stirrups a hole or two while the helper, who has all the hard work to do, receives a fee. A further grievance is the person with the head keeper who employs as underling to clean gun-barrels, and who, perhaps, is very shabby rigged out, and has a "good opinion" to prove the contrary: the park-keeper, too, if ordered to forward half a dozen, only helps himself to a portion of it as his usual perquisite, but anticipates the whole as a matter of course and due. Nor are in-door servants less extravagant in their expectations; nor are the gratuities better disposed of in many instances. The lady whose wage amounts to more than the stipend of a hard-working curate or fellow of a college, will give a sovereign at Christmas to the pestilential climate of the West Indies, Africa, or China, is generally in active attendance on the departure of a guest, inwardly exclaiming with the Queen in the farce, "There's the lady and the cat, and now for that holds the fee:" the groom of the chambers, following the example of the lady, is ready on the alert for the visitor's departure; the valet, who, if you have a servant with you, only shows you to your room, or to clean and brush you, leaves the cleaning and blacking of your clothes and boots to the odd man, reckons on a sovereign for his exercising to the length of your stay: the housemaids are somehow or other always employed over the door of the room you are in, and expirate de volaille was dressed. Now, the whole of this system is indiscriminately bestowed was given to the working bees and not to the drones of society, who have the real wealth, sharing, and right to succeed. According to the present system the helpers, "odd men," fisherman, shooting, steward's room boy, the "boots," and the pretty girls from the village, brought in to assist the housemaids, receive little or nothing, while true value are heaped upon those who, emulating the character of my Lord Duke in "Punch," do nothing for you, to adopt his words, "as lazy and luxurious as their masters." If fees are to be sanctioned, and they undoubtedly are, let them be given their extra labour, the only equitable plan would be to have the money placed in a strong box, to be opened and divided in proportions at Christmas. To resume, October is an interesting month to the lover of the "noble science," who has probably during the previous six weeks witnessed the havoc that has been made among the birds by a decided admirer of the sport, he will have been in the woodlands by break of dawn, he will have watched with the keeper the movements and working of the young hounds, the steadiness of the old ones, and will have taken the greatest pride in seeing the young couple taught to the kennel-door, knowing full well how desirous every gentleman is to carry home a fellow-labourer in the number of these arduously-sought-for trophies. With what delight will he look forward to the first of November, when the moors are aberdeened, and the driving commences over the grouse with unerring aim! with what anxiety does he look at the glass and the weathercock, to see whether the wind has a propitious quarter, and the sun in the right quarter. Let us pass over the ride to cover, and suppose the party arrived at the "first." Now let the huntsman throw in his hounds as quietly as he can, and let the whipper-in keep his dogs well in hand, so that not a single hound may escape them; let them be attentive to the whistle, and be ready at a moment's notice to stop or direct. Now has the master a difficult task in keeping his brother sportsmen in order. The sauveur in aside must first be tried; should that prove ineffectual, the fortiter in re must be resorted to, without nothing that is true to take the hounds home will prevent reckless riders ballooing and destroying the sport. Now the well-broke and trained pack spread the cover! how steadily they draw!—not the babbling of a single hound is heard, yet none are idle, every nose and tongue! and, as they get near the fox, how the chorus will flash! but how hushed a crash they make! What joy in every countenance! Now are cigars thrown away, and the pipe is replaced by the well-known sound, "Gone away!" "Hold hard, gentlemen Give 'em time!" shouts the huntsman, as he sees that they dash over the grass land! Mark how they top the hedge! Watch them at the ridge and furrow! Now for the road they carry! How heavily do they set down to their work! It is scarce to be found among them! Now they go! heads up and sterns down, twelve miles as the crow flies, without a check. The field are beginning to disperse, and only a chosen few of first-flight men keep with the hounds. The pace is tremendous, and the wily animal is evidently in distress. What a crush! The pack are at his heels, seeking for his life! How bravely he tries they press! and "who hoop" echoed over the plain from every Reynard's fallen! Within to his pursuers. Nor is the pleasure alone confined to the field, for the real sportsman has much gratification in devoting the non-hunting days to an inspection of the stables and kennels. With what satisfaction will he congratulate the groom on the appearance and condition of his horses, and what delight will he take in the well-fed, well-groomed, and well-trained hounds, the result of the care, the knowledge, and the combining what all packs should combine—strength with beauty, steadiness with high mettle, possessing shoulder, backs, open breasts, their grains, and muscular stoutness in chase! How qualitity has the celebrated Mr. Warde given his advice upon the subject:—"Let your hounds be bred with bone and nose; without the one they will fail, without the other, become slack."

BRITISH COINAGE.

THE present is the first of a series of papers which we purpose to devote to the history of British Coinage, and to the mechanical means employed in succession for the manufacturing of coin. In the treatment of this subject we shall not attempt to deal with those mystic periods when the British Isles were peopled by roving colonists who in turn took possession and were driven out by their heroic foes, but shall confine ourselves to times of which authentic historical records are obtainable. Among the early mystic tribes who inhabited this country a system of barter, no doubt, existed; and rings of gold, and other objects of other metal, may latterly have been used by them as media of exchange. The first advance towards a fixed currency was naturally indeed a train of wants and difficulties which rendered the institution of a money necessary, and the precious metals, as being a data barter or rings absolutely indispensable; and hence money by weight preceded coinage.

The privilege of impressing pieces of the precious metals of irregular form—for the purpose of easy to the size of coins—was claimed, in the first instance, as the especial prerogative of the Executive, and from age up to this day, when the art of money-making may be considered to have reached perfection, the right of coining has been considered by all nations as vested in the same hands. It is certain that, previous to the establishment of the Roman power in Britain, the Druids, the high priests of the Celtic Kings and several of the highest dignitaries of the priesthood, especially honoured by the Monarch, enjoyed the privilege of coining, and stamped their own names and effigies upon the money they emitted. It was only after the transformation of the Heptarchy into one monarchy, in the reign of Athelstan, that coining was finally restricted to be but one money current throughout the kingdom. The expression of this principle was effected by the addition of the Sovereign's name and inscription upon the discs of metal forming the circulating medium of the realm. Nevertheless, it is upon indisputable record that the privilege of minting was occasionally granted by different monarchs to several of his subjects—these subjects being great dignitaries of the Church.

In those primitive ages the business of coining was jealously guarded from the public gaze, and the mint was a secret chamber, the arcana relating to that business is described as the "mystery of the Mint." From these documents it may be safely inferred that the implements of coining were very rude, and the operations very simple in character. There is little doubt, in fact, that the method of coining was first discovered by the use of a die for the purpose of fluid bullion into earthen moulds previously impressed by some rude device with which the die was to be represented on the coin, and that (as now in some remote localities of Africa) the coin, being by far too heavy, and taking into account the then low value of gold, in proportion to the silver currency of Queen Victoria. The first advance in the art of coining was the use of a pair of dies, each as the reign of Edward I., invariably speak of it as of remote antiquity. The "noble penny" was the "Sterling, the old standard of England." It is, therefore, just to attribute to our Saxon progenitors the honour of introducing into the mints of Britain the standard both of weight and purity of metal, which has, from that time, been coming fair arrival in Britain, were unacquainted with the "mystery of minting," and that the Mint, as a department of the State, was entirely ignorant of, or inexperienced in, the art of money-making, they would in all probability have copied in appearance as well as in standard the coins of their predecessors, and thus, in fact, have made a fresh issue of the then existing currency. That this was the course pursued is strong in his conviction that this was the case. Admitting the above theory to be correct, it was this Cologne pound that in after ages became the standard of the Mint money. Every penny contained as we shall hereafter have to show, that the Tower was "for a long period the only mint in the Metropolis of Britain.

With regard to gold coinage, though there are some specimens extant of considerable origin, the coinage of the Saxon and of subsequent days appear, generally, to have used in the conduct of large negotiations their ingots of gold and silver, simply stamped, as a guarantee of their weight and genuineness.

It is a noticeable fact that the pound tower differed in weight only from that of the pound Troy to the extent of the former pound weighing into twelve ounces, twenty pennyweights, and twenty-four grains; whereas the Troy pound contained three-quarters of an ounce less than the pound troy. A statute of Henry VIII. fixes the relative proportions between the troy and tower pounds in a table resembling that subjoined:—

11	wheat corn, equal to one troy grain.
32	24	pennyweight, equal to 22½ troy grains.
480	20	ounce, equal to 450 troy grains.
5760	240	12 pound tower, equal to 5400 grs. or 11¼ oz. troy.

This standard, which in fineness was equal to eleven ounces two pennyweights of the gold and eighteen pennyweights of alloy, came to be highly respected throughout Europe, and was generally known by the name of "sterling," a term which at length was equivalent to that of money of the highest standard.

Rading has furnished some curious information respecting the origin of the word "sterling," which is either used by him, and which is new perhaps inseparable from the subject. Pinkerton, however, is of the opinion the most feasible theory in connection with the origin of the word "sterling" is that which derives it from the Easterlings, who about the year 1086 were employed by William the Conqueror to regulate the coinage. The name of "Easterlings" is deduced before the completion of "Domesday Book" it is highly probable that they were the first who coined the celebrated record. Such, however, is not the case; and, as every coin of the Saxon Heptarchy bears on that remote period is mentioned therein, we may fairly infer that the Easterlings were not the first who coined the "sterling money." Camden, however, a French language is employed in the public records of Britain and the word occurs in the Saxon Chronicle, A.D. 1180. The fact alone is of some importance, and, taken in conjunction with other circumstances, may lead to a more satisfactory solution of the interpretation. But, whatever may be the uncertainty as to the first introduction of the word, or the precise era of its introduction, there can be no doubt that terms employed as a very early period, and were understood all over Europe to designate the money of England; and that the Easterlings were employed in the finance of our Saxon and Norman Kings, and that the Easterlings were employed in the finance of our Saxon and Norman Kings, and that the Easterlings were employed in the finance of our Saxon and Norman Kings,

REINHARDSBRUNN, A COUNTRY SEAT OF THE DUKE OF SAXE-COBURG-GOTHA.

Her Majesty Queen Victoria reached Coburg on Wednesday week, where she was received by the Duke and Duchess of Coburg-Gotha, and the Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, with the Prince William, their infant son. On the following day the Royal personages took walks in the neighbourhood. Among the places of note which will probably be visited by her Majesty during her stay at the Court of Coburg-Gotha is the ducal country seat Reinhardsbrunn, near the town of Gotha, which with Coburg is alternately the residence of the Duke of Coburg-Gotha. This hunting castle, beautifully situated, about nine miles from Gotha, is built on the site of a convent of the same name, but of which no remains exist. The father of Prince Albert built the present structure in the style of the middle ages from the designs of Gustavus Eberhard. It is considered a chef-d'œuvre of its kind, and with great skill unites the conveniences of modern life with the style and spirit of the ancient structure on whose foundations it is built. It contains spacious halls, saloons and corridors, and galleries, summer and winter apartments, a church, and galleries, of which the church and "stag's-horn" galleries are most worthy of notice. The latter is so named from the adornments being composed of stags' horns. The Inselsberg mountains rise immediately behind the mansion.

LAUNCH OF THE SCREW LINE-OF-BATTLE SHIP "ANSON" AT WOOLWICH.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1860.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1054.—VOL. XXXVII.] SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1860. [TWO SHEETS, FIVEPENCE

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE UNITED STATES.

A ROYAL progress through a Republic, at the first glance, seems somewhat of an anomaly. We use the word "Royal" in reference to the passage of the Prince of Wales through the United States because, although he has temporarily descended from his high estate so far as to be designated only by the title of one of his baronies, it is not to be imagined that his presence will be dissociated from his princedom or his heir-apparency to the British throne. However great the anomaly may be—and there are peculiar circumstances in this case which render it more than an ordinary one—our cousins over the water appear determined to do their best to sweep away all difficulties in the way of giving a Royal reception to a Royal personage. It is true that they cannot approach the Prince by means of the Old-World machinery of Chamberlains, and Equerries, and Lords in Waiting, and Gold and Silver Sticks; while a Master of the Ceremonies, we believe, is only to be found to be at the balls which are held by the coloured ladies and gentlemen, who are aristocratic observers of etiquette according to their lights on that important question. There is a way of meeting kings and princes with which even we in rule-and-regulation-bound England know something, and not a little, about, and to this mode of expressing welcome and sympathy the citizens of the United States have had recourse with the utmost zeal and earnestness of purpose. It is by an honest, hearty, jolly, popular demonstration, a demonstration in which goodwill and good feeling find a vent in thousands of persons crowding, inconveniencing, and even crushing each other in their attempts to catch a sight of the person whom they delight to honour, and in the loud, long-drawn, continuous shouts which we anglicise into the simple word "cheers." There is a spontaneity in all this uproariousness which is worth a million prepared and elaborated addresses presented by the most official-looking of Mayors, or delivered by the most liquid-voiced of Recorders. By a sort of instinct the acting in masses is carried to great perfection in America. What we would call a mob—far be it from us to insinuate the existence of such a thing out of our own country—has a knack of organising itself and carrying out its objects with curious felicity. No doubt the enthusiasm of the crowds which greeted the entrance of the Prince of Wales into the territory of the United States rather proved that there may be exceptions to this rule, and it was a somewhat odd way of getting a sight of a personage as he landed from a vessel to leave him no spot of ground on which to set his foot. Nevertheless, we have little doubt that on the whole the testimonies of respect and kindly feeling which will be sure to be exhibited towards him wherever he appears in the Union will be well managed, and that his Royal Highness will appreciate the nature and the quality of a people's welcome in the strictest sense of the term. At least, we may be sure that the proceedings will not be marred and disturbed by any display of political or sectarian feeling such as interfered with the tenor of the progress in Canada, and involved an unseemly, if not an acrimonious controversy, where all should have been harmony.

There are, necessarily, very essential differences between the causes and the sources of the warm reception which has been awarded to the Prince in the States and that with which he was greeted in Canada. In the latter country he appeared with many attributes which he nominally laid aside when he passed the American border, and which, if he had retained, would have addressed themselves to no sympathies which would be current in the land of Republicanism pure and simple. In Canada he was received as the representative of the immediate Sovereign of the country, and as himself its future Monarch. He em-

THE INNER TEMPLE NEW LAW LIBRARY.—SEE PAGE 380.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The report that the Marquis de Turgot had remitted a note to the Helvetian Confederation energetically protesting against the insult offered to the Fifteen Pet de Sion is without any foundation.

Count Kisseleff, the Russian Ambassador at Paris, leaves on Sunday (to-morrow) for Warsaw.

The Pope's allocution at the last Consistory is remarked on by some of the journals in terms of severity. As the document does not even allude in the most remote manner to the present representation of a French army in Rome, or to the protection which the Emperor Napoleon affords to the Patrimony of St. Peter and the subjects of Pius IX., the Constitutionnel adverts to this evidently intentional silence with a certain bitterness of expression, but finds a cause for consolation in the resolution which the Pope appears to have taken to remain at Rome under the guard of that powerful Catholic nation whose interests may be disregarded, but not its sense of honour. The Patrie speaks of the "great vehemence" which characterises the document; and the Pays declares that the Pope has not even observed or observes the language employed. "It would be a useless task to point out one by one (says our contemporary) all the erroneous allegations which have been addressed to him, or to blame the terms—so very unbecoming—so contrary to the majesty of the Holy See—which Pope Pius IX. has employed to use. The immorality, hypocrisy, falsehood, pillage, impiety, spoliation, and brigandage, are, apparently, to judge from this document, the characteristics of Roman citizens." The clerical and Legitimist journals publish the allocution without any observations whatever.

The Nuncio of the Court of General de Pimodan, performed on Friday morning at Notre Dame by the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris, was attended by a numerous gathering of the old nobility of the Faubourg St. Germain, ladies forming the majority. The son of the deceased General, a lad of four or five years old, was present, and was much kissed at the end of the ceremony. The Bishop of Poitiers has ordered a solemn service in his cathedral "for the eternal allegiance which, at all the different periods of history, will gloriously in the Papal army," and "especially of a law student in the School of Poitiers, killed by a cannon-shot." The Bishop of Orleans has ordered a similar service in his cathedral, and afterwards "pronounced a funeral oration from the pulpit in honour of the martyrs of the Holy See."

The Government has interdicted a public subscription for a sword to be presented to General de Lamoricière, the idea of which was started by some of the Catholic journals of Paris.

The Pays and the Patrie continue to reiterate the denial of the report that Mr. Cobden will go to Vienna.

The camp at Châlons has been officially broken up. The Duke of Magenta reviewed the troops on Thursday week preparatory to their separation.

There is a talk of a new diplomatic circular from M. Thouvenel, in which he will refer to the recent events in Italy and in the Two Sicilies without withdrawing her sympathy with Piedmont, the Imperial Government will maintain a cautious neutrality in regard to the actual attack by Austria.

The National Shooting match at Vincennes attracts a considerable number of spectators, and everything proceeds with great regularity. The ground which is setapart for the contest is situated in the Plain of Vincennes, on the left of the Nogent road. The regulations are modelled on those which are followed in Switzerland and Belgium.

SARDINIA.

DOINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

On Thursday week Count Cavour declared in the Chamber of Deputies that there existed no public document or private treaty, that no conversation or correspondence had taken place of any kind, that even made any propositions or demands involving the cession of a single foot of Italian soil. Count Cavour said that he could not but think that the news concerning a treaty for the cession of Sardinia, of which the journals had spoken, was a mere invention of the Times and Pays, which was sufficient to show its falsity, and to explain its double origin.

On Friday Signor Cabella demanded the production of all documents relating to the entry of the Sardinian troops into Umbria and the Marches. Signor Cavour replied that the Government took into consideration of the diplomatic question arising from that affair but scarcely concerned.

On Saturday Signor Poerio made an interpellation on the news published by the Naples journals, that concession of all the lines of railway in the Two Sicilies had been made by the Dictatorship in favor of Messrs. Langlois, Count Cavour declared he had no further information respecting this transaction than that which had been conveyed to all readers. He agreed with Poerio that such a measure would go beyond the limits of the powers of the Dictatorial Government.

The debate on the bill brought in by Count Cavour began on Monday last. The bill empowers Victor Emmanuel to "accept and establish, by Royal decrees, the annexation to Sardinia of the provinces of Romagna and Umbria, which have by universal suffrage manifest by direct and universal suffrage a wish to form an integral part of our constitutional monarchy." Signor Ferrari spoke against the law of annexation. He said that Italy was represented between Upper and Lower Italy. Everybody wishes Italy to be free. But then arises the question Garibaldi and Monte Cavour. There is no difference between them exists in its realization. In delivering Upper Italy Piedmont imposed upon it her constitution, her laws, her army, her administration. Piedmont has made Upper Italy Piedmontese. According to historical tradition and the opinion of Balbo and Gioberti, the capital of Italy should be Rome, and the dynasty that of the House of Sardinia. The Two Sicilies cannot be unconditionally annexed to Piedmont. Italy has not yet been emancipated from the sea to the alps with ingratitude towards Garibaldi, who desires to defer this measure. Neither is the present moment favorable for the annexation of the states in the Two Sicilies." Upon the question of confidence in the Ministry Signor Ferrari said that he was opposed to Count Cavour, whom he stated to be responsible for the whole misfortunes of that unfortunate Rome and Venice. Signor Ferrari then expressed his apprehensions that France will not withdraw her troops. He concluded by declaring at length the project of an Italian confederation, which he declared would alone save Italy. Signor Mellana sanctioned the annexation policy of Sardinia, and said :—"Thanks to the patriotism of Charles Albert and Victor Emmanuel, the initiative in favour of Italian unity was taken by Sardinia, but the national sentiment was developed in each country by the influence of the exiles, the elite of whom have come to dwell among us, and have gained the Italian heart."

On Tuesday's sitting of the Chamber of Deputies the discussion on the law of annexation was resumed, but the debate was in favour of the annexations, which, he said, had brought things to a normal and not to an abnormal state. He stigmatised the Republican political agitators, and declared himself opposed to the policy of Mazzini, which during twelve years without imposing any conditions upon the nation, urged Italy to a premature revolution. Signor Boggio, the Vice-President, Dr. Bertani gave a formal denial to all the calumnies which had been propagated against him, and promised to defend himself in the courts of the public press. He declared that he had been faithful to his oath, and devoted to Italy and Victor Emmanuel. He desired only that Garibaldi's reputation should be preserved intact, and that the patriotism of Southern Italy should not suffer.

In Wednesday's sitting several members spoke for and against the project of annexation. Count Cavour replied that he would to-day give explanatory replies to all interpellations.

ARRIVAL OF GARIBALDI AT NEAPOLITAN TERRITORY.

Victor Emmanuel has personally undertaken the task of wresting from Francis II. the last remains of his Neapolitan kingdom. After issuing a proclamation to the people of Southern Italy, and receiving sundry deputations from the Neapolitan capital and provinces (the governors and magistrates of which had signed acts of submission and homage to his Government), he quitted Ancona, in order to place himself at the head of his army, which on Monday entered the Neapolitan territory at three points not named in the Aucona telegram, which brings us the intelligence. While Victor Emmanuel thus marches upon Naples, Garibaldi has received large reinforcements. Fifty-four monster troops have been shipped at Genoa for Naples, where they will on the two battalions which were landed some time since in that city, and which appear to have been summoned by Garibaldi to Caserta during the battle of the Volturno, and to have been actually brought into action against the Royalists.

Tuesday's Patrie contains the following, "under reserve":—"Three great Powers are said to have protested against the entry of the Sardinians into Neapolitan territory.

VICTOR EMMANUEL AND THE SICILIANS.

The reply of the Prince of Carignan to the Sicilian deputation, which prayed for annexation, is given in the Turin journals :—"He said he was pleased to hear the generous sentiments which are alive in Sicily; that his Majesty took the greatest interest in the fate of the island, as well as of every other Italian country; that if until now, on account of the urgency of the situation, he could not take any measures on their behalf, the time had now arrived for doing it; that the Prince, personally, was ready to have had an immediate treaty of receiving the Sicilian deputation, and that they might be certain that his would hasten to communicate and warmly support their wishes, since he was convinced that Italy may at last become one, provided she continued the policy of order and liberty upheld until now."

The following order of the day of his Majesty the King of Sardinia to his army has been issued from Naples :—Last night I slept with you because you are worthy of Italy. By arms you have vanquished your enemies, and by method and moderation of the Italian name. The mercenaries whom I see free will speak of Italy and of you in foreign countries after having learnt that God recompenses those who serve him, and not those who oppress people and abuse the right of nations. We must establish a strong Italian monarchy on the liberty of peoples who will be free with order and concord. The national army will increase more and more the glory which since eight centuries its name or the cross of Savoy. Soldiers! I take the command. It would cost me too much not to be foremost wherever there may be danger."

In view of the considerable concentration of Austrian troops in Venetia, the Sardinian army will, it is said, take up positions in the Romagna and the Duchies, while the sieging plans will be confided to the National Guard.

NAPLES.

THE BATTLE ON THE VOLTURNO.

On the banks of the Volturno a great battle has been fought which has given Garibaldi a victory over the Royalist troops. Threatened by the forces of General Caldini, advancing from the Roman States, the Dictator had concentrated at assaulting him. At daybreak on the 1st inst. their whole line advanced, 30,000 strong, under cover of the fire of the heavy guns of Capua and Gaeta, drove back his volunteers, who numbered scarcely half their opponents. The Dictator arrived on the scene to find his army hotly engaged and borne down by the superior numbers and the cavalry and artillery of the enemy. He succeeded in rallying his men, and, by his skilful dispositions, regained the ground and the vendors of his followers, succeeded, after a combat of many hours, in repulsing and finally routing the troops of Francis II. along the whole line. The cost of 1000 killed and wounded. A Neapolitan General and 7000 men were taken prisoners.

We give in the Supplement, page 344, a detailed account of the battle on the Volturno. Annexed are some further particulars subsequently received by the Overland Mail. The following account has been received from the head-quarters of General Bixio :—

MADDELONI, October 2.

Yesterday the Royalist troops, as the Dictator had foreseen, attacked our positions with the aim of their forces. A sanguinary contest ensued, in which Bixio performed prodigies of valour. He was four times left under him, and no less than four balls, but fortunately fate had so ordained that he was preserved for his division. The enemy's troops consisted of the flower of the Bombardieri and Carerts, so as to cut us in two, and follow them to the gates of Capua. The Generals of the Royal Army had openly declared that he would be in Naples on the 1st inst. Garibaldi, however, with the several divisions of his army, successively counted on the state of engagement the battle, and finally compelled the Royalists to retreat. The Royalist troops assailed us upon two different points, and with a numerous force, but our battle could not have been in a better spot. Their plans at first seemed to have been well laid, as we were worsted at the outset; our reinforcements arrived as far as the field in which we had directed the day previous. Bixio soon perceived that upon him depended the fate of the day. He threw the flower of his troops, the Cacciatori, at their head, thus exciting his men to follow his example. He swore to conquer or to die, and he kept his word. Fighting with the courage of a lion, the tables were turned, the attacked became the aggressors, and they made a fearful carnage in the ranks of the Neapolitans. Our position was conquered, and we took 7000 prisoners, among whom was a general officer. The Royalists were beaten at all points, and retreated in the utmost disorder. The Bombardier artillery performed miracles; they kept up an unceasing fire of grape shot, which mowed down two battalions. Bixio's Bersaglieri fought with the greatest gallantry; and the results of the day must prove of the most important character.

FURTHER SUCCESSES ON THE VOLTURNO.

On the 2nd inst. a Neapolitan force made its appearance on the mountains to the right of the Volturno, and took a body of men occupied Monte Briano. The story of its signal defeat by the national troops has been received by the following telegram :—

CAPUA, October 3.

The Neapolitans who were in possession of the heights sent down a couple of battalions upon their extreme left, which, after a short resistance retreated and ceased alarm, they succeeded in coming down without being perceived, and fell upon the rear of the Royalists. Almost all the latter were killed on the north-easterly bank of Caserta. The sculdel at the barracks was the first to give the alarm. Garibaldi, who was in the Volturno lower he had in hand, among them two companies of Bersaglieri and two companies of Carabineers del Lace, which had been withdrawn from the Royalist position. The resistance was not very energetic, owning, probably, to the circumstance that a part of the Royalist artillery was already on the road, considering than fighting. They were soon pressed back, and a number of them taken prisoners. Among the latter was the Colonel Count Ruffo. Garibaldi's Bixio came down upon them, and made likewise a number of prisoners. While this was going on Garibaldi with the remainder of his force had succeeded in come up to the heights. The Piedmontese, as well as some other troops, were ordered to assist, and the Royalists, who had rallied, were completely defeated in front. The Neapolitan triad to make a stand in front of Caserta Vecchia, but were soon driven from their position by the artillery of Bixio. This done, the whole assumed altogether the character of a chase. Two entire battalions fled towards the mountains of Tifata, and were met by Colonel Vinckler, of the Brigade Sauilli, and were made prisoners almost to a man. It was quite ludicrous to see the numbers of prisoners coming in, and that their arms carried by a few men as prisoners to the Palace of Caserta, in the midst of which, with their arms piled, they were guarded by a handful of their own countrymen. The rest were dispersed in all directions, and the remnants of about very few will probably return to the right bank of the Volturno.

The following is Garibaldi's order of the day on the 2nd inst. :—

CASERTA, Oct. 2.

To fight and to conquer is the watchword of the brave who long for the freedom of Italy at any price; you have conquered, and Italy is free.

Yesterday victory crowned our efforts on the whole line. To-day at Caserta and on the hills on the left bank of the river we have gained what will be written down in history among the most fortunate.

The brave and disciplined soldiers of the North, under the orders of the valiant Major Leigi Solio, have shown to-day what Italian valour joined to discipline can accomplish. Their unconquerable patience and courage led to trodden down by foreigners, the world shall see what her children can do if they are led by men worthy of them, with the sacred flag of nationality of their land.

G. GARIBALDI.

The following despatches relating to affairs in Naples and Sicily are dated subsequent to the battle of Volturno :—

NAPLES (vii Genoa), Oct. 4.

Yesterday the Royal troops made a sortie, in order to support a column of Bavarians, whose retreat had been cut off by the Garibaldians. The Royal troops were repulsed.

The Ministers have waited on Garibaldi, and declared that they would remain in office. The Garibaldian members of the Council have also presented.

LIVORNO, Oct. 3.

Advices from Naples state that the Marquis Pallavicini has accepted the Pro-Dictatorship of Naples. Cortelli's Ministry was still incomplete. Crispi was very unpopular.

PALERMO (vii Cagliari), Oct. 5.

The Pro-Dictator has issued a decree convening the electoral colleges for the 21st of October, when they will proceed to the nomination of deputies. Another decree will institute the law of the municipal government established at Palermo.

It is stated, says a telegram from Turin, dated Wednesday, that Count Cavour will convoke the electoral colleges of the Two Sicilies for the 21st of October to vote by universal suffrage.

The Naples journals say that the company who had received the concession for the Neapolitan railways has now obtained the cancelling of the grant.

The Turin correspondent of the Débats says:—"General Garibaldi will soon refire to his island home, and will not leave it unless his services should be again required. He will wipe when he read the reproaches and taunts which the Ministerial prints of Turin poured out upon him. Some of his Generals had been won over to the policy of Count Cavour. Surrounded by intrigues, swayed by reminiscences, paralyzed by political difficulties which he did not comprehend, the Dictator wrote to Victor Emmanuel, 'Come; I shall place my authority in your hands.'"

THE PAPAL STATES.

Threats announcing the taking of Ancona were posted up in different parts of Rome on the evening of the 2nd inst. The city was illuminated with Bengal fire in honour of the event.

The Papal Government is making great armaments, and promises large rewards.

The Papal troops who still remained faithful are concentated at Tivoli. The colonel of General Mast is concentrated at Poggio. The French occupy Viterbo, Velletri, Civita Vecchia, Castellana, Teroli, Palombara, Monterotondo, Albano, and Velletri. It is reported that the Pope has refused a pecuniary indemnity offered by Napoleon and Victor Emmanuel. The Pope will remain at Rome. A letter from Rome on Monday that a courier from St. Petersburg has arrived at the Russian Legation, and that he is the bearer of despatches from the Government advising the Pope not to quit Rome, nor to pronounce any excommunication, but for the present to confine himself to professing contempt, in the manner of Socinius.

The Official Journal had published an article claiming payment of the "Peter pence" from all the faithful, but actually declaring that the Pope would accept no subsidy from any terrestrial Power.

THE POPE'S ALLOCUTION.

The following is a summary of the allocution delivered by the Pope in the Consistory of Cardinals held on the 26th ult. His Holiness says that he denies all rights to despoil him of the provinces of which the invasion of the Papal States. He speaks with emotion of the brave soldiers who died in his defence, and has the firm hope that they have obtained eternal peace and blessedness. He says that he could not answer in every way the detestable and sacrilegious attacks of the King and the Government of Piedmont, who had given the order that troops approached the Roman territory, not as invades, but to protect it from bands of desperately persons.

The General-in-Chief of our troops, therefore, could not think that he would have to fight against the Piedmontese army. The aspect of things having changed, however, he is all right and all appearances, and in spite of the most hostile invasion of an army evidently stronger and more numerous than his, he would not have given up to the fortress at Ancona, but would have led our soldiers to inevitable destruction; but, being stopped on his march by the enemy's force, he could not but yield to the force of arms to the valour of soldiers.

The "infamous aggressors" had declared th at they came tore-establish in the Roman States the principles of moral order —

And this order of things is made by these vile men, who are implacable war against the Catholic Church, its ministers, and its property, and absolutely despising the laws and the ecclesiastical censures, have not hesitated to invade its state either eminent Cardinals of the Holy Roman Church, or Bishops, or the most distinguished men of our city and country, and to drag them from communities from their own monasteries, to jail the Church of its property, and to destroy the sacred harmony of the Holy Church. Such a state of disorder would therefore be re-established by those who found public schools of every kind open, and houses of prostitution, and temples of every religion and worships and infamous spectacles, to offend and destroy modesty, honesty, and virtue, to banish decency the sacred and inviolable rights of marriage—in a word, sacraments, the precepts, and the laws of the Church, its ministers, its rights, and its revenues, and to the entire subversion of every principle which is the foundation of religion and of society!

In the face of the whole universe the Pope reproves and condemns the criminal and sacrilegious excesses of the King and of that Government —

We declare all their acts null and non-effect, and we claim, in the most urgent manner, the integrity of that temporal power which belongs to the Roman Church, and to the rights and duties of which we are bound, and will never cease to claim the restitution of them.

The Pope declares that the support of foreign assistance against criminal invasion is still to be desired, and recalls the reiterated declarations of one of the most powerful Sovereigns of Europe. His Holiness that continues —

Nevertheless, while we still wait for the effect of them, we cannot but be greatly afflicted and disturbed in seeing that the power of our arms is not, in this frightful usurpation period and advance with audacity and insolence in their destructive work, as if they were secured and sure of meeting with no opposit n.

The Pontiff says he has reached to such a point that the hostile troops of the Subalpine Government have been already at the foot of the walls of our well-known capital, all engagements be stopped, peace be concluded, and nothing to suppose that we could be interrupted, and, through some serious, the sovereign Pontiff is reduced to the most painful embarrassment in the exercise of the Church, and especially the pride for it, since the Catholic world is in accordance with the different parts of the world is closed. Thus, venerable brothers, in these days, when in such an extraordinary, unheard-of manner matters are brought to the painful necessity of thinking, even in spite of ourselves, of adopting opportune resolutions to save religion —

The Pope then deplores the disastrous and pernicious policy of non-intervention, and above all its detestable application to the Roman question. He points out that the Powers of Europe cannot be ignorant what great and innumerable evils are comprised in the detestible event which he deplores; and says that, if such an event as that which the rights of international law were not entirely nullified, there would no longer be left any force and security to any legitimate right. —If the Sovereigns (his Holiness says) should be convinced that their cause is indissolubly bound up with ours. In coming to our aid they will provide equally for the preservation of their own rights." His Holiness concludes by the words —

We have no doubt that Catholic princes and nations will with the utmost ardour assist us, and will not be backen, with common prayers to God, their protect, by every means, the father and pastor of the whole flock of this Lord, attacked by the impious armies of a despotic power. But you know only too venerable brethren, that all our hope must be put in God, our aid and refuge in our tribulations, in whose words and deeds are contained the strength of cures, who gives death and life, who leads into the steps and delivers from it. We, therefore, and all faithful men, and all the clergy and people, must have before Him our most fervent prayers, especially imploring the most efficacious intercession of the most Holy and Immaculate Virgin Mary, the Virgin Mary, and the support of the blessed Apostle Peter and Paul, that He may make manifest the force of His right hand, and the riches of His omnipotence. He may put to flight those who attack us, and humble and crush all the enemies of His Church. Lastly, that the hearts of the persecutors may be changed by the almighty power of His grace, and that our Holy Mother Church may soon rejoice over their sincere and conversion.

AUSTRIA.

A letter from Vienna in the Augsburg Gazette asserts, on what is represented as good authority, that the Congress of the Five Powers is to be convoked anew before the end of the year, most likely on the 1st of December.

In reply to the circular note of the Holy See the Austrian Cabinet although severely censuring the Sardinian invasion of the Papal States, declares that the proposal of intervention is not to be carried out in the ordinary diplomatic way. Nevertheless, the latest information from Vienna continues to speak of the pacific intentions of the Government.

Austria appears to be taking every precaution against an attack. She has concentrated all her ships at Pola, ordered all the light on the coasts of Istria to be extinguished, and reinforced her garrisons in those provinces. The Frankfort Journal says that a numerous artillery troops is proceeding on a vast scale in Austria, but with as little noise as possible, so as to create no excitement. Heavy trains, full of soldiers and war materials, are forwarded by night and past through the capital without stopping. The Universal Gazette says that troops have been forwarded to Italy since the invasion of the Marches by Piedmont, and that orders have been sent to the directors of the Southern Railway to make preparations for the transport of 12,000 men during the week. An ominous sign is that the wives and families of the Generals and officers of the Austrian army in Venetia have received orders to immediately quit the Venetian territory. An officer of the Imperial navy has been placed in the lighthouse of Trieste in order to take cognisance of all vessels in sight; and orders, it is said, have been issued to the commander on the seaboard to fire upon any suspicious vessels, even though carrying the Sardinian flag, which should approach too near the coast.

A Vienna letter of the 4th says:—"To-day being the Emperor's fête, there was a general expectation that the official journal would publish the liberal concessions announced some days ago. Nothing of the kind having appeared, great disappointment has been manifested by the public. It must be admitted, however, that Ministers have scarcely had time to come to a well-matured decision on the propositions made by the Council of the Empire, and that the ordinances so ardently desired may appear at any moment."

Count Giorgi has been sent to Bosnia in the quality of Agent and Consul-General of Austria, with orders to make a report on the political state of affairs in that province.

A despatch from Vienna states that the Austrian Government has to acknowledge the despatch which, according to an English journal, Lord John Russell addressed to Count Rechberg at the same time that the despatch of the 31st of August was sent to Sir James Hudson for communication to Count Cavour.

HUNGARY.

It would seem that the Austrian Government still finds it necessary to have recourse to the usual repressive measures in Hungary. We read in a letter from Vienna:—"The great news of the day consists in the arrest of Count Ladislas Teleky, of the highest rank and position as Lieutenant, Szeredy, and Temesvar, the capitals respectively of Hungary Proper and the Banat, Count Sigismund Kemeny, Kossuth, who are lawyers, physicians, landed proprietors, and noblemen, are said to be implicated in the conspiracy which has caused the insurrection rebellion of the Magyar and Servian element in the empire; and, as the several arrests were made simultaneously, there are some good grounds for believing in the reality of the statement. Count Teleky, one of the prisoners took a prominent part in the revolutionary events of 1848.

The Government of Pesth has been in possession until further notice, the Government fearing the presence in the capital of so many young men of fiery temperament and patriotic sentiments.

The conscription in Hungary is resisted by the flight of the conscripts. The national feeling in Hungary displays itself every day.

"The Government Gazette of Pesth reads as follows:—'By the Vienna Gazette,' we still very serious. The public mind in that country is much agitated, and the feeling of hostility against the Austrian rule in the provinces which formerly constituted part of Hungary. The question of the conscription appears to be attended with serious difficulties, and has already given rise to several regrettable incidents. The arrests to which it was found necessary to have recourse at Temesvar are of a very serious character, and affect persons of position who belong to the higher classes of society. Incendiary proclamations have also been found in their possession.

In the Synod recently held at Grun, in Hungary, the Cardinal Archbishop of Gran said he saw no objection to the clergy wearing the national Hungarian costume, but, with regard to the Bishops, it was advisable to observe the proprieties of the ecclesiastical profession.

PRUSSIA.

The health of the King continues much the same. It is feared the bad weather may prevent his long walks, which do him much good. All the terraces at Sans Souci are lighted up every evening, to enable the invalid to enjoy the open air as long as possible.

The Prince Regent has, by a decree, dated the 29th of September, appointed Baden, named eighteen of the Members of the Upper Chamber. A letter from Berlin says that, by means of this reinforcement of the Government, the foreign and home policy of the Government, they hope to be able to count on a majority of two of the laws which they may think proper to propose for the moral and material interests of the country in the Chamber.

Baron von Schleinitz has addressed a fresh despatch to Baron Werther, Prussian Ambassador at Vienna, on the 23th of August, on the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein. This despatch states that Prussia will not be obliged to withdraw her serious attention to these questions, and instructs Baron Werther to claim the co-operation of Austria.

RUSSIA.

The Empress of Russia was on the 3rd inst. happily delivered of a Prince Alexander.

According to the Wilna Gazette, there have been pardoned up to the present time, in virtue of the two amnesties granted by the Emperor, 1,500 persons of the class exiled in the 25th of August 1856, and the 26th of August, 1860, 192 Polish refugees, and 161 individuals who had been sent to Siberia.

THE WARSAW CONFERENCES.

The day fixed for the arrival of the Emperor of Russia at Warsaw is the 15th inst., when the Emperor of Austria and the Prince Regent of Prussia will meet him there on the 21st. The Russian Principal Ministers of the three Sovereigns have been instructed to be present.

A letter from St. Petersburg of the 29th ult. states that the Emperor and Empress will go to Warsaw on the 15th inst., and that the Queen of Prussia saw named Prince Alexander Gortschakoff, Prince Basile Dolgorouky, and Count Alexander Adlerberg.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Nord states that the Initiative of the expected interview between the Emperor of Russia and the Emperor of Austria and the Prince Regent of Prussia will lead to no change in the political situation of those Powers; that public interests will be the only subject of discussion, and that there will be an alliance which would eventually make Russia the gendarme of Europe—a thankless position which she too long occupied.

The correspondent thinks that the interview and the programme for a future congress on Italian affairs will be examined, and afterwards the Emperor will proceed to Ems and Johannisberg.

The Journal de Geneve states that the questions of Savoy and the neutralization of Switzerland will be discussed.

It is stated that Russia, Prussia, and Austria will issue circular notes to their diplomatic representatives on the result of the interview at Warsaw.

A letter from Berlin, dated 5th of October, says:—"Our Ministry is preparing for the Warsaw Conference, and is in the midst of negotiations and engagements binding upon Prussia, and the Prince Regent has consented thereto."

UNITED STATES.

The approaching Presidential election is still the burden of American politics. The Democratic party is powerful in Pennsylvania to prevent the success of Mr. Lincoln in that State, and so throw the election into the House of Representatives, where their candidate would be sure of fourteen votes (counting that of North Carolina, which, however, is doubtful), and where they would expect to get the other votes necessary. The New Orleans Picayune understands that letters of the highest authority have been received in New Orleans from Washington which leave no room to doubt that something serious is pending between Spain and Mexico. They assert positively that an expedition of not less than 20,000 men is actually being fitted out at Havannah for Vera Cruz.

The corners jury in the Lady Alice disaster have censured their vessel, the steamship Isabella, and her captain, for not having put on board too many passengers, but by the principal blame of the disaster upon the Captain of the Lady Alice. Augusta, declaring the second mate of that vessel incompetent.

A disastrous conflagration has occurred at Fort Smith, Arkansas, which resulted in the destruction of the City Hotel and a large number of buildings. The entire loss by this disaster amounted to fully 200,000 dollars.

Advices from San Francisco were to the 12th ult. The mail-steamer had left for Panama with 1,000,000 dollars in gold. Business was somewhat better, an active trade having sprung up with the interior. Mining news from the whole Pacific region was of a most encouraging character.

Two more slavers have been captured by the American squadron off the coast of Africa.

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams were received at Mr. Reuter's office yesterday (Friday) —

THE BATTLE OF THE VOLTURNO.—Paris, Thursday Evening.—The Patrie states that the loss of the Garibaldians in the battle of the Volturno was 4,000 men; that of the Royal troops was not so great. The Garibaldians will not attack Capua before the 20th inst.

THE PROTEST AGAINST SARDINIA.—Berlin, Thursday.—The news of a Prussian protest, identical with one of Austria, against the Sardinian policy, and of the recall of the Prussian Minister from Turin, is unfounded. It has become doubtful whether Baron Schleinitz will be present at Warsaw.

Paris, Thursday Evening.—The Presse says that the news of the Dresden Journal that the Prussian Ambassador had been recalled from Turin is inexact. The Pays, on the contrary, confirms the news.

TURKEY.—Constantinople, October 6.—The Grand Vizier arrived yesterday at Salonica. The Ministers have received a note complaining of the Grand Vizier's return before having completed his mission. Omer Pasha has been received here of a great Persian victory over the Turcomans at Merve.

SPAIN.

The Cortes will assemble on the 15th of October.

Their Majesties have arrived at Saragossa.

A Royal ordinance decrees the payment of an annual pension of 340,000 reals for life to Don Pedro d'Urtuna.

The Espana asserts that the principal Carlist chiefs are disposed to recognise Queen Isabella II.

The Spanish Government has demanded the assembling of a congress of the Catholic Powers, similar to that held at Gaeta in 1849, with the object of guaranteeing the integrity of the States of the Holy See. The French Cabinet, although admitting the expediency of assembling a congress, has declared that the present is not the period the changes caused by the late events in Italy would render it necessary to refer the Roman question to a congress of the great Powers.

BELGIUM.

The Belgian Chambers, in conformity with Art. 70 of the Constitution, will meet on the 15th of November. There is to be a grand review of the troops on the occasion. On the 16th the King will open the Session.

The distribution of prizes to the composers in the Belgian National Shooting-match took place on Sunday in the Temple des Augustins at Brussels. The Queen and Royal Family arrived soon after the proceedings commenced, and remained nearly two hours.

DENMARK.

The Diet of the kingdom of Denmark was opened at Copenhagen on the 2nd by Prince Ferdinand, one of the Princes, in the absence of the King and the Landsthing afterwards elected M. Brunn, Judge of the Supreme Court, its President, and M. Bergendahl, its Secretary. A correspondent states that a great number of bills had been prepared to be laid before the Chambers, and that the importance of these measures would absorb the whole attention of the Session until the end of January. He also says that the support given to Denmark by the French Cabinet would increase and render more difficult any existing between Denmark on the one side, and Austria and Prussia on the other, acting for the Germanic Confederation.

SYRIA.

The Moniteur says:—"The affairs of Syria have entered a new phase. Military action will now succeed the moral influence which Europe has exercised during the last fifteen days. Some chiefs of the Druses have been arrested and tried at Beyrout. The Kaimekan of the Druses is now among the prisoners. These measures have produced a happy effect. The Druses of Hasbeya, Rasheya, and their attitude is more undecided. Measures have been taken for the protection of the Christian population. The wisdom and energy of the chiefs of the Franco-Turkish army allow us to hope that the troops will supersede them in a solution, dearly bought, will be the reward of so many efforts."

The period fixed by the convention of the 5th ult. relative to Syria, for the establishment of the European force, was to have been the 15th inst.; but this formality has been delayed, as the Turkish Ambassador has not received the instructions of the Porte.

It is asserted that on the termination of the labours of the European Commission at Beyrout, which will probably occupy two months, the expedition in Syria will return to France.

The number of persons who have suffered punishment in Damascus up to the 3rd inst. is as follows:—Beyrout, 110 shot, 147 sentenced to hard labour for life, 248 banished, 186 sentenced to hard labour for a term, making a total of 691. Correspondence from Cyprus.

The French papers publish accounts from Damascus stating that since the departure of Fuad Pacha from that city the Mussulmans have resumed their misdeeds, and massacred several Christians. The remainder are emigrating, and their number so increases as to prevent that the European troops may leave. At Zahleh the Druses are in arms, are furious against the Christians, and loud them with curses and insults. Two more Christians have been killed in the suburbs of the Russian Consul couched as follows:—"Cursed Consul! Dog that you are! You have come to make you perish, with all the Christians of this town." The Consul complains to the Porte of Fuad Pacha, but obtained no redress, and he then laid the matter before the Powers of Europe.

The committee of the British Syrian Relief Fund have recently received letters from Mr. Moore, Acting-Consul at Damascus, the Committee, Beyrout; the Rev. W. M. Thomson, American missionary in Syria; the Rev. Mr. Crawford, Presbyterian Mission, Sidon; and Mr. Moore, H.B.M. Consul-General for Syria, descriptive of the sad condition of the Christians in Syria. The relief that is being done for their relief, and earnestly soliciting aid on their behalf.

INDIA.

The overland mail has brought advices and journals from Bombay to the 11th of September. The following is the text of the letter of fellowship summary from the Bombay Gazette:—India is per cently quiet. Unless misfortune is to be looming in the distance—and there are many amongst us only too ready to predict for the empire the most calamities—the preparations already made for levying the income tax will be very produced with great excitement, and more or less discontent. The firm attitude taken by the Government has, in truth completely silenced opposition.

CHINA.

The advices from Talien Bay given in a previous Number come down to July 25. A St. Petersburg telegram gives intelligence from Pekin itself to the commencement of July. Another telegram accounts the insurrection in China was gaining ground, especially in the eastern maritime provinces. The Taepings had invaded the city of Soochow and its environs. Discontent prevailed everywhere. Provisions of all descriptions were exceedingly dear. Commerce was stagnant. The inhabitants of Pekin were said to be favourably disposed towards the English, and desired their presence at Pekin. This was caused by reports that the Emperor had retired at Rehehol, and had illtreated the natives. A corps of 6000 men had been dispatched from Pekin against the Taepings, who threatened the city from the eastern direction. A report was current at Pekin that the Emperor would spend the winter at Rehehol. The Emperor's thirtieth birthday would be celebrated by festivals at Pekin.

MOCK FUNERAL OF THE BOURBONS.—A letter from Naples says:—"I must tell you of the funeral of the Bourbons which was enacted by the gamins of the city two or three evenings since. We were startled by the sound of monotonous singing a procession of boys chanting, and going to the Toledo to see what the sport was, for there was a crowd of youngsters in front of them. They had made a bier on which was constructed a coffin of some sort, and they were burying the Bourbons with the usual accompaniments of an ordinary funeral, while all chanted, as with one voice, 'Il Re Bomba è morto, Ferdinando è scomunicato. Viva Pio Nono! Il Re Bomba is dead, let us go and bury him. Long live Garibaldi!); and so they walked along with mock seriousness, turning out of the Toledo by the Cafe Europe."

MR. EDWIN JAMES IN GARIBALDI'S CAMP.

TAKING advantage of the leisure afforded to him by the close of the Parliamentary Session and by the long vacation, Mr. Edwin James took a trip to South Italy. His letters in the daily journals have kept the public acquainted with his movements in the Garibaldian camp. Mr. James was a spectator of, and to a certain extent a participator in, the affair of the 19th ult., before Capua; and our Special Artist took a Sketch, which is here engraved, of the honourable and learned member for Marylebone as he then appeared in his half-military, half-navvy equipment, cragged, without a retaining fee, in the cause of Italian freedom. Mr. James writes as follows respecting the retreat on that occasion:—"The cry arose that the Cavalry were coming!' and the panic seized the troops. In the melée I lost my carriage; my servant had very indiscreetly taken shelter with some priests in the top of a convent, and during the confusion the carriage disappeared. I had to walk along the high road to Caserta; a little Swiss soldier who had been wounded by a rifle-ball in the wrist, and was going to the hospital there, accompanied me. On our way I saw seven or eight soldiers, among whom were two officers—the Swiss soldier told me they belonged to a Sicilian regiment—mounted on one of the long agricultural carts, which they had taken from a field adjoining the road, and were proceeding at a rapid pace to Caserta. As they met troops coming from that town to relieve Santa Maria they spread the panic among them; they cried out, 'The cavalry are coming!' 'The artillery are close on us!' 'We shall all perish!' Back to Caserta, back!' More than one regiment wavered and turned. The officers behaved firmly and well, drew their swords, and urged their men on; but the alarm had spread, and the soldiers refused to follow. I followed these mischievous and cowardly fellows to Caserta, asked for the Colonel of a regiment who spoke French, gave him my name and address, pointed out the fellows as they entered the square in front of the Palace, and, although I did not request it as a personal favour, I certainly suggested that they should be marched out and shot; they were at once taken to the guardhouse and were no more seen by me. It is only just to say that several regiments passed these dastardly renegades unnoticed, and marched on to the relief of the village."

MR. EDWIN JAMES, Q.C., IN GARIBALDI'S CAMP.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE NEW LIBRARY, INNER TEMPLE.

AT the north-west corner of the Inner Temple Gardens, close to the river, stands the building of which we give an Engraving on the first page—one of the latest ornamental additions to that side of the Thames; for, although we cannot give unqualified praise to the design of this new library, it is sufficiently "good" to make it a very noticeable feature among London improvements, and is certainly above the average as a specimen of modern domestic Gothic.

The library stands clear from all the surrounding buildings, and is, as will be seen, exceedingly simple in form, and by no means elaborate in detail. The entrance and river fronts are the most ornate. The porch, with its angle statues of Richard Cœur-de-Lion and the Protector Pembroke, and the traceried window above, in the former, and the handsome bay window in the latter, are very good both in design and execution; though we must take strong exception to the ugly, ill-managed addition of the buttress beneath the bay window. The two side elevations appear to us poor in design, except the grotesques in the string-course. The staircase tower at the north-east corner somewhat breaks up the monotony of that seen in the Engraving. The lofty roof of red and grey tiles, with its dormers and lantern, is a good feature; but the very unsubstantial-looking chimney-shafts rising from the battlements are not good in effect. Gilt finials ornament the lantern and the dormers in the roof; and the Temple cognisance of the lamb (emblematic of the lawyers' innocence) is repeated in various parts of the building.

The whole of the exterior is of Bath stone, and will be more agreeable to the eye when its excessive lightness is toned down by Time. Fifty-five tun has been reached. The doorways to this lower floor are in the centre of the side fronts. The hall, which is on a level with the garden, will be let, with the one above it, as chambers—well arranged and fireproof. Through the principal doorway we enter a hall with a panelled wood ceiling, and, ascending the spiral staircase in the tower before named, gain access to the splendid apartment, eighty-five feet long by forty-two feet wide. It is lighted by seven windows on each side, the large bay window, and a seven-light traceried window at the opposite end. Massive corbels, composed of short double columns, one in front of the other, their base decorated with the arms of different Chancellors, support the principals of the wide and lofty wooden roof of pitch pine, through which, with good effect, steal gleams of light from the lofty and small dormers in the upper portion of the roof. The hammer-beams are carved with angels holding shields. The windows will be filled with stained glass. The upper portions of the walls are lined with Bath stone. Below this run the bookcases. The floor will be of Parian on Portland cement. The whole height of the library will be sixty-three feet to the under side of the ridge of the roof. It is to be heated with hot-water pipes.

From the landing of the principal staircase a smaller one is reached in the angle formed by the junction of the tower and main building, which leads to the chamber in the upper part of the tower, to be occupied by the librarian. Altogether it is a very creditable building, and has been erected from the designs and under the superintendence of the architect, Mr H. B. Abraham.

THE FARM.

THE fine dry weather is doing as much towards the crops of '61 as '60. An immense breadth has been gathered in since our last, and so anxious have the farmers been to complete the "job" that in many places they have pressed all the old lanterns into their service, and worked right through the night. Their nervous hurry in the earlier part of last week has, however, rather told against them, as the sheaves were carried damp, and several stacks began to smoke like furnaces, and had to be taken down at once. A great deal of the wheat is so stale from the effects of the weather that it will be hardly fit to grind before the spring, unless it is kindried; and at present it is very difficult to meet the pressing inquiries for seed quality.

Mr. Obed Hussey, the American inventor of the reaping-machine which bears his name, was accidentally killed last month in a railway-carriage between Baltimore and New York. Such right as he believed himself to possess in it was sold some years since to the firms of Garrett and Son, as well as Dray and Co., and there had very nearly been a lawsuit between them in consequence, until the vendor's title was looked into. He was a one-eyed man; and those who have been in the habit of attending the Royal trials will remember that, on one occasion, he personally superintended the working of his machine. Two on his principle were in the trial this year, and the result was that one of them, "Cuthbert's Machine," manufactured by the Bushy Agricultural Company at Bedale, was placed first.

The policy of founding a good tribe was well demonstrated at the recent sale of the Lemton herd, where the three best seats averaged 68 gs., and still more so at Captain Spencer's, where Lizzy and her descendants virtually made the average. The Captain purchased her originally, in the May of 1857, for 110 gs.; and gave 170 gs. for her daughter Leila, in the March of '59. The former, who is rising eight, went into the hands of the Hon. Colonel Fennant, M.P., for 180 gs., on Friday, and Leila into the Earl of Airlie's for 105 gs. Lizzy's other daughters, Josephine and Miss Kitty, attracted Colonel Fennant's regards at 155 gs. and 165 gs.; and as her bull calf, Baron Lowther, made 46 gs., and Leila's yearling bull and bull calf 108 gs. between them, we have an original outlay of 380 gs. repaid in less than three years and a half, by a return at the hammer of 729 gs. Josephine 2nd is unfortunately dead, and Blink Bonny and Bloom had to be withdrawn, owing to cold and rheumatism. The twenty females and ten bulls produced £2004, giving a total average of £66 16s. 4d., which places it very high in the rank of bona-fide sale averages. The Earl of Airlie bought the prize bull, Young Ben (54 gs.), and the Earl of Lonsdale, who was also present, agreed to give 50 for a bull, Seignor (81 gs.), half brother to Prince Talleyrand; which may help we trust, to bring back the old Gainford days of Lowther. Lady Pigot added his dam La Vallière to her store at 100 gs., and Castanet at 155 gs.; while Mr. Atherton, after his recent success with his wondrously-matured calf of the Wild-Eyes tribe, did not let 100 gs. stand between him and Wild Eyes 28th by Lord of the Valley.

Watching the gallops lately on Middleham Moor, we espied the long, lean, white form of the roan-and-white Windsor in the distance, in Mr. Raymond Brucen's pastures, and higher up on the fell the red-and-white Prince George. The Booth blood (which can afford to dispense with the poetical effusions of Bates Redivivus) is making strong head in Wiltshire where Broadhinton has had a large fall of Young Windsors, principally roan heifers. Among them are "Duchess of Windsor," from Duchess of Gloucester (own sister to the Gold Medal Cow); and "Countess of Windsor," from her daughter; "Otto of Roses," from Essence of Roses; "Goneril," from Gloaming, daughter of the prize yearling at Gloucester; "Lily of Windsor," "Comme il Faut," and "March Rose" from an Elk Magnesia heifer, Etiquette 2nd, and Christmas Rose.

A recently-manured wheat stubble was the field of the ploughing operations at the Bedfordshire Agricultural Meeting; and, in spite of this very trying ordeal, the ploughmanship of the seventeen acres and a half was as straight and as true as if it had been on clover ley. Howard's plough was first in the three divisions, and first and second in the great champion class, where a Hornsby was third. Page was also second and fourth in other trials. Mr. Fowler's cow Daisy, which divided Colonel Townley's Fidelity and Pearl last year at Warwick—when Emma, Lady of Athelstane, and Miss Rose were in the rick—was first; and Mr. Pawlett showed his new shorthorn bull by running second in a good class, with a Micoate purchase. Mr. Robinson, of Clifton Pastures, was great with his shorthorns; and, besides winning first prizes with Hayman, Northern Belle, and Claret, he was A 1 in the two calf-classes. These "Clifton bits," of which Punch sang, have brought out a rare specimen of their 1869 vintage, with the six-months Champagne, by May Duke, who was previously purchased by Earl Spencer for 100 gs. It is purchases like these on the part of noblemen and landlords which keep up the character of stock in a neighbourhood, and encourage breeders, at all hazards, to have first-rate crosses when they find that they can get a regular market for their bull-calves. If the impetus which has been given to cattle buying and breeding during the last two years receives no check by unfair practices at sales we shall, ere long, see a great revolution worked in the farmsteads, and even the Devon men will cast about to see if they cannot get a red cross, which will preserve the rare symmetry and handling of their breed, and yet give that size which now places them at such a serious disadvantage by the side of the shorthorn and the Hereford. At Bedford the Herefords beat the shorthorns in the butcher-beast class. The former will be seen in their glory on Friday next at their cathedral town; and, as there is nothing like taking time by the forelock, we may as well remind the great army of beef, mutton, pork, and root forcers that the entries for the two Fat Meetings at Birmingham and Baker-street close on November 1. At the former of these meetings the amount of prizes in specie, cups, medals, &c., will be about £1336.

At the Wakham Show the show of hacknays was not equal, either in size or stamp, to what Norfolk ought to produce; and, if she does not take care, Exmoor, and the cross it is introducing into its ponies, will get the pull of her. A class of hackney bullocks made a good feature here, and the show of roots, trefoil and clover hay, and "bold and heavy" oats, was remarkably good. The knights of the shire and borough will be in attendance on the ground at Huntingdon, where there was a good average show, varied in the extra stock classes by eight Kerry cows and heifers.

The sales of next week include the Monachty herd, of about 150 pure-bred white-faced Herefords, the property of Sir Edward Knight, Bart., but the last twenty years Mr. Rea has exhibited at all the leading shows, and won nearly 200 prizes. The Nokes herd of Herefords, which is nearly as large, is to be sold on Thursday; and should not fail to find a stable walk from Pembridge station; and on the same day Mr. Strafford sells a small herd of shorthorns, of the Nell Gwynne and Princess families, belonging to Mr. G. Townsend, at Stony Stanton, near Hinckley.

FALKIRK TRYST.—The third and last of these annual markets for this season was held on Monday on the usual stance. The buyers were firm, especially from England. The stock shown was larger than on any similar occasion during the last three or four years. It was computed by many experienced persons that the number on the ground could not be less than 100,000. The stock consisted of Cheviot wethers and ewes, blackfaced wethers and ewes, and a few cross-

GARIBALDI'S MARCH THROUGH CALABRIA.

SURRENDER OF THE NEAPOLITAN TROOPS AT SOVERIA, CALABRIA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN ITALY, FRANK VIZETELLY.

GARIBALDI made, as is well known, a clean sweep through Calabria. There is no doubt that the prestige of his name and his brilliant leadership had a great deal to do with the wonderful success which his army obtained; but the total breaking up of the Neapolitan army in Calabria was due mainly to the celerity of his movements. Soveria was one of those mountain fastnesses which yielded to him at once without a struggle. The correspondent of the Daily News, who followed Garibaldi in his march through Calabria, writes as follows from Soveria on the night of August 30:—"Our columns had left Tiriolo this morning at daybreak, the Calabrian bands composing the avant guard. Cosenz brigade followed it through the mountain paths on the right, whilst that of Brigadier Sacchi was marching on the main road which leads to this village. General Türr, who since the day before yesterday had embarked his division at Pizzo, had safely landed at a near place on the coast, and, leaving the command of his men to Colonel Hebert, had hastened to join our head-quarters. The road from Tiriolo to Soveria, though wild and somewhat barren, is a very picturesque one. To the beauties of nature you must add the lively effect produced by our marching army. The summits of the mountains were covered by the Calabrian volunteers, dressed in their theatrical costume, with pointed hat, breeches, and the Basque velvet jacket thrown over their shoulders. Now and then, on the turning of a road, or by the causeway opened in the crevices of the mountain, or coming out from a thick forest of elms and beech-trees, one of the Calabrian columns suddenly makes its appearance, shouting out, 'Long live Victor Emmanuel! Long live Garibaldi!' Down in yonder valley the women are to be seen gathered on the church piazza, and, as they wear the most picturesque costume of Italy—red flannel petticoat, blue vest, and a sort of white Genoese peggoto on their heads—they give to the landscape around the colour of a Claude picture. Whilst our front march was proceeding towards Somma Marelli another Calabrian band, led by Morelli, had moved the day before from its camp of Castrovillari with the order of outflanking the Neapolitan General Ghio, quartered in this village. This operation had been so successfully accomplished that, when our avant guard arrived within a mile of the village, Morelli's column was seen coming down from the mountains which surround it. The Neapolitans were thus surrounded by us, and it was to be expected that if they had dared to attack us they would have been completely defeated in spite of their forces. General Ghio had under his orders a division composed of the 2nd, 4th, 12th, and 15th regiments of the line, numbering in the whole 5800 men; the 1st, 8th, and 11th sharpshooter battalions; 300 gendarmes, two squadrons of lancers, one field battery, and a half mountain one, numbering in the whole twelve guns. You see that if the Neapolitans had wished to arrest our march they could have done so, for the positions they could have taken up would have been very strong, and almost impregnable. But demoralisation had already made its way through their ranks, desertion had followed, and the menacing attitude of the Calabrians, who had thrown all sorts of impediments on the only practicable road from which a retreating army could pass, had placed the Neapolitans in such a helpless situation that it was almost impossible to get out of the net into which they had fallen. General Ghio had therefore no other alternative left than that of surrender. At eight o'clock Garibaldi's head-quarters had been established without opposition on the upper part of the village, and from this fact he became aware that General Ghio had no intention of bringing his men into action; and such was indeed the case, for at nine o'clock the priest Bianchi, the leader of one of the Calabrian bands, having been sent as parlementaire to the Neapolitan camp, General Ghio told him that his intention was that of going as soon as possible to Garibaldi's head-quarters, to negotiate the capitulation of his corps-d'armée. This was accordingly done at eleven o'clock, and about twelve o'clock we could proceed to the Neapolitan camp. During my life I never witnessed more distressing scenes; peasants and soldiers getting hold of the arms given up by the Neapolitans, horses and mules let loose running and jumping about, a terrific noise prevailing in that pandemonium of human beings. . . . I do not know whether inspired by fear or dictated by real national sentiment, but all the Neapolitan officers with whom I spoke told me they were glad that the capitulation, though hard and humiliating, had been agreed upon between the two Generals, because the fratricide would thus be ended."

VIEW FROM MAIDA TOWARDS SOVERIA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN ITALY, FRANK VIZETELLY.

The Sketch herewith engraved was taken by our Special Artist at the moment the Neapolitan soldiers were throwing down their arms and crying "Viva Garibaldi!" A Calabrese is helping himself to one of the muskets; and Guamieri, Garibaldi's famous guide, now of the Church militant, is beating him over the back and shoulders to induce him to drop it. During the day he had numerous opportunities of developing the resources of his arms in the same manner to a considerable extent. In the centre of the foreground is Colonel Peard, who came alone up the Neapolitan line as they were preparing to relax, and summoned the General to surrender.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Oct. 14.—19th Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 15.—Battle of Leipsic, 1813.
TUESDAY, 16.—Fire at the Houses of Parliament, 1834.
WEDNESDAY, 17.—Manchester Art-Exhibition opened, 1857.
THURSDAY, 18.—St. Luke.
FRIDAY, 19.—Accident at the Surrey Music Hall, 1856.
SATURDAY, 20.—Battle of Navarino, 1827.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 20, 1860.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. H.	M. H.	M. H.	M. H.	M. H.	M. H.	M. H.
9 31	10 5	10 39	11 13	11 48	Morning. 0 25	Morning. 1 4
Evening. 9 53	Evening. 10 27	Evening. 11 1	Evening. 11 35	Evening. 0 0	Evening. 1 4	Evening. 1 46

BOOKS RECEIVED.

An Easy Introduction to the Art of Letter Writing. By Rev. Basil Sleapkin and Marshall.
Cycle of the Families of Great Britain and Ireland. Compiled from the best Authorities. By J. Tarbotton, and revised by L. Lewis, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Vol. I. Royal 8vo, without Index, Adams and Co.
Daddy Gorilla; or, Unequitant Affection. By R. de Salmar. Post 8vo, Ward and Lock.
Digby Heathcote; or, the Early Days of a Country Gentleman. By the Author of "Ellen Middleton." Routledge and Co.
Handbook for Travellers in Berks, Bucks, and Oxfordshire. Murray.
Lawrence Hyde. By Townsend and the Old Cobby, and Co.
Mowbray Morris. Ward and Lock.
Old Journeys in and out of London. By J. Hollingshead. Routledge.
Poems. By Dutton Cheetham. Two vols. Post 8vo, Bell and Daldy.
Rhymes and Roundelays in Praise of Dogs. By F. Delmotte. Spon.
Rob Roy. By Sir Walter Scott. Bart. Illustrated by Absolon, Huxley, and Gilbert. Routledge and Co.
Royal English Opera. Covent-Garden. Vol. I. Post 8vo, Routledge and Co.
Sporting Sketches. By Cecil. Routledge and Co.
The Adventures of Lieutenant Murphy. By Major Arthur. Routledge and Co.
The Bible Picture-Book. Containing 100 Illustrations. Religious Tract Society.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. I. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. II. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. III. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. IV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. V. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. VI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. VII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. VIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. IX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. X. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XL. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XLIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. L. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. LXXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XC. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. XCIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. C. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXL. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXLIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CL. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CLXXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXC. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CXCIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CC. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXL. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXLIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCL. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCLXXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXC. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCXCIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCC. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXIV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXV. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXVI. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXVII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXVIII. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland Kay. Vol. CCCXXXIX. Hall and Co.
The Bible Treasury. Edited by Rev. Ryland K

TO the INDEPENDENT FREEMEN and ELECTORS of the BOROUGH of SOUTHWARK.

Gentlemen,—I have just returned from Canada, where for many years I have been largely engaged in railroading, and in the construction of other public works; and I am informed that it was with feelings of deep sympathy that I witnessed on Friday last the financial crash in this country, which has thrown so many of the working classes out of employment. My sympathy increased with the compliments paid by all the inhabitants of Boston to the memory of a man who was the architect of his own fortunes, and whose whole career had been of public usefulness. A desire to see my friends having urged me to offer myself as a candidate to represent the place of Mr. Ingram, and being, like him, a native of the town, I have determined to place myself in your hands accordingly.

Having contributed a long and successful business career in America, and identified myself in Canada, or being naturalised in the United States, in order that I might benefit in my form and residence, I have returned to this, my native country, with the intention of making it my home before you, a thoroughly independent man, to be in accordance with the spirit of your request, neither the nominee of any party or of favour to ask of the Government; so also of the Government, also, to be under no obligation to any of the contending factions of the day.

I shall take an immediate opportunity of addressing you personally, and explaining my views on all the questions of the day, and in the meantime I remain to hope will be found in thoroughsentiment with those of the liberal party.

I have the honour to be,

Gentlemen,

Your most obedient humble servant,

ALEX. C. RIDLEY.

Kenton's Hotel, London, October 9, 1860.

WHAT WILL THIS COST TO PRINT? is a thought often occurring to tradesmen, public characters, and persons of limited incomes. An immediate answer to the inquiry may be obtained by forwarding a specimen of the intended work, or information of its nature, to RICHARD BARRETT, 13, Mark-lane, London.

SAFETY for STREET-DOORS.—CHUBB'S PATENT LATCHES, at moderate prices. Cheapest Safes of all sizes; and Cash's Detector Locks for every description of Safe. Chubb, No. 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

PATENT CRYSTAL WINDOW-BARS, for shop and dwelling-house windows, skylights, conservatories, show-cases, &c., &c., by LLOYD and SUMMERFIELD, Plate Glass-merchants, Birmingham.

GARDNER'S £2 2s. DINNER SERVICES complete, best quality. Breakfast, Dessert, Tea, and Toilet Services, equally low. Cut Wines, 9s. 6d. per dozen; Decanters, 7s. 6d. per pair; Glass and China Table Lustres, unequalled by her Majesty established 100 years), 45 and 46, Strand. Engravings gratis and post-free.

CRYSTAL PALACE and ONE SHILLING PRIZE CHESS MEN and BOARDS, introduced by Messrs. Gregory, Cheap Stationery Warehouse, 324, High Holborn, opposite Red Lion Street. Prize Chess-men, Chessboards, Portfolios, Reading-case, Pencil, Reserve for Lamb, Stamps, &c., &c. Sent post-free for 13 stamps.

A GOLD PEN for TWO SHILLINGS!!! or, in a neat ebony-wood Holder, post-free for 54 St. This is a perfect gem, and will last any hand; is warranted for twelve months; and fairly worth twelve the price. To be obtained of FARRINGDON and SON, Wholesale Stationers, 65, Fleet-street, E.C.

BIJOU NEEDLE-CASE, containing 100 of DEANE'S DRILLED-EYED NEEDLES, for 1s. This neat, useful, and elegant appendage to a lady would be found a most favourable model—in metal, of 12 pattern-sheets, sold each by Deane and Co., London-bridge, E.C. Established A.D. 1700.

ALLEN'S GUINEA PORTMANTEAU, ALLEN'S DOUBLE DESPATCH-BOX and Writing-case, ALLEN'S GUINEA HAND-BAG, ALLEN'S REGISTERED DRESSING-BAG.

J. W. ALLEN, Manufacturer, 22, and 42, Strand, Corner of Wellington-street. Catalogues post-free.

FREDERICK DENT, Chronometer Watch, and Clock Maker to Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Consort, and maker of the Great Clock for the Houses of Parliament, 61, and 34, Strand Exchange.

SUPERB GILT DRAWING-ROOM CLOCKS, at £5 5s.; elegant variegated marble Clocks, at £3 3s. The choicest stock in London, at WALES and MCCULLOCH'S, Manufacturers, 56, Cheapside, next Bow Church.

MUSICAL BOX DEPOTS, 56, Cheapside, and 32, Ludgate-street, for the sale of NICOLE'S celebrated Lever MUSICAL BOXES, playing charming airs, from three tunes, at £1 per air. Small-size Musical Boxes, to play 6 tunes, 6 airs, £10. Catalogues of Tunes and Prices gratis and post-free, on application to WALES and MCCULLOCH, as above.

SARL and SONS, 17 and 18, Cornhill, respectfully solicit a visit to their magnificent Establishment. The Greatest Show in town particularly worth seeing. Their Stock of Clocks, Bronzes, Ormolu, Vases, Table Glass, and Rich Cut Glass Chandeliers, in the Department is in the Italian and Louis XIV. Style, and consists of every article requisite for the Table and Sideboard. In the magnificent Showroom will be found a most beautiful stock of Ormolu Chandeliers, Candelabra, and Lustres, also the finest Set of Tapers ever produced. Sarl and Sons have also fitted up a capacious Showroom for Bronzes, Statuary, Vases, Groups, and Figures, and have appointed a distinct Book-keeper for Bronzes and Prices may be had on application.

SARL and SONS, 17 and 18, Cornhill, London.

HYACINTHS, JAPAN LILIES, &c.—Assortment "A" sent carriage-paid to any part of the kingdom, for 21 postage-stamps, 6 splendid Hyacinths, 6 Polyanthus Narcissus, 12 Double-scented Jonquils, 40 garden Narcissus (sweet-scented and Parkies), 12 Snowflakes, 12 Fortblooming Crocus, 40 others; also Assortment "B," at 10s. 6d. ROBT. TRIPP, 67 Rathbone-PLACE, and 15 M'CULLOCH, Covent-garden Market, W.C.

HYACINTH GLASSES.—TYE'S Registered, the only really effective and convenient Glass for growing Hyacinths in Water. Sold by all Glass-sellers, Oilmen, and Seedsmen, or sent carriage-paid on receipt of 24 stamps. Address for application—AGNES, BUTLER and M'CULLOCH, Covent-garden Market, W.C.

CARTER'S 20s. COLLECTION of BULBS for CONSERVATORY and OUTDOOR PLANTING.

1 dozen Roche Hyacinths, in three colours,	20 White Crocus,
1 Amber ditto,	20 Blue and Striped ditto,
1 ditto very fine Hyacinths for Pots or	20 Purple and Striped ditto,
Glasses, mixed,	12 Double Yellow Tulips,
6 Polyanthus Narcissus,	12 Double Scarlet ditto,
12 Sweet-scented White Dutch Narcissus,	10 Finest mixed Spanish Iris,
12 Double ditto,	12 Scarlet Turban Ranunculus,
50 Yellow Crocus,	50 Double Snowdrops.
50 Purple Crocus,

Price 20s. CARTER and CO., 237 and 238, High Holborn, London, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS send to the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE Notes and Queries. Arms Painted, Emgraved, and Quartered. Hints, 5s. 6d., or sketch. Pedigrees of Families, 3l.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-Inn.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The established Office for Searching Records, which for many years has been conducted by H. SALT, with that authenticity known throughout Europe.—H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

CAUTION on HERALDRY.—The Errors committed by Heralds, Engravers, Painters, and others, in Blazoning Arms, Painting Quarterings, Marshalling Crests, and Mottoes, are numerous. The public are solicited, for their own interests, to consult a practical Herald, at the Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office, who now assumes the name of H. SALT, Heraldic.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—Engraving on Steel, Silver, Electrotype, &c., in a superior style, by H. SALT, Heraldic Artist, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn. Seals, 6s. 6d. Book Plate Arms, 10s.—H. SALT, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

CHIMNY GLASSES.—Good British Glass, in Gilt Frames.

Plate 50 in. by 30 in.,	3 ft. 8 in. by 2 ft. 6 in., £7 7s.
Plate 46 in. by 28 in.,	3 ft. 4 in. by 2 ft. 3 in., £7 7s.
Plate 40 in. by 24 in.,	3 ft. by 2 ft., £5 5s.

Having entered into a contract with a leading manufacturer for the supply of glass-plate on unusually favourable terms, ALLCROFT and SONS are enabled to offer the above Chimney-glasses at the prices above named (fully thirty per cent below anything yet quoted to the trade), and will be happy to receive orders for the same. Packed and delivered at the railway-station, Wednesbury, Staffordshire.

N.B. These and all other goods purchased at the Establishment for the country will in future be packed in cases, and no package on account.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES.—Matchless in power and sharpness of definition. An immense variety to select from at CALLAGHAN'S, 351, New Bond-street, corner of Conduit-street. N.B. Sole agent for the celebrated small and powerful Gamas and Photographic Lenses made by Voigtlander, Vienna.

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—F. & H. SCHNEIDER, Optician, 21, Alexander-street, Westbourne-grove, London. Field Portability combined with great power in FIELD, DIAMOND and OPERA GLASSES, of their own manufacture. Their Field Glasses are unrivalled for clearness of vision and great power, and are recommended by the Officers of the 13th and 18th regiments of German cities, will show distinctly a person at a distance of 10 miles, and are sold at 3l. They are also sole purveyors to the Emperor of Austria, and all the Royal Family, and their Glasses are chiefly sent at 8 to 10 miles. They are also invaluable for Shooting, Deer-stalking, Yachting, &c., as they show objects with great distinctness in the dullest and most light days, and are of the most portable size. Their Opera Glasses are of the most powerful kind ever made, possessing much extraordinary power that seems, in their hands, to be quite astronomical, as they show distinctly Jupiter's moons and Saturn's rings, which are visible to double stars. With these telescopes a person can be seen and known three miles and a-half off. Their Race Glasses are of the most powerful kind, and are sold at 3l. 3s. Their Diamond Glasses are small and of great power, and are ordered by her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

SPECTACLES.—Optical Improvements, to enable persons at an advanced age to read without spectacles, and to see clearly at any distance. MORDAN'S SUN has invented and patented SPECTACLES with perfect distinctness of transparent power. The valuable advantages derived from this invention are, that the vision is limpided in preserved and strengthened; very aged persons are enabled to employ their sight at the most minute occupation; can see with facility at a much less magnifying power than with any other glasses, and are preserved from the dangerous effects of further powerful assistance.—S. MORDAN, 37, Gracechurch-street, Cheapside.

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme cases of Deafness. An effective substitute for the Natural Drum, Organic Vibrator, and Invisible Tube Conductor. Fits into the ear so as not to be visible. Is the least perceptible, the most natural, and most effective of sleeping noises in the head in entire use. Can be worn with perfect comfort, and enables those to hear distinctly at church and at public assemblies, for a long period of hearing instrument.—Messrs. SOLOMON, Opticians, 59, Alexander-street, Paddington, W.

NATAL.—THE LONDON JOINT-STOCK BANK, as AGENTS for the COLONIAL and AGRICULTURAL BANK OF NATAL, is PREPARED to grant Bills on that Colony at such rates of exchange as may be ruling at the time of application.—Apply at the Offices of the Bank, 5, Princes-street, Bank, London, October, 1860.

THE LAMENTED DEATH of H. INGRAM, Esq., M.P., on board the "Lady Elgin," steamer, has given rise to the publication, by J. T. WOOD, artistically executed, PERFORATED TOMB CARDS. Price Twopence each, and will be forwarded by publishing the amount in postage-stamps.—London Lace-paper Warehouse, 4, Strand.

IN consequence of the DEATH of the late SIR JAMSETJEE JEEJEEBHOY, Baronet, of Bombay, his WIDOW and the present Baronet, Sir JAMSETJEE JEEJEEBHOY, are desirous of ASCERTAINING the CONNECTION of JAMSETJEE JEEJEEBHOY, in lieu of his former name as of Cowasjee Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, of Bombay, which he leaves by the name of Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Baronet.—London, August 25, 1860.

A DOUBLE NUMBER
OF THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,

Will be published on SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27,

Containing a large Picture, PRINTED IN COLOURS, of the

METROPOLITAN RIFLE CORPS

in Hyde Park, in their respective Costumes; and a carefully-finished View of the FALLS OF NIAGARA

(PRINTED IN COLOURS)

from the Top of the Falls on the American Side; with a Number of Fine-Art and News Illustrations.

Price of the Number, Supplement, and Coloured Supplement, Twopence: Stamped, Threepence.

OFFICE, 198, Strand.

INTERESTING ILLUSTRATIONS TO APPEAR IN NEXT WEEK'S NUMBER
OF
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Plan of Rome.
Sketches in connection with the Battle on the Volturno:—
Fight in the Field near St. Angelo.
Battery where the Neapolitans Burnt the Wounded on the Bisciano.
Charge of General Eber's Hussars The Neapolitans Caught in a Trap.
View of Capua from Monte St. Angelo.
Ovation of the First Garibaldian at a Neapolitan Café.
Major Delfico, and others.
General Medici.
A View of Sicily, taken from the Coast of Calabria, between Reggio and San Giovanni.
Odin Rey, Talien-wan, showing the Position of the British Camps.
H.R.H. the Prince of Wales Descending a Timber-slide at Ottawa.
Lumbermen's Regatta at Ottawa.
Carriage built by the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada for H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
Review of Troops and Volunteers at Cape Town by H.R.H. Prince Alfred.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1861, in the manner of the Season, printed in colours, from original Drawings by Mrs. Margetts, will be published shortly. Price 1s.

ADVERTISEMENTS CANNOT BE RECEIVED AFTER THE 29TH INST.

TERMS:—Whole Page .. .. .. £36.
Half Page .. .. .. £18.
Quarter Page .. .. .. £9.
Any smaller Advertisement, 2s. 6d. per line (double column).

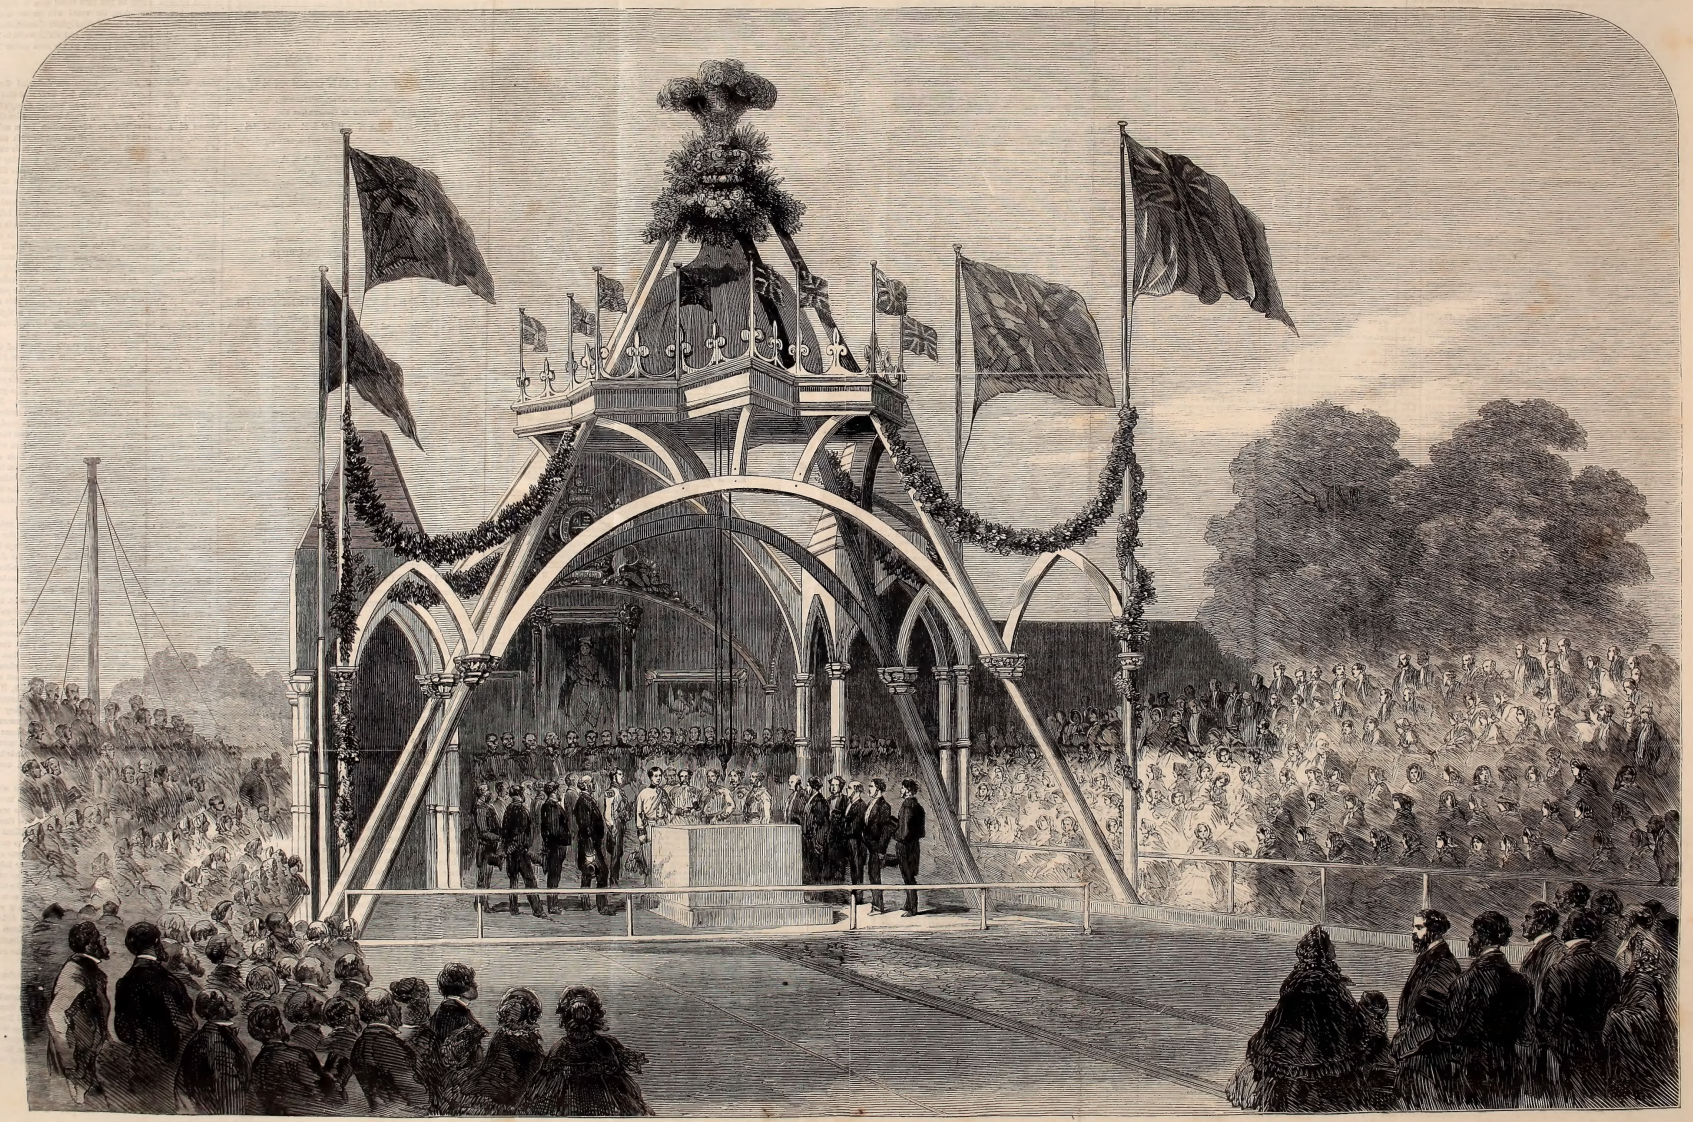
 ILLUSTRATED ADVERTISEMENTS will be received.

Office, 198, Strand, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

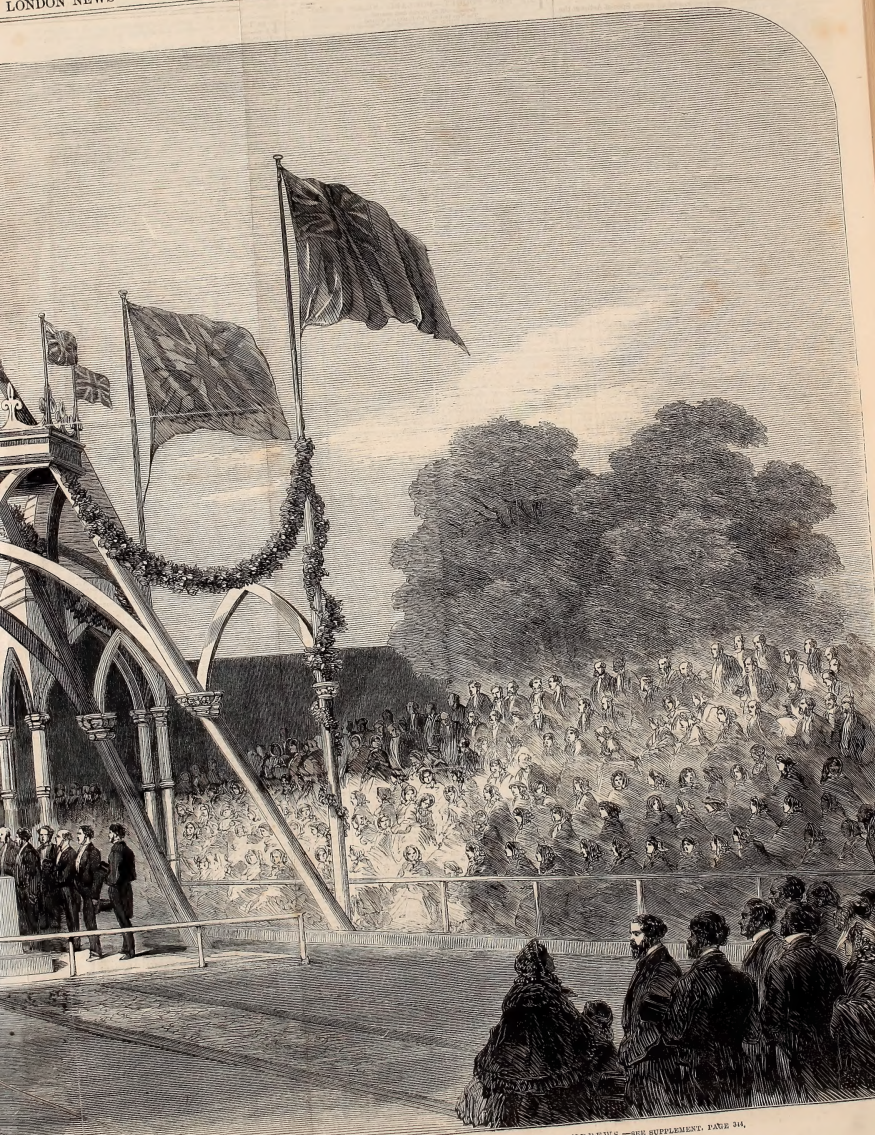
LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1860.

IT may, we think, now be taken that the kingdom of Italy is an established fact. Another such victory as that which Garibaldi has just gained, and the last struggles of despotism will have ceased in the South: the Bourbon, once more the magnanimous asserter of the liberties and the rights of his country—using that word in its most extensive sense—will fraternize with the forces of Sardinia, advancing from the north; the dawn of that beautiful country a constitutional Government will be proclaimed; while no doubt the next act of the conquerors will be to ask the suffrages of United Italy in the choice of a Sovereign. There seems nothing to interfere with the obvious choice of Victor Emmanuel. If so, all the machinery for working the whole system of things is already prepared, and the same facility which marked the incorporation of the recently-annexed provinces into the system which has hitherto prevailed in the Piedmontese kingdom will probably be found in the establishment of the institutions of the new united kingdom of the realm of Central and Southern Italy. At present there are no apparent signs or symptoms of any external interposition even to delay, far less to oppose or to mar, this consummation. The great Powers seem to acquiesce in the steps which have been taken by Garibaldi and the King of Sardinia: by their silence they are giving their consent. A kingdom, important whether as relates to its territorial extent, its population, or its resources, has risen like an exhalation out of the ruins of despotism. The fact of its existence will at once place it within the category of that diplomatic federation in Europe which is implied in the phrase "Concert of Powers," and a formal recognition of the claim of the kingdom of Italy to take its place therein must shortly follow. To that Monarch and to those statesmen who have worked out this event a mighty charge and a grave responsibility are committed. It remains to be seen whether the political ability and the diplomatic astuteness which sufficed for the rule of Piedmont are adequate to the conduct of the affairs of so vastly enlarged a dominion. For ourselves, we are inclined to hope, and indeed to believe, that the necessary capability will not be found wanting, especially if those who have attained the objects of their ambition will approach the important duty cast upon them in singleness of purpose, and with an honest intention to act in all things with a view towards the interests and the consolidation of the rights of the people whose deliverance has been wrought from a yoke long so heavy as to make them the objects of commiseration and sympathy in the eyes of civilised, and still more of free, Europe. The path of duty lies clear before the administrators and executive of the new kingdom. Let us trust that there will never again be a necessity—at least in the parts of Italy which are now standing on the verge of freedom—for the exercise of the genius and the patriotism of Garibaldi in that sense in which he has been called upon to display his powers: but, nevertheless, the world will expect that this heroic chieftain shall be afforded some sphere of action which will mark the gratitude he has deserved, and which ought to be his of right, so that he may not be driven to his own native hearth for reward, exceeding great as that must be.



WHEN Italian and American topics are deducted from the journalist's stock there is not much left to him at this part of the year. The metropolis is still very empty, though the disagreeable weather in new gives promise of realizing our fondest visions of a fine autumn, in compensation for a miserable summer, are among the dreams that are sent through the Gate of Ivory, and people are being driven home to their own firesides. The sporting world had a tolerably good day for the Cesarewitch race (in reference to which the prophets displayed their usual accuracy of prediction); but here is the middle of October, and we may now "give up." So uncomfortable a year does not seem to be in the recollection of that celebrated person, famous for never saying anything, the Oldest Inhabitant. The hops have entirely failed, and the barley harvest is all but a failure; and the brewers have announced that beer is to be six shillings a barrel dearer, with to many persons will seem a much more important fact than that the wretched weather has set people skurrying off to the continent in shilling fares in July evenings. As winter is now coming on in earnest, and legitimately, we must endeavour to forget that the part of the "Cycle" in which all things proceed has made 1860 a year of dissatisfaction and discomfort. Now we have a right to wet and cold days, howling wind, and murky fog, and there seems every prospect of our rights being fully accorded.

Lord Feilding's inquiries into the conditions of the rifle-matches to which our marksmen have been invited by their French neighbours have not induced him to recommend the volunteers to cross the Channel. The arrangements are to be very much more favourable for the spectators who get up the sports than for those who are to take part in them. From the accounts, however, the shooting appears to have excited a good deal of interest in Paris, and there has been some good practice, though nothing, so far as we can make out, to rival the feats of our own leading marksmen. Our French friends will clearly understand that Englishmen did not abstain from attending this tournament from any dislike to a contest, but thus could not recognise in a private speculation anything kindred to the Wimbledon meeting, which was inaugurated by Royal design, and to which marksmen of all nations were invited on the fairest conditions.



The dislike which the majority of Englishmen entertain for those who seek to introduce into the worship of the Anglican Church any of the customs which have been perverted and to keep the authorities rather inactive in regard to the abominable conduct of the mobs that attend St. George's-in-the-East. It is, however, a mistake to leave legislation in mob hands, and the result is now seen. Although all that could be properly complained of has been accomplished, the Bishop of London's, a body of male and female ruffians continue to attend to make noises and sing parodies, and turn the House of Prayer into a den of thieves. Mr. Selfe, the magistrate, has astonished one of these persons by sending him to prison; but the example has not been sufficient, and the scene of Sunday last was most disgraceful. The police are very reluctant to interfere properly, and whether they have orders to be indulgent or not we are not in a position to say; but it is quite certain that, if knots of persons conducted themselves at one of our churches as the St. George's rioters do in the sacred edifice, they would be watched, pounced upon, dragged out without ceremony, and remitted to the cells of the station-house. The Home Secretary may be able to say—we cannot—why an interruption of "Lurline" or the "Huguenots" should be made impossible, while any gang of scoundrels may disturb a congregation engaged in the service of the Church.

According to the decision of the magistrates who had to superintend the latest investigation into the Road murder there was nothing in the newly-discovered evidence to warrant the committal of the nursemaid Gough, and she was therefore discharged. It may be right to mention that Mrs. Kent desired to make a statement, which she was not allowed to make, to the effect that on the night of the murder her rest was so bad that she is able to say distinctly that Mr. Kent never left the bedchamber. Mr. Kent, through his solicitor, offers an explanation of his having locked up the policemen. He states that he was desired to do everything in the ordinary manner, so as to avoid exciting the attention of the household, and, as it was known that he always locked the door in question, he followed that custom, though its effect was to make the officers prisoners. Public opinion will, of course, place its own estimate of value upon these statements, as it has done upon the rest of the evidence in this remarkable case.

Among the various attractions in London, perhaps none is more noteworthy than one which has just been announced. A new church is to rise on the former site of Vauxhall Gardens. The "tall maypole" that "once o'erlooked the Strand" gave place to the "church that collects the saints of Drury-lane;" but the change immortalised by Pope is somewhat less remarkable than the conversion of the cockney fairyland to ecclesiastical purposes. Surely there must be a Rev. Mr. Simpson somewhere, and to him, for the sake of the fitness of things, the first presentation of the living should fall.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.—HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS LAYING THE CORNER-STONE OF THE PARLIAMENTARY BUILDINGS AT OTTAWA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, C. H. ANDREWS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 344.

...N BUILDINGS AT OTTAWA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 344.

THE COURT.

The Queen and the Prince Consort have left Coburg and gone to Rudolstadt, near Cobourg, where they are guests of the Prince Regent and the Princess of Prussia.

During the sojourn of the Court at Coburg her Majesty and the Prince Consort, with Prince and Princess Frederick William made excursions in the neighborhood which daily, and generally at an early hour, a few members of their suites.

On Tuesday se'nnight the Queen drove to Pillitsch (a property belonging to the King of the Belgians) with the Regent of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and Princess Alice. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha accompanied her Majesty on horseback. The Royal dinner party consisted of the Queen, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, Princess Alice, Prince Frederick William Nicholas Leopold Count Bismarck, Lord Augustus Loftus, her Majesty's Minister at Vienna, who had arrived at Coburg on the previous day, and his Excellency had received an invitation to dinner from the Duke and Duchess of Coburg.

On Wednesday se'nnight the Queen and the Prince Consort walked, accompanied by Prince and Princess Frederick William, Princess Alice, and the Duke and Duchess of Coburg, to the Museum of Sculpture at Coburg; they remained for some time inspecting its contents. In the afternoon her Majesty and the Prince Consort, with the Duke and Duchess of Coburg, Prince and Princess Frederick William, Princess Alice, and Count Mensdorff, drove to Kalenberg, which is in the neighbourhood. The Royal dinner party in the evening comprised the Queen and the Prince Consort, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, Princess Alice, the Prince and Princess of Reuss, Count and Countess Alexander Mensdorff, Lord Alfred Russell, and Lord Augustus Loftus. The Hon. C. Murray, her Majesty's Minister to the Court of Saxony, who had arrived at Coburg on the previous day, had the honour of dining with the Prince.

On Thursday se'nnight the Queen, with the Prince Consort, the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, Princess Alice, the Prince and Princess of Reuss, Count and Countess Alexander Mensdorff-Pouilly, drove to Rosenau, where luncheon was served. After luncheon her Majesty walked round the Royal gardens, which were very much in abundance, and her Majesty and the rest of the party remained for some time inspecting its contents. In the afternoon her Majesty and the Prince Consort, with the Duke and Duchess of Coburg, returned to the palace at Coburg at six o'clock.

On Friday se'nnight the Queen, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Prince and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, Princess Alice, drove to Rosenau. The Duke and Duchess of Coburg and Princess Alice drove to Coburg. After his Royal Highness had gone about three miles the horses became restive, and commenced kicking violently. The coachman, finding that he could not control them, jumped off the box. The Royal Highness, not without effect. At about the distance of a mile from Coburg the carriage was overturned, and the coachman was thrown violently to the ground. The Prince Consort observed that the last, which is lowered to prevent accidents when driving in the streets of Coburg, was not necessary to the arrival of the train due at Coburg at five o'clock. A waggon using the Royal road at the time was ordered to leave the road. A violent concussion being then inevitable, his Royal Highness jumped from the carriage and the horses dragged his Royal Highness, though receiving some superficial cuts and bruises in the face, was not at all seriously injured. The coachman was thrown from the coachman. The carriage had in the meantime come into collision with the last of the waggons, and was completely overturned and dashed to the ground and considerably hurt. His Royal Highness immediately directed his attention to the coachman, who appeared to be the least injured of the party who has charge of the hor. The horses, having then freed themselves from the carriage, continued their course for the palace at Coburg, where they were met by Colonel Ponsonby, the Prince's Equerry, who had taken his attendants to the earlier part of the road. Colonel Ponsonby, on seeking assistance for the coachman, and desired Colonel Ponsonby to continue his route to meet the Queen, who was at that time on her way to Rosenau, and to inform her Majesty of what had taken place. His Royal Highness's health has not at all suffered from the accident, and the bruises and cuts on his face are healing in a few days. It is gratifying to add that the coachman is doing well after the accident.—The condition of his Royal Highness the Prince Consort is very satisfactory. His Royal Highness slept well throughout the night, is free from fever, and the slight injuries he has received will, no doubt, be healed in a short time.

On the evening of the 29th ult. the Burgomaster of Coburg and a deputation from the town were admitted to an audience by the Queen to congratulate her Majesty, in the name of the inhabitants, upon her arrival at Coburg.

The Duke and Duchess of Richmond have arrived in town from Goodwood, N.B. We regret to learn that his Grace has been but slight amendment in the health of the noble Duke from his sudden illness.

The Marquis of Salisbury and the Countess of Shaftesbury have left Lansdowne House, Berkeley-square, for Bowood, Wilts.

The Earl of Aberdeen has arrived at Argyll House from Haddo House, Aberdeenshire, in which county his lordship is in much better health.

The Earl of Carlisle is entertaining a family circle at the viceregal seat at Dublin. The Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde, Lady Caroline Canning, Viscount and Viscountess Combermere, Hon. Mrs. Ellis, Elizabeth Grey, and Captain Lascelles are among the noble Earl's guests.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston have left Broadlands, Romsey, Hants, for the residence of Countess of Shaftesbury in Dorsetshire.

The marriage of Lady Emma Stanley, only daughter of the Earl and Countess of Derby, with Captain Hon. Frederick Stanley, brother of the Earl of Shrewsbury, took place on Thursday at Knowsley.

Sir Alexander Cockburn, the Lord Chief Justice of England has returned to town from a brief tour in Italy.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

Lady Smythe: The will of Lady Smythe was proved in London on the 8th inst. Her Ladyship was the widow of Sir Edward Joseph Smythe, Bart., and the daughter of Sir Thomas Hyde Page, Bart. Lady Smythe died at Paris on the 16th of December, 1859, and a codicil to the duly following, and did not die till after the decease of the testatrix, appointed the executors of the brother, Richard Montagu Bethell, Esq., M.P. for the county of Lincoln, of the testatrix's husband, Sir Charles Frederick Smythe, Bart., who succeeded to the title and estates of his father, the late Baronet, and to whom she bequeathed the sum of £5000, and the residue of the testatrix's property to be divided equally amongst them, with the exception of a legacy to her brother, Lord Bethell, of £5000, and to one or two of her friends of £1000 each. Her daughter Catherine is residuary legatee, and was also appointed executrix by a last will dated the same property.

The will of Donna Maria de Bezieres nuit Sampaio, widow, a Portuguese lady, late post mes proved in London. She was residing in the parish of Kensington, where she died in November last, and was possessed of property in England, which she bequeathed to her sister, Donna Antonia Maria Sampaio, for her sole resting executor. The will is in the Portuguese language. A copy in English translation was also proved of her property in Portugal, by her sister and sole executrix, bequeathing to her legitimate children, or their issue, the sum of £1000 each, and also an annuity of £100 to her sister—two thirds thereof, during the term of her widowhood, together with the furniture, and has for dividing the remaining portion amongst her near relatives, according to the degrees in which they stand.

The will of Thomas Addison, M.D., of Berkeley-square, late consulting physician to the Middlesex Hospital, was admitted to probate on the 4th of this month, and the personalty sworn under £30,000 by one of the executors—Dr. John Addison, Esq., of Monks House, Cumberland, the testator's brother; power being reserved to Alfred Rooker Bateman, Esq., surgeon, of King's road, Brighton, also an executor, to prove when the said Bethell has forfeited and made over all his shares in the Internationl Mutual Marine Assurance Company; and to her son and daughter he bequeaths an annuity of £100; these annuities to be free of legacy duty. The presentation of plate made to him from various parties, both public and private, he leaves to his said brother, to be held by him as heirlooms in the family. He appoints his said brother, John Addison, Esq., residuary legatee of his estate, real and personal. The will bears date September 26, 1855, and a codicil in 1858. He died at his residence, 14, Wellington-villas, Brighton, on the 12th of June last.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE UNITED STATES.

In our account, last week, of the Prince's progress in America we announced the arrival of his Royal Highness at the Island of St. John, in which, dropping the Royal state that marked his receptions in Canada, he is to be recognised simply as an English nobleman.

From Quebec to Chicago the Prince travelled in a superb car splendidly fitted up for his use. At every point crowds of people lined the road. At Kalamazoo, Ann Arbor, and Detroit, there were immense gatherings, salutes, music, and excitement. The Prince, who was very much fatigued, spent the greater part of the day on the sofa in his sleeping apartment, and would in no instance gratify the curiosity of the crowd. They climbed up to and looked through the windows, and cried out "Prince, Prince!" "Let us see him" and so forth. Presents of honey, fruit, and, in one instance, bread, were made and accepted. Great disappointment was felt at Kalamazoo, where the Prince declined to receive several points people attempted to force themselves as passengers into the train, and were with difficulty kept out.

At Chicago station the rush of people was awful. The police kept up admirable order, and the party were enabled to get to their carriages in a comparatively quiet manner. A fine view of the Prince. In reply to the often-repeated cheers the Prince raised his hat and returned the salutations of the people in the most kind way. He was highly gratified at the enthusiastic but orderly welcome.

The Prince of Wales arrived at Chicago in intense grain-elevators at Chicago on the morning of the 22nd, and then drove through the city. He afterwards drove to the Hydraulic Works.

The Royal party left Chicago for Dwight, a small village on the prairies, and a great resort of English sportsmen, on the way to St. Louis, which they reached on the 24th. There was very much excitement at the Prince, who enjoyed the sport highly, bagging over a hundred birds.

A telegram, dated St. Louis, the 27th of September, says:—"The Prince left Dwight this morning. Before he left he expressed himself in regard to the sport and said he was to stay longer, as I presented his hosts with several beautiful gifts. The Prince departed amidst hearty cheering. Mayor Taylor, who was invited with the Governor to visit the Prince dashed by. At Alton he took the steamer for St. Louis, where he was received by the Mayor, who welcomed the Prince on the reception of citizens.

A letter from New York says:—"The ball to be given at the New York Academy of Music in his honour on October 12 will be the most splendid ever given in this country. Already a meeting comprising 1000 of the élite of New York has been held, and steps of construction adjoining the Academy. The first night, a portion of the building will be profusely decorated with floral decorations of the building will be profusely decorated with floral decorations of the building will be profusely decorated with floral decorations

LITERATURE AND ART.

THERE is nothing so indefatigably industrious as literature. Your proclamations in unanswerably lazy. It needs an effort now and then to say a kind thing, but he would as soon attempt to trouble a wheelbarrow over a Niagara tightrope as to go out of his way to do a malevolent action. Literature, however, will sit up all night, will walk hundreds of miles with peas in its shoes, will toil like a navigator, will overcome difficulties to which piercing the Box Tunnel or draining Chatmoss are as trifles, in order to say a spiteful thing, and even a sweet reward will lie in the knowledge of having inflicted pain or annoyance. It would have puzzled the worthy Doctor who discovered a whole book full of the "Fine Arts" contained nothing to have told the story of "Lefevre," or invented "My Uncle Toby's Conversation with His Bluebottle" but with the assistance of pen and ink scenes that he not front and hunt up the minutest loans from Montaigne, from Rabelais, or from Tom Brown, appropriated with or without permission by the genius who wrote "Tristram Shandy."

Poor Mr. Tom Taylor is just now the butt of the illustrated tribe. Last week, in an invidious spirit, we referred to the fact that the companion's Lyceum drama of "The Brigand and his Banker" having been borrowed from M. Alboni's "Roi des Montagnes," from which the plot and the characters, from Hadji Haynes to the English tourists, were the original property of M. Edmond About, how does this affect the originality of "The Brigand and his Banker" as a play? Is not the plot of "The Iron Chest" taken from "Caleb Williams"? Is not "The Lady of Lyons" the life-story of Napoleon Bonaparte and others annexed, besides, from a novel by Frederic Soulié? And does the point of mistaking a gentleman's name for an inn, on which "Box Tunnel" and "Conquest" turn, belong wholly to Oliver Goldsmith? The wood incrustation that can be brought against "The Brigand and his Banker" is that it has not been successful; but the author of "Still Waters Run Deep" and "The Overland Route" can afford to bear with equanimity or trifling and temporary annoyance. Meanwhile in connection with the play and the study of what has been said concerning motes and beams in their relation to the eyes of critics, a literary and learned friends, one of whom has actually devoted six columns of his esteemtaining print to the parade of parallel passages from About's novel and Taylor's play.

We see that Sir Francis Scott, chairman of the Birmingham School of Art, has published an elaborate statement of the case of "Art and Foreign Office be Cobbe or Classic." Sir Francis has indited an eloquent plea in favour of the fine arts and their claims on the State, and has put the important question that could be asked just now is, "Are we to have any new Foreign Office as all." Months—nay, years—slip away, and the Ministers of the British Government continue to transact business in uncomfortable cupboards and ruinous hovels. A fire, a flood, and a gimlet in the hands of a practical joker, and the affairs of State are there carried on should bring a blush to the cheeks of our Department of Works—if Departments had any cheeks or could ever blush.

We have seen this week two Gladstones in the field—not political, but literary and palæographic Gladstones. The one was recently earned by the Chancellor of the Exchequer through his crushing defeat of the abominations of the Government of the Ionian savages of Carlo Fearlo and his companions has incited Lord Lismore and Mr. Edwin James to write eloquent descriptions of the Ionian Nadia, Procida, Zante and their accomplishments of tyranny and misery. These graphic narratives have been duly printed in the Times, which appears now to fulfil the long-wanted function of a Government General to publicity." The days of hopeless sighing for the honours of type are over. Any person who has a grievance has but to say he only bide his opportunity, and choose the proper one—viz., when the Session is over, intelligence scanty, and the town full of dukes and dustmen, to write the poorest of leading articles, a copy poem, or a dissertation on the digamma.

Albeit, the penultimate paragraph we lamented the delay which surrounds the subject of the new Foreign Office, it must be admitted that every exercise is not badminton. Some of the most splendid edifices. We have no Louvre, no Palais de Justice, it is true; but we may point with pride to Bridgewater House, to our clubs, to Mr. Hope's mansion in Piccadilly, and Mr. Holford's in Park-lane, and say, "these are our Palazzi Pitti, Barberigo, Doria Strozzi, and Grimani; our Villa Pamphili, our Hermitage, and Buckingham Palace." We shall have, ere long, another palace in the metropolis, owing, notwithstanding supplemental purposes, to its private entrance and private enterprise and munificence. The foundations of Baron Rothschild's house at Hyde Park-corner are already commenced; and although the head of the principal of the many connections to the eastward to part with his premises will curtail the contemplated area of the site, the new Mansion House Rothschild will be one of the noblest structures of which London will be enabled to boast. Mr. Marsh Nelson, the well-known architect to whom the commission has been confided, will next, we hear, devote his attention to the re-edification of the business premises of the Rothschilds in New-court, St. Swithin's-lane. It is fitting that the Rothschilds should have countinghouses as palatial as their "pleasance houses. Hyde Parkcorner and "New-court"—what a change from the little shop in the Judeu-gasse, Frankfort; and how much energy, toil, and strength of will does not the change represent!

The Huddersfield Mechanics' Institute holds a high festival, in the shape of a soiree, on Saturday, the 20th inst. Lord Brougham, undaunted by the fatigues of the Social Science Congress, has promised to preside, and give away the prizes at Huddersfield. One marquess of the series is the expectation of the attendance of a gigantic master of celebrities enamored with literature, science, and art.

A most interesting document is the recently-published report of the Bookwalking Union. The hawkers employed by this society have gone far to supersede the old chapmen and pedlars with their ruinous ribbons and soft cotton stuffs. Many of the publications among the loveliest in the provincial and rural districts a love of sound and wholesome literature. Widely circulated periodicals of this kind are the majority of our cheap publications, it still needs the "house-to-house" visitation of our bookhawkers to drive out the pernicious and irreverent ribaldry from the cottage and the shop. Only the other day we collected from a dead wall in Liverpool a fasciculus of halfpenny ballads, written down to the understanding of the multitude, most nearly all either seditious or morally objectionable. The least hurtful were the efforts supposed to be written in the confessions of the murderers under sentence of death. Judicious bookhawking may do much to destroy the influence of these pernicious publications.

The spirited printseller who exhibited Mr. Holman Hunt's picture of "Our Saviour with the Doctors in the Temple" has, we understand, cleaned away the pitiful grimy abominations of Mr. Ruskin, by the mere shillings received from the exhibition at the German Gallery. Old-fashioned people when they are told of the thousands contributed by the public for gazing at an oil painting are apt to recall the bygone truth to the President West's Scriptural pieces, and Miss Linwood's wonderful needlework pictures.

We mention as a rumour—and nothing but a rumour—that the profession will have to hang out a new sign, and that the dramatic critic on the Times newspaper is about to resign his post, and that he will be succeeded by Mr. Tom Taylor. Although the latter will still be able to spare the brilliance and candour of Mr. Oxenford as theatrical critic, the literature in its higher aspect would be the gainer by an increase of leisure on the part of one of the ripest scholars and most thoughtful essayists of the day.

* * *

James Phillip Baker, Esq., has been appointed to be an Inspector of coal-mines, in the room of Henry Longridge, Esq., deceased.

The performance of the miracle play at Oberammergau is at an end, and having reached its twentieth representation, and put into the pockets of the pious villagers as much as £6000.

The Chamber of Citizens of Hamburgh on the 5th resolved, by seventy votes to fifty, that civil marriage should not be made obligatory but should be allowed if required by the parties.

The coal of mail and the sword worn by the Marquis de Monadescha at the moment when he was assassinated at Palermo, by order of Cheridino of Sweden, have just been placed in the Museum of Army of Mr. Thomas d'Aguila.

MUSIC.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE opened on Wednesday evening—neither at the time nor in the manner intended and expected. The opening of the house was announced for Monday, the 8th instant, with Mr. G. A. Macfarren's new opera, "Robin Hood;" but this was found impracticable, owing to the insufficiency of the rehearsals and attention required for the production of a work of such magnitude. It was, therefore, postponed to Thursday; and that evening (as we have said) opened on Wednesday with an opera which is as far as possible from having any pretensions to novelty—the "Trovatore." Mr. Smith has embarked in a very bold undertaking; but the public have learned from the experience of many years that this gentleman is prudent and sagacious as well as bold. The selection of the present work will, we are satisfied to infer that his future will resemble his past. He has come forward as the manager-in-chief in the place in the Haymarket in what has always been regarded in a fashionable sense as the dead season of the year, and at a time when, in common parlance, "there is nothing else going on." Consequently, to the Italian and English opera in a style of completeness and splendour not unworthy of this great theatre, he will add the drama in its highest sense. His scheme, we believe, was originally confined to English opera, and Italian opera was an after-thought. But in this he may have made ample provision for both. He has engaged two distinct companies, in which we find the names of the most distinguished English and Italian singers, both of the established reputation and of rising strength; and the performances are under two separate conductors—Sir Julius Benedict for the English, and Signor Arditi for the Italian. Perhaps Mr. Smith might have opened his theatre with more éclat had he given more time to more elaborate preparation; but, perhaps, he courted the curiosity of the public. Not that the performance was either "stale, flat, or unprofitable." On the contrary, this opera, though it cannot be termed a first-rate work of art, though the better parts are mixed up with much that is commonplace and noisy, yet contains in the stirring character of the music a most striking combination, and the vein of pure Italian melody which runs through it elements of popularity which must ensure success in a country which is not ripe for far greater excellence. And when, besides its own attractions, we have the acting and singing of Titiens and Giuglini, the two great stars of the Italian Opera, we have no doubt of its success—for it is that the "Trovatore," hackneyed though it be, is still one of the best and most effective operas that the Italian stage has to boast. But the performance of Wednesday was completely successful. The music was received throughout with applause, and the singers were duly rewarded by a reception even more than usually enthusiastic, and at the fall of the curtain the expressions of approbation were loud, general, and cordial. Titiens, whose first Italian début as the Count of Luna, was suffering under a hoarseness which evidently affected the power of her voice. She unexpectedly failed to obtain the encore which used always to be given to Gratian, in the famous air, "Il balen del suo sorriso;" but, luring the voice, our impression was that the intelligent and forcible actor and as an artistical singer, he is Gratian's superior. The character of Azucena was sustained by Madame Lemaire, a lady who held a respectable position on the boards of Her Majesty's Theatre last season. She has a fine contralto voice, which is powerful enough for the strongest enough for the wild and passionate gipsy. The choruses were good, the orchestra, under Signor Arditi's baton, went admirably; and the stage was well arranged and beautiful.

At present we can only mention the production of "Robin Hood" on Thursday. Next week we shall give some account of this opera and of its performance.

THE THEATRES.

HAYMARKET.—On Monday Mr. John Brougham, many years ago a favourite English actor of Irish character, reappeared before an English public in the character of a Frenchman in "Playing for Love." The United States we understand he has been very successful. His reappearance was made in a very comedy, "Playing for Love," written by Mr. —, and which, it is stated, is written by himself. He therefore on this occasion comes before us both as author and actor. The comedy is in five acts, but the author has not sufficiently compressed his materials to force than to the more dignified drama. Bustle and oddity are the chief characteristics of the piece, and the author has not the very happiest conceptions of the kind. Thus there are two brothers, Oliver and Jasper Wardle, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Buckstone, who are the exact reverse of the other impatient; and they have a niece, who is a strong-minded woman, and named Barbara (Mrs. Wilkins). Mr. Broughan himself plays the Irishman, Jack Swift, who is over-wild, and produces the great effect to the ridiculous situations which arise in consequence. Mr. Broughan's acting is very clever, but he has a large number of smaller characters in the drama, all qualified to give variety and animation to the piece, which is extremely amusing in parts.

LYCEUM.—On Monday a change of performance took place at this theatre, and a Miss Gougenheim—a lady who has secured some reputation in the provinces—made her first appearance in London for her appearance was that of the heroine in Mr. Bourcicault's comedy of "The Colleen Bawn," which, though not great enough to exceed on its first production at Drury Lane, has since acquired popularity in the United States. She was warmly welcomed by the audience. Her first start, however, was not a favourable one, for she appeared to labour to some difficulty in the reading of a letter with which her part commences. This difficulty, however, being overcome, she performed the rest with vivacity; and, being an impulsive actress, with quick, black eyes and pleasant voice, she soon won upon the audience. The play was throughout well performed; and a scene between Mr. Charles Mathews and Miss Kate Saville excited extraordinary enthusiasm. Mr. Boiler, as the Irish peasant, Myles-na-Coppaleen, made a decided hit, and was efficiently appointed, and the utmost done to imitate a brilliant success.

ASTLEY'S.—Mr. Fitzball has given a new drama to this stage on an old subject—"Robin Hood; or the Merrie Outlaws of Sherwood." The author has taken the liberty of making considerable use of Ivanhoe and The Lady of the Lake with several charming songs. The management have provided the piece with a very splendid scenic display. There are many noble spectacles, in which, of course, the equestrian element prevails. The drama will probably achieve great popularity. The scenes in the circle must be absolutely attract; and the season promises fairly for a prolonged success.

The performance of the "Passions-spiel," similar to the miracle-plays of the middle ages, and which only takes place once in ten years, has just concluded at Oberammergau, in Bavaria, and has attracted as one of the latter exhibitions. On the last occasion of the performance the number of strangers who visited the village was about 5000, and the receipts, which have been kept separate, are stated. About twenty performances were given, and the whole of the money is considered to consist of about 6000 florins, part of which will be devoted to the production of the entertainment in 1870, and part to the relief of the poor.

A FEROCIOUS ASSAULT, which is expected hourly to become a murder, is reported to have been perpetrated, in the vicinity of Annsley Hall, one of the suburbs of Leeds. Mr. Stephen Lupton, a shopkeeper, was returning to his home at Annsley Hall from Leeds, on a pony of wanting some cutter oil, and struck over the head with a hatchet. A horse-driver named Longley, who was with Mr. Lupton, heard the blow and gave up and crawl away. The assailant then ransacked some drawers, but seems to have found little booty, and decamped. A man named Lupton, a cry of "Murder!" and going to the house, met him coming out. He pushed him down, and escaped. He is still at large.

ESCAPE OF THREE PRISONERS FROM HULL GAOL.—Last Saturday morning three men were awaiting their trial at the ensuing sessions effected their escape from Hull borough gaol under circumstances of unusual daring and ingenuity. While in the cells adjacent to the chapel the shape of a saw they managed to escape through the bars, and, fastening their prison window, and, by the assistance of long ropes made out of "mumlin," which it was their duty to prepare, they climbed over a wall twenty-seven feet high. The escapade was taken day after day, as the prisoners found opportunity, and the whole affair appears to have been the labour of weeks. With one of the men the labour has been ineffectual, for he was captured the day on which he made his escape, and to the taking-place of the others the police are said to have a clue.

Intelligence has been received at North Shields of the loss of the St. Laurence of that port on her passage to Constaza. The master, mate, and five of the crew perished with her.

COUNTRY NEWS.

A new line of railway from Hatton to Stratford-on-Avon was opened on Tuesday.

A young man named Philcox is in custody at Lowes for stabbing his father. He pleaded a peaceable into his father's thigh, remarking, "That is what I good you!"

The following Judicial appointments have been made at Dublin:—Serjeant Fitzgibbon to be the new Master in Chancery; and Mr. T. de Moleyns to be County Judge of Donegal.

The Confirmation-feast of the Devon County School for the education of the middle classes was held at West Buckland, on Thursday week, the Lord Lieutenant of the county, Earl Fortescue.

A Monastery of Benedictine Monks and a Priory Cathedral have just been inaugurated near Hereford. The institution is purely the gift of a gentleman of large property in the county named Mr. Joseph Leycester Mr. Wegg-Prosser.

The Swansea and Bellance laid the cable in connection with the Liverpool and Holyhead telegraph on Wednesday morning across the mouth of the Mersey. The cable is laid on the bed of the sea north west of the new dock at Liverpool.

The Dublin Morning News says:—"On Sunday evening the solemn Office of the Dead was recited by the students of the College of Maynooth for the repose of the souls of the deceased members of the Irish Brigade."

A young lady, daughter of Mr. Mosley, of Sans-Souci, Cheltenham, went out to dank but were her hair as flowing swaying motion of the grave. The flames were extinguished by the man servant, but she died on the following morning.

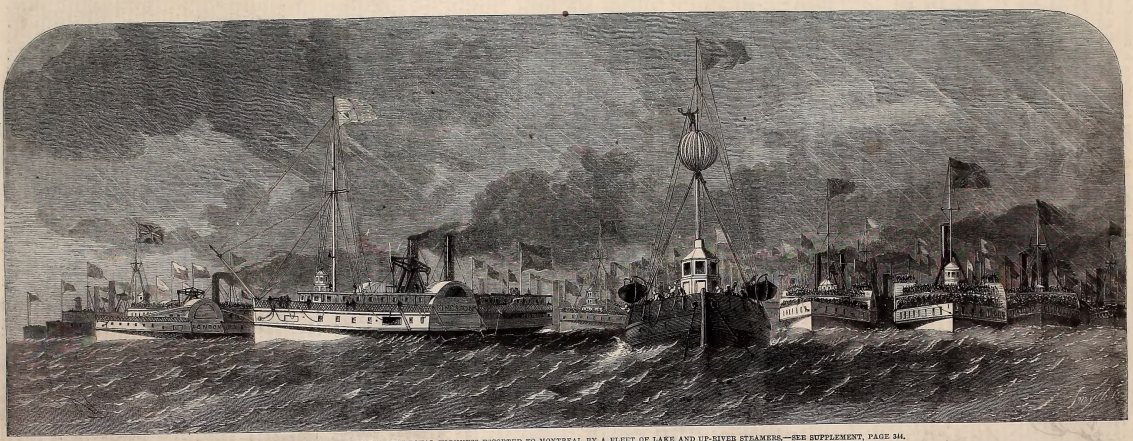
Last Saturday morning fifty-three tubs of smuggled spirit were found buried in Mount Sion, about two miles from Penzance, by the preventive men stationed there. Those who had been taken in custody have been charged in what was, no doubt, the right quarter.

ELECTION FOR BOSTON.—Tuesday's Gazette contains a notice from the Speaker of the House of Commons to the effect that the death of Mr. Hercules Pigott has created a vacancy in the borough here certified to him under the hands of two members of the House of Commons, the right hon. Thomas Baring and the right hon. Sir Edward Ryan, and that a writ has, since, issue a new writ for the election of a member to serve for the said borough.

The tomb designed by Mr. G. Scott as the monument to the late Earl of Eldon, and erected over the grave of his lordship and that of the deceased nobleman repose on a slab of Devonshire marble, the body of the tomb being of Portland stone. On the slab are inscriptions giving the family quarterings of the Elizenore family; and the figure of the deceased, which is in full robes, is surrounded by the collar of the Garter, and that of the Bath, in order of the Garter.

The Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association holds its sittings in Newcastle this year, and on Tuesday the eighth annual session was opened in the new Lecture Room of the Literary and Philosophical Hall. It was resolved to hold the meeting of 1861 at Worcester, and it was also decided to appoint a committee to consider the following different questions, requesting them to convene a meeting of the profession in their several towns, and to report to the next meeting of the Association to enable the extended support.

POST OFFICE ROBBERY.—On Monday a letter-carrier named Charles Richard Lines, belonging to the Manchester Post Office, was committed to the Assizes for trial on a charge of stealing money from the letters which he was employed to carry. On the person of the prisoner a certain quantity of valuable articles were found, all of which the prisoner said he found in the streets, but which, there was no less than seventeen persons found in his drawer, nearly as many rings, scent-bottles, and guard-chains, in considerable quantities of jewellery and articles of value. He was remanded.



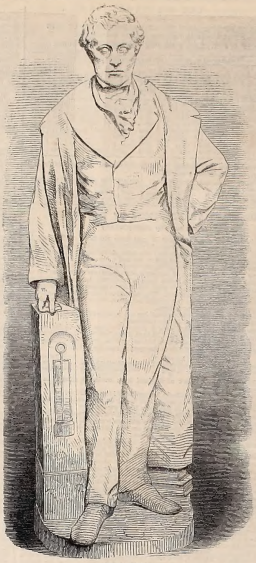
AFFRAY AT LIVERPOOL REGARDING GARIBALDI AND THE POPE.—A fight was fought last night in the Irish quarter of this town, arising out of difference of opinion on the question of Garibaldi and the Pope. Some Irishmen, it appears, had been drinking each one's health as men took part; and the fight was maintained with vigour for half an hour. In the end several of the combatants were locked up. A woman Duffy has committed for trial; a man named Gregger, owner of a bookstall, was fined 40s. and costs for assaulting a policeman; and a man named Patrick Kelley was also fined 40s. and costs for breaking the head of John Coupland with a pair of tongs.

At the annual meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Education in Staffordshire, held at Stoke-on-Trent last Monday, Lord Lyttelton presided. He said that the object of the society was to bring home to all to find the working of the rule that a Bible prize must have been obtained before a secular prize could be gained. The rule had produced excellent, but a great deal might be done without it; for instance, he had received 50*l*. for the Bible prizes, which were given at the end of the year, who, if they had walked with a Government grant had been obtained, would have received a stipend. The Rev. Mr. Fegan presented, in all, 1200 prizes to 1000 scholars. The Rev. Mr. Pages and Ernest Jones, chartist, who, with Mr. Adden, the Rev. J. R. Norris, and others, took part in the proceedings.

SINGULAR FRAUD.—The Newcastle Chronicle gives the following particulars of an extraordinary case of obtaining money by false representation which has been brought under the notice of the police of Newcastle:—Mr. Woodman, solicitor, Morpeth, having received a sum of £300 on behalf of Mr. Bowes, of Gosforth, to be paid to the trustees of Mr. Bowes's children, asking how he should dispose of it. The letter fell into the hands of a swindler, who, on the following day, presented himself at the residence of Mr. Woodman to send it by cheque. Mr. Woodman, suspecting no wrong, forwarded the cheque, which the swindler presented it, got it cashed at Newcastle, and forthwith paid about £300 of it to his creditors. An acknowledgement of the receipt of the money was received by Mr. Bowes, and the abominable orthography opened Mr. Woodman's eyes, and he put the matter in the hands of the police. The swindler has not yet been found, but a reward of five has been taken before the county magistrates at Alnwick and remanded.

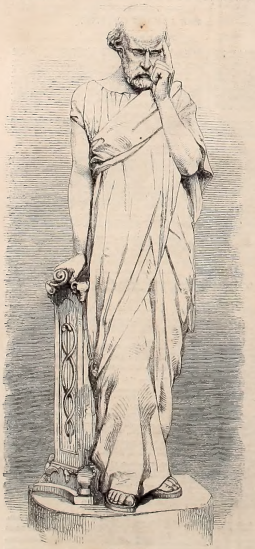
THE CHRISTENING OF THE CHILDREN OF THE LATE MR. BROOKE.—Last week Sir Richard Brooke gave his annual treat to the children of the poor-land school of Norton. The children, to the number of about 200, met at two hundred and fifty, formed a procession through the village of Malton into the park, headed by their clergymen, schoolmasters, and mistress. On arriving at the Priory they were welcomed by Sir Richard Brooke, Bart., and Captain Brooke, and Lady Emmeline Wentworth Fitzwilliam, and the children, led by their school band, sang an appropriate hymn, and then took their places at the tables, which were spread with cakes and refreshments, and plied with cake and tea. A table on which a most substantial repast was spread was set apart for the accommodation of the members of the school band; and a tastefully-decorated table, with fruit, cake, and wine, awaited a party of the band of the 4th West York Militia stationed in the neighbourhood. The children engaged with much spirit in the games and pastimes arranged for their amusement, and at 5 P.M. the children were again formed in line and thanks were returned to Sir Richard Brooke. Each child received a bun to take home on leaving the Priory.

PUBLIC MEN ON PUBLIC AFFAIRS.—General Peel and Lord Robert Montagu addressed an agricultural meeting at Huntingdon on Thursday week. Lord Robert Montagu principally referred to the Ashley Act of 1847. Lord Robert was in a more humorous mood, and let off a few jokes.—At the close of the Session of Parliament, on Friday, the 31st ult., the Bucks Agricultural Society, at Longford, on Monday, Lord Rafford, in acknowledging a toast of the Chairman, Mr. Disraeli, M.P., referred to the duties of a parliamentary talk, of which we give a summary elsewhere.—Mr. Digby Seymour addressed his constituents at Dorchester on Saturday week, and, as he had declared he could not, on the same evening a demonstrative meeting was held at Blandford, addressed by Lord Ashley and Mr. Bankes.—Lord Elcho, in favour of Parliamentary reform, the French treaty, and Italian independence, Mr. Bright, on Monday week, at Birmingham.—Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, attended a meeting of the North Waltham Agricultural Society on Saturday week, when he said, "Her Majesty having expressed to Her Majesty's Ministers would adhere fully to the principle of non-intervention in foreign affairs, but that feeling that sympathy which was the basis of the policy of the Government; though, at the same time, Ministers felt it to be their duty to make every effort in their power to bring the Government into sympathised with the nations that were struggling for freedom. Lord Wodehouse addressed his constituents at Wellington on Monday week, while preserving the most friendly relations with France, should not enter into any engagement which would prevent the country from exercising its full value Powers.—Mr. Grant Duff last week addressed his constituents, the electors of the Elgin Burghs, and made one good suggestion on the subject of Reform. It was, that to ensure a good Reform Bill the people should form, and give expression to, their own opinion of what it ought to be. He repudiated the delusion that a Conservation reaction had set in. The hon. gentleman also testified to the fairness of the French Government in the matter of the treaty.—Mr. Peget and Mr. Mellor, the members for Nottingham, addressed their constituents on Tuesday evening. There was little of general interest in the speech of either gentleman, with the exception of Mr. Paget's allusion that the evidence taken before the Lords' Committee had induced him to change his opinion as to the policy of lowering the borough franchise to £6. Both members attended a meeting of the local Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday morning, when a memorial was adopted in favour of the leveling duties of the R. Bethell's Bankruptcy Bill.



THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.—HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS ESCORTED TO MONTREAL BY A FLEET OF LAKE AND UP-RIVER STEAMERS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 344.

GRAND CANOE RECEPTION GIVEN TO THE PRINCE OF WALES ON THE ST. LAWRENCE.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 344.



JAMES WATT.

SIR H. DAVY.

SIR ISAAC NEWTON.

SOCRATES.

GALILEO.

LEIBNITZ.

STATUES IN THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY MUSEUM.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 344.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE Newmarket Second October was opened by Stockade, who had quite recovered from the stab in the fetlock which kept her from Doncaster; and the Earl of Glasgow lost two matches, won one, and ran a dead heat for another. In the T.Y.C. Handicap Lapellus showed something of his old T.Y.C. form; and Fordham took two match mounts for Sir Tatton Rogers and Wells, both of whom in this cold weather were too much "shaved" by the 7lb. Admiral's day, as we fear, quite unable to get much below 8st. 7lb. Admiral's day, as we fear, quite over, as all his staunchest backing and walking before Doncaster failed to bring over, as all his staunchest backing and walking before Doncaster failed to bring him lower than 8st. 2lb. "The Whip," so full of fatal reminiscences to Teddington, Brighton, and Weatherbury, produced a splendid race between Special License and "The Land," the latter of which waited till the last two strides, and was only beaten a head. Fordham's one lucky "boy in yellow" of the year, rode the winner, and also pulled off the Clearwell with Folkestone in earnest. Twenty-seven sons of the Baronet followed on the card came to the post for the Swaxwitch, while Conscript and several others "went to the wall," the latter being overweighted. Volunteers are the descendant with the first favourite, Dulcibella, another of the Woodyates pots, and Mr. Tom Parr's second (as so invariably is the case) was beaten. Lord Clifden beaten ten lengths with Optimist. Heiress, Moorcock, Lady Trespass, Ben Webster, Cape Flyaway, Bonnywoon, and Plunger were the rest of the foremost of the beaten division. This was the maiden victory of the winner, who has been beaten seven times. The ring is said to be hit very severely; but "the peripatetic philosopher" of Bridle-lane, who lost £2000 at Ascot, and met his misfortune most manfully, is said to have done pretty well by laying against Killigrew and Golden Pippin. Kramer put up a gallowsy sort of a Handicap, and not been put for Thursday, when sporting men were more at liberty to run down.

The Judge Clerk has promulgated a good rule to reform bill; but Lord Glasgow's motion that two-year-olds should not run before Newmarket July will, most probably, be thrown out. Indeed, as the Derby is so very salutary one; and the Earl of Derby (who is to some extent a public character) is so much in favour, we should be glad to see a particularly good example to masters of horses (as well as of Townshipps' case) has produced a good effect with the negro slavery question, as applied to young and old jockeys—a point to which the sporting press have directed attention for years. If not, however, the special attribute of the Jockey Club to take up questions about five years, on an average, after every one else, and shake the dust off immense pretensions.

The stout Independence is for sale at Tattersall's on Monday, and Hirndyke is entered to the hammer at Mr. Houghton. Meajid's racing days are numbered, and, like Sir Joseph's Derby winner of the previous year, he was never so valuable as he is now, after his last grand coup. The Great Yorkshire Stakes for 1863 has only a poor entry of 16, which includes Bertram, Bloomsbury, Bonnie Scotland, Lord Clifden's half-brother to Knight of the Garter, and Kilmarnock.

Hollo, a splendid daughter of West Australian and Ellerslie; and Sister to Vedette. Alice Hawthorne had no foal this year, and has visited Will Dyson's stallion; while Marmion, a brother to Vedette's, Cerdenay has been sold to go abroad.

Everywhere there is the same story as to the partridges, which consist of little more than leashes of barren birds. The pheasant accounts are not flattering; and Mr. Hargreaves' letter to the Times on Earlsheis is one of the King's preserves near Naples seems to have astonished the natives not a little. The pheasants which fell, like autumn leaves, before the deadly blade of the Sicilian Mower, Garibaldi, are said to have been plump and well-favoured; but the hares sadly wanted a Bentley or Langton Wold cover.

If the corn is sufficiently carried to enable them to drive the hares on to the Downs, the Wilchire Stag Hounds will open at Aldbourne's on Wednesday, &c.; the Caledonian, Dulcoten, and Berwickshire on Thursday; and the Pevensey, Kirkington, where Captain Hall will be in force with his young Sambeans and Selfpolls, on Friday. Effort stretched a neck in front of Overton, and the Duke's favourite took also first and second in the two stakes at Cambermere. Falconside and Cover, the joint winners at Biggin, were not much behind, and Judge Talbot has engaged in public. Their sire, Jeffrey, is from Morris, a daughter of Egypt and the renowned Mocking-bird.

Tom Sebright's testimonial is to be presented to him at a public dinner at Peterborough on Thursday next. Tom will never see seventy-one again; but as his father, who showed such rare sport with his harpers over the New Forest, lived to eighty-six, we have an earnest that the fourth season will bring him back to his thirty-second with Earl Fitzwilliam, on which Tom is just entering, will not by any means be his last. A son of James Treadwell's will hunt Mr. Radclyffe's hounds, and, as there is room for all but, we should like to see the good Farquharson era of Dorsetshire revived. All accounts speak well of the cub-hunting, which strong and plentiful, and plenty of sport to boot. After the poor account of "noses" on many kennel doors last season, it was a struggle if the hounds were not worked out. Lenbeshall Market, we can vouch for it, never saw such a regiment of good cubs of all nations as it did this spring.

The race-course Dean Myers, who amused the Court of Queen's Bench so much in the spring by the recital of his fiery dragon and traction-engine, will be honoured in a more substantial form at the shot over hedges into apple-orchards, or through the study-windows of quiet burgesses, in summer terms, as the case may be, now the unfruitful, forty-four strong, not including the trained bull, stag, dog, and brace of performing monkeys, were brought to the hammer at the Barbican last Saturday, along with all the other "properties" of the ten cents for Turpin's ride to York," Royal Standard, and so on. Most of the old delights of the ring reminiscent for the occasion of this benefit. The don Miss Haswell; "a well-known bare-back or pad-ster" (we think); the ceaseless-cracking Simms, an "extraordinary trick mare," Slops, the same as the skewbald Lady Mary of like accomplishments; while the spotted pony Tommy, and "the brown horse Arm, used in single and double acts," were knocked down at 80gs. a piece, and the bull Don Juan at 21gs.

NEWMARKET SECOND OCTOBER MEETING.—MONDAY.

Betrosal of Mr. Sowerby's Sweepstakes of 50 sovs.—Dulcibella, 1. Lady Falconer, 2. Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each.—Ella, 2.

Hunting Handicap.—Tartan, 1. Lapella, 2.

Fifty Pounds.—Lava, 1. Burlesque, 2.

Selling Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each.—Titus, 2.

Sweepstakes of 200 sovs.—Parbidore walked over.

Maiden Plate.—Godderoona, 1. Kate, 2.

TUESDAY.

Sweepstakes of 200 sovs.—Special License, 1. Promised Land, 2.

Sweepstakes of 50 sovs.—Dr. Nichol, 1. Pretty Boy, 2.

Clearwell Stakes.—Folkestone, 1. Virginia Water, 2.

Casawroth Stakes.—Dulcibella, 1. Optimist, 2.

Betrothal Stakes.—Lord Clifden, 1. Diamonds, 2.

Selling Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 sovs.—Mr. Etwall's Jerse Brown, 1.

Mr. Hesketh's Uncle Brown, 2.

Sweepstakes of 5 sovs.—Ruby, 1. Parapet, 2.

WEDNESDAY.

Handicap Sweepstakes, 15 sovs.—Miss Fanny, 1. Sister to Jessie Brown, 2.

Handicap Sweepstakes, 10 sovs.—Dreadnought, 1. Golden Hale, 2.

Scotland Stakes.—Thorpe, 1. Dr. Nichol, 2.

Sweepstakes of 5 sovs.—Wee Polly, 1. Julia, 2.

Town Plate.—Antonelli, 1. Guilder, 2.

Handicap Sweepstakes, 10 sovs.—Niger, 1. Sparta, 2.

Maiden Plate.—Burlesque, 1. Molly T., 2.

Select Stakes.—Thunderbolt, 1. Buccaneer, 2.

Cutland's Plate.—Zaretan, 1. Courier, 2.

THURSDAY.

Sweepstakes of 200 sovs.—Walleen walked over.

£50 Plate.—Cullen, 1. Malta, 2.

Derby Stakes.—Sister to Rosalie, 1. Castafiore, 2.

Craven Sweepstakes.—Cowley, 1. Gaiderdine, 2.

Sweepstakes.—Callisa, 1. Weatherwitch, 2.

£100 Handicap Plate.—Moorcock, 1. Gladiolus, 2.

Sweepstakes of 200 sovs.—Sea, 1. Largesse, 2.

Sweepstakes for Three-year-olds.—Senile Stone, 1. Ringtail, 2.

Sweepstakes of 200 sovs.—Tom Bowline, 1. Thormanby, 2.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK,

(From our City Correspondent.)

THE withdrawal of about £600,000 in gold from the Bank of England, in addition to the £1,000,000 sovereigns sent out during the month, has led to supply the Societé d'Escompte at Paris with £600,000, for the purpose of establishing branches in India and China, on a depreciated gold system upon the Consul Market. Prices have given way about ½ per cent. It is stated that there is no immediate prospect of further heavy shipments of bullion. We believe that the Bank will be called upon to meet other demands upon it for gold coin, as the Australian Banks have commenced to issue their own sovereigns of the precious metals from Australia. The entrance of the Piedmontese troops into the territory of Naples has caused a panic on the Stocks, the ruins of which have been somewhat numerous.

The Bank of England's minimum rate has not exceeded £300,000, the whole of which has been disposed of for the Continent.

As regards the Stock Market we may observe that the demand for accommodation, both at the Bank and in Lombard-street, has been decidedly active, and the rates of discount have ranged from 3 to 4 per cent. The following quotations for the best commercial bills in the open market are as follows:—

	Per cent.		Per cent.
Short Bills	3½ to 3¾	Four Months Bills	4 to 4¼
Three Months Bills	3¾ to 4	Six Months Bills	4¼ to 4½

The Directors of the Bank of England have made no change in their minimum rate.

The dividends on National Stocks become payable on Saturday.

There has been a considerable amount of business in the Funds; and the Bank of Frankfort has raised its rate from 2 to 3 per cent.

Advices from the Cape of Good Hope state that the Government of the Cape of Good Hope, on electrons for public works, has been closed. A letter from our correspondent at Cape Town, dated August 21, says that the sales are still steady cash paid on account of import duties.

As regards the Foreign Stock Market we may observe that the demand for Spanish has taken off £21,300, of which £14,000 is in silver. The steamer for Australia has taken out £21,300, of which £14,000 is in silver. The steamer for Australia has taken out £21,300, of which £14,000 is in silver. The steamer has been disposed of at 5s. 3d. per ounce, or 5½ above the previous transaction. Exchanges have ruled 25.90 to 25.95 on Paris, and 35.90 on Hamburg.

The Directors of the Bank of England have made no change in their minimum rate.

The dividends on National Stocks become payable on Saturday.

There has been a considerable amount of business in the Funds; and the Bank of Frankfort has raised its rate from 2 to 3 per cent.

As regards the Foreign Stock Market we may observe that the demand for accommodation, both at the Bank and in Lombard-street, has been decidedly active, and the rates of discount have ranged from 3 to 4 per cent. The following quotations for the best commercial bills in the open market are as follows:—

	Per cent.		Per cent.
Short Bills	3½ to 3¾	Four Months Bills	4 to 4¼
Three Months Bills	3¾ to 4	Six Months Bills	4¼ to 4½

NEW BOOKS.

Allens-street, October 1860.

MR. MURRAY'S FORTHCOMING WORKS.
LIFE OF THE RIGHT HON. WILLIAM PITT, with Extracts from his Unpublished Correspondence and MS. Papers. By Earl STANHOPE (Lord Mahon). Portraits. Vols. I. and II. of Books.

HISTORY OF THE UNITED NETHERLANDS: from the Death of William the Silent to the Death of John Barneveld. Embracing the English-Dutch Struggle against Spain; and a detailed Account of the Spanish Armada. By JOHN LOTHROP MOTLEY, D.C.L., Author of "The Rise of the Dutch Republic." Portraits. Vols. I. and II.

THE ANNUAL CORRESPONDENCE OF CHARLES ABBOTT, Lord Colchester, Speaker of the House of Commons, 1802-1817. Edited by HIS SON. Portraits. Vols. One.

THE LIFE AND WORKS OF ALEXANDER POPE. New Edition, containing more than 500 Original Letters. Collected by a Critical Essay on Pope, with a New Life. By Rev. WHITWELL ELWIN. Portraits. Vol I. 8vo.

THE DEBATES ON THE GRAND REMONSTRANCE, 1641. With an Introductory Essay and Notes. By JOHN FORSTER. Post 8vo. Reprinted and Twice Revised.

SUNDAY: its Origin, History, and Present Obligations. Being the Bampton Lectures for 1860. By JOHN A. HESSEY, D.C.L., Head Master of Sherborne Taylors School, &c.

THE PRIVATE DIARY OF GENERAL SIR ROBERT WILSON, during his Missions and Employment in Spain, Sicily, Turkey, Russia, Poland, Germany, &c.—1812-14. 2 vols. 8vo.

SERMONS PREACHED BEFORE THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD. By Rev. ROBERT SOUTH, D.D., Master of Balliol College.

THE PERSONAL HISTORY OF LORD BACON, from Unpublished Letters and Documents. By HEPWORTH DIXON. 8vo.

RECOLLECTIONS OF THE DRUSES. With Notes on their Religion. By the Earl of CARNARVON. Post 8vo (ready).

ANCIENT LAW: its Connection with the Early History of Society, and its Relation to Modern Ideas. By HENRY SUMNER MAINE. 8vo.

THE GREAT SAHARA; or, Wanderings South of the Atlas Mountains. By H. B. TRISTRAM. Illustrations. Post 8vo.

OLIVER CROMWELL. By JOHN FORSTER. And RICHARD STEELE, CHARLES CHURCHILL, SAMUEL FOOTE. Biographical Essays. By JOHN FORSTER. 3rd Edition. 8vo.

ICELAND: its Volcanoes, Geysers, and Glaciers. Explored in a Summer Excursion. By Comr. C. S. FORBES, R.N. Illustrations. 8vo.

THE ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF LANGUAGE. Based on Modern Researches. By FERDINAND WILLIAM KEIGHTLEY, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Fcap 8vo.

ANGLICAN GEMS: their Origin, Use, and Value, as Independent Ancient History, and as Illustrative of Ancient Art. By Rev. H. KING. Illustrations. 8vo.

TWO YEARS' RESIDENCE IN JUTLAND AND THE DANISH ISLES. By HORACE MARRYAT. Illustrations. Two vols.

ESSAYS ON RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY SUBJECTS. By the late Rev. J. J. BLUNT, D.D. 8vo.

ON PUBLIC SCHOOL EDUCATION, with especial Reference to Eton. By the Right Hon. Sir JOHN T. COLERIDGE, D.C.L. Post 8vo (ready).

JANE MURRAY, Allemarle-street.

This day, Part the Fifteenth, with Map, 4to, part 8vo, 15s.,

THE HANDBOOK FOR TRAVELLERS IN SOUTH GERMANY; including the Tyrol, Austrian Galicia, the Pyrenees, Mount Ætna, &c. With Maps, Plans, &c. By Sir J. BARNARD BURKE, Clarenceux.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

ILLUMINATED BOOKS OF THE MIDDLE AGES. By OWEN JONES and MESSRS. WARREN: PALAEOGRAPHICAL AND THE FINE, from the Latin Book of Hours of Queen Mary. The Illuminations by Mr. Owen Jones, and the Palaeographical Notes by Messrs. Warren. Printed in Gold and Colours, by Messrs. Day and Son, Lithographers to the Queen. 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

THE PRAIRIE FLOWER.
By GUSTAVUS AIMARD.
See "WELCOME GUEST," enlarged to 32 pages, 2d. weekly.
BRADBURY and AGNEW, 63, Fleet-street.

This day, 8vo, 10s. 6d. cloth, gilt, ornamental back,

MAKE YOUR GAME; or, the Adventures and the Sport of Gentlemen, the Gills Sketches by Mr. Leech, with the Text Cut. By GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA. Illustrated by Phiz, John, Tenniel, Alexander Mayhew, and the Author.
WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Monthly Parts (1st Edition) and Half-Yearly Volumes, Vol. I. (January to June), 1860, 7s. 6d.

No. 1, price 6d., and Part I., price 1s., will both be ready on 1859.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD. A Weekly Record of Travel, Adventure, and Description, in all parts of the Globe. Edited by W. F. ADDENEY and R. A. CAMPBELL, B.A.
London: 11, Fleet-street.

Price 1s., postage-free, in 24. Second Edition, Illustrated Wrapper,

HINTS ON ILLUMINATING; with Illustrations from Old and Modern Works. By JAMES W. BUCHER.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 332, Oxford-street.

Price 2s. 6d. (Illustrated), Second Edition, much enlarged,

THE ART OF ILLUMINATING: A Guide to Beginners. By A. H. WARREN, Instructor to the Royal Family.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 332, Oxford-street.

A MANUAL OF ILLUMINATION, By J. W. BENNETT, M.A., with Appendix by T. GOODWIN, M.A., and Twelve Lithographic Illustrations. Price 5s.—WYMAN and SONS, Great Queen-street, W.C.; and Messrs. Wyman and Archer, Cambridge.

Sixth enlarged Edition, with Illustrations, 4s., in boards, 3s.,

ART OF ILLUMINATING. Dedicated to the Ladies of Scotland. By D. LAURENCE, Artist. Handsomely bound, 4s.; in plain boards, 3s.—LONGMAN and CO.

Fourth Edition, just published, price 2s. 6d., or by post 30 stamps,

DISEASE OF THE SKIN: a Guide for the Treatment and Prevention, Illustrated by Cases. By THOMAS HUNT, Surgeon to the Western Dispensary, 70, Brunswick-st. Sth. Sts., Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square. "Mr. Hunt has produced a very valuable treatise."—Medical Times and Gazette. "Mr. Lascelles."—Medical Circular. "Mr. Hunt."—Lancet.

Sold by Simpkin, Marshall, and Co., Stationers'-hall-court.

Sh. 6d., or thirty-two stamps, Fourth Edition,

CORPULENCY, and its new Self-dietary Cure. By WILLIAM BANTING.
A. and M. BANTING, 53, Chalcroft-street, Pimlico, S.W.

Just published, price 1s. 6d., sent free for 18 stamps,

AN UNCOMMON BOOK.—THE WILL OF GOD TO THE DYING, as Revealed in the Scriptures. By a Clergyman of the Church of England.
London: 16, Regent's Park-road, N.W.

1860.—Just published, post-free three stamps,

GABRIEL'S TREATISE on the LOSS and GAIN of ESSENTIAL MOISTURE of RESTORING the THIRTY HEREDITARY DISEASES. Also, Observations on Nervous Debility, Indigestion, Spinal Affections, Rheumatism, &c., and the Treatment of Infants, Children, and Invalids, in spite of memory, quality, and durability, as well as for the advantages they offer to the Public, resulting almost at the same time are not able to pay frequent visits to the district. One or all would be thankfully received by the Secretary, at the Institution, Gloucester-terrace, Hyde-park-corner, or kindly sent for to their residences. The increased amount of vacation, they must unfortunately be obliged to decline any more candidates for election after the present month.

NEW BOOKS.

MR. THOMS' NEW VOLUME OF ANECDOTES BIOGRAPHY.
This day, Second Series, in crown 8vo, price 6s. 6d. cloth,

ANECDOTE BIOGRAPHY OF ENGLISH WOMEN, including
Heauvth. Sir Thomas Lawrence.
Lady Jane Grey. Mrs. Siddons.
Also, First Series, in crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 6s., including The Earl of Chatham by Wilkes and Churchill.
WILLIAM J. THOMS, F.S.A., Clerk Assistant.

"This 'Anecdote Biography' will hold great services to the general reader, and to the student of literature."—Athenæum.
"Certainly deserves to do."—Observer.
"Mr. Thoms has put the anecdotes of myths from the light and rarely found by us to the deep and serious pursuits of literature."—Literary Gazette.
"Mr. Thoms' light is luminous, and his book valuable to a large class of readers."—Manchester Examiner.
RICHARD BENTLEY, 8, New Burlington-street, London.
Publisher in Ordinary to Her Majesty.

NEW WORK BY THE REV. DR. CUMMING.
This day, in crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.,

REDEMPTION DRAWETH NIGH: or, the Great Preparation.
By the Rev. JOHN CUMMING, D.D., F.R.S.
Also by the same Author, this day, in crown 8vo, 7s. 6d., the
THE GREAT TRIBULATION; or, the Things Coming on the Earth.
RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street, London, Publisher in Ordinary to her Majesty.

NEW WORK EDITED BY THE AUTHOR OF "MARY POWELL."
Just ready, in 1 vol., 7s. 6d.

VALENTINE DUVAL. An Autobiography.
Edited by the Author of "Mary Powell."
RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street, London, Publisher in Ordinary to her Majesty.

By Candlelight, Illustrated Edition.

MESSRS. SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO.'S NEW AND POPULAR WORKS.
THE SKELETON IN THE CUPBOARD: a Novel. By the Author of "Rockingham."
THE LIFE OF THE RIGHT HON. Sir Robert Peel, Founder of the Modern Conservative Original Sources. 18s. 6d.
THE MANOR HOUSE. By the Author of "Squires and Parsons." 10s. 6d.
THE LITTLE HOUSE: a Novel. Two vols. 21s.
TOO LATE: a Novel. By Mrs. DIMSDALE. Dedicated, by permission, to the Queen. 2 vols. 21s.
Now ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,

THE VALLEY OF A HUNDRED FIRES.
By the Author of "Two Years Ago" and "Hard Cash."
MONEY. By COLIN KENNAQUHOUN, Esq. 3 vols.
SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO., Publishers, 66, Great Marlborough-street.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo, 12s.,

HOPES AND FEARS; or, Scenes from the Life of a Quaker. By the Author of "The Rule of Faith," "Inquiry," &c.
London: JOHN CHAPMAN, 8, King William-street, Strand.

Nearly ready, with numerous Illustrations,

WILLADAMS, the First Englishman in Japan.
By WILLIAM DALTON
Author of "The Wedding of Shon," "The White Rhinoceros," &c.
London: A. W. BENNETT, 5, Bishopsgate Without.

JUST PUBLISHED.—The VICTORIA in CANADA. Edited, with Descriptive Notices, by the Rev. HENRY SCADDING, D.D., and Illustrated by Engravings from Photographs taken by Mr. Notman. Royal 8vo, price 21s. cloth, gilt edges, or morocco, 42s. 12s.; half morocco, elegant, with gold border, 30s. Also, a Limited Edition, on Large Paper, Royal 4to, half morocco, £2 2s.; tree and plain, cloth, extra boards, £3 3s.
JOHN C. FRANCIS, 5, High Holborn.

With a Frontispiece, price 2s. cloth,

ROUGHEDGE. By CHARLES BALLIE, R. Parochial Schoolmaster, North Berwick, and Elsewhere. By WILLIAM STEVENSON.
"Full of humour, and pathos."—Scotsman.
HOULSTON, JACKSON, and HALLIDAY, 14, Fleet-street.

Now ready, at all Libraries, Railway Stations, and Booksellers.
Price 10s. 6d., post-free, 11s., cloth, gilt, cloth,
THE SHADOW IN THE HOUSE. A Novel.
By Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL, Author of "Too Much Money," &c.
London: LOCKWOOD and CO., 7, Stationers' Hall-court, Ludgate-hill.

THE New Edition of Alderman MECHI'S Work, HOW TO FARM PROFITABLY, contains his Farming Experiences, the Cause of Agricultural Depression, Hints to Tenants, the Effects Reform Agriculturists, his Agricultural Catechism, and other Valuable Information. Price 1s., or by post for 13 stamps.—Mechi's Agricultural Magazine, a volume of 400 pages, with Photographs by Mayall, and a Portrait of the Author. Price 3s.
Published by MECHI and CO., 112, Regent-street, London; and sold by most Booksellers, and at the Railway Stations.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE HUMAN BODY: its Structure and Physiology. Illustrated by the Anatomical Diagrams, containing 193 Coloured Figures, Designed for the Use of Students, and Artists. By JOHN MARSHALL, F.R.S., Professor of Anatomy to the Royal Academy

NEW MUSIC.

DALBERT'S SATTLA. Published the last new set. Just published, beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S MILANESE POLKA. Just published, beautifully Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NAPLES QUADRILLE. A new Edition of this celebrated set, as popular Italian Airs, Illustrated with View of Naples, and dedicated to Garibaldi. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S GARIBALDI GALOP, as played by the Prize Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival. Illustrated with a Portrait of this great Chief by BRANDARD. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLE, as played by the Prize Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival. A new Quadrille on the most favourite of the "Merry Melodies of Ireland." Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s. Beautifully Illustrated.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ, as played by the Prize Galitzin's Orchestra at the Pavilion Festival. Founded on the favourite song of "Kathleen Mavourneen," "The Waits of the Season." Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NELLY GRAY VALSE, with Ourcel Accompaniment. Now set just published. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES or ST. JAMES'S GALOP. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated with Portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by BRANDARD. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for ORCHESTRA. Just published, Victorine Valse, Victorine Quadrille, Victorine Polka, Victorine Galop, Victorine Polka Mazurka, Ida Valse, Ida Quadrille, Ida Polka, Ida Galop, Italian Campagnole Quadrille, Big Ship Polka, Rifle Corps Polka, Rifle Corps Quadrille, and Rifle Corps Galop. Price 2s. each; small Orchestra, 1s. Catalogues of this popular Composer's Music for Orchestra, Military Band, and Pianoforte, sent free on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FASHIONABLE DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing fifty Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas, Galops, Mazurkas, Varsovianas, &c. Edited by CHARLES JAFFERY, Strauss, Lanner, Labitzky, &c. Edited by FRANZ NAVA.
At CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S BALL-ROOM DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing one hundred Country Dances, Reels, Strathspeys, Highland Flings, Quadrilles, Scotch Dances, &c. Newly arranged by FRANZ NAVA. Fcp. price, 3s. 6d.
At CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, a set of Waltzes on the favourite Air by the above popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

UDERS' UNE PETITE FLEUR.—Morceau Elegant. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE PIANOFORTE METHOD. The best, the newest, and cheapest of all Instruction Books—containing elementary Instructions, scales, exercises, a great variety of the most popular themes at progressive lessons. Sixty pages, full music size, price 2s., post-free.
The 1st of Brinley Richards' Popular Duets will be sent on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NEW OPERATIC FANTASIAS, Just published,
KUHE'S DIAMANTS DE LA COURONNE, 3s. 6d.
KUHE'S SOUVENIR DES PROPHETE, 2s. 6d.
KUHE'S ORESTE, 2s. 6d.
KUHE'S ATTILA, 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

I NEVER CAN FORGET. Ballad. Sung by Miss Poole. Words and Music, "Victoria," and admirably sympathetically sweet. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE LAST GOOD-BYE. Sung by Mdme. Lancy Bastin, for whom it was expressly composed by W. V. WALLACE. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ILLY BELLS. Expressly composed for Millie. Farque, by W. V. WALLACE, the popular Composer of "Amina," "Lurline," &c.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE BELLRINGER. Sung by Mr. Santley. Third Edition. Words and Music by CLARIBEL, which has caused such a sensation in the London Concert Rooms, &c., is now in No. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE JUVENILE ALBUM,—Just published, A SELECTION of FAVOURITE MELODIES Arranged for the PIANOFORTE, in Progressive Lessons, by BRINLEY RICHARDS.
1. Sweet Home (Easy Air).
2. Dwelling on Mail (Easy Air).
3. Robert, toi que j'aime
4. Come, lasses and lads
5. Casta Diva
6. Big Ben Polka
7. Polly's Dot (Valse)
8. Dull Drone
9. Rifle Corps Quadrille (Valse)
10. Bells, bells!
11. Curfew Polka
12. Rifle Corps Polka (Valse)
13. Bells, bells!
14. The Village Maid (Valse)
15. Good News from Rome
17. Carnovale Valse (Valse)
18. Victorine Valse (Valse)
19. Curfew Party
20. Lily of the Valley Valse (Valse)
21. Ida Valse
22. Oh, Carry Me Over the Water
23. Rifle Corps Polka (Valse)
25. Reigning Beauty Valse (Valse)
26. Ida Polka
27. Auld Lang Syne

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S CHEAP WORKS FOR VARIOUS INSTRUMENTS. Price 6d. each, post-free.

PIANOFORTE.
Chappell's Pianoforte Primer (Brinley Richards).
Scotch Violin and Bass Part to Ditto.
Chappell's 100 Country Dances.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs for "Lurline" and "Victoria."
Chappell's 100 Hungarian, Reels, Jigs, &c.
Chappell's 100 Airs with easy variations.
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Popular Instruction Duets.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

FLUTE.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's 100 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs for "Lurline" and "Victoria."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Popular Instruction Duets.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

ENGLISH CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs for "Lurline" and "Victoria."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Popular Instruction Duets.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

GERMAN CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Melodies, Songs, Dances, &c.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.

GUITAR.
Chappell's 50 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Popular Airs.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
Cases should be taken to order CHAPPELL'S Cheap Works, as they alone contain D'Albert's and other popular copyright works.

NEW MUSIC.

GUINEA EDITION of BEETHOVEN'S SONATAS.—Messrs. Novello have much pleasure in announcing that they will publish on October 20, in two very handsome volumes, bound in cloth, price 21s.,
BEETHOVEN'S SONATAS FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO, as performed at the Royal Academy of Music, with Life of Beethoven by G. A. Macfarren, and Critical Notes by John Lynch. This complete Edition of the Sonatas will be the most correct and correct of any that has ever appeared. It will be also beautifully printed on fine toned paper, with the best pianoforte fingering by Moscheles, and the Publishers, Novello, Ewer and Co., Berners-street, Oxford-street.

NEW GALOP by ASCHER.—Messrs. BOOSEY and SONS will publish next week a New Galop Brillante, by the above, entitled TOUJOURS GAI.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street, and all Musicsellers.

TWO NEW PIECES BY HERR MAUSS. Next week will be published Two new Pieces by this rising and popular Composer:
LE CORSAIRE GALOP BRILLANT.
LA CHASSE DE DIANE, Morceau de Salon.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street; and all Musicsellers.

THE BEDOUIN GALOP, by R. MINTON (as Played by Mr. Godfrey and his Quadrille Band at Cremorne Gardens). Published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MADAME OSBORNE'S AULD ROBIN GRAY, and her brilliant Fantasia published this day. Also Madame Oury's new Valse, "Les Fleurs," and other popular arrangements of favourite airs.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MUSICAL EVENINGS. A Series of English Duets adapted from the Italian by GEORGE LINLEY.
1. Sweet is the Season—Congress. 2. Now the Vine Blossoms—Congress. 3. Now the Vine Blossoms—Congress. 4. Love's Dream—Congress. 5. Love's Devotion—Congress. 6. Love is the sweetest Passion—Congress. 7. Love's Devotion—Duet—Duet Ballad.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

TENNYSON'S exquisite Lyric, FOR EVER AND FOR EVER, has been exquisitely set to Music by Mr. HENRY SMART, and published by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street. September 8. It is just published, price 3s., by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

AN EVENING WITH MEYERBEER, Arrange for Pianoforte Solo, by CHARLES JAFFE. Price 3s. Sola. Duet.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

LOCH KATRINE WALTZ (by LAURENT) on Moore's Air, and Loch Katrine Galop, Irish, Alb-Leaden Illustrated. Price 3s. each. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MARGARETTA WALTZ (by LAURENT) on Mendelssohn's Celebrated Song, Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Companion to the MAUD and BELOVED STAR WALTZES. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

NOTRE DAME. Romance for the Pianoforte by EMILE BERGER. Founded on a very beautiful subject by Meyerbeer. Price 3s. Just published this day by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

CHEAP EDITION of OVERTURE for Two and Four Hands, with English and Italian words, in eight monthly parts, 1s. each.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S 25 DUETS for TWO CORNETS-A-PISTON, arranged by Henry Farmer. Price 5s. Boosey 100 Dances for Cornet-à-pistons, 2s.; Boosey' 50 Operatic Airs for Cornet-à-pistons, 2s.; Boosey's Cornet Instructor, 1s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

SCHLOESSER'S NEW DUET on OBERON, published this day, price 3s.; also SCHLOESSER'S DUETS on MARTHA.
SCHLOESSER'S BRILLIANT DUET.
SCHLOESSER'S DUETS on ATTILA.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE GERMAN CONCERTINA.—Published this day, BOOSEY'S 100 SONGS and DANCES for the GERMAN CONCERTINA, arranged by Henry Farmer. Price from "Satanella," "Dinorah," and "Martha." Price One Shilling. Also published this day, Boosey's Instructor for the German Concertina, 24 pages, music size.—Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S PART-SONG MISCELLANY is now published in monthly numbers, price 2d., containing 16 Original four-part Songs, with the 1st in Pianoforte Accompaniments by Mendelssohn, Rimbault, Hatton, Balfe, Henry Smart, Wallace, Benedict, Macfarren, Glover, Barnett, Lindpaintner, Hullah, Horsley, Hime, Hobbs, Hatton, Hawes, Lee, Hullah, Hime, Hobbs, Hatton, Hawes, Lee, Hullah, Hime, Hobbs, Hatton, Hawes, Lee, Hullah

CHINA.—THE BRITISH FORCES IN TALIEN-WAN.

OUR Special Artist in China writes from Talien-Wan, on the 23rd of June, as follows respecting the accompanying Illustration:—"Food is scarce, and we go ashore to purchase fowls. It rained hard this morning, but after tiffin, the sky having assumed a more smiling appearance, we went ashore in search of fresh provision—fowls and eggs having become scarce items in our culinary list. Providing ourselves with waterproof coats and umbrellas, we sallied forth, got in our boat, and rowed round the wild-looking headland of Victoria Bay. When coming in on board the steamer we had observed a curious natural cavern, which we felt inclined to explore. Near it was a little fishing village, with junks riding at anchor and sampans drawn up on the beach. The cavern seemed worth exploring, and the village gave promise of producing eggs, at all events, if nothing more, so we made first for the grotto, but were disappointed, and landed on the beach near it instead. The skies had recommenced weeping, and we who had escaped a wetting by fresh water were destined to be soused by salt ditto, for our little boat shipped many seas, making umbrellas and sketch-book flout. We jumped ashore and ascended cliffs that looked like ruined forts, scrambled over loose stones, and walked over hills, grumbling at the miserable fate that ministered us on two successive days. We next passed some plantations of fir-trees, and at length saw the pretty village at our feet. We descended, and were politely received by the inhabitants. We signified our desire for eggs and fowls, and presently small boys were observed running after the cackling birds, and grown-up men disappeared for a short time, returning with splendid eggs. We communicated with them through the medium of a southern boy belonging to one of the party; and, though they could not understand each other, yet they comprehended the written character perfectly. Their manners were quite comme il faut. We offered them payment; we put the money into their girdles, but they would not accept any recompense, neither would they take their fowls back again, but pressed them upon our acceptance, and placed them in the boat. The rest of our party went to eat oysters on the rocks, while I remained sketching among the people, much to their delight; no small boys being allowed to get into my light or way, and I had to smoke innumerable pipes of strong tobacco. After a while our party returned satiated with the number of natives they had eaten."

PURCHASING EGGS AND FOWLS OF THE NATIVES.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CHINA.

TROOPS LEAVING ODIN BAY FOR THE PEIHO.

OUR Special Artist writes as follows from Odin Bay, Talien-Wan, on July 23, respecting the Engraving on page 347:—"I am writing under difficulties. Myriads of flies are not conducive to serenity of mind, especially combined with a roasting heat, glare, and dust. We are off the day after to-morrow. We only this morning heard that the mail was to start to-morrow morning, instead of on the 28th: the consequence is a paucity of sketches. For the last few days the troops have been embarking, and now the bustle at the landing-place presents a melancholy contrast to the scene of yesterday, when it was crowded with every variety of the genus soldier from the grey dawn till late at night. When the scorching rays of the sun had given place to the mild evening I sallied forth, and made the inclosed Sketch. Two dead artillerymen were being borne to their last resting-place on the shoulders of their comrades, which contrasted painfully with the excitement around—Sikhs of Probyn's Horse, graceful and picturesque officers of ditto; natives, coolies, kittmajars, and the paraphernalia of Indian campaigning; soldiers and sailors; ships, gun-boats, and little boats; donkeys, mules, and horses. It was a splendid sunset. The night, however, soon put an end to my sketching, and I turned in to the tune of chatting coolies."

LANDING OF SIKH HORSES AT ODIN BAY, TALIEN-WAN.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CHINA.

PEKIN.

PEKING or Pekin (Chinese Pih-king, "the northern capital"), the capital of the province of Chili, is also the chief city of China and the modern metropolis of the Chinese empire. It is situated on a sandy plain, between the Peiho and its affluent the Hoen-ho, a hundred miles north-west of the mouth of the former river in the Yellow Sea, and fifty miles south of the great wall of China. The population of the city is estimated at 2,000,000. Pekin consists of wo contiguous cities, each separately encircled by lofty walls, and, together, entered by sixteen gates, and occupying an area of from twenty-five to twenty-eight square miles, though much of this space is occupied by gardens and inclosures, the houses seldom being more than one story in height. The south or Chinese city, the seat of commerce, and residence of the majority of the population, is intersected throughout by four wide and regular thoroughfares, which abound with shops of all descriptions, and are continually filled with a motley crowd. At the points where these streets meet each other are large arches; but, except these and a temple or two, there would seem to be no edifices of any note in this quarter deserving notice. The houses are of brick, with red tiled roofs, and the city is unpaved and undrained. The to the God of Agriculture, there northern, Tartar, or Imperial city consists of three separate inclosures. The outer of formerly superintended the Tartar provinces, but now is now mostly occupied by Chinese traders; but it contains five of the supreme tribunals of the empire. The second palisade (Hwang-Ching, the "august city") is six miles in circuit, and entered by four large, and several small, gates. In it are extensive public granaries, a military arsenal and seminary, the college and buildings of the Russian Embassy, an astronomical and a magnetic observatory, the great temples of ancestors and of prayer, and the lofty altar added to it an institution for Buddhist lamas; the national college of China, and the residence of the great dignitaries of the empire. The inner inclosure, or "forbidden city," with walls two miles in circumference, faced with yellow tiles, and surrounded by a moat faced with masonry, is appropriated to the palace and private grounds of the Emperor and Empress, and has a magnificent temple of the Imperial ancestors, pavilions, gardens, a lake, and an artificial mountain. Outside of both cities are open suburbs; and Pekin has, besides its numerous temples and pagodas, a fine mosque, a Greek church and convent, and a Roman Catholic chapel. About ten miles west-north-west is an Imperial park, covering at least twelve square miles, and containing thirty palaces of the Emperor and other officers of State. There is also a large printing and bookselling trade, and manufactories of coloured glass, lake, and other articles. In the inhabitants' cemeteries are many members on employment connected with the Court. The Peiho is navigable for boats to within twenty miles, and communication with the grand canal, by which most of the provisions for the supply of the city are conveyed.

The plan of Pekin from which our Engraving was taken belonged to a distinguished individual in command, and was sent home as a great curiosity. It is now the property of Mr. Stanford, of Charing-cross, Dover, author of "The Social History of the People of the Southern Counties of England," and other works.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.

THE PRINCE ESCORTED TO MONTREAL BY A FLEET OF RIVER STEAMERS.

THE members of the Legislature attended the Prince from Three Rivers to Montreal. "They arrived (says the Toronto Weekly Leader) at the former place on board the Kingston on Friday, the 23rd of August, while the Prince's boat, the Kingston, was at anchor. After a meeting had been held, the Hon. Messrs. De Blaquiere and Drummond were appointed a deputation to wait upon his Royal Highness and request permission to be allowed to attend him as far as Montreal. The Prince assented. Shortly after, the steamer Kingston was unmoored with muscle-trees, and on the following morning started in the wake of the Prince. At various points along the river groups of people assembled cheering as the steamers sped past. The Lake St. Peter and even the very buoys were decorated, and here the Trinity House on the St. Lawrence took charge of the boat and line behind them. It began to rain heavily, and continued until Montreal was reached. Another steamer, crowded with spectators, had been understood the Provincial Marine proceed by the south channel, past Verchères, while the wharves were crowded with people and decorated, and a fleet of river boats had been moored in order to run by the north channel, where no preparations had been made. He thus gave the steamboats the opposite go-by. The Prince was aware of this trick they put on steam, and most of them managed to overtake him where the two channels meet at the Lake of Two Mountains.

"While the Kingston passed them their numerous passengers cheered as heartily as if the weather had not obliged them to wear waterproofs as their chief costume. Immediately in the rear the whole of them fell into line, or at least followed in some way, and the sight of so many gaily floating houses, every one of them gaily and crowded with passengers, needed only sunshine to make it the most perfectly picturesque that could be conceived. As we drew near up the rest of the way, some twenty miles of the channel, the bells of the numerous villages on shore were all set ringing while the people on the steamers joined on land greetings with a will. Fortunately when the sun shone out when Montreal was sighted, so that his Royal Highness's first glimpse of its towers and spires, and of the mountain which overlooks it, was not obtained under unfavourable circumstances. Below St. Helen's Island the Prince changed his quarter for the Kingston, which was more suitable to complete their arrangements, and information was sent to his Royal Highness that a request that he would land was desired by the citizens. The landing, therefore, did not take place until the next morning.

"It rained very heavily all the night and on the morning of the 25th until half-past nine o'clock, the hour fixed for the landing; but just at that time the rain ceased and the sun shone out. Notwithstanding the condition of the streets, which were perfect seas of mud, immense crowds were assembled on the quays and steam-boats, while the whole of the windows from which a view of the landing could be had were black with human heads. Punctual to the hour the Prince left the Kingston, with the Prince and his suite consisting of the Duke of Newcastle, and was saluted with a royal salute by the batteries on St. Helen's Island, while as it neared the wharf the crews of the men-of-war in the port, the 60th Rifles, and the 47th, manned the yards. Repeated cheers from the multitude on shore were heard, and the city bells commenced to ring." Mr. Hingston, the Mayor of Montreal, and the important ceremonies at Montreal in which he took part, have already been noted in this Journal.

GRAND CAVOR RECEPTION GIVEN TO HIS ROYAL PRINCE ON THE ST. LAWRENCE.

Whilst his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was at Montreal he made several visits to places of interest in the neighbourhood. On the 29th of August the Prince visited Dorval Island, a small wooded place in the St. Lawrence, about three miles above Lachine. The Hudson's Bay Company, represented by Sir G. Simpson, had made a grand reception. Ten canoes of the first class, prettily painted and decorated, and each manned by twelve Indians of the Iroquois tribe, the property of the Hudson's Bay Company, met the Prince as he crossed over to the island from the village of Lachine. The Indians were red shirts, blue trousers, and round red sash round the waist, with red feathers on the top. After his Royal Highness had been entertained at Dorval Island by General Williams, the Prince and suite again went on board the canoes, and were paddled down to Lachine, where they boarded the steamer Kingston and proceeded to Montreal, passing the great rapid of Lachine at sunset, and passing under the Victoria Bridge by moonlight. A correspondent of the Toronto Weekly Globe gives the following account of this visit to Dorval Island:—

"Four man-of-war's boats from the Valorous were waiting in readiness to receive the party, consisting of the gentlemen composing the suite, and given so many times during the progress, with the addition of the Marquis of Chandos, who arrived here on Monday from Quebec. At Montreal, Dr. Pulford, was observed by his Royal Highness, who kindly advanced and shook hands with the jovial soldier. The Prince had just then embarked, and was on his way to Isle Dorval, the property of Colonel Williams. The only house upon it belongs to that gentleman, and is used by him as a residence in summer, but it is now occupied by Sir George Simpson, he having given up his residence to the Prince of Wales. The distance from the main shore to the island is about a mile. Here, at first about halfway across his Royal Highness was met by ten large canoes, each one filled with twelve stalwart Indians. They advanced in a line, and then, by a sudden sweep of their paddles, divided and ranged themselves on each side with startling rapidity. They then commenced a boat-song, which was sung as floated over the water with wonderful exceedingly musical. The island was reached in a few minutes, and the Royal party proceeded to the house of Colonel Williams, where they all lunched. In about half an hour's time the river was again sought. The Prince, accompanied by the Duke of Newcastle and General Williams, took their seats in a large bark canoe, and made a tour of the island. They then proceeded by the north channel down the stream, direct for the wharf, which was crowded with people. The appearance presented was very beautiful. The sun, rapidly setting in the west, tinged the fleecy clouds which hung over head with his golden hues, and shed his beams upon the mighty river, marking out a precious pathway on the blue waves for the Royal Prince. The paddles of the Indians glistened at each of the strokes which they gave, as aided by the rapid currents, they strained every nerve to propel their canoes swiftly along the stream. The dark forests which clothed the opposite banks, the glittering white houses peeping out from among the trees, the shining spires of the village churches, all combined to produced a scene of exceeding splendour. The canoe containing the Prince was kept a little in advance, the rest were formed in a line behind. As they neared the wharf the rapid action of the paddles became more distinct, and the regular dip, dip, dip of the paddles glittered in the sunlight like showers of sparkling pearls. The Indians themselves were all dressed in red flannel shirts. Their canoes were also painted of the same colour; in fact, what with their red dress, red shirts, and red boats, they were one mass of red, varied only by their feathery headdresses of various colours, and by a tuned streak of white which ran around their frail crafts. On they came, keeping admirable time, and presenting a picture of the most striking description as they neared the wharf. It was thought by all who saw them that the Indians had never appeared to better advantage on board the Kingston, which lay waiting to receive him. But when within a few yards, at a signal given, the whole fleet suddenly turned. There was no apparent diminution in speed, with every stroke of the paddles each canoe was brought round. So close were they together that it seemed as if the canoe of Hiawatha had been among them thrown into confusion, and some by no means light collisions have taken place. But no such thing occurred. The feet of the Indians, as, indeed, when he did get a sight of the little Prince, set up three or four lusty cheers which, as was apparent, waved his hat in the air, and declared that he could now die in peace."

THE PRINCE LAYING THE CORNER-STONE OF THE PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS AT OTTAWA.

This ceremony, of which we give an Engraving, from a Sketch by our Special Artist, on pages 334-335, took place on the 1st of September last, at a point on which stands the Victoria Tower. A hotel where he was staying, and which, in honour of her Majesty's choice of Ottawa as the seat of Government, is called the Victoria House, and processed to by the Commissioners of the Parliament Buildings. A great and handsome Gothic arch had been built at the entrance to the grounds, and from it to the site of the new Parliament was to take place, there was a Gothic canopy, immediately in front of which, and over the arch, there was a platform. Above the arch there was a railing painted white; outside this an open space for the press and a few privileged individuals; while surrounding this central space, covering nearly half a mile in circuit, was a dense mass of people, including several thousand people, all filled with ladies and gentlemen. On each side of the arch were temporary but handsome bearer stretches for children and for those who could not be accommodated with room in the more central enclosure, and the conveyances, hosts of lumberers in scarlet shirts, Orange societies from the townships, mounted and clad in Orange regalia, parties of the Roman Catholic clergy, and, in short, all the population assembled from the north of march. Ine day was fine, and the scene consequently magnificent. Foreman Mr. Mellon was the first person engaged, followed by the Governor-General, Soon afterwards came this Duke of Newcastle, and H.R. Commodore Dunlop, Colonel Gray, Aide-de-Camp; Colonel Sir Allan M'Nab, Colonel Taché, Major Teesdale, and Captain Gray, the Prince's Equerries; and while all these took up their positions in a semicircle, in front of the arch, the Prince, with the Duke of Newcastle, proceeded the line on one side, and the Canadian Ministers, in due rank and order, on the other. Among the latter group of the Prince Highness the Prince of Wales. The names of the members of the Government, of the Speaker of the House of Assembly, and Commissioners, were also inscribed upon the scroll.

The clerk of the works having spread the mortar, his Royal Highness assisting with a silver trowel, the stone was slowly lowered to its last resting-place, the Prince gave it three raps with a mallet, and the Grand Master of the Masonic Lodge of Canada proceeded to lay in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and to invoke the Great Architect of the Universe to bless the work in the sanctioned by the ceremony. The three cheers were then given for the Queen, three for the Prince of Wales, and three for the Governor-General. The band played the National Anthem, and a Royal salute was fired by the Ottawa Field Battery, under Major Boyle Turner.

His Royal Highness then presented to Mr. Wilmot Superintendent of Public Buildings, and after the Hon. Mr. Rose, Commissioner of Public Works, the following address, in acceptance of a silver trowel—on which was engraved a view of the intended buildings and a suitable inscription—a portrait of her Majesty, placed at the back of the handle, and which has been a work of considerable interest to the Royal party passed, and quickly disappeared from the sight of the excited and vociferating spectators.

SCULPTURES IN THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY MUSEUM

WE this week engrave six of the Sculptures of Philosophers of all ages which adorn the central court of the Oxford University Museum, a general view of which we published in our last week's Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. These statues, six in number, have been executed by Mr. Thomas Cooper, who has renowned happy specimens of portrait-sculpture, full of mind, vivacity, and expression. They are placed in niches immediately above the pillars, being in each case suggested by some appropriate emblem. They display great simplicity of treatment in respect of costume, &c., following as nearly as may be the traditional dress of, at any rate, that of the period to which they belong. They are carved in Caen stone, and are a little under the full height of man—measuring about 5 feet 6 inches—the proportions of the compartments for which they were designed not admitting of a greater height. The first of these three which, in addition to the Baconian, have been presented by the Queen—is represented with the concave and convex lenses, indicative of the science he principally cultivated; Newton, in schoolboy attire, contemplates the apple which has just fallen at his feet, and which suggested the gravitation theory; Leibnitz, while he looks upwards as in deep thought, points to a scroll on which is his formula of the differential calculus. For the other three, Davy (given by Lord Lothian) is identified by his safety-lamp; Watt (the gift of Mr. Boulton) carries his model of the condenser, his greatest discovery in the steam-engine; and, lastly, Hippocrates (the gift of Mr. Ruskin, senior) rests his hand on a tripod, on which is represented the Æsculapian symbol, and on a scroll at his feet, of which is inscribed, in contraction, the first line of his celebrated aphorism, "Art is long, Life is short."

THE BATTLE ON THE VOLTURNO

The Piedmontese and French journals give exceedingly animated accounts of this great conflict, fought on the 1st inst., in which the Neapolitans were completely beaten. A correspondent of the Journal des Débats, who was present, gives the following graphic description of what he saw :—

"During the last five or six days the Royal Guard has shown immense activity. The Royalists, on their part, have erected formidable works on the right bank of the Volturno; they hold most favourable positions, without mentioning the fortress of Capua; they are masters of the course of the river, which they can cross by the bridges from Capua, where the river is little more than a ditch, for Capua is built on a height. From San Prisco to Capua the Royalists the right bank is bristling with guns, cleverly masked, strong redoubts thrown up with incredible rapidity, and a line of infantry whose flank rests upon a ra trap. Add to this a retrenched camp of 20,000 picked troops, dotted by pennies of Bourbon cavalry.

"On the 29th the operations of the Garibaldians was at Maddaloni. Their left was stretched from Santa Maria to Arverta, protected here by the canal which runs through it, and occupied by Major Corte, with the volunteers of Bastlicata. Santa Maria, strongly fortified, was occupied by General Bivitty, by the Sicilian brigade, La Masa, rather an embarrassment than a support to Corte. The Garibaldian centre, Maddaloni and Caserta, and Sakha's German Carabineers. The head-quarters remained at Caserta. The right wing, extending from Maddaloni towards Monte Sant'Angelo, and Rivio, who had returned from Genoa, as far as San Salvatore by San Leonore. At a mile from Santa Maria, on the road to Santa Del Parco, and a little beyond a ravine capped by a hill which commands Caparro. The hill was occupied by Garibaldians, Caparo by the Royalists. A little in advance of Punta the Faro the road divides, one leading to Caiazzo, the other to Capua. This point was the key to the whole position, and hence Monte Sant'Angelo was of the defence, commanding the course of the Volturno, had triple batteries placed there. The attack was commenced at half-past Spaugaro, corps of General Bixio's brigade, under the direction of Captain Ferraro. To this position there was but one road, and that he had violated thirty days the Garibaldians, which consist of twenty-eight guns.

"On Saturday the 1st the Royalists issued Santa Maria. On the preceding day the 47th of the Garibaldians had been massed. The Royalists seemed determined to strike a blow, for their movement. The Royalists seemed determined to strike a blow, for their movement. The plan was to attack the Maria I found Garibaldi, much agitated, there. He had been informed by Captain Castelli, of the Royalist movement, and had ordered artillery carriages, guns, &c., and sales-de-camp were giving orders for all to be prepared to march on the Royalists at the 1st.

The Royalists had made up their minds to attempt a decisive blow. They felt they were fighting for existence. They knew Garibaldi was at hand, and steadily advancing; that Lamoricière was completely defeated; and that in Umbria Victor Emmanuel was on the 1st of October, 100,000 men, of which number 5000 were cavalry, left Capua, commanded by General Palmieri, with the Royal Neapolitan Guard, the Swiss, and the Queen Bitazzi had the chief command. Generals Afan de Rivera Barbalonga and Von Mechel were under him. I have already described the position of Captain Ferrio, of the 7th Chasseurs, who was taken prisoner. At the same time a body of the Royalists marched from Maddaloni on Santa Maria, on the rear and cut of their retreat. The soldiers of Francis II. were divided into three columns, and they had made up their minds to capture the Garibaldians at the arches of Santa Maria, and draw their attention to that point; the attack by the Royalists commenced at half-past seven in the morning, being guided by the reactionary peasants of San Prisco and the neighbouring villages. The Royalists reached Santa Maria in the rear of Garibaldi's position early of 1000 men, starting from La Pisna, was to cross the Volturno below Capua, and attack the right of Garibaldi.

All this has been known to Garibaldi, and it is extraordinary that in a very reactionary country like Southern Italy, the movements of the Royalists should be so well known. The latter had erected redoubts, dug ditches, and built barricades on the very hill on which the Royalists had to march, and could advance without being seen and attack the right of the Garibaldians, or throw themselves into Santa Maria.

Half-past six was the hour fixed for the infantry commencement, but the sun soon began to roar with fury. The populations showed great excitement, and every one prepared to witness the battle. The Royalists were not expected to be as the Royalists were crossing over the fifteen arches of the railway, crossing the Volturno, and marching on the road to Santa Maria, the former in front of Castelli at Santa Maria, near the walls of the Campan amphitheatre.

"While Garibaldi was watching the Royalist movement, Garibaldi, who had arrived on the scene of battle, ordered an analogous one. He ordered the Garibaldian regiment to be formed on his left, to be supported, as it was by the rear, and threw it into the fields which the Royalists had to cross. The latter thus found themselves between the fire of Angelo, every man having up between the railway and the road, and completely surrounded. The 7th Chasseurs, commanded by Colonel Ferrio, and the 10th, by Colonel Ruiz, with an Adjutant, Major, and Captain Feroli, who were made prisoners. It is quite impossible to see a more complete rout, and the Royalists fled in disorder, and in calm courage of the most engaged.

"Such was the end of the campaign in Lombardy; I was present at Magenta and Solferino, and yesterday I fancied I was there again. Three hours were the principal of the engagement, which taken and lasted about the bayonet. The grape swept men down unsparingly. No quarter was given, Garibaldi's men, as they saw their wounded men bayoneted, rushed on the attacks and paint used in a fight which commenced with the rifle. Except the Sicilian and Neapolitan regiments, all fought well, every man did his duty with enthusiasm—a strange and fearful circumstance, if we consider the composition of the Garibaldian army. It fought without leaders, almost in silence. It was a lovely day, the sun shining in all its glory, and the ground stirred with the combatants.

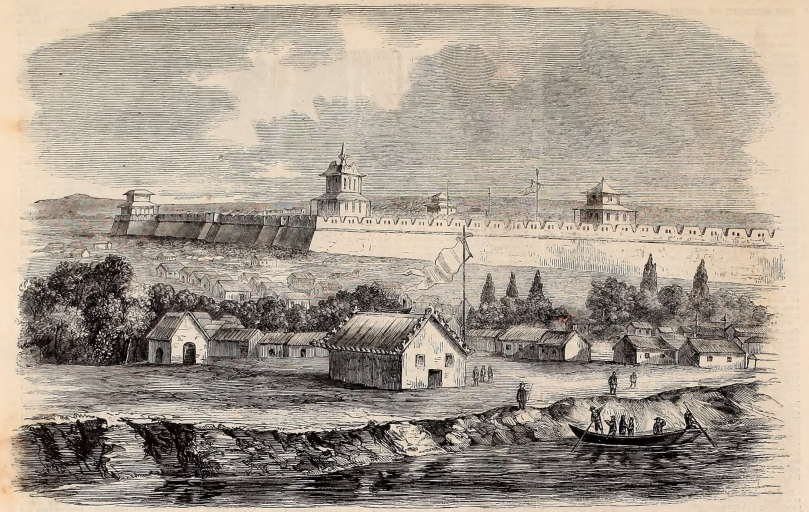
"At noon the tale of battle turned in favour of the Garibaldians. Royal Highness Francis II. was defeated, and the road to Naples and joined in the battle. The Garibaldians when the battle commenced were not 15,000 strong; at noon they were 20,000. The Royalists 30,000, but seemed stupefied. He watched every phase of the battle, keeping 2000 men in reserve, and at the last moment ordered the wounded men bayoneted, the attacks and paint used in a fight which commenced with the rifle. Except the Sicilian and Neapolitan regiments, all fought well, every man did his duty with enthusiasm—a strange and fearful circumstance, if we consider the composition of the Garibaldian army. It fought without leaders, almost in silence. It was a lovely day, the sun shining in all its glory, and the ground stirred with the combatants.

"At noon the tale of battle turned in favour of the Garibaldians. Royal Highness Francis II. was defeated, and the road to Naples and joined in the battle. The Garibaldians when the battle commenced were not 15,000 strong; at noon they were 20,000. The Royalists 30,000, but seemed stupefied. He watched every phase of the battle, keeping 2000 men in reserve, and at the last moment ordered the wounded men bayoneted, the attacks and paint used in a fight which commenced with the rifle. Except the Sicilian and Neapolitan regiments, all fought well, every man did his duty with enthusiasm—a strange and fearful circumstance, if we consider the composition of the Garibaldian army. It fought without leaders, almost in silence. It was a lovely day, the sun shining in all its glory, and the ground stirred with the combatants.

"At noon the tale of battle turned in favour of the Garibaldians. Royal Highness Francis II. was defeated, and the road to Naples and joined in the battle. The Garibaldians when the battle commenced were not 15,000 strong; at noon they were 20,000. The Royalists 30,000, but seemed stupefied. He watched every phase of the battle, keeping 2000 men in reserve, and at the last moment ordered the wounded men bayoneted, the attacks and paint used in a fight which commenced with the rifle. Except the Sicilian and Neapolitan regiments, all fought well, every man did his duty with enthusiasm—a strange and fearful circumstance, if we consider the composition of the Garibaldian army. It fought without leaders, almost in silence. It was a lovely day, the sun shining in all its glory, and the ground stirred with the combatants.

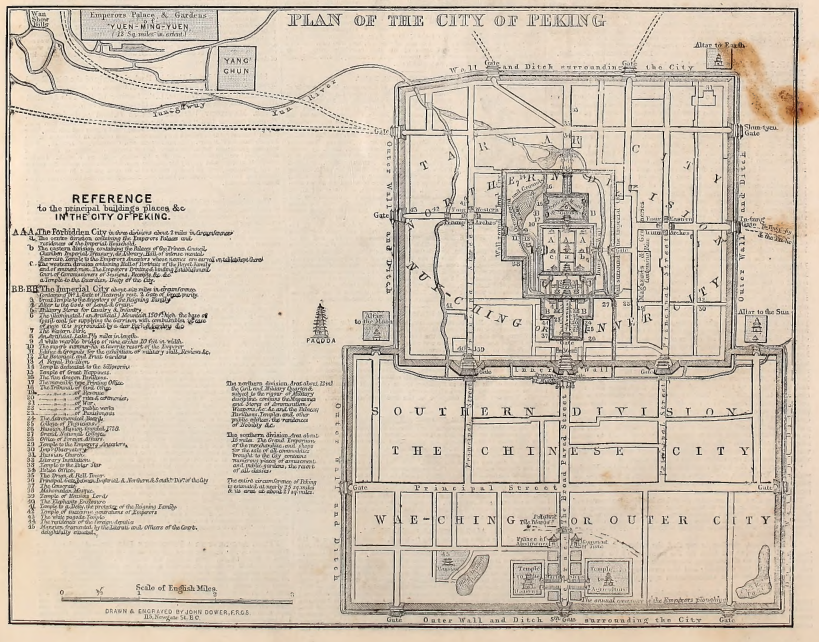
"At noon the tale of battle turned in favour of the Garibaldians. Royal Highness Francis II. was defeated, and the road to Naples and joined in the battle. The Garibaldians when the battle commenced were not 15,000 strong; at noon they were 20,000. The Royalists 30,000, but seemed stupefied. He watched every phase of the battle, keeping 2000 men in reserve, and at the last moment ordered the wounded men bayoneted, the attacks and paint used in a fight which commenced with the rifle. Except the Sicilian and Neapolitan regiments, all fought well, every man did his duty with enthusiasm—a strange and fearful circumstance, if we consider the composition of the Garibaldian army. It fought without leaders, almost in silence. It was a lovely day, the sun shining in all its glory, and the ground stirred with the combatants.

"At noon the tale of battle turned in favour of the Garibaldians. Royal Highness Francis II. was defeated, and the road to Naples and joined in the battle. The Garibaldians when the battle commenced were not 15,000 strong; at noon they were 20,000. The Royalists 30,000, but seemed stupefied. He watched every phase of the battle, keeping 2000 men in reserve, and at the last moment ordered the wounded men bayoneted, the attacks and paint used in a fight which commenced with the rifle. Except the Sicilian and Neapolitan regiments, all fought well, every man did his duty with enthusiasm—a strange and fearful circumstance, if we consider the composition of the Garibaldian army. It fought without leaders, almost in silence. It was a lovely day, the sun shining in all its glory, and the ground stirred with the combatants.



"A sqaudron of hussars, at Santa Maria, I believe, was literally annihilated by a discharge of grape. The number of prisoners is very great; several estimate is at 6000. The Garibaldians have many wounded, but few dead.

"Colonel Spangaro fought badly. From noon to evening, with admirable coolness, he commanded the extreme right of the patriots, and defended that position against more than double the force. He retook all the last positions captured seven of the enemy's guns, and drove him back till he was sheltered by the guns of the fortress of Capua. For the Garibaldians, the battle was the bloodiest they ever fought, and the victory they gained such a shower of grape has scarcely ever been seen.



THE FUNERAL OF MR. HERBERT INGRAM, M.P. FOR BOSTON.

The mortal remains of this lamented gentleman were interred yesterday week in the new Cemetery at Boston, Lincolnshire, whose inhabitants testified their deep respect for the deceased by entirely refraining from business during the day, and accompanying the body of their honoured townsman to its final resting-place "among the people whom he had loved so well." We copy from the Manchester Examiner and Times the following account of the removal of Mr. Ingram's remains from Chicago to this country, and of their interment in the family vault:—

"A fortnight only has passed since the first news reached this country of the terrible accident on Lake Michigan, by which this gentleman and his eldest son, with some hundreds of other persons, lost their lives. That time, it appears, has sufficed to enable the bereaved to collect their shattered energies, and to make the necessary arrangements for the removal of the remains of the deceased gentleman and his son to their native land. Mr. Stansell left Chicago with the body of Mr. Ingram on the evening of Friday last, and the body was conveyed on board the Cunard steamer Canada, which left Portland on Wednesday last, and reached Liverpool on Thursday morning. The body was forwarded to the residence of Mr. Ingram, in Wellington-street, Strand, and was there met by Mr. Ingram's brother, Mr. Edward Ingram, and

TIEN-TSIN, ON THE BANKS OF THE PEIHO RIVER.—SEE PAGE 351.

THE WAR IN CHINA.—DEPARTURE FROM HOCKLY PIER, COLNE RIV., OF THE SIKH CAVALRY AND TROOPS FOR THE PEIHO.—SEE PAGE 361.

LITERATURE.

MODERN PAINTING. Volume V. Completing the Work. By JOHN RUSKIN, M.A. Smith, Elder, and Co.

(Concluded from page 282.)

After our very plain avowal of the low estimate we hold of Mr. Ruskin's qualifications as an instructor in art, it will hardly be expected that we should trouble the reader with any elaborate criticism of the portion of his labours comprised in the particular volume before us. Let it not be supposed, however, that we have shirked the trouble of reading it. To have canned it through would have been impossible; and regret to be compelled to say that it surpasses in absurdity and incoherency any which have gone before it. In addition to all the usual extravagant dogmas on points of art-criticism which we have been accustomed to receive from the author, we find, now, running through and, as it were, overriding the whole, a new and startling doctrine—a constant reference to Divine inspiration and Divine objects—as the motive for nothing of all art, interlarded continually with the translated verses from the most solemn passages in Scripture, the whole being calculated to leave a very painful impression upon any well-regulated mind. Some samples of this sort of thing, but by no means the most flagrant, will be found amongst the passages we are now about to extract; our purpose in making the selection being to illustrate the extraordinary assertions of fact and opinion in which Mr. Ruskin constantly indulges. Of Salvator's painting he says:—

> In the course of our inquiry into the moral of landscape (vol. iii. chap. 17) we promised, at the close of our work, to seek for some landscape of a higher character than those hitherto considered, in which the noble sentiments in that chapter to the realization of which the whole of the third volume has been directed, should be found in the embodiment of painting such scenery. It remains for us to delight in the work of Salvator, to declare his real honours and his mountains. But is it not follow that it was advisable to point them out? from the many reasons might be given why we should not expect to find it.
>
> A child would, I suppose, receive a religious lesson from a flower more willingly than from a print of one, and many a man would be more touched by the nineteenth psalm on a stormy night better than by diagrams of the constellations.
>
> Whence it might seem a waste of time to draw landscape at all.
>
> I believe it is—to draw landscape more than usually earnestly, more beautiful (unless it be for the sake of geographical or other science, or of historical record).

It would be waste of time to controvert the extraordinary position here propounded. It suffices to know that Mr. Ruskin's notions of the purpose of landscape, the purpose which alone gives to its pleasure derived from its contemplation, differ essentially from those of all other lovers of art. It is unjust to burden the reader with the principles set forth, what becomes of all the landscape-painters that ever painted, including Turner; and why should Mr. Ruskin trouble himself to write so much about the theory and practice of landscape-painting? The enjoyment of a fine landscape painting is not so much in the contemplation of its scene represented by the artist, as in the mind of the artist represented in it. For all purposes of "geographical and other science, or of historical record," photography would supply all that could possibly be wanted.

Of the qualifications necessary for a painter we are told that "no rule or skill can ensure possibly pain, in the case of the inferior order;" "no shallow or petty person can paint;" and lastly, "no false person can paint."

> A person false at heart may, when it suits his purpose seize a stray truth here or there; but the relations of truth, its perfectness, that which makes it wholesome—these in no sense perceive. Its fragments are to him meaningless together, to also right with obscurity. It is only the constant desire of and examination into truth which can measure its relations, and be sure of the infinite aspects, and let them and knit them into the strength of sacred interwoven.

Admitting some truth in this, is it not rather inconsistent with what occurs in another passage a few pages on?

> No painter belonging to the purest religious schools ever mastered his art. Peregino nearly did so: but it was because he was more rational, more a man of the world, than the rest. No itinerancies of the mind, no wanderings of fancy, made him in the pure religious temper.

This is a heavy blow to all religious art on the one hand, and to painters and writers of "pure religious temper" on the other. We will not discuss with the author what constitutes purity in religious art, nor whether Fra Bartolommeo, Angelico, Francia, Perugino, and some few others, might lay claim to exemption from the sweeping censure implied by the above passage. But we must protest, in the cause, and plead it, we think, successfully with all unprejudiced and right-minded men. With respect to the other surrounding assertions about men of letters, how are we to apply it to Shakspeare, to Johnson, to Addison, or even to Ruskin? The question shall answer itself. We pass on to livelier matters.

Touching dogs, we are for the first time informed of an extraordinary discovery—how they may be, and have been, employed as not the gravest historical pictures, and are, indeed, essential to their consummation. "The dog," it appears, "is constantly introduced by the Venetians in order to give the fullest contrast to the highest tones of human thought and feeling." This is illustrated, for instance, in the case of Titian's famous picture of the Assumption, which is supposed to the Virgin (in the Dresden Gallery), concerning which, after describing the position and expression of each individual in the group, Mr. Ruskin thus winds up:—

> Last of all, the youngest child, perhaps about three years old, is neither frightened nor interested, but finds the movement of the Virgin's drapery to coax the dog to play with him; but the dog—which is one of the little curly, short-haired, fluffy-eared beasts which all Venetians delighted to paint—will be coaxed. For the dog is the last link in the chain of lowering feeling, and takes his place accordingly. He is the necessary contrast to the highest that Madonna gets into the house; nor, accordingly, why she is allowed to stay, she is not to go further, and looking at little more than the sky-clouds; and the waking away much offended.

So also in the same artist's picture of "The Presentation of the Queen of Sheba" at Turin, where the Queen faints with emotion, and a great deal of confusion amongst her attendants, of the table, with a pet—"The Queen's dog, another of the little fringy-paws, is wholly unabashed by Solomon's presence, or anybody else's; and stands with his fore-feet on the right hand front of his master's throne, very properly as he has lost their wits, and barking violently as one of the attendants who has set down her dish, and has unexpectedly got a bone. Also, the dog in the picture of 'Susanna' (also by Paul Veronese), her little pet dog is merely there to play, barking at the Elders."

And again, in another picture by the same master:—

> In the supper at Emmaus the dog's affection is fully dwelt upon. Nevenese's two little daughters are playing, at the bottom of the table, with a pet wolfhound, larger than either of them. One with her head down, nearly touching his nose, is talking to him, asking him questions, it seems, nearly pushing him over at the same time; the other, raising her eyes half-archly, half-reverently, from her sharp thought about the stranger guests, turns on the other side, propping him with her little hand just slightly on his neck. He all passive and quiet, probably himself a little puzzled at the strangers, but only looks earnestly into the face of the child close to him; would answer her with the gravest of demeanour, if so it might be, and look at her, after her.

Mr. Ruskin throughout all this appears to overlook the fact that dogs, cats, birds, and other animals, as well as inanimate and lifeless objects, were not introduced into scriptural subjects until the later period of art, and are pointed to by all judicious writers on the subject as amongst the evidences of its decline and the advance of the pure theological character which should inspire their execution. Although he speaks of the dog as being "constantly introduced by the Venetians," he does not mention any other artist than Paul Veronese who indulged in this propensity. We can, however, add another name to the list, undistinguished as it is—Ambal Carracci, Albano, and Barocchio, the last named effectively exemplified in the "Madonna del Gatto" in the National Gallery. But all these men lived and painted in the sixteenth, and some of them even as late as the commencement of the seventeenth, century, long, long after Raphael, Michael Angelo, and Correggio had departed from the scene.

And now for a few smart hits at various masters who have hitherto generally been held in esteem by ordinary connoisseurs. Of Salvator Rosa we read:—"Of all men whose works I have ever studied he gives me most distinctly the idea of a lost spirit. Condemned Salvator! &c. Of Claude—"Nevertheless, on account of such small sterling qualities as they possess, and of their unpretending manner, as well as their importance in the history of art, genuine Claudes must always possess a considerable value for drawing-room and other ornaments or museum relics. They may be ranked with fine pieces of china manufacture and other agreeable curiosities, of which the price depends on the rarity rather than the merit, yet always on a merit of a certain low kind." Of Nicolo Poussin (who, let us be allowed to suggest, would be more properly described as a painter of history than of "classical landscape")—"It would take considerable time to enter into accurate analysis of Poussin's strong but degraded mind, and bring us no reward, because whatever he did has been done better by Turner." [Some reasoning two reasons whose styles find no single point in common]. As for Rubens—"He is a healthy, worthy, kindhearted, generous, noble man, wrong, wilfully, at every point, in the issues of a soul, except when he paints his children." Paul Potter—"Does not paint landscape, but also it is not landscape painting; and he never will enable me to lay hold of the temper of Teniers or Wouvermans any more than I can enter into the feelings of a dog" [but Mr. Ruskin will cannot see why they painted—what they are aiming it—what they are doing]. Adding that "no person can paint who cannot enter sympathy to me as the mind of my dog when he revels on carrion." Of the Dutch school generally—"The whole school is inherently mortal to all the highest purposes of art by its fatal Anglesd-like devotion to the exemption of all purposes of painting, and throughout the north of the Continent effaced the sense of colour among artists of every kind." The modicity of variance this to Reynolds's estimate of the importance of the Dutch school (!), he may infer—"No effort of fancy will enable me to lay hold of the temper of Teniers or Wouvermans any more than I can enter into the feelings of a dog" but which scroll was made by him. The copy and the original were both purchased for the British Museum, where no doubt they came under the critical supervision of Sir Cornewall Lewis, who set about to examine the evidence of the genuineness and authenticity of the original, and came to a conclusion wholly in its favour. Sir Bulwer has been finally set up to rule over the realm of early fable, and Æsop passes into the category of myths or plagiarists, according to the evidence. The best has been rendered into English verse by the Rev. Mr. Davies, with more or less success. The task was not perhaps an easy one, but has been executed, and on the whole pleasantly performed. Mr. Davies's version will reconcile every one to the loss of a household word remains to be seen.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW. Chapman and Hall.

The number of this periodical which has just appeared seems to us adequately, and something more, to support the high character which it has acquired in its own peculiar wall of literature. The first article, "The Fraudulent Clergyman," might serve as a text for a sermon, or history, from the earliest times down to the annexation of Savoy and Nice, sufficient to make a young gentleman never read another word on the subject in the regular way to discourse upon it with facility and every apparent knowledge, after dinner, if he had only taken the precaution to read this paper in the morning. It treats with remarkable fidelity and fulness the long tale of Parisian aggression, and in particular calls attention to its gradual advance in the direction of Switzerland and the Swiss provinces of the realm of the family of Savoy. The most recent volume of Homer into English metre by Mr. F. W. Newman and Mr. Ichabod Charles Wright, the translator of Dante, form the groundwork of a review of all his translations, beginning with that of Chapman. Hall, of Grantham, in 1581, of ten books of the Iliad, which, however, were taken, not from the original Greek, but from the French of Du Chesne, so that the result must be somewhat curious. Some of the less erudite of us may not, perhaps, be aware that the whole of the Iliad and the Odyssey were translated by Thomas Hobbes, of Malmesbury, with what success the following rendering of the lament of Andromache will testify :—

> My dear, you'll by your cozenage be undone,
> And this your son a wretched orphan be.
> The Greeks at once on you alone fall;
> And then a woeful widow shall be I.
> And have no comfort in the world at all.
> But live in misery and with to die.
> Father and mother may they fail me none—
> * * * * *
> Now, Hector, you my father are and my brother
> Husband and mother, in thee I confide;
> Pity take, then, on this tender infancy,
> Lest fatherless your son, I widow be.

To the labours of the immediate translators whose works have elicited the essay, succeed, in the strict sense of the word, has been done. Merely mentioning in passing that the subjects of "Builders' Combinations" in Russian Literature" is connected with the name of Michael Lermontoff; a poet, though a son of one of the first families of the Russian aristocracy, of "The Middle Ages in the Island of Ceylon" are dealt with a nicety of discrimination which extends even to the length of each paper; we wish to direct attention to the article entitled "Female Influence in Modern Days." It is probable that few English readers will deny that a just and pure estimate of the character of the ruined women of the age is desirable. The dissection is merciless, and not the less so that it seems to come from the hand of one who, suddenly inspired with a deep love for humanity, has undertaken of book which is making its way—slowly, we must—even in England, determined to begin with the beginning, and read up from the beginning now a quarter of a century old. Even this we why should we be favoured with quotations from Victor Hugo's "Notre Dame de Paris" and "Bug-Jargal," which, however, are not objectionable—morally speaking—as they are powerful, are familiar to every subscriber to any circulating library, to say nothing of every boy in a lucrative employment that the plot of "Monte Christo" and "The Mysteries of Paris" should be detailed in a not over-lengthy article, as if they were productions of yesterday. This objection, of course, does not apply to the more recent productions of Paul de Musset and Eugène Feydeau, and to other writers whose comparative review of the works of Nathaniel Hawthorne will probably be read with much interest. The fact is that the writer has taken the best of his genius opposer to us to have been accurately perceived, and as fairly described—although, perhaps, not so much by the elaboration of a hurry summary of his qualities by Edgar Poe which is quoted in its pages. As a whole—fresh, vigorous, and original—the National Review possesses the tone of the very which has been marked out for it, without any diminution of those characteristics by which it professes to desire to be judged.

THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW. George Manwaring.

Passing from, but not passing over, the first two articles in the last number of the Westminster Review, headed "Neo-Christianity" and "The South American Indians," which contain much matter of special interest, we desire to dwell for a moment on the paper which is simply entitled "Robert Owen." The intention of the writer of this article of but a page was written by himself; on his "Book of the New Moral World;" and on a recent work by Mr. Lucas Sargent, entitled "Robert Owen and his Philosophy;" a work which is not wholly unsuccessful, was made to present Owen to the world in something like his true character as distinguished from that of a mere speculator in socialism which he was popularly supposed to be. Perhaps, however, no better, more judicious, or more just estimate of the character of Owen has hitherto been found and offered to the public than the paper in the number of the Westminster before us. The biography, all things considered, is from a favourable angle to give us a picture of the old man, while the elements of his idiosyncrasy are soundly comprehended and temperately and fairly described. The one fact is known to be that many of Owen's faults, to say nothing of his absurdities, originated in his utter want of education. He was, in fact, a self-made man, exhibited rather the usual fashion in such cases. Of his capability as an administrative manufacturer, and of the genuineness of his philanthropic desires there is no doubt; but his theories and his life are well and discriminately dealt with in this article. An amusing anecdote is told with reference to an interview with Prince Albert, at the request of Lord Liverpool on the occasion of the Government having evinced a disposition to receive Owen in a favourable manner. Owen, it is said, some alarm at his having called a meeting in London to discuss with a view to the adoption into the spurious of the principles of which he was then Mr. Peel, afterwards the talented and celebrated Prime Minister—the second Sir Robert Peel—who, at that time, was a private Minister—the second Sir Robert Peel—who, at that time, was a private member of Parliament in his manner, 'My Lord Liverpool will not you immediately,' and then remained standing, while I was seated, for two or three minutes, when Lord Liverpool came hastily from his private room adjoining, to request me to walk in. I mention these particulars here to show the effect which my extraordinary proposals produced upon the Government; and it was equally paramount with the population of all classes."

Among the minor articles noticeable are those on "The Organisation of Italy," "The Antiquity of the Human Race," and "Russian-Present and Future." On the question of the Italian Government it is well handled, nothing extravagant being demanded, while a certain tone of mission and moderation appears to run through the whole of the recommendations. We confess that when we turned to the paper headed "Thackeray as Novelist and Humourist" we were disinclined to play the Priest or the Levite, and pass by on the other side. The word "photographer," however, attracted our attention, and we soon found that therein was linked the gist of the article. Perhaps the numerous disquisitions on Mr. Thackeray's claims to be the first novelist and satirist of the day no better, clearer, or more keen estimate has been taken of his powers than in this particular treatise. The main idea which pervades every page may be found in the following sentence, which is among the earliest introductory remarks of the paper:—" We speak of a very distinguished contemporary who has, we think, in some degree descended to the level of the world's majority, but who has also been eminent beyond most men for vital sympathy with his own age. For of the assimilation already dwelt on we know few instances more marked than the resemblance between our latest developed art and our greatest living novelist; between the mirror-like narratives of the one, and the permanent mirrors presented by the other; between what we shall venture to call the photography of Mr. Thackeray and the photography of Mr. Frith." We think that the writer has established this point with a certainness far beyond the sense in which it is now often applied. It is given by travellers to their own hasty sketches, by others to successive superficial novels of society; it is also presumed by a host of writers who resemble Mr. Thackeray as little in genius as in genuine photographic power. The reader, however, who has simply synonymous with minute description, implies not only a peculiar fidelity and severity of imitation, but a peculiar restriction to the imitation itself, and in the sphere of objects to which it is turned. Each of these points deserves a notice more complete, profound, and discriminative than we can give it here; yet on each a careful rereading of Mr. Thackeray's writings, vice versâ et studio, has suggested various remarks which we have not room to transcribe. Is the novelist himself in a more emphatic sense than a true of most men) nothing beyond a photographer?

Again it is said—"It is a common remark that a first novel from the fastidiousness with which it exhibits society, fails in art. Perfection is not an art but a gift. Imperfection is a result with which they exhibit little except society. And, like inferior photographs in another sense, the first novels possess exactly the interest which the more accurate and truly commonplace side of life: they show us neither the glories or about our dull glories of the present, but at least the dress, the houses, not homes, the manners, the reproduce wigs and whiskers, dishes and furniture, with more than stereoscopic fidelity. Hence the collection, as a whole, has been a failure, and a failure of the highest kind. In the freshness of the writer's youth we find the tawdriness of outworn fashions." Again, and in connection with the same idea, we find in a subsequent page, where it is said—" In the photograph the least qualified person can say, 'I see,' but the most accomplished only the accuracy of the detail. Yet there is a chilling character in the work. Perfect and admirable as in its way it seems, it is a cold and lifeless image of which it is said, 'Behold the handiwork of God.' We find this photographic quality in Thackeray's early writings. There seem to be no passions except, perhaps, those of the moment. They are, as it were, on the further side of the glass he holds to them. He scrutinises them with an unabashed curiosity, but he does not feel them which springs from unselfishness itself; that the whirling of time brings more than it takes away. From all this arises the lack of characters. Insight, however, so keen and rare as this has a disadvantage. Like the taste for rhetorical figures in writers, it makes the speculative mind suggest the opposite antitheses of human nature; it leads him to say almost that man is an animal consistent only in his inconsistency." Even in this we may say that Mr. Thackeray has been over-influenced by this negative element." It is, perhaps, but a fair question to ask whether many of the remarks on the subject of these remarks, have thought something very like all this, only we were unable to express it so admirably. As usual, the foremost among the ranks is agreeably round up by an able discussion of "Contemporary Literature."

ODD PEOPLE, OR SINGULAR RACES OF MEN. By Captain MAYNE REID. Routledge.

This is a contribution to popular literature which contains a good deal of information about the remarkable and exceptional species of humanity which are to be found in the world. We do not believe in the negative distinction of being the most decided savages on the face of the earth—a very favourite boast with travellers—and we are asserted that, so far from the Fuegian cannibals being savage according to the ordinary acceptation of the term, they are, in fact, very far above the average of the rest of fact, they go a great way towards reaching that standard of civilisation which implies the possession of the intelligence by which they are able to live in a climate which defies fabricating fine goods, tilling their lands in a scientific and successful manner, and in short, all the ordinary requirements of a comfortable and social life. It would appear, therefore, that their real title to the dignity of savageism resolves itself into their living invariably out of doors, and nestled with a people, but that, we suppose, may be put down in the same category with the assumed abhorrence propensity for turtle. The specimens of the Fuegians which have been shown in this city by travellers are here boldly indorsed. Our author says that the Bosjesman is the smallest type of the Negro race, but that he is also the most active and lean, and is frequently so diminutive as a foot 2 inches, while the women are rarely above 4 feet 6. Livingstone states that the Bosjesmen are not dwarfs by any means, and that those who have been described as such are merely the young people of the tribe, who have been chosen with a view to increasing their attraction when exhibited. We have not perused the entire of the paper and information book, we do not hesitate to recommend it for perusal.

SCIENTIFIC FARMING MADE EASY. By THOMAS C. FLETCHER. Routledge, Warne, and Routledge.

This small volume consists of a series of articles which were addressed to the Farmer's Magazine several years ago, and are now re-written and dedicated to the proprietor and editor, Mr. Jeo Bradshaw. It is divided into two parts—the Soil and its Cultivation, and the Cattle-feeding. The first, which is the science in a style utterly free from technicality, and, indeed, is a model of simplicity and clearness, as, in fact, the title of the, "Agricultural and Analytical Chemist," would quite have led us to expect. The second part is somewhat more elaborate, but is equally estimated; but still it is impossible for any farmer to read the section on ammonia and its properties without deriving from it considerable benefit. The price of a hundred of his crats are on this all-important question. Valuable as this contribution to the cattle-feeding gets more recklessly wasted, and the means so simple as those require to preserve it. For this we may safely say, "Inquire within," page 58. There are many, we may safely say, "Inquire within," page 58. There are many, we may safely say, "Inquire within," page 58. There are many,

THE CAMP OF THE SECOND DIVISION OF BRITISH FORCES IN THE BAY OF PEARLS, TALIEN-WAN.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CHINA.

A VILLAGE STREET, TALIEN-WAN.

LANDING OF BRITISH TROOPS IN PEARL BAY, TALIEN-WAN, ON THE 5TH OF JULY.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CHINA.

INTERIOR OF A COTTAGE AT TALIEN-WAN.

INTERIOR OF A COTTAGE AT TALIEN-WAN.

Our Special Artist in China, writing, on the 2nd of July, from Talien-Wan, says:—"It being a splendid day, with a cloudless sky, I went this morning to the village of Loo-Lee-Tun, and stopped there till evening with the villagers. The streets are quite broad, and the houses are substantially built of stone, and have thatched roofs. Some of the shops, however, are built of grey bricks, and have tiled roofs. I went into a house: the inmates asked me to sit down, and were very polite and agreeable. When they went into dinner they asked me in, and presuming, I suppose, that the barbarian did not care for their usual food, they poached me some eggs, and insisted also on my drinking hot samshoo. Whilst they were dining I took the opportunity of taking them off, and send you the result. All houses here have a stove-bed, built of brick and clay, on the top of which is laid a mat. There is room on one of these beds for half a dozen people, and the sleepers must undergo a kind of baking in the winter. However, it does not seem to hurt them, for a stronger or more healthy-looking set of fellows you could not find anywhere. The fire is made underneath the bed, the smoke escaping through the chimney outside. Many of the houses are papered with brown paper, but most of them are merely plastered with clay, browned to a delicious rich colour by smoke and age; whilst the floor is simply the ground the house is built upon. On their bed they place a little table, and leave their shoes on the floor, at least some of them do, for the gentleman with the white ones kept his on. They say there is no tea here: the people drink water and hot samshoo with their meals. After dinner, as usual, they rinse their mouths with water, and put on the extra clothes they have taken off, for your Chinaman partially undresses for dinner. What an agreeable people they are! Up here everybody likes them, and the Generals take especial care that no plundering shall be allowed, though before we came a little had been done in that line—frightening the people away without reason. This was on the other side of the bay. Here they have every confidence in us, and are constantly bringing in provisions, whilst on the other side fellows are hard up, and know the taste of salt junk pretty well. This is a wonderfully cool climate. I have actually sat under the afternoon sun without an umbrella, sketching, and that in July. For the last fortnight the sky has been cloudless and beautiful; the nights are chilly, and a heavy dew falls immediately the sun has gone down."

TIEN-TSIN AND THE PEIHO RIVER.

Small vessels only can approach the mouth of the Peiho River. Large ships are obliged to anchor just in sight of the low shores through which it flows into the sea of Pechili. There is also a bar at the entrance, which can only be crossed by gun-boats at high tide. The forts which we took in 1858, and upon which, reconstructed by the Chinese, we suffered so severe a defeat in 1859, are just inside the entrance, within range of heavy guns from outside the bar. The village of Takoo is just above the forts, with a picturesque-looking building—the Governor's house.

The course of the river is winding up to Tien-Tsin; its depths regular; no shoal water in the centre of the stream. The banks gradually rise in height on ascending the river. At

TSON PEAK. GENERAL SIR R. NAPIER'S TENTS. 67TH REGIMENT. COOLIE CORPS. 99TH REGIMENT.

RLS, TALIEN-WAN.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CHINA.

TH OF JULY,—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN CHINA.

WATER-JAR. STOVE-BED. HANDMILL.

INTERIOR OF A COTTAGE AT TALIEN-WAN.

they are! Up here everybody likes them, and the Generals take especial care that no plundering shall be allowed, though before we came a little had been done in that line—frightening the people away without reason. This was on the other side of the bay. Here they bags every confidence in us, and are constantly bringing in provisions; whilst on the other side fellows are hard up, and know the taste of salt junk pretty well. This is a wonderfully cool climate. I have actually sat under the afternoon sun without an umbrella, sketching, and that in July. For the last fortnight the sky has been cloudless and beautiful; the nights are chilly, and a heavy dew falls immediately the sun has gone down."

TIEN-TSIN AND THE PEIHO RIVER.

SMALL vessels only can approach the mouth of the Peiho River. Large ships are obliged to anchor just in sight of the low shores through which it flows into the sea of Pechelli. There is also a bar at the entrance, which can only be crossed by gun-boats at high tide. The forts which we took in 1858, and upon which, reconstructed by the Chinese, we suffered so severe a defeat in 1859, are just inside the entrance, within range of heavy guns from outside the bar. The village of Takoo is just above the forts, with a picturesque-looking building—the Governor's house.

The course of the river is winding up to Tien-Tsin; its depths regular; no shoal water in the centre of the stream. The banks gradually rise in height on ascending the river. At scroll was made by him. The copy and the original were both purchased for the British Museum, where no doubt they came under the critical supervision of Sir Cornewall Lewis, who set about to examine the evidence of the genuineness and authenticity of the original, and came to a conclusion wholly in its favour. So Babrius has been finally set up to rule over the realm of early fable, and Æsop passed into the category of myths or plagiarists, according to the evidence. The text has been rendered into English verse by the Rev. Mr. Davies, with more or less success. The task was not perhaps an easy one, but has been creditably, and on the whole pleasantly, performed. Whether his version will reconcile every one to the loss of a household word remains to be seen.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW. Chapman and Hall.

The number of this periodical which has just appeared seems to us adequately, and something more, to support the high character which it has acquired in its very peculiar walk of literature. The article on "The Franks and the Gauls," might serve as an epitome of French history, from the remotest times down to the accession of Louis Napoleon. Nor, sufficient to enable a young gentleman who had never studied the subject in the regular way to discourse upon it with tolerably every requisite knowledge, after dinner, if he had only taken the precaution to read this paper in the morning. It teems with remarkable facility and fulness the long list of Parisian aggregation, and in particular calls attention to its gradual stages in the direction of Switzerland and the consequent rise of the realm of the family of Savoy. The most recent renderings of Homer into English verse by Mr. F. W. Newman and Mr. Isaac Charles Wright, the translator of Dante, form the groundwork of a review of all his translators, beginning with that of Arthur Hall, of Grantham, in 1581, of ten books of the Iliad, which, however, were taken not from the original Greek, but from the French of M. Salel, so that the result must be somewhat curious. Some of the specimens of the style of translation which are quoted are, perhaps, be aware that the whole of the Iliad and the Odyssey were rendered by Thomas Hobbes, of Malmesbury, in what succeed the following rendering of the lament of Andromache will testify :—

> My dear, you'll by your courage be undone,
> And this your son a wretched orphan be,
> The Greeks at once on you alone shall fall;
> And then a world widow shall you be call'd,
> And have no comfort in the world at all,
> But to misery and with to die.
> Father and mother have they left me none—
> * * * *
> Now, Hector, you my father are and my brother;
> Husband and mother, in deed a widow;
> Yet pittie's sake, then, on this tarret stay,
> Less fatherless your son, I widow be.

To the labours of the immediate translators whose works have elicited the essay, ample justice, in the strict sense of the word, has been done. Merely mentioning in passing that the unpicked of "Builders Lofty Lions," of "Russian Literature" in connection with the name of Michael Lermontoff, is poor, though a son of one of the first names in the Russian aristocracy; of "The Middle Ages in England;" and the "Natural History of Ceylon" are dealt with in a manner satisfactory which extends even to the length of each paper; we wish to draw attention to the article entitled "French Fiction: the Lowest Deep." It is probable that few English readers will think that it is just and legitimate has been taken of the current literature of this class in France. The dissection is a tedious, and not the less so from the fact that from the hand of one who, suddenly inspired with a desire to know something of a description of a book which is making a noise slowly, we trust—we hope in England, determined to begin with the beginning, and read up from a period dating now a quarter of a century ago. Else why should we be favoured with particulars of the "Builders of Notre Dame de Paris" and "Bug-Jargal," which, happening to be as unexceptionable—nay, dull—as they are proved to be, have long since left every subscriber to any circulating library, to say nothing of Mudie? It is hardly nowadays required that the plot of "Monte Christo" and "The Mysteries of Paris" should be detailed in the present lengthy article, as if they were productions of yesterday. This objection, of course, does not apply to the more modern works of such as Mr. Musset and Ernest Feydeau, and the quotations from the latter certainly add to the amusement which may be derived from perusing the tone and purpose of which cannot be too much commended. A most elaborate, skilful, and, at the same time, most appropriate review of the works of Nathaniel Hawthorne will be peculiarly be read with every possible interest. The turn of his mind and the bent of his genius appear to us to have been most successfully and not as faithfully delineated—although, perhaps, the treatise is but an elaboration of a lucky accuracy of his qualities in the single line which is quoted in its pages. As a whole—fresh, vigorous, and honest—the National Review pursues the tenor of the way which has been marked out for it, without any diminution of those characteristics by which it professes to desire to be judged.

THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW. George Manwaring.

Passing from, but not passing over, the first two articles in the last number of the Westminster Review, headed "Australian Explorers" and "The North American Indians," neither of which are without their special interest, we desire to dwell for a moment upon the third, which is simply entitled "Robert Owen." The dissertation is founded on a life of that singular man written by himself, on his "Book of the New Moral World," and on a recent work by Mr. Lloyd Jones, entitled "Robert Owen and his Philosophy," in which an attempt, not wholly unsuccessful, is made to present, in a popular form, the principles like real character as distinguished from that mere monster of wild socialism which has unfortunately supplied to the Owenite movement, no better, more judicious, or more just estimate of his character and of his actions could be found and offered to the public than the paper in the number for July of Fraser's Magazine. The life of Owen, although considered, is sufficiently ample to give us a picture of the life of the man, while the enumeration of his chief works is given in a comprehensive and temperately and fairly described. The sum of it all appears to be that many of Owen's ideas, to say nothing of his practical benevolence in his utter want of education. He was, in fact, a tête monste, and exhibited himself after the usual fashion in such cases. Of his capability as an administrative manufacturer, and of the grandeurness of his philanthropic designs, there is no doubt; but these phases of his life are well and deservedly dealt with in the article. A most curious anecdote is told with reference to an interview which Owen demanded of Lord Liverpool, during the session of the Government, and which some alarm at his having called a meeting in London, in July, 1817, with a view to the formation of one of his schemes for ameliorating the condition of the poor. He says:—"The interview was accordingly appointed for twelve o'clock the next day at his Lordship's private house. After we had opened before him our whole plan, Lord Liverpool was shown at once into the apartment of the private secretary, who was then left with me, and then remained standing, while I was with the Minister—the second Sir Robert Peel—who, on my entering, arose and said, with great deference in his manner, 'I am glad Liverpool will see you immediately,' and then remained standing, while I was with him for two or three minutes, when Lord Liverpool came hastily from his private room, adding to request me to walk in. I mention these particulars here to show the effect which my extraordinary popularity produced upon the Government; and it was probably considered by the population of all classes."

Among the other articles noticeable are those on "The Organisation of Daily," "The Antiquity of the Human Race," and "Russia—Present and Future." The question of "Our National Defences" is dealt headlong in a most extravagant light. Assertions, without any pretence of military caution and prevision runs through the argument and the recommendations. We confess that when we turned to the paper headed "Thackeray as Novelist and Photographer" we were inclined to play the Priest or the Levite, and pass by on the other side. The word "photographer," however, attracted our attention, and we soon found that thereon was linked the gist of the article. Perhaps in the numerous disquisitions on Mr. Thackeray's claims to be the first novelist and satirist of the day no better, clearer, or more keen estimate has been taken of his powers than in this particular treatise. The main idea which pervades every page may be found in the following sentence, which is amongst the earliest introductory remarks of which the paper :—"We speak of a very distinguished contemporary who has, we think, in some degree descended to the level of the world's majority, but who has also been eminent beyond most men for vital sympathy with his own age. For of the assimilation already dwelt on we know few instances more marked than the resemblance between our latest developed art and our greatest living novelist; between the mirror-like narrations of the one, and the permanent mirrors presented by the other; between what we shall venture to call the photography of Mr. Thackeray and the photography of Mr. Talbot. We think that the term is applicable to this great writer with an exactness far beyond the sense in which it is now often applied. It is given by travellers to their own pencil sketches, by critics to successive superficial novels of society; it is a title assumed by many who have not the faintest idea of Thackeray as the genius as in genuine photographic processes. For the epithet, unless used in simply synonymous terms with mimic daguerreotype, implies a peculiar force and vivacity of imitation, but a specific peculiarity in the imitation itself, and in the sphere of objects to which it is turned. Each of these terms deserves a note of explanation, and perhaps a philosophical than we can hope to give; yet on such a careful reader as the writer of this article we trust that a few hints may suggest some remarks which may interest those 'from whom' (as with the Apostle) 'nothing human is alien.'

Again it is said—and it is a common remark that a first novel, from the feebleness with which it exhibits emotion, is a failure. Thackeray's unaided speculation on an age, the greatest artist cannot equal the delicacy of the detail. Yet there is a chilling character in the work. Perfect and finished as it is in every line, it is not the full-blood image of what, in the reality, was animated with the breath of God. We find the photographic quality in Thackeray's every larger other eyes, the reverse of the medal is always in view. He delights to show us the worst side of human life; he has a fondness for showing that the greatest warmth of heart has its limits; that there is a selfishness which pervades the most benevolent minds; that the wisest men at times brings about its revenges, not only on our fortunes but on our characters. Insight, however, so keen and rare as this has a disposition to be used for the base purposes of the satirist, who delights the speculator to exaggeration of the personal antitheses of human nature, and to which the world almost daily is more accustomed only in his inconsistencies. Even in his later works we think Mr. Thackeray has not been free from this tendency to exaggeration. It is, perhaps, not too much to say that a great many of us, in thinking of the subject of these remarks, have thought something very like all this, and have been unable to express it so distinctly. We think the current number of the Westminster is agreeably wound up by its able discussion of "Contemporary Literature."

ODD PEOPLE, OR SINGULAR RACES OF MEN. By Captain MAYNE REID. Groombridge.

This is a contribution to popular ethnology which contains a good deal of information about the remarkable and exceptional species of humanity which have to be found on the globe. There is no scientific pretence about the book; but it will, nevertheless, be found useful, as it is the first attempt to collect in a popular form the facts as far as they are to be relied upon. The Fuejans, who believe, at the present moment have the negative distinction of being the most debased savages on the face of the earth—is in opposition to the generally-received notion. It is asserted that, so far from the Fuejans cannibals being savage according

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The following officers have been awarded good-service pensions of £100 a year each—viz. Major-General C. W. M. Balders, Colonel R. Bourchier, Colonel Pole, 12th Lancers; Colonel Hamilton, 13th Lancers; Colonel W. Parke, late of the 73d Highlanders; Colonel W. J. D'Urban, and Colonel W. D. Daverell.

The huge piece of brass ordnance recently cast in the Royal Gun-factory of Woolwich Arsenal, under the superintendence of Mr. John Anderson, and which is said to be the heaviest of that species ever cast in England, has been completed under the turning and boring lathes, and has received a 6-inch smooth bore for present experiments.

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Ford has arrived at Woolwich from Barbadoes to succeed Colonel Walpole as commanding Royal Engineer at that garrison, the latter officer having retired from the service with the rank and pay of Major-General.

Preparations for the erection of the testimonial about to be raised at Woolwich to the memory of the late officers of the Royal Artillery who fell in the Crimean War were commenced last Saturday.

It appears that Mr. Thomas's steel rifled gun, which excited such considerable interest during the late experiments at Shoeburyness, is, with a charge of 5lb. of powder, and a shot weighing 160lb., obtained a range of 4,000 yards. The weapon is to be submitted to still further test under the direction of the Woolwich Select Committee.

A review of the troops stationed in and around Portsmouth, with whom were mingled the local Volunteer Artillery and Rifles and a troop of the Hampshire Yeomanry Cavalry, took place at Portsmouth on Thursday week, and concluded with a series of manœuvres, in which the whole force were engaged in defending the heights of a supposed enemy, and taking a fine, retiring within the town, covered by the guns of the fortress and the sea-

The entire force of Chatham garrison was engaged last Saturday morning in a series of manœuvres, having for their object the instruction of the officers and men in defending the garrison from a supposed attack by an invading army advancing from the river in the direction of the town. Troops from New Brompton, the operations being precisely similar to those carried out by the troops at Chatham, assisted by the local volunteer corps, the Royal Rifle Corps, a short time back.

The Tipperary Artillery underwent a half-yearly inspection, by Major-General Eyre, at Stuckmore, yesterday week. The General expressed his entire satisfaction, and, as to the conduct of the men, stated that "good" was too weak a word, and that he could only say "very good indeed."

The Admiralty have decided upon commencing the building of another steam-sloop of the class of the Rattlesnake, which will be of greater power calculated to give her a very high rate of speed. The new ship is intended to be 200 feet in length, with a proportionate beam, to carry a very fine-of-battle ship, and constitutionally greater than any other ship at present existing in the Navy, where decidedly to resolve her construction, she will be armed, and to be armed exclusively with heavy Armstrong guns of great range, she will be the most formidable ship afloat.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

A volunteer fête was held in the village of Redmire, in the picturesque valley of Wensleydale, on Wednesday last, to which the corps of the district have been invited to partake of the hospitality of Captain Ochet, at Elm House there. After the military operations were over, the men sat down to dinner, Lord Bolton, Sir George Denys, Colonel Wade, and others.

The promotion of prizes for the Queen's Prize, the Cheshire Rifle Prize Meeting, held at Leasowes on the 19th and 20th of September last, took place at the Townhall, Birkenhead, last Saturday—the Mayor in the chair. A gold cup, and ornaments of the value of ten guineas, being presented by the Hon. Lady Ouet-

Last Saturday evening Colonel Wyndham, C.B., a distinguished Peninsular officer, was formally introduced by Major Gordon to the members of the Victoria Rifle Corps at their Orderly Room, in Duke Street, St. James's, previously assembled for parade, by permission of the authorities. The event is really worthy of notice, as it gave a most striking proof to the very-opposite Colonel.

A handsome silver salver has been presented to the Hon. W. P. Talbot, Lieutenant-Colonel of the King's Own Staff Corps, by the officers serving in his marriage with Lady Emma Stanley.

The other day a party of young men, among whom was Mr. Frederick George Furse, a member of the 18th (Cardiff) Rifle Volunteers, went for private practice at the target on the Moors, to the north of the city, but to score for his companions, and it is supposed that he was in the act of looking at the target to see the effect of his shots when he was struck by a ball struck Mr. Furse in the leg, shattering the bone in a dreadful manner. The leg has been amputated.

A volunteer encampment will be formed to-day (Saturday) upon Nuneaton Common, about two miles out of the town, by the Nuneaton corps of the Eastern Counties Railway, when the West Essex Yeomanry, Artillery, and Cavalry, the Leicester Artillery Company of Lancashire Rifles, will be met together; and any other rifle corps of Essex, Hertfordshire, and Middlesex, may avail themselves of brigading with them. Prizes will be awarded in the review and field-day of that body.

An interesting match took place at Ridgate yesterday week between several members of the 9th Royal Surrey Rifles, who competed for prizes given by Mr. Hen. B. Mason, M.P., the Captain and Lieutenant of the corps respectively. The prizes given by Captain Monson were a handsome rifle, a silver cup, and a field-glass, and these were to be given for the best shot at each of three ranges each, at two hundred and three hundred yards each. F. Blackstone won the rifle, Lieutenant-Jenkins' prize; F. Hughes the cup, and Captain Monson's prize. R. Killick the field-glass, making nine points. The two best shots then competed for the silver ribbon of the day—seven rounds at two hundred and fourteen, made and subscribed by the ladies of Reigate, five rounds at five hundred yards. This was carried off by Lieutenant Jenkins, with a score of 31 points. A green mask of the inhabitants, among whom were a number of ladies, were present at the field at which the match was concluded, and the prizes were distributed.

RIFLE COMPETITION AT WINDSOR.—On Wednesday and Thursday, last week, seven prizes, given by the second Windsor Rifle Corps, by Lieut.-Col. Rep., G. W. Hope, Esq., and by the Hon. A. H. Rothven—were shot for by members of the Windsor Volunteer Corps. The distances were as follows:—Tuli, 72 points; Hill, 71 points; Bainbridge, 21 points; Holden, 21 points; Stone, 21 points; Harper, 19 points. Fire shots each, at distances of 200, 300, and, 500 yards. The shot off—Hill, 5 points; Bainbridge, 4 points; Holden, 4 points—one shot at each range. Harper, 4 points—two shots each range. At the close of the competition the prizes were distributed by Lady Mary Wood.

PRIZE-SHOOTING ON A LARGE SCALE AT HASTINGS.—The beautiful little valley near Hastings, known as Bourne-mead, was on Monday the 8th the scene of a rifle match, or rather a series of rifle matches, on a large scale. The contest was chiefly among the corps of Sussex Rifle Volunteers, but others joined in the competition for some of the prizes. The first prize was a Lancaster rifle, given by Captain Jenkin, which was won by Mr. Hargrave, 24 points in ten shots at 200 and 300 yards. Lieutenant Crake and Mason Pashall each obtained 24 points; and in the shot-off for the rifle Mr. Pashall scored prize (a silver medal) and the third prize (a bronze medal) Mr. Hilton won the second and Mr. Pringall the third prize. A shooting match took place between twelve members of the 1st company of Cinque Ports Rifles (Hastings) and twelve members of the 1st company of Sussex Rifles (Battle), at ten rifle shots at each distance, when the Hastings company proved victorious, making 119 points to the Battle company's 116. An open match was shot for by the seventeen gunners, and a second prize of five guineas, which, after a close contest, was won by Gunner Hall, who scored 30 points out of the possible 40 for the cup and Mr. C. Brittenden the guineas. Countess Waldegrave gave away the prizes. There was an immense concourse of visitors to witness the shooting.

ST. GEORGE'S BIBLES.—The following prizes for the annual course of 1860 will be awarded at the conclusion of it on the 31st of December next, and are the property of the corps for ever—to be held for one year by the member who has the honour of winning it:—The qualifications for the first prize are for those who have passed into the first class in the second period. First prize: "The Gold Medal of the St. George's Rifle Volunteers," value twenty guineas, and Silver Cup. Second prize: A Silver Tankard (presented by the Right Hon. Sir Hamilton Seymour), to the member who has obtained the greatest number of points in the three classes throughout the course, with the proviso that he is a marksman with a minimum of 60 points. Third prize: A Silver Goblet, value £7 10s., to the best shot in the third class, standing. Fourth prize: A Silver Cup, value £5, to the best shot in the fourth class. In addition to the above, the following prizes will be shot for at the conclusion of the course:—A Wellington Rifle, value £5 5s. The qualifications are, that every competing member should have attained eight full-dress parades since the 1st of May; have passed into the first class of battery-instruction in the corps, be in the first or second class in either of the three periods, and must use the Lancaster rifle. Second prize: A Silver Cup, enjoyed the advantages of a recognised course of instruction at Hythe or elsewhere. The conditions to be 200, 400, and 500 yards, seven shots. The Sykes Rifle, presented by Mr. Charles Lancaster, for the best shot at 200, 500, and 600 yards. Ten Rifle prizes.

A SHAM FIGHT ON THE NORFOLK COAST took place yesterday week between the Norwich company, seventy-three strong, and two Yarmouth companies, under the command of Captain Patteson, the defending force being composed of seventy-two men. The attacking force was commanded by Captain Bignold, and the movements being supposed to be a hostile force, resisted by an opposing native body. The gallant defenders of the coast had their forces were posted on the Lighthouse Cliff, and commenced a brisk fusillade against the "enemy," upon whom, however, they did not seem to make much impression, and after a short interval the order was given to foil back. The enemy scrambled to the cliffs in excellent style, and gradually drove their opponents before them. The latter, however, soon took up some fresh positions, and some animated skirmishing followed, in which the mounted brigade have took part. The "enemy" by degrees gained the cliffs at the point where it is to be presumed they surrendered at discretion. The whole affair went off with great spirit, and the "engagement" was followed by a dinner given by Captain Buxton, M.P., in a tent near the Hotel de Paris, at which 300 volunteers sat down. Captain Buxton presided, and was supported by Lord Suffield and many gentlemen known in the locality and others, who took part in the spectacle of the day.

THE PORLOCKSHIRE RIFLE MATCH.—This contest commenced at York, on Thursday week, and terminated last Saturday. The prizes, which were offered by the Lord Mayor and citizens of York, were, for the best rifle-shooter, five shots at each of the distances of 200, 300, 400, and 500 yards, the sum of £50; for the second best, £25; for the third, £15. At the conclusion of all the rifle corps in the county, and there was an entry of no less than 313 names, the prizes for the competition had been finally decided, and the contest was wrestled out, in consequence of their having failed to score seven points. The firing took place on the Knavesmire, on the north side of the racecourse. After firing the third range thirteen more competitors retired whose chances were considered hopeless, leaving only thirty-seven of the original number to shoot at 500 yards. This was done on Saturday, when Mr. Lupton, of the 1st Yorkshire Rifles, won the first prize, and made the best score number of twenty-six points. This was the highest score, and he was consequently the winner of the first prize of £50 and the rifle. Mr. Hall, of the 1st York, won the second prize of £25; whilst for the third prize Mr. Hall, of the 1st York, each of these gentlemen having scored twenty-five points. The shot-off was then resorted to, and ended in favour of Mr. Whitley, who thus obtained the third prize, Mr. Hall coming in second for the fourth.

PRESENTATIONS OF COLOURS, BANNERS, ETC.—The Trent-bridge Cricket-ground, Nottingham, was on Saturday last the scene of a military display on the occasion of the presentation of colours to the 1st Nottinghamshire Rifle Volunteers, when the Robin Hood Rifles were presented with a pair of colours and a silver bugle by the ladies of Nottingham. The ceremony was preceded by proceedings, and the ceremony then took place. The colours were escorted to the front by the Rifle Band, and were received by the ladies with the addresses of Nottingham and clergy, the presentation party, and ladies' colour-bearers, who were the Misses Bainbridge and Mellors. Lieutenant Wells took the colours and consecrated them, using a suitable form of prayer composed for the occasion. After the colours had been consecrated they were handed to Lady Belper, who presented them to Lieutenant-Colonel Enslea, who, on receiving them, addressed the ladies, and spoke of the Enslea's knowing, after which the colours were posted. They consisted of a crimson silk flag, with a green silk one on each side. The latter, in handsome white charges were then presented to Adjutant White; and the presentation of the silver bugle to Sergeant-Major Hughes, after which the whole of which were on a most satisfactory nature.—Last Saturday the Lewes Rifle Volunteers received their colours. Thomas Ridgway Bridon, Esq., J.P. The ceremony took place in the field near the Brighton-road, on the ground usually staked out for the Lewes races, in a large number of spectators. The volunteers were formed into a square, when Miss Bridon, accompanied by her father, and by Lord Pelham, and having acknowledged the gift on behalf of the corps, Private Delmard stepped forward and received the colours, which were consecrated by the Rev. Mr. Hall in the name of the 15th. At the conclusion of the ceremony a luncheon was provided in the Corn Exchange, at which upwards of 200 persons sat down at the tables.—Last Saturday Miss Phillipps, daughter of Mr. Phillipps, of Bradley, presented a silver flag to the Bradley Rifle Corps. On the name of her brother, who is Ensign in the corps.

THE RIFLE MATCH AT WIMBLEDON.—We have left in its leading article on this event, has a well-written passage describing the shooting at 900 yards, the between the best shots of the country, and as it is one of the events we have already said, were open to all comers. "Here," says the writer, "the shooting for the purpose of deciding the question of the prize. Those who shooting for the purpose of deciding the question of the prize. Those who had made the highest scores at the shorter ranges were then allowed to fire at the 900 yards range, and the two champions stood forth again to decide the question. The first shot of Mr. Rose, at the 900 yards distance—concealing more than half a mile. Mr. Lecce, however, had that he was much in favour, though on the other hand, Captain Kirk had won the prize at 900 yards, under circumstances of considerable excitement, the rivals took their ground, and the anxiety of the spectators was intense. Captain Kirk fired the first shot, and the ball fell a little short of the bull against the target laid instantly at the bit. Mr. Lecce then advanced to the firing point, and, as he presented his weapon, a second and the same signal told the marksman that the correct distance had been obtained. The ball struck the target, and a second came up to the mark, and a second time the shots were equal, and the tie at that of establishing their equality. Three bullets in succession had each pair of shots that it was impossible to make any distinction of merit. The excitement was now intense, the excitement of the spectators increased, and those peculiar and involuntary expressions of emotion which frequently attend the progress of a contest of skill and nerve were heard all over the Southport Sands. At length, for the fourth time, Captain Kirk appeared upon the ground, and, under circumstances of the most exciting nature, the shots. He then forward, intoning anxiously for the ring of the bullet. Presently the sound was heard, and the marker was seen to disappear below ten, but no sound was heard, nor was any signal displayed. He had missed. Mr. Lecce then advanced, and, notwithstanding the disappointment he had just undergone, he showed the same steadiness and coolness which had characterised his previous shots. He fired,

HIEN-FOU, THE EMPEROR OF CHINA.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

THE PRINCESS FREDERICK WILLIAM OF PRUSSIA PROMENADING IN THE GARDEN OF THE PALACE AT CHARLOTTENBURG.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, CAPE TOWN.

H.M.S. "EURYALUS," WITH PRINCE ALFRED ON BOARD, ENTERING SIMON'S BAY.

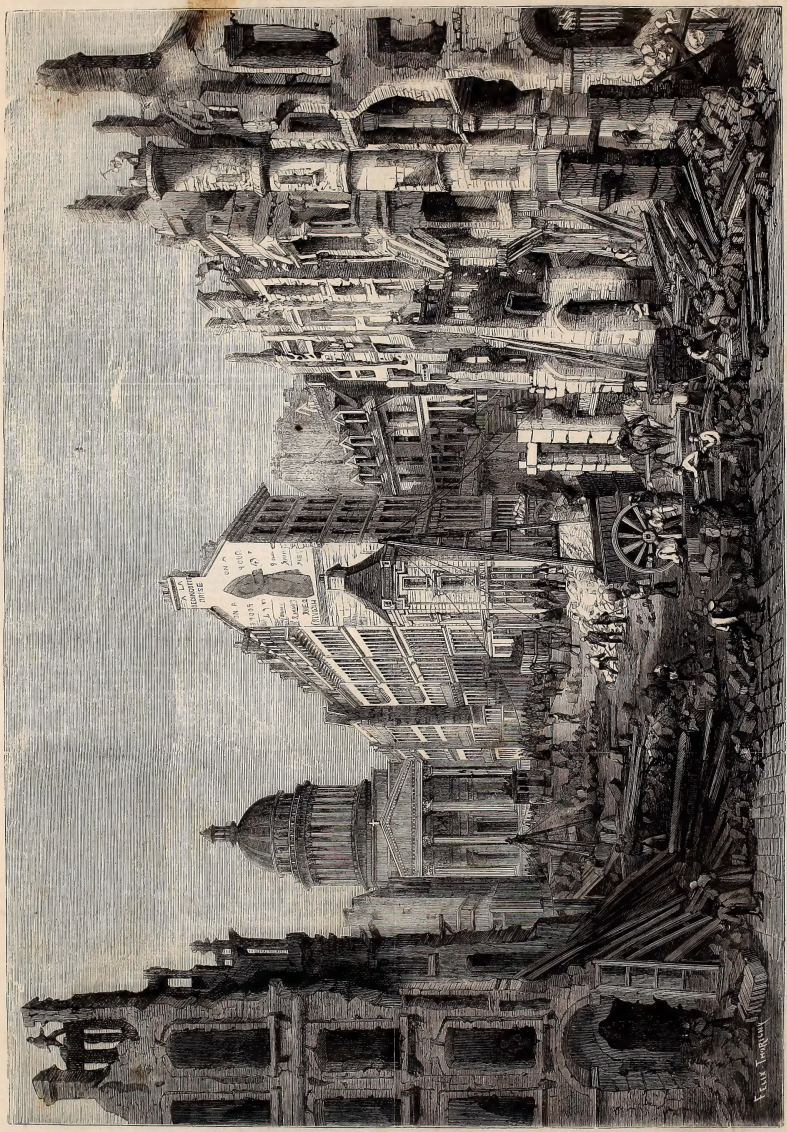
TABLE BAY AND TABLE MOUNTAIN, CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

We give on the preceding page an Engraving of the Euryalus, with Prince Alfred on board, entering Simon's Bay on Tuesday, the 24th of July last. Simon's Bay is an inlet on the west side of False Bay. In this bay is situated Simon's Town, about twenty-three miles south of Cape Town, with which it communicates by a good road. It is neatly built at the foot of Cape Mountain, and has a naval arsenal. At this port homeward-bound ships from India usually resort for repairs, and it is the residence of the naval Commander-Chief of the station. The Prince landed and made a public entry into Cape Town, as already stated, on the following day, attended by his Excellency the Governor, stated, on the following day, attended by his Excellency the Governor, Sir George Grey, Major Cowell, and the Lieutenant-Governor, General Wynyard. The welcome which greeted his Royal Highness on his arrival, on his landing, and throughout his tour through the colony, has been of the most cordial and enthusiastic character—Englishmen, Dutchmen, Malays, Mosambiques, and Hottentots vying with each other in perfect harmony in a long series of right loyal rejoicings. During the Prince's stay at Cape Town he visited every object of interest in the town and neighbourhood. The volunteers and regulars were reviewed in his presence, and a sham fight performed. The last three days were devoted by him to an excursion through some of the most productive, romantic, and historically interesting districts of the colony.

No part of the world, not even Tasmania, can boast of an aspect in which the sublime and the beautiful are so exquisitely mingled as the Cape on being approached from the sea. Seen at first from afar in Lion's Rump (as on the right of the Engraving) and Lion's Head and Table Mountain, the latter of which is 3,582 feet high, and the former (on the left) presents themselves to view, and on nearer approach the castle, town, and shipping fill up the beauty of the scene.

The Government House, the residence of the Governors of this colony, is situated in some beautiful grounds, about fifty acres, extending from the city towards the mountain at the foot of Table Mountain. A broad avenue of oak-trees, upwards of half a mile long, leads through the grounds, forming a shady and much-frequented promenade. This is crossed by numerous other walks, also planted with trees, and dividing the ground into large square plots. Most of these consist of greensward, but a large space near the Government House and private grounds is devoted to the purposes of a botanical garden, containing such a collection of trees, flowers, fruits, and plants, indigenous and foreign, as perhaps few similar establishments can boast. This was founded by the Dutch long ago, and its merits can boast. This was founded by the Dutch long ago, and its merits can boast. This was founded by the Dutch long ago, and its merits



Relics of the Past.

CURIOUS MANUSCRIPT RELATING TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

A REMARKABLE old MS. relating to the history and privileges of Westminster Abbey is, or was a few years ago, in the possession of the Right Hon. Lord Masserene. It forms a roll eleven feet and a half in length, consisting of six pieces of parchment; usually five skins of fine handsome additional piece, evidently intended as a protecting covering to the rest.

The first is a Latin legend, relating the miraculous consecration of the church by the ghost of the Apostle Peter. The second is an English translation of the legend. It tells that when Ethelbert, King of Kent, was converted to Christianity by the preaching of St. Augustine, he built a church in honour of St. Paul in the east-London, and that his nephew, then King of Essex, did make and found a noble minister in honour of St. Peter on the west part of the same city, on the Isle of Thorns. It proceeds to relate that the night before the public consecration St. Peter appeared in the guise of a pilgrim on the opposite side of the River Thames to a fisherman, and asked to be carried over in his boat; that the Apostle, having landed, proceeded to the church, which was immediately filled with supernatural light, and consecrated by Him, which was immediately filled with supernatural light, and consecrated by Him, fully believing the miracle, paid tither of their fish to the ministry.

The third skin, next, bearing the title of "Privileges Westminster," embodies a canon of St. Dunstan Archbishop of Canterbury, in synod assembled with Oswold of York, Adelgare of Elmham, and the other Bishops of England. By this document the Prelates excommunicate all offenders against the Church of St. Peter in Westminster; enunciate all offenders against the Church of St. Peter in Westminster; enunciate all offenders against the Church of St. Peter in Westminster; enunci

PARIS DEMOLITIONS.—REMOVAL OF A PORTION OF THE QUARTIER LATIN.—FROM A DRAWING BY M. THORIGNY.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1860.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1055.—VOL. XXXVII.] SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1860. [WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

VICTOR EMMANUEL AND ITALY.

In the last few days Europe has had presented to it a very remarkable State paper. The manifesto of Victor Emmanuel to Southern Italy is before the world. The proceeding is one which we in England will gladly recognise, inasmuch as it is one nearly akin to some of our institutions and to some precedents of our own. It is true that for some time past, and, probably, for some time to come, we have not felt called on to demand for ourselves the choice of a king, and to ask from the candidate a declaration of his principles. Perhaps we Englishmen, who are so free that we talk treason as fast as we like, always supposing that we commit no overt act against known law, are apt to forget the state of transition through which we passed before we reached to that perfection of liberty which we now enjoy. We, too, have gone through the fiery ordeal of civil wars, have had to dispose of one king and to depose another, while we asked the moral and material aid of a foreign Monarch to cap the climax of the constitution which we were endeavouring to build up. We placed a Dutchman on the throne of England because, by a little stretch of imagination, we could think that he bore a touch of legitimacy, acquired, if not natural, about him, and thus combined those two principles of hereditary right and free choice of the people which, somehow, we conceived were necessary elements of a Sovereign. The case of Victor Emmanuel appeals almost directly to those sentiments which have also induced us to compound for the angularity of the circumstances which surrounded the throne of a British Monarch imported from a small German State, who never did his chief subjects the honour of learning their language. Those sentiments may be defined coarsely by stating that we will not have any one to rule us who is not in some sort or in some way our selection and our choice. It may be that we have taken our alternative Sovereigns—so to speak—pretty much as a man takes his wife—for better, for worse; but then we have taken them; we had eyes and chose them. Happily for Southern Italy she has not to go to a foreign land, and perhaps an uncongenial race, to pick her future Monarch. When the hopes that are conveyed in the cry of "Italy for the Italians" are realised, that consummation which is implied in the settlement of the crown of a united realm will be attained in the person of an Italian King. Not among the least of the moral triumphs which this Italian struggle for freedom and constitutional government has produced is the fact that in its very midst has stood the representative man whom every voice has always proclaimed as the coming Sovereign of the realm which was about first to be created and then to be consolidated. When Greece and Belgium achieved the dignity of free monarchies, those who managed their affairs went abroad, and sought in the places where crops of princes were most plentiful for the person who was to wear the crowns of those kingdoms. Italy has not had to send out on any such search, but has found her King complete in that quality of blood and race which must necessarily speak so directly to her dearest sympathies. Everything which could tend to make the suffrage of the people complete has, with a coincidence so happy as to seem like a special interposition on behalf of the new kingdom of Italy, centred in the name of Victor Emmanuel. With this, added to his other positive advantages, it is from no ordinary standing-point that the King of Northern Italy asks the suffrages of the people of the liberated South. We, of all others, have shown no disposition to underrate the momentous services of Garibaldi in bringing about the existing condition of things. What would have been the result of the constitutional struggle without him it is not easy to say. But it is impossible to deny that the attitude which Sardinia has maintained, and the action which she has exhibited, have, after all, been the means of consolidating the Italian movement. It is in no vain spirit of empty boast that Victor Emmanuel appeals to the course taken by his Ministers—proceeding which he pursued as the verge of martyrdom—and to the consistent adherence of Piedmont to those principles which are now we will not say accepted, but eagerly seized, by the rest of Italy. He is fully justified in his assertion that the strength and freedom in no epoch not very favorable to freedom." It is impossible to over-estimate the influence of a kingdom like that over which he has ruled on the events which have taken place. Imagine Piedmont in exile—its constitutional Government, and what must have been the effect on the people of the rest of the peninsula, deprived of such a rallying-point for their hopes and their exertions? Even so apparently remote a fact as that of the junction of the forces of Sardinia with those of England and France in the war with Russia is pointed out in the manifesto of the King as a part of that system for the liberation of his country which he has never lost sight of; and, considering that circumstance from the light which he has thrown upon it, we are inclined now to admit its significance in a new point, we are inclined now to admit its significance in a new point, conscious of it before. It probably led to that alliance with France which resulted in the campaign in Italy last year; at any rate, the sequence is not forced or violent. If so, apart from the direct wresting of Lombardy from Austria, it led to the subsequent revolution in Tuscany and the Roman States, important links in that great chain which has now extended to the uttermost south of all the Italian provinces, and to the consummation of the policy, at once consistent and profound, of ten years, by which Sardinia has been influenced.

CHELSEA NEW CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, MARKHAM-SQUARE, SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 376.

OVATION TO THE FIRST GARIBALDIAN WHO ENTERED THE CAFE DI EUROPA, NAPLES.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, FRANK VIZETELLY.—SEE PAGE 371.

In fine, we must but hope that Europe—at least that part of Europe which is actuated by feeling for, or bound by assent, actual or implied, to, the liberating movement in Italy—will accept the proclamation of Victor Emmanuel, admit the claims which it contains, and do what is necessary to sanction the ratification of that state of things which it declares. It is true that difficulties yet lie in the way of Il Re galantuomo and his able counsellors, who, from the mouth of Count Cavour, have also proclaimed their scheme of policy and organization. It is not impossible to see eye to eye with the anxiety which exists and the danger which may arise from the presence of the troops of France in Rome. It is whispered that this occupation is only contingent on another cession of territory by Victor Emmanuel, and that if the island of Sardinia be added to France there will no longer be an obstacle to the achievement of a design of Cavour—namely, that Rome should become the capital of regenerated Italy. An ominous reticence on the part of the Emperor of the French is now, as ever, supposed to betoken some predetermination on his part to attain a certain object, which will be declared in his own good time, and in his own peculiar way. In a very short space whatever is lurking in the secret policy of that Potentate must be brought to light. The Italians have nearly done their work; it is to be hoped for the Powers of Europe to declare themselves, so that the final settlement of the great question of Italy may be arrived at. Surely there can be but one result from all that has taken place.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Winter Session of the Faculty of Arts and Laws at the University College was opened on Tuesday, when Professor Long delivered an introductory lecture. There was a numerous attendance, including a considerable number of ladies. The subject selected was—"Rome with reference to its History to Political Economy," which he dealt with logically and in great detail, illustrating his arguments by familiar comparisons. The professor was loudly cheered at the conclusion of his lecture.

DEMOLITION OF THE PUBLIC BATHS IN THE HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.—A large range of premises has been taken for a term of years appropriated to the purpose of public baths and washhouses in George-street and Hampstead-street, Hampstead-road, which, after the removal of families, and houses and shops are to be erected on the site of the old building. The New Road Improvement Act, which on removing the old buildings, provides that has for many years been a conspicuous object from the Hampstead-road, and to build a number of new houses on the spot, has been carried out by Mr. Drummond-street.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Last week the births of 876 boys and 819 girls—in all, 1695 children—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1840-49 the average number was 1463. In the week ending last Saturday the deaths registered in London were 1035. In the ten weeks the average number of deaths in London was 1000, exceeding the average only was 1018; the present return is for a population which has scarcely increased, the average with a view to the increase of population, and in proportion, a correction which will very much raise it, 1019. Hence it appears that the deaths in the last week returned are less by 19 than the number which, on the average rate of mortality has prevailed.

LOVERS' GIFTS.—At the Lambeth Police Court, last Saturday, Emma Cutten, a smartly-dressed young woman, was summoned to show cause why she refused to deliver up to Mr. Thomas Wakefield, a tailor, of Kennington, certain articles having reference to a matrimonial engagement which he presented her with a wedding ring, and a gold watch and guard. Having discovered that she had been engaged to another young man, he had requested that she would hand herself to the company of other young men, but she refused to deliver them up. The defendant said that she had returned the ring, but she refused to return the watch. She therefore she did not see why she should be called on to be fined. Mr. Norton observed that it was quite clear that the defendant had received the various articles from the complainant as tokens of unchanged affection, and to be made use of as the complainant thought proper. The defendant had broken off the engagement, and, therefore, the complainant had a right to the articles. Mr. Norton said he must make an order for her to deliver up the articles.

FACTORY LIFE.—A curious glimpse into the inner life of a jute-factory, belonging to Mr. Clews, in Bromley, Middlesex, was afforded on Monday at the Thames Police Court, when Ann Jessie Jeffrey, a female, was charged with an assault on Catherine Cain, a young woman employed in the establishment, an able-bodied woman, and that on Wednesday last the defendant, who was forewoman, had told her she was not doing her work properly. She replied she was doing it as well as she could. The defendant said it was a lie. She said she would do it no better. The defendant, who was in a passion, said, "You can do it better," and told her she was a liar. She said it was no lie at all, as which he struck her on the head. He hit her on the face, and also on the temples and body, in various places, and caused her mouth to bleed. As she left the factory he said, "I hope this will be the last of you." She had been employed in the factory nine months. The wages were 9s. per week, and the working hours were fourteen hours per day. The defendant admitted that every differed considerably: the complainant had struck him first, and he never took her by the hair. Acting on the advice of the magistrate, a private arrangement was made by the parties, Jeffries compensating the woman.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Count Kisseleff had a conference last Saturday with M. Thouvenel and the Papal Nuncio. He took leave of the Emperor on Sunday in a private audience at St. Cloud, before setting out for Warsaw.

The Constitutionnel publishes the following from M. Bonfils:—"On the invasion of Naples by the Sardinian troops. The writer, while exculpating Garibaldi, charges the Sardinian Government with the invasion of the Roman States and the Neapolitan territory, with violating every principle of international law, and acting in contradiction to all the principles involved by itself.

The French and English Plenipotentiaries have signed a convention, containing a reduction of articles 4 and 5 in the treaty of commerce. Refined sugar will be taxed 40f. per 100 kilogrammes. The import duty on machines, tools, and instruments will be reduced to 5f. per 100 kilogrammes. The duties on earthenware will be a maximum duty of 20 per cent., which in four years will be reduced to 15 per cent. Printers' pottery will be subject to a reduced duty, and percelain to a duty of 10 per cent.

ITALY.

King Victor Emmanuel has issued a proclamation "to the people of Southern Italy" in which he summarises the main events in Italy. He states that, in carrying out the design of a united and independent Italy, the memory of his father never left his mind. Called to the throne at the moment when the misfortunes of 1849 had placed his hereditary crown upon his head. Previous to his accession Piedmont had obtained important rights from the unanimous will of nations. He felt that the cause of Italy was worthy of the great nation over which he rules. By the justice of his cause, and by the sacrifices on the ground that the expulsion of their rulers arose immediately out of the war begun by himself; but, as the same time, exhorted the people to keep himself in pace with his own feelings and proposals, not only to the Grand Duke of Tuscany, but also to the Duke of Modena and to the King of Naples. His exhortations, however, the cession of two most noble provinces of his hereditary kingdom, and directs a portion of his army to the assistance of the Pope against the enemies of the Papacy, and the other against Mazzini's faction. In conclusion, he informs the people of South Italy that the Piedmontese are coming among them as friends, in order, as they had entered the Marches and Umbria in order to dispense that tranquillity of persons and of all the blessings which were assembled there; and finishes by saying, "I know that in Italy I close the era of revolutions."

The Genoese Corriere Mercantile says Victor Emmanuel's proclamation has been followed up by energetic acts. The King himself is now on Neapolitan territory, and has reached Teano, which is, at last, in name also, restored at Loreto at noon. He then proceeded to Grottolmare. Here, on the 12th, he received the Neapolitan Ministers, municipalities, and numerous influential persons of Naples. M. Borghi presented the address of the municipality, and M. Valla that of the Neapolitan Senate. The King

COMMENCEMENT OF THE WAR IN CHINA.

(From our Special Artist and Correspondent.)

Pehtang, August 10.

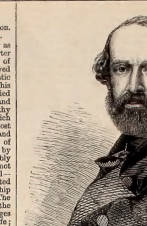
We left Talien Bay on the 27th ult. at daybreak, and arrived at our first anchorage on the next evening, about twenty miles from the Peiho. It was certainly a most magnificent sight to see this splendid fleet of 300 vessels sailing together on the calmest of seas; scarce a ripple disturbed the sleeping waters, and the sky was an ocean of blue, the breeze was delicious; in fact, it would be difficult to convey to you the delightful feeling experienced in our trip. Junks were sailing about, and some even came right through our fleet, and the Chinese steamer, of the Pekin Gazette was on board taking notes and describing the fleet of the vessels. Barbarians as countries call us, and 'tis said of us, covering the ocean like the stars in heaven, or flies in Talien-wan.

Talien Bay could only be approved over to the Peiho; got a distant view of forts; general rush for telescopes; a town discovered to the north of forts; the gun-boats go in first, towing the commissariat junks. In the distance the land has a fine effect of it, we observe thoughts of masts. We perform a variety of aquatic waltzes and go round and round the fleet, and not till dusk do we cast our last go to anchor. Several Russian gun-boats and American steamers. Frantic saluting takes place, deluding us, for the first shot is fired we all scamper, supposing the fight has begun. Thunder also every now and then is heard. Day hot and muggy, and water possesses colour.

31st.—Sticking, sticky sky. Nothing done except a large amount of saluting. Waterspouts in the evening, and rain in square masses—most extraordinary.

August 1.—Raining in the morning. A move for the Pehtang. Great excitement, the gun-boats towing about in all directions, towing first brigades of men. Signalling from various ships. Gun-boats in boats with troops. Signalling from various ships. Looking very wicked, fighting trim—topgasts down, rifle-pits made by the riflemen, with hides to protect them. They tow junks filled with red breeches, and small boats. A steamer of peculiar description, with a long row of heavy 8 gun in front, accompanies one of them. Towards noon all start at a signal from the Admiral on board the Coromandel. We are in the division with the red ensign; the white and blue, the French, take the division with the red ensign; the white and blue, the French, take the right; and off we go. Rocket-tubes are rigged on the gun-boats' bows, and they near the Pehtang forts. Some troops are landed in the mud a long way off the Pehtang, and all expect to hear the fort guns open fire; but no such thing happened. The troops are encamped as all; and the forts soon appeared with the French and English flags floating in the evening breeze. No more guns were fired, and we began to speculate as to whether a few wooden guns were found, and some inferior machines. The town was occupied, and the troops were encamped there, after spending a night on the mud. We also ended the taking of Pehtang.

On the 2nd of August a reconnoitring party of 2000 French and English went out towards the Peiho forts, and were fired upon. Several were wounded by jingalls—a sort of gun, I fancy, up the spout, at 2000 yards. Skirmishers were thrown out, and kept up a fire against the Tartar cavalry, who came out in force. The French had some rifled cannon, which proved very effective, and after keeping us for some time we retired, as it was not considered wise to engage the army till we were all up. Commissariat stores. Major Greathead received a spent ball on the knee, but was all right next day. The Tartars had a strong intrenched camp surrounding the only causeway that leads to the Peiho. The approach to the town of Pehtang is very peculiar: the bar is only to be got over at three p.m. and enters exactly by the intrenched camp. Encampment of dead and dead horses. Delightful colours of "Archy the Bles" are wafted on the wings of the breeze. Muddy waters. Mosquitoes by land in comparison. The forts are built of mud and chopped straw, beautifully rounded, and stuck off to perfection in every direction. They formed pyramids and a perpendicular square fort at the top; the walls are excellent. The town, land, and water all of the same colour. The houses are mostly of mud and chopped straw, about two high, with chimneys pots; they are for the most part thatched with straw, but all perfectly open to the interior as regards one side—generally the side of beautiful cupboards, and wooden partitions finished off with Japanese perfection. Strange to say, the rooms are often papered with green satin paper (English), and they have ceilings; altogether, you might go far before meeting such good dwellings; the windows are papered with like material of green. The streets are narrow, with side-walks raised one or two feet, and a verandah coming out over the said sidewalks, so that you should see the sky in some streets, and could convey to you half the idea. My brain was in a whirl of confusion at the sight of the town, with its strange costumes, and languages. The gallant Captain of the Pearl must be distrusted by this time, as he is there from morning till night. Horses kicking, mules getting rid of their packs, bullocks trying to gore you, coolies sy-saying, orderlies bawling, commanders of gunboats scrambling in the same line, Europeans and Chinese noises, troops landing, horses landing, baggage landing, artillery landing; green cheese, blue cheese, red cheese, white cheese; cheese of all sorts, tarbuns, bamboo bats, pith helmets, puggories and straw hats; poles, muskets, bamboos, wheels, oars; black faces, pale faces, yellow faces, and red copped hats; guns, guns, guns, guns, guns, guns, puffing, cringe, long-boats, short boats, rowing, hauling, pulling, and running over each other, the din of Babel, confusion of different languages at the top of their voices; Frenchmen, Sikhs, Punjabees, English, Chinese, all mixed up together, and occasionally trying to gore you, coolies sy-yahing



LITERATURE.

THE LAKE REGIONS OF CENTRAL AFRICA: a Picture of Exploration. By RICHARD F. BURTON, Captain H.M. Indian Army. Longmans.

Another African traveller, fully up to the standard (extraordinary as it is) by which the European explorer in that hopelessly dreary quarter of the globe has been ever characterised. He gives us abundance of facts, descriptions almost too lifelike, to collect which he has braved the dangers and only just escaped the fatality of a deadly miasmatic climate; and the result of his labours, admirably brought before his readers, has been still in that sickening condition of unsatisfied wonder at the dispensation of Providence which has created a land with natural features so strange, and people with attributes so earthy as to render them its fitting inhabitants. The fitful gleams which travellers have caught of tracts of country possessing the most striking beauty standing out on the confines of regions of bush and forest, dense with vegetation in its rankest and most fantastic form; of marsh and mud, festering in an atmosphere of fog and overhung by skies which only add another dismal phase to the scene—have probably fostered the idea that civilisation in the interior of Africa is not only possible, but comparatively proximate. They have dreamed—perhaps in the intervals of marsh-fever—of large tracts of cultivated land, tended by people toned down from their present hideous kinship to the gorilla into an industrious population to the climate born. The rude, squalid, filthy hovels which do duty for habitations have in the mind's eye of the philanthropic explorer, been replaced by neat cottages and gardens, such as are created in the romance of agricultural life; the swamp and the jungle have given way to fields of waving corn or cotton-bush, and the tinkle of the church-bell is heard where but the discordant sounds of the tom-tom announced the progress of some bestial ceremony of the Fetish—a goodly dream, but one which, as we think, the perusal of Captain Burton's book will do much towards dispel. All this, however, has nothing to do with the merits of the work itself, which are great and manifold.

In June, 1857, there started from the harbour of Zanzibar an East African expedition, originally projected by the expeditionary committee of the Royal Geographical Society of London, of which Captain Burton is a Fellow and Gold Medallist. It consisted of two European members, Captain Burton and Captain Speke; two Portuguese, or rather half-caste Goanese "boys;" two negro gun-carriers, the Seedy Mubarak Bombay, and Mainy Makhrib, his brother; and eight so-called Baloch mercenaries, a guard appointed by his Highness the Sayyid Majid, who took the death of Seedy Said somewhat coolly on the Sultan of Zanzibar and Sawahil, to accompany the travellers. The object of the expedition, as proposed by Captain Burton to the Geographical Society, was primarily to "fix the most important points in the limits of the Sea of Ujiji, or Unyamwezi Lake, supposed to be situated in a distant hearing but little designation, and to explore the solar, the far-famed Land of the Moon; and, secondarily, to determine the exportable produce of the interior and the ethnography of its tribes. With what success, endurance, and ability these objects were carried out it is hardly necessary here to state. The book itself has been for some little time before the public in a tangible form, and we therefore incline them to the study of this class of narrative of travels are doubtless well acquainted with its details. We have to deal with another class of readers—the indifferent, the uninitiated, so to speak; and it is not by minute and elaborate dissection of its various parts, but by a broad reference to the principal features of the work that we seek to enlist the sympathies of as many persons as possible towards its perusal. We must content ourselves with a somewhat indistinct statement that the travellers, in the first place, made the transit of the Valley of Usagara, and Mgeta River. After a halt for provisions, the caravan was formed, the East African Ghauts crossed, Ugogo traversed, and the region of Unyamweri having been entered and explored at length, on the 13th of February, 1858, from the summit of a stony hill a "streak of light" was discerned lying below, which turned out to be the sea. We cannot refrain from allowing Captain Burton here to speak for himself in the following extract:—"I gazed in dismay; the remains of my blindness, the veil of trees, and a broad way of sunshine illuminating but one reach of the lake. Advancing, however, a few yards, the whole scene suddenly burst upon my view, filling me with admiration, wonder, and delight. Nothing, in sooth, could be more picturesque than this first view of the Tanganyika Lake, as it lay in the lap of the mountains, basking in the gorgeous tropical sunshine. Below and beyond a short foreground of rugged and precipitous hillfield, down which the footpath zigzags painfully—a narrow strip of emerald green, never seen and never wanted by fertile, sterile—was a ribbon of glistening yellow sand, here bordered by sedgy rushes, there cleanly and clearly cut by the breaking wavelets. Further in front stretched the waters—an expanse of lake, blue and softest blue, in breadth varying from thirty to thirty-five miles, and sprinkled by the grey canoe of many with tiny crescents of moony foam. The background in front is a high and broken wall of steel-coloured mountain, here flecked and capped with pearly white, there standing sharply pencilled against the azure air; its yawning chasms, marked by a deeper plum-colour, fall towards dwarf hills of moundlike proportions, which apparently dip their feet in the water. To the south, and opposite the long low point behind which the Malagarasi River discharges the red loam suspended in its violent stream, lie the land-locked bays and capes of Ugalla, and, as the eye dilates, it falls upon a cluster of outlying islets, speckling a sea-horizon. Villages, cultivated lands, the frequent canoes of the fishermen on the waters, and, on a nearer approach, the murmurs of the waves breaking upon the shore, give a something of variety, of movement, of life to the landscape, which, like all the fairest prospects in these regions, wants but a little of the neatness and finish of art—mosques and kiosks, palaces and villas, gardens and orchards—contrasting with the profuse lavishness and magnificence of nature, and diversifying the unbroken coup d'œil of excessive vegetation, to rival, if not to excel, the more admired scenery of the classic regions. The rant shores of this vast crevasse appeared lovely beautiful to the eye after the silent and spectral mangrove-creeks on the East African seaboard, and the melancholy, monotonous expanses of desert and jungle scenery. Every reach and sun-parched plain or rank herbage, and flats of black mire. Truly it was a work for soul and sight! Forgetting toils, dangers, and the doubtfulness of return, I felt willing to endure them for what I had endured; and all the party seemed to join with me in joy."

The book only enumerates, and in the early portion returned to Unyanyembe, commenced its down march to the coast. It should be said that the first of the passage of the Usagara Mountains is such region which they traversed is interspersed with minute and spirited details of the respective geography and ethnography of each; while the closing chapters treat of "Village Life in East Africa," and of the "Character and Religion of the East Africans, their Government and Customs," as regards the latter subject, it is stated that in East Africa there are two forms of this traffic—the export and the internal trade. In the former slaves are collected like ivories throughout the length and breadth of the land. They are driven down from the capital depôts—the islands of Kazeeye, Kwenge, Unyanyembe, and Zungomero—to the coast by the Arab and Wasuluh merchants, who afterwards sell them in retail at the great mart, Zanzibar. The internal trade is carried on between tribe and tribe, and therefore must long endure. The following observations in reference to a very important element of the slave trade—namely, the average price of slaves—are notable, and tempt us to an extract:—"There is no article, even household, that wears so much, value as the human commodity. The absolute worth is small compared with the wants of the seller and the requirements and the means of the purchaser. The extremes range from six feet of unbleached domestics or a few pounds of grain in time of famine, to 70 dollars, equal to £15. The slaves are cheapest in the interior, on account of the frequency of desertion. About Unyamwezi they are dearer, and most expensive in the Island of Zanzibar. At the latter place, during the last few years they have doubled in price. According to the Arabs, who regard the abolition of slavery with feelings of horror, this increase results from the impediments thrown in the way by the English. A more probable explanation may be found in the greater cheapness of money. At Zanzibar the price of a boy under puberty is from fifteen to thirty dollars. A youth till the age of fifteen is worth a little less. A man in the prime of life, from twenty-five to forty, fetches from thirteen to twenty dollars; after that age he may be bought from ten to thirteen. Educated slaves, fitted for the work of factors, are sold from twenty-five to seventy dollars, and at fancy prices. The price of females is everywhere about one-third higher than that of males. At Zanzibar the value or custom-house dues vary according to the race of the slave. The Wahiao, Waruguhu, and other servile imported from Kilwa, pay one dollar per head, from the Mrima or maritime regions two dollars, and from Unyanwezi, Ujiji, and the rest of the interior, three dollars. At the central depôt, Unyanyembe, where slaves are considered neither cheap nor dear, the value of a boy ranges between eight and ten doit or double-doilie; a youth from nine to eleven; a man in prime, from five to ten; and past his prime, from four to six. In some parts of the interior men are dearer than children under puberty. In the cheapest places, as in Karagwah and Urori, a boy costs three shukkahs of cloth, and three fundo or thirty strings of coral beads; a youth from ten to fifteen fundo; a man in prime from eight to ten; and no one will purchase an old man. These general notes must not, however, be applied to particular tribes. As with ivory and other valuable commodities, the amount and the description of the circulating medium vary at almost every march."

DON JOSE GUELL Y RENTE, OF CUBA.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 376.

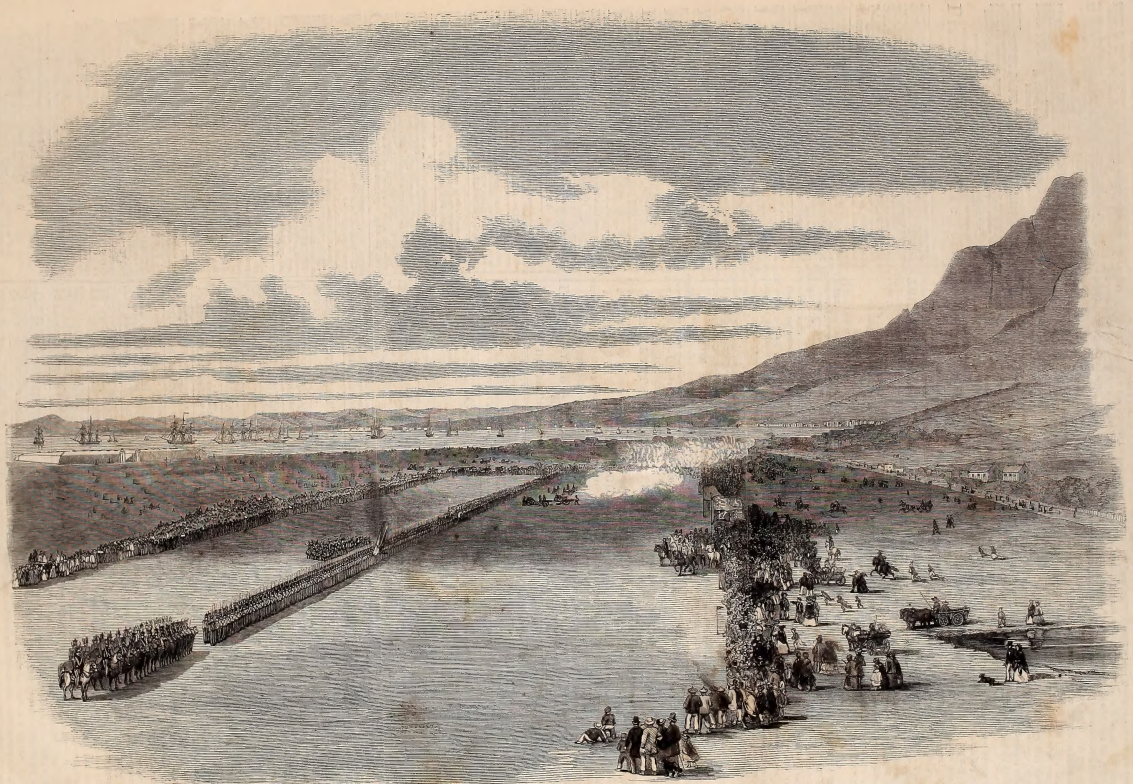
Before concluding our notice of this striking work, in which we have been enticed far beyond our prescribed limits, we would point to the valuable commercial statistics which are contained in the appendix. This completes a book of which the best praise that can be given to it is to say that it speaks for itself.

THE ARCHER AND THE STEPPE. By F. R. GRAHAME. James Blackwood.



The somewhat fantastic title of this book—for the like of which, however, there are numerous modern precedents—is intended to typify a history of the empires of Scythia, and especially of Asia and Europe, from the earliest ages till the fall of the Mongol power in Europe in the middle of the fourteenth century. The country received mythical designation of Scythia was given by the Greeks, and even by the Romans, to all the countries that extended from the banks of the Dnieper to the borders of that empire which is now known as China. The ancient divided into European and Asiatic Scythia those regions which are now denominated Russia and Turkey. The former, owing to her geographical position, became, as it were, a barrier between Asia and Europe; while from the days of Darius to those of Attila, Scythia has originally issued every torrent of invading barbarians that have overrun Eastern Europe within the last nine hundred years. Thence came the Huns, the Ugurs, the Avars, the Khazars, Patzinaks, Uzes, and the Mongols—all terrible, unsettled, and fleeting tribes; while the Ottoman Turks, who are also Scythian in origin and descent, alone acquired a permanent position in Europe, and in these latter days have obtained the distinction of having had the blood and treasure of the first Powers of Europe expended in an endeavour, futile as we believe, to preserve their position. Russia, as the most enduring, the most powerful, and the most known both in ancient and modern times of these nations of the north, occupies the most prominent part in the history of the Scythian empires, and the annals of that country form the principal subject of the present volume. After tracing the origin of her people, the author glances at the progress of the Huns, Ugurs, Chazars, and the numerous other Tartar tribes whose names were only known to Europe by their inroads in the east to the countries and inhabitants of Eastern Europe. Then, sketching the rise of the Russian monarchy, he proceeds to the conquests of Zenghis Khan and the Mongols, and the wars of his descendant and still more formidable countryman, Timour the Tartar, with the shortcomings of Samarcand. It is curious to note the influence of the Tartars on the empires of Russia and China, where alone remain traces of those conquerors, both in the manners and customs, besides Persia and Greece. In the two former countries there is a great resemblance in many of their institutions, in the despotic theory of government, in their dress, appearance, and character, as well as in their despotic and patriarchal forms of government. It will be seen that the choice of subject as has been selected by Mr. Grahame, if deals with in the simplest narrative form would be found interesting, especially as the work is dedicated to the Queen, at an existing very important moment. In the middle of 1854, when we were drifting into war with Russia, it is probable that the Queen's mind was directed to the question of this was a good deal bounded by the ideas which a good many of us had formed of Peter the Great, of Catherine, and St. Petersburg. How far the latter may stand since then we do not know; but it appears to us that a well-arranged and accurate account of the Russian empire is likely to be a very valuable addition to our contemporary literature. If the book before us had no other merit—and as we opine it has many—it would be entitled to the author from the fact that it begins with the beginning, and without being elaborately recondite or overwhelmingly learned, in a plain tale, in an intelligible way; while, as per title, the subject-matter is woven, though in historical connected in a manner which is pleasing and certainly not devoid of instruction. In short, it is an agreeable and sufficiently full account of that region which in the eyes of modern Europe has acquired an importance which is due to a great measure to its very association and which is still surrounded by an atmosphere, social and political, which is somewhat mystical; and, therefore, it is calculated to arouse the interest and the curiosity to the satisfying of which Mr. Grahame's volume is directed.

ANTIQUARIAN, ETHNOLOGICAL, AND OTHER RESEARCHES IN NEW GRANADA, ECUADOR, PERU, AND CHILE. By WILLIAM BOLLAERT, F.R.G.S. Trübner.

So far as we have been able to gather, this volume is the result of a second visit to the New World by Mr. Bollaert, in 1853-4. But the construction of the book is so inartistic, and devoid of the ordinary workmanship of a writer for the public, that, although we may, to be sure, get at historical and ethnological information facts, there is little or no trouble taken to weave them into a narrative, or to put them into a connected shape. Such a work reads like a collection of notes put together without any regular attempt at sequence or relation between the parts. Nevertheless, the matter which it contains is very well worth its perusal, even in its present form. There are pictorial illustrations, too, which help one along, and are more than usually of use in giving form and shape to the author's ideas. In the descriptive, jotting-down way which we have indicated as characterising the book we find the author in the land of the tribes of Granada, Ecuador, Peru, and Chile, accompanied in their place with observations on the pre-incarial, incarial, and other monuments of Peruvian nations. Something, too, of the different languages is given with accompanying translations. Out of a mass of traditionary lore we have selected the following extract, the more particularly as it refers to a remote portion of the subject matter of this work, but also because it affords as good a specimen of it as any other:—

TRADITIONS OF THE ORIGIN OF THE INCAS.—1. A man appeared at TIA-HUANACU; the mention of this most ancient spot induces me to think that the Incarial race may have sprung from one of the old Aymara nations. I have sometimes thought that the first Incas may have come from one of the great nations to the east of the Andes in the remote times of the foundation, in the opinion that the first Incas may have come from some of the nations of the coast of Peru. Garcilasso de la Vega, the Inca historian, says it would appear that three distinct races dwelt in Peru before the foundation of the empire of the Incas, to the effect that they had come from the east, by the Antisuyan province, which D'Orbigny distinguishes by the name of Aymarans; and the Runnans, who inhabited the Cordillera and the Cordillera and the valleys, 2° and 14° S. This man divided the land into four parts amongst the chiefs Manco, Colla, Sauri, and Ayarache. This man is described as having early on the threshold of Incarial history, but his meaning is very obscure. Manco went to the north and founded Cuzco, which he called Tampu-Tocco, or the house from we know nothing. The name of the world four men and four sisters, brothers and sisters, appeared at Pamaru, on the 5th day of the month Capac Raymi, and four rocks, Tampu-Tocco, Maras, Sutic-Cancha, Capac Uchu, and Ayar Sauca. Manco founded Cuzco. Pascar, Sutic, Capac Uchu, and Ayar Cachi acquired new names or surnames, Ayar Manco, pastures. 3. At Pavec-tampu, shining dormitory or house of veneration, eight legend Manco, Ayar Cachi, Ayar Uchu, Ayar Auca, Ayarache, Ayarsuna, and Ayramanco; and three women—Mama-oyo, Mama-cuna, and Mama-rana. Mama Ocllo was the name of the principal wife of Manco, in Quichua is Huarmi; old woman, paya. Coya is Queen or Empress. These persons were clothed in the manner of the legend that they were of Royal. They had a golden sling, which was endowed with peculiar virtues. They had abundance of sovereign silver, assumed the government of the country, and built three temples. Ayarache having got possession of the sling, overturned by its power mountains, and gained such a superiority that he became violent enough and sought to destroy him. They persuaded him to enter into a cave for a precious vessel which he had left there and put in their place the Sun, to which them in the conquest of the country. Ayarache entered the cave, when his brothers blocked it with a large stone, and became a violent enough spirit was felt, overturning mountains, extending hill, woods, and rocks, in the bowels of the earth. Ayarache was then seen flying in the air with plumed wings, and a voice was heard telling the two brothers not to be afraid, for Ayarache was going to found the empire of the Incas. Ayarache then discovered himself to his brothers, desiring them to build a temple where Cuzco now stands, in which the Sun should be worshipped. Ayra-manco was chosen Inca or Emperor, from Inti, the Sun; Inti-ghost, child of the Sun. The Sun is also called Punchau. After which Ayarache and Ayramanco were converted into stone statues. Ayra-manco and the women founded Cuzco—the man taking the name of Manco Capac. Capac or Kapac, chief—hence capo, master, lord, ruler.

There is a fourth tradition, but it is too lengthy for insertion here. On the whole, if this is not what would be called a smartly got-up book, it is a very entertaining one for its points of view, and has a sort of simplicity about it which is not without its charm.

REVIEW OF HER MAJESTY'S TROOPS AND VOLUNTEERS AT CAPE TOWN BY PRINCE ALFRED.—FROM A SKETCH BY T. W. BOWLER.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 370.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, Oct. 21.—20th Sunday after Trinity. Moon's first quarter, 7h. 10m. p.m.
MONDAY, 22.—Hackburn Fair opened, 1857.
TUESDAY, 23.—The Battle of Edgehill, 1642.
WEDNESDAY, 24.—Daniel de Foe died, 1852.
THURSDAY, 25.—St. Crispin.
FRIDAY, 26.—Chloroform first appeared in England, 1831.
SATURDAY, 27.—Reform Meeting at Birmingham, 1858.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON-BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 28, 1860.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.
8 35 9 0	9 5 9 30	9 35 10 0	10 5 10 30	10 35 11 0	— 0	0 29 0 47

ROYAL ENGLISH OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.—Under the Management of Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. W. Harrison. Sole Lessees. Every Evening (except Saturday) at Seven o'clock, and Every Saturday, at Half-past Six o'clock, the Performances will commence with the new Opera, THE ROSE OF AMIENS. Tuesday: DORA. Wednesday: THE QUEEN'S LACE HANDKERCHIEF. Thursday: BRIDE. Friday: TROVATORE; and Saturday, CHOW CHOW. Doors open at Seven o'clock. Private Boxes, £1 1s.; Stalls, 5s.; Pit, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s. Mr. Alfred Mellon, Stalls, 7s.; Private Boxes, £4 4s.; £3 3s.; £2 2s.; £1 1s. Arrangements have been made for the conveyance of Visitors to the Theatre from the Crystal Palace. Omnibuses visit the Theatre every Evening during the Season. Special Trains to the Crystal Palace leave four minutes after the Opera is finished. Private Boxes to the Crystal Palace, 10s. 6d. each. Omnibuses at 12 o'clock, and on the second tier, for the 6d., four persons. No charge for booking or for booking-office.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Monday, Oct. 22, and during the Week, and Wednesday (by desire), THE LOVE CHASE, in which Miss Amy Sedgwick will sustain the character of Constance; after which THE HEIR AT LAW. Mr. Buckstone as Dr. Pangloss; Mr. John Brougham's entertainment with THE BURGOMASTER'S WIFE. Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, THE LOVE CHASE, and THE BURGOMASTER'S WIFE. Mr. Buckstone and Miss Sedgwick. ROMANCE AND REALITY, Mr. John Brougham; and THE SUN AND THE MOON, Mr. John Brougham.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—On Monday, and during the Week, THE RIFLE BROTHER.—Mr. Webster and Miss Woolgar. With the following powerful Company: Messrs. Addison, Neville, D. Fisher, Billington; Miss Agnes Robertson, Miss Woolgar. And HUGH MAUN CHARLES. Conductor, Mr. Howard.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE, King-street, St. James's.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Arthur Wigan.—The public is respectfully informed that the Theatre will re-open on Monday, under the management of Mr. Arthur Wigan, with a new and original Comedy, in Two Acts, by Tom Taylor, Esq., entitled THE SETTLER IN CANADA, and a New and Original Comedy, in Two Acts, by Mr. Burnand, Esq., entitled MR. ROWLEY, M.P. Mr. Alfred Wigan will perform his celebrated Entertainment of PEACHING AND PREACHING, a Comic Fairy Tale by J. Reed. And THE WRECKER. The Boxes and Stalls have been made with Masonry, Doors, &c., to prevent draughts, and the Ventilation and Drainage have been attended to. The view to the front of the house will be clear to all parts of the Pit. Prices of admission as usual. Carriages ventilated. J. RUDGE, Acting Manager and Treasurer.

ASHLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. ASHLEY.—Every Evening, Quarter to Eight, Shakspearian Spectacle, entitled HENRY THE EIGHTH. Mr. Rebecca James, Mr. John Pritchard. SCENES IN THE CIRCLE. Mr. Batty, Mr. Rarey, Mr. Cromwell Price, and Mr. Wombwell.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Arrangements for Week ending SATURDAY, October 27. Monday, open at Nine. Display of the Great Fountains at Half-past Four. Tuesday, Band and Chorus Performance. Wednesday, Band and Chorus Performance. Thursday, Band and Chorus Performance. Friday, open at Nine. Saturday, Band and Chorus Performance. Handel Festival Concert. Grand Display of the Great Fountains at Half-past Four. Illumination, Shilling Admission. Open Daily. Open Sundays, Half-a-Crown. Children, Shilling. Season Tickets, Two Guineas. Crystal Palace, Sydenham.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, Nov. 21, Mdme. CLARA NOVELLO'S Farewell PARTING, and positively Last Appearance in London, on Wednesday Morning, previously to her retirement in future entirely into private life. Tickets, Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Area, 5s.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Mdme. LEMMENS-SHERRINGTON and Miss SARTON-DOLBY will SING in RUSSIA, on WEDNESDAY EVENING, October 24, 1860, to be performed under the direction of Mr. Wm. Ganz, with full orchestra and choir. Organist, Mr. George Lake. Tickets at popular prices—Area, 5s.; other Tickets, 10s. 6d.; Stalls, 5s.

THE SISTERS SOPHIA and ANNIE will have the honour of appearing in their new and highly-successful Entertainment, entitled MERRY MOMENTS, at Hipperholme, October 21; Halifax, 22; Bradford, 23; Keighley, 24; Skipton, 25; Mechanics' Institute, Mr. Davis, Jun., Gallery.

EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly.—Miss EMMA STANLEY, Lessee and Manageress.—Every Afternoon (except Saturday) at Three, and Every Evening at Eight, the SEVEN AGES OF WOMAN, Every Evening. Mr. Harry Boden, Jun., Gallery.

EGYPTIAN HALL (Large Room), Piccadilly.—Mr. HAMILTON'S CONTINENTAL RECITATIONS will be given (except Saturday) at Three o'clock. Stalls, 3s. Area, 2s. Gallery, 1s. Doors open half-an-hour before. Box office open daily. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.

PRINCE OF WALES HALL, Regent-street.—Captain MORTON PRICE and Miss CATHARINE LUCETTE Every Evening in a Series of Entertainments, being subjects selected from great events in the History of the United States and Canada. Doors open at Half-past Seven. Admission, 3s., 2s., and 1s.; Children in arms, £1 1s.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS, St. JAMES'S HALL, every Night at Eight. Saturday Afternoon at Three.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION.—New Additions. A Full-length portrait models of the King of Naples and H. R. Cardinal Antonelli have been added to the already extensive collection of Modern Celebrities. Admission, 1s.; Extra Room, 6d. Open from Eleven to Dusk, and from Seven to Ten.

MADAME OURY has RETURNED to TOWN for the SEASON, and has her new Residence, 1, Hanover-street, Regent-street, Piccadilly, Oct. 20.

CORREGGIO'S "ECCE HOMO," the long-sought Replica of the National Gallery Picture, which the most ardent Judges pronounce the finest painting in Europe, is ON VIEW, from 10 till 6 daily, at 14, PALL-MALL, 3 doors from Oxford-street. "The only head of Christ in the world."—Hogarth.

PIANOFORTE.—TO BE DISPOSED OF, for half its value (Cost 70 guineas), a splendid Walnut Cottage Pianoforte, by Broadwood, in perfect order; metallic plate, rosewood instrument, and every improvement. Price 30 guineas. Packed and delivered free.—Buy no new or second-hand Piano before you call at Chappell's, Bond-street, Knightsbridge.

FURNITURE.—Gratis: a new and elaborately-illustrated CATALOGUE, containing over 300 designs of Furniture, from Bedsteads, Bedding, and Bed-room Furniture for all classes of houses, to the costliest Dining-room, Library, Lenvis Chamber and Co., Horse Furnishers, 22 and 23, Queen-building, Knightsbridge. Lenvis's Patent Iron Portable Bedstead, with dovetailed joints, and Bedding, can be sold for 20 guineas, half the original cost. Also, a Portable Iron Bedstead, with Bedding complete, for 10 guineas, suitable for servants, in the kitchen and hall, with wrought-iron and marble-top washstands, 32 guineas each suite. The whole of the above are decided bargains.

FURNITURE for a DRAWING-ROOM, fine walnut, of the newest design, in each silk, very elegant and commodious, consisting of a great bargain—price for the whole suite 48 guineas, nearly half the original cost, consisting of a handsome Couch, which, with sixty-one other bargains, may be seen at the superior suite rooms, as handsome pillar and claws, with occasional and other tables to match, and a set of Dining-room Chairs, in leather, with spring seats, rather, easy and Windsor chairs, all covered in rich silk or worsted, and a handsome Sideboard, with walnut occasional chairs, an inlaid whatnot, and large-size brilliant plate chimney-glass, in gilt-and-white frame, a handsome full-sized walnut cottage Pianoforte, by Collard and Collard, and a massive and complete solid Spanish mahogany dining-room suite, in the most approved fashion, consisting of sideboard, dining-tables, and chairs. The above is an opportunity rarely to be met with, and may be seen at 56, Queen-street, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge.

DR. DE JONGH'S
(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL,
adulterated with the greatest success in cases of
CONSUMPTION, CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, RICKETS,
GOUT, GENERAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE SKIN,
INCREASE OF FLESH AND STRENGTH, AND ALL WASTING DISEASES.

Extensive experience, and the repeated testimony of numerous eminent medical practitioners, prove that a half-pint of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is equal to a quart of any other kind. Hence, as it is incomparably the best, so it is likewise unquestionably the cheapest.

Palatableness, speedy efficacy, and consequently economy, are the distinguishing characteristics of this unrivalled Medicine. NO OTHER OIL CAN POSSIBLY PRODUCE THE SAME BENEFICIAL RESULTS.

SOLELY MEDICAL OPINIONS.
SIR HENRY MARSH, Bart., M.D., Dublin, Physician in Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland; President of the College of Physicians in Ireland, &c., writes:—"I have frequently prescribed Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil, and have found it to be a very pure Oil, not likely to create disgust, and a therapeutic agent of great value."

EDWIN LANKESTER, Esq., M.D., LL.D., F.R.S., F.L.S.
"I consider that the purity of this Oil is secured in its preparation by the personal attention of so good a Chemist and Intelligent a Physician as Dr. de Jongh. Hence I deem the Cod-Liver Oil sold under his guarantee to be preferable to any other kind as regards genuine ness and medical efficacy."

Sold ONLY in IMPERIAL Half-pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s., capsuled, and labelled with his Signature, Stamp and Signature, WITHOUT WHICH NONE CAN POSSIBLY BE GENUINE, by respectable Chemists.

SOLE CONSIGNEES,
ANSAR, HANBURY, and CO., 77, LOMBARD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.
CAUTION.—BEWARE OF FROUDED SUBSTITUTIONS.

OPENING of the NEW VICTORIA TERMINUS, near Bricklayers' Arms.—Passengers are booked from and to all stations on the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway. By Time-table of the Company.

NATAL.—The LONDON JOINT-STOCK BANK, as AGENTS for the COMMERCIAL and AGRICULTURAL BANK of NATAL at DURBAN, hereby give Notice that they are prepared to RECEIVE MONEY on account of that Bank for which they will issue letters at Credit free of charge.
London, October, 1860.

HYACINTHS, JAPAN LILIES, &c.—Assortment "A" sent carriage-paid for Seventeen Shillings. Hyacinths, Splendid Japan Lilies, 2 Pyramidals and 2 Roseum-plena, 40 choicest Tulips, 20 Crocus, 20 Iris, 20 Scilla, 20 Snowdrops, 20 Jonquils, 20 golden Narcissus (sweet-scented) and Paxtons, 12 Super. Anemones, 20 Ranunculus, 20 Crocus, 20 Snowflakes, 20 Iris, 20 Scilla, 20 Snowdrops, 20 Jonquils, 20 golden Narcissus (sweet-scented) and Paxtons, 12 Super. Anemones, 20 Ranunculus.—BUTLER and SUTCLIFFE, Covent-garden Market, W.C.

HYACINTH GLASSES.—TYE'S Registered, the only really successful ornamental and non-breakage-proof GLASS, 6d. each; per dozen, 5s. 6d. each. Triple for three hyacinths, 8s. 6d. per dozen. Illustrations free.—JAMES TYE, Seedsman, &c., Nursery, Hammersmith, London, W.

TO DRAPERS, MILLINERS, and DRESSMAKERS.—Matching Orders carefully and promptly attended to. Our Samples of the newest trade prints. All the Fancy Dress Fabrics of the British and foreign factories.
JAMES SPENCE and CO., Manchester, &c.
77 and 78, St. Paul's-churchyard.
Patterns post-free. Terms, Cash.

FORD'S NEW JACKETS and MANTLES.—Rich Lyons Velvet Jackets, Sleeves shapes, for dinner or evening dress, beautifully braided, at 4½ 4s., 5½ 5s., 6½ 6s. Illustrations free.

FORD'S NEW JACKETS and MANTLES.—The AIXA, a beautiful, tight-fitting shape, with military braiding, and sleeves open to the cuff. Velvet, 4½ 4s., 5½ 5s., 6½ 6s. Illustrations free.

FORD'S NEW JACKETS and MANTLES.—Superb steel-beaded Cashmere or Cloth Jackets, Sleeves or loose shapes, at 31s. Handsome Cloth Mantles, all sizes, 21s., 30s., 42s., and 50s.—Ford's Mantle Warehouse, 37, Cornhill, London, W.

FORD'S NEW JACKETS and MANTLES.—A beautiful Fawn Cloth Jacket, for the present Season, is just out, price 7s. 6d. per yard, or paletot of the same at 31s. 6d. Patterns free.

FORD'S NEW JACKETS and MANTLES.—The Devonshire Jacket, in Fawn Cloth, at 7s. 6d. per yard; or in Jackets as a Guinea. Eight warm, and waterproof. Patterns free.—T. Ford, 37, Cornhill, London, W.

FORD'S NEW JACKETS and MANTLES.—The new Jacket, the AIXA, in Cloth, at 31s. 6d.; in Satin, at 31s.; superb Velvet, at three guineas. By far the largest and cheapest Stock in London.—Thomas Ford, 37, Cornhill, London, W.

FORD'S NEW JACKETS and MANTLES.—Illustrations of Patterns and Styles quite unique, and not to be obtained elsewhere, forwarded to the country post-free on application. Address, 37, Cornhill, London, W.

NEW AUTUMN SILKS.
Patterns post-free.
JAMES SPENCE and CO. beg to announce that their numerous customers and the public generally may rely upon procuring the NEWEST and MOST FASHIONABLE SILKS of the present season, consigned all the leading Novelties, together with many entire shop lots, at the following prices:—
No. 1. The GARIBALDI STRIPE, in Autumn Colours, with rich glace ground, bright silk, 3s. 11d. per yard.
No. 2. The CHECKED GARIBALDI, in Green, Grey, or Brown. Drab, White, Pink, Sky, Mauve, and Straw Grey, at 3s. 9d. per yard.
No. 3. The SATIN BARRE, in all colours, rich width, from 2s. 6d. per yard upwards.
No. 4. The SATIN BARRED BAIN, a Silk particularly suited for autumn wear, at 12s. 6d. to 16s. 9d. all new designs and colours.
When writing for Patterns, address
JAMES SPENCE and CO.,
77 and 78, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD, LONDON, E.C.
Shut on Saturdays at Four o'Clock.

A FINE HEAD of HAIR, WHISKERS, or MOUSTACHE, produced in a few weeks by ALEXANDRE'S ESSENCE, which never fails to restore hair turning grey, and the first application causes it to curl beautifully. Whiskers, Moustaches, and Eyebrows, of bold, new, and natural colour, are produced by the growth of the new hair. Prices 3s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. per bottle. Ask for "Alexandre's Hair."—No. 21, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

A DOUBLE NUMBER
OF THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS
will be published on SATURDAY NEXT, OCTOBER 27, containing a large Picture, PRINTED IN COLOURS, of the METROPOLITAN RIFLE CORPS
in Hyde Park, in their respective Costumes; and a carefully-finished View of
THE FALLS OF NIAGARA
(PRINTED IN COLOURS)
from the Top of the Falls on the American Side; with a number of Fine-Art and other Illustrations. Among the latter will be some exceedingly graphic ones connected with THE WAR IN CHINA,
just received from Pehtang, from our Special Artist, Mr. Wigman, who accompanies the Anglo-French Expedition. Also, two large Engravings of THE BRITISH CAMP AT DON MAUR, from Photographs by M. Beato, taken shortly before the Allied Forces left Tallien-wan for the Peiho.

Price of the Number, Supplement, and Coloured Supplement, Tenpence; Stamped, One Shilling.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK for 1861, containing Engravings of the Season, printed in colours, from original Drawings by Mrs. Margetts, will be published early in November. Price 1s.

ADVERTISEMENTS CANNOT BE RECEIVED AFTER THE 20TH INST.

Terms.—Whole Page	£20.
Half Page	£10.
Quarter Page	£5.

Any smaller Advertisement, 2s. 6d. per line (double column).

 ILLUSTRATED ADVERTISEMENTS will be received.

Office, 198, Strand, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1860.

THE latest intelligence from the Far East does not contain those accounts of the progress of the allied forces in China which were expected; but they are of a nature to show that critical action was at hand. The war, indeed, had actually begun; and the troops of either nation were in presence of each other, and something more. The allied army had advanced to the mouth of the Peiho, where they enjoyed the somewhat barren triumph of occupying certain forts which had been vacated by the enemy, and which, characteristically enough, had been mounted with wooden guns, and garrisoned by three old men. There is a touch of bathos, not usually coincident with warlike affairs, in the idea of a strong and perfectly-equipped body of the soldiers of two of the great Powers of Europe solemnly marching to take possession of works which had been prepared for their reception by the mounting of that species of ordnance which, in the jocular language of military men, are called "quakers." The next step was a little, but only a little, more like fighting; for the Allies came upon a Tartar camp, which they instantly prepared to attack. It does not seem, however, that any opportunity was afforded for the display or prowess of or strategy; for the Chinese who were Tartars, or the Tartars who were Chinese, exhibited the extent of that discretion which is held to be the better part of valour, and used every effort in their power to enable them to fight another day—if they should feel so disposed. We do not learn that there was any important casualty on either side, for it appears that the Chinamen ran away on the first opening of a cannonade, or at least when the troops prepared to advance with that terrible precision which marks the battle-march of a line of British soldiers, and with that rapid, nearly invincible, rush which characterises the somewhat looser onset of the French infantry.

The allied forces, naval and military, had duly taken up their positions preparatory to the attack on the Taku forts, the scene of the action being, as we said, the defeat—whatever it was—of the English last year. At that time the natural advantages of the spot for defence had been well developed, and much ingenuity and no little scientific skill had been shown in the erection of an armed barrier, which was sufficient to hold its own against the most pertinacious bravery of our sailors and soldiers. No doubt the time which has elapsed—always supposing that it is the intention of the Chinese to offer serious and organised resistance, which is at least doubtful—has enabled them to alter the conduct of the attack at this point of the river to add strength to, and to extend the area of, the fortifications. If some of the whispered rumours which have been floating about be founded in truth, the aid of European military science, which it is said was transferred to the Chinese operations at the Taku forts, has probably been again invoked and afforded; and genius and skill cognate to, or at least of the same school, as that which kept France and England for eleven months before the league of Sebastopol may be found now ministering to the same object: to oppose the efforts of the Allies up the Peiho River, by licking into European shapeliness the rude and half-childish military organisation of the Chinese. It is believed, too, that the material is better, and the capability for warlike purposes of the Celestials more developed in the regions of the north than in the south, the latter being those with which the English have before come in contact; and, on the whole, it is probable that our Navy and Army have before them a foe which it would be worse than indiscreet to despise. The pointed imitation of the Plenipotentiaries proves that no attempt at negotiation is to be made on their side, or listened to from the other, pending the immediate military operations. It is to be hoped that when the time arrives for settling the terms of a treaty one preliminary will be insisted on—namely, that the place of negotiation shall be in London. Without this no satisfactory arrangement can be expected.

We have pleasure in recording the safe return of her Majesty to her kingdom of England, in which the Queen arrived on Wednesday. Very propitiously, the weather, which seemed fearfully on her departure, cleared up for smiles on her arrival; cleared up—it might be added in the language of the old-fashioned playbills—"for that day only, and by particular desire of several persons of distinction." Our Sovereign is again at Windsor after a couple of long journeys and pleasant sojournings.

The Prince of Wales has visited the tomb of George Washington, and has planted a tree there. The incident would make a comparison to nature to that of the visit of Peter the Great to the grave of the first Napoleon. The reception of his Royal Highness in the Republic is all that could be desired, both as regards cordiality and good taste. We read of a cheering and enthusiastic multitude pleased at his affability; and we have find him described as "quite at home with the ladies, and engaged with the accomplished niece of the President in a game at "ten-pins," in which their antagonists were defeated, after which either the Prince's gallantry or Miss Lane's skill caused his Royal Highness to succeed in the two opponents. The game, by-the-way, unless we mistake, is a capital instance of the composure with which people evade absurd laws. "Nine-pins" became so popular, and was so much used for gambling purposes, that there was a legislative or police ordinance, we are told, passed against it. The ingenuity quietly misunderstood "nine-pins" and set up "ten-pins." The Prince's reception in New York will be the grand feature of the news from the States, and we hear that great discussion had taken place as to which lady was to open the grand ball to him. This New York ball has had no idea of recognising the precedence of the niece of the President, whose residence is at Washington. If municipal rule prevail on so interesting an occasion, we presume that the coveted distinction will fall to some lady member of the Corporation. Magistrate upon whom Lord Alcester, Russell, be the intense amusement of New York, conferred, in the excess of his politeness, an aristocratic title to which the Republican had not the slightest claim. All will, no doubt, have been most properly and satisfactorily arranged, and the Heir of England will have found a magnificent partner in "his cousin Columbia."

Thanks to the press, the assurance-offices have roused themselves to perceive the desirability of setting themselves right with the public on the "days of grace" question—that is to say, on the question whether the policy holder should until those days have expired. But the thing has not been done in the frank, businesslike manner which English people like; and Mr. Goodhart has been, as we conceive imperitently, required to state that he had intended to renew his policy whether his premises had been burned down or not. We do not impute to any of the respectable offices any intention of evading a just claim; but what is the use of the surly reticence upon this subject? Let the great offices speak out plainly, and declare that a policy either is or is not valid up to the last hour of the last day of grace, and do not let them give smaller and needier establishments hints for conduct which, in the case of the latter, may be pursued to the detriment of honest assurers. Another instance has been afforded of the incalculable value of a free press to the mercantile world, which is very apt to be angry and suspicious if the least inaccuracy upon a technical matter is manifested by the journalist, but is by no means equally ready with acknowledgment of the incessant services which the newspaper affords to commercial interests.

THE COURT.

The Queen arrived at Gravesend in the Victoria and Albert Royal yacht on Monday morning, shortly before five o'clock, and, travelling over the South-Eastern and South-Western railways, reached Windsor Castle at seven minutes before eight o'clock the same evening. Her Majesty had been suffering from slight indisposition during the two preceding days, but fortunately the journey was borne without increasing her illness.

We last week brought the Royal travellers to Coblentz. The official chronicle of her Majesty's progress makes mention that on Thursday night the Queen arrived at Nagence. At the railway station her Majesty and the Royal party were received by the military and civil authorities. Her Majesty and the Prince Consort, with the other members of the Royal family and household, immediately entered carriages which had been ordered for their conveyance, and proceeded to the Hotel du Rhin. The Royal dinner party included the following:—The Prince Regent and Princess and Princess Frederick William of Prussia, the Princess Alice, Lord John Russell, Viscount Bruce (Lady in Waiting to the Princess Frederick William of Prussia), Count Fredersdorf (Chamberlain to her Royal Highness), Count von der Goltz (in attendance upon the Queen by order of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent of Prussia), M. de Gaertnitz (Aide-de-Camp to the Prince Frederick William of Prussia), General Grey (Equerry in Waiting to the Prince Regent), Field Marshal Lieutenant Baumgarten (in the Austrian service, Vice-Governor of the Tyrol), Lieutenant-Colonel Count Waldersee (in the Prussian service, Commandant), Captain Denman, Mr. Russell, Mr. Morier, and the Misses Lord and Gentleman in Waiting.

On Friday at night the Queen and Prince Consort, with the Prince Regent and Princess of Prussia, the young Princes Frederick William, the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden, Princess Alice, and Prince Leopold, left Coblentz for Cologne, and reached Bonn at 2 a.m. The Queen and Prince Consort had spent some days with the King of Prussia in the year 1845, at Brandenbourg and the ladies and gentlemen of the suite also accompanied her Majesty. The Royal party passed some time in admiring the beautiful scenery of the Rhine and the magnificent Drachenfels, with the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein and the town at Coblentz in the distance. In returning, the view was repeated by crossing the Rhine at the bridge of Constantine. There was a large dinner party, and a select circle had been invited for the evening.

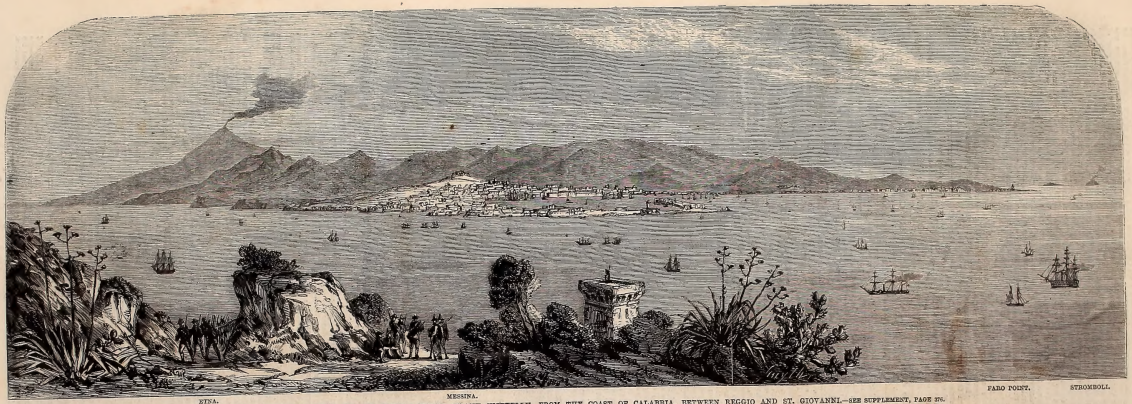
On Saturday the Queen, the Prince Consort, and Princess Alice left the hotel at Coblentz, in a quarter before eight o'clock, and went by railway to Brussels. Her Majesty and their Royal Highnesses were accompanied by the Prince Regent and Princess of Prussia, the young Princes Frederick William, and the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden. Lord John Russell and the household were in attendance upon her Majesty. The whole of the Royal personages accompanied her Majesty in the railway saloon carriage as far as the Belgian frontier. The Prince Regent of Prussia, Prince of Baden took leave of her Majesty and the Prince at Herwicl, and the Prince Regent and Princess of Prussia at Aix-la-Chapelle. The Queen and the Princess Frederick William continued the journey with her Majesty, the Prince, and the Princess Alice as far as Herbesthal, where they took leave of their Royal relatives. At Verviers her Majesty was received by his Royal Highness the Count of Flanders, his Excellency General Renard, Baron the Duchesse de Brabant, and his Royal Highness the Count of Flandres, who received the Royal carriage, and proceeded to Brussels. Mr. Howard de Walden, her Majesty's Minister at Brussels, was here in attendance. The King of the Belgians was upon the platform at Brussels on the arrival of the train at a quarter past seven o'clock, and greeted her Majesty and the Royal personages alighting from the train. The Queen, the Prince Consort, and the Royal family dined in private. The Queen, having sought a cold upon the journey, found it necessary to postpone her attendance at church on Sunday afternoon.

On Sunday the Queen was confined to her room with a cold, accompanied with sore throat. Her Majesty's health continued to improve during the day, and on Monday morning her Majesty received a visit from the King of the Belgians, the Prince Consort, and Princess Alice attended Divine service at the private chapel in the palace. The Queen received the ladies and gentlemen of the household of the Queen and Prince Consort were likewise introduced.

On Monday the Queen remained in her private apartments.

On Tuesday the Queen embarked at Antwerp for Gravesend, and on Wednesday morning, about five o'clock, the Royal yacht cast her anchor at Gravesend. The Terrace Pier and the principal thoroughfares through which the Royal procession was to pass were gaily decorated with flags, and the eager crowds who welcomed her Majesty with more than ordinary warmth. A detachment of the 1st Royal Marines and the Gravesend Volunteers were received her Majesty, and "a guard of honour" was formed by the relief class of the 1st Royal Surrey, assisted by a considerable number of the police and accoutrements. The juvenile volunteers attracted her Majesty and the Prince Consort's special attention. On the Terrace Pier they were received by Viscount Sydney, the Lord Lieutenant of the county; the Hon. F. Dormer, Deputy-Lieutenant of Kent; Colonel Dodgard; the Mayor of Gravesend, and several members of the Corporation.

His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, accompanied by her Imperial Highness the Grand Duchess Olga Fedorowna, and attended by the Prince Philosophoff and Mdlle. Wassiltchikoff, and Count Leiveloff, Baron Wolkoe, and Captain Novitzky, have arrived at Claridge's Hotel, Brook-street.



Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess Caml ridge, have left town for Brighton.

The Duchess has engaged Brunswick House, and contemplates a long visit of about six weeks.

His Excellency the French Ambassador (Count de Persigny) has been on a visit to Viscount Palmerston at Broadlands, Hants.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

Lady Agnes Murray Cavaghe, relict of the late Sir David Cavaghe, Bart., of Northaw, Herts, has been long deceased. She died on the 15th of last month, in the year 1857, at Richmond Castle, Cumberland, being at that time a widow, and died intestate, as appears just in Doyecter House, Doctors' Commons, by her son, Arthur, having attained the age of ninety-six. The will is drawn up in the usual form, and is entitled "I, Agnes Murray Cavaghe, of Richmond Castle, in the county of Cumberland." I, accordingly, in the year 1856, do make my last will and testament." I, accordingly, in the year 1856, do make my last will and testament." I, accordingly, in the year 1856, do make my last will and testament

"MY LAST LOOK AT SICILY." TAKEN BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, FRANK VIZETELLY, FROM THE COAST OF CALABRIA, BETWEEN REGGIO AND ST. GIOVANNI.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 376.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA.—THE LUMBERERS REGATTA, OTTAWA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, G. H. ANDREWS.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 376.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN CANADA—HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PASSING A RAPID IN THE RIDEAU AT OTTAWA—FROM A SKETCH BY G. H. ANDREWS—SEE DESCRIPTION PAGE 368.

LITERATURE AND ART.

REMBRANDT PEALE, the celebrated painter, died in Philadelphia on the morning of the 4th, aged eighty-three years. We entertain no doubt of the eminence of the decease, and artist, but we confess our scant acquaintance—almost amounting to ignorance—of the works of Mr. Rembrandt Peale. Trumbull, West, Leslie, Powers, Hart, Copley, Peale Darley, Robertson—of these we have heard, but the name of Peale is not in the list. Perhaps we must say what a flood of memoirs is conjured up by the brief announcement that in the quiet Quaker city an American artist has died at the patriarchal age of eighty-three! An American artist—but dead at the patriarchal age of eighty-three! Why, Peale as a juvenile prodigy might have taken the portrait of George Washington. Benjamin Franklin might have sat to him for father, and he might have formed one of the group of Republicans flushed with their brand-new independence who gathered round the table of Kossuth, and roared at the son of that King whose sway they had irrevocably repudiated.

And thus it is that the present shakes hands with the past, and the hawthorn blossom blown by the spring breezes from the hedge is the hawthorn blossom the dead leaf of autumn. Such is the theme of a wailful away with the dead leaf of autumn. Such is the theme of a wailful away with the dead and there Volney, the historian of "The Ruins of Empires." Volney! it seems a hundred years since he died; and yet there he is—and we hope to see him at many private viewing days at the Royal Academy or the Water-colour Society we shall be able to point out a supple, trim, active old gentleman with a back combed flushed with their brand-new independence who gathered round the table of Kossuth, and roared at the son of that King whose sway they had irrevocably repudiated.

And thus it is that the present shakes hands with the past, and the hawthorn blossom blown by the spring breezes from the hedge is the hawthorn blossom the dead leaf of autumn. Such is the theme of a wailful away with the dead and there Volney, the historian of "The Ruins of Empires." Volney! it seems a hundred years since he died; and yet there he is—and we hope to see him at many private viewing days at the Royal Academy or the Water-colour Society we shall be able to point out a supple, trim, active old gentleman with a back combed Washington head, and a queer, quaint, and yet shrewd and thoroughfed of skepticism has been handed by the Prince of Wales.

Brave old Sheridan Knowles is dead! and we are sorry to have to record another solitary instance of infirmity of name with that of a passenger lost in the unfortunate Arctic on her voyage from Hull to Newfoundland. Edward is at Mount Vernon, gazing at the pious Washington gave to Mrs. Lewis. He has seen a proper curiosity-shop—a proper museum for curiosities of literature, of art, and artistic curiosity, at Nismes—at Vienna—at Paris—at Versailles—at Rome. But the room which Thomas Carlyle speaks of as the terminating point of the visit is the wonderful museum of the Louvre, at Paris. That curiosity is the Key of the Bastille, sent by the French revolutionists as a present to Washington. It is "a trifle;" in the way of gifts, the old stronghold of despotism has been handed by the Prince of Wales.

Brave old Sheridan Knowles is dead! and we are sorry to have to record another solitary instance of infirmity of name with that of a passenger lost in the unfortunate Arctic on her voyage from Hull to Newfoundland. Edward is at Mount Vernon, gazing at the pious Washington gave to Mrs. Lewis. He has seen a proper curiosity-shop—a proper museum for curiosities of literature, of art, and artistic curiosity, at Nismes—at Vienna—at Paris—at Versailles—at Rome. But the room which Thomas Carlyle speaks as the terminating point of the visit is the wonderful museum of the Louvre, at Paris. That curiosity is the Key of the Bastille, sent by the French revolutionists as a present to Washington. It is "a trifle;" in the way of gifts, the old stronghold of despotism has been handed by the Prince of Wales.

Lord Lyndhurst—vivus in galire! Rembrandt Peale, who could have remembered stout Colonel Trumbull painting the walls of the first Capitol with Indian deeds, quaint costumes, and our sturdy sires

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Lords of the Admiralty have at length decided upon entrusting a scheme for the formation of a National Transport Service.

It is stated that Major-General John Cox will, in all probability, succeed Sir Harry Smith as Colonel of the 1st battalion Rifle Brigade.

The Army and Navy Gazette contradicts the statement that the 9th Dragoon Guards, 1st Royal Dragoons, Scots Greys, and Inniskilling Dragoons are about to be made lancer regiments.

Vice-Admiral Sir Houston Stewart has been appointed Commander-in-Chief at Devonport, vice Admiral Fanshawe, superseded on account of his illness.

The various companies of the 2nd Regiment of Cheshire Militia, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Hesketh, are now in camp at Wirral. The men gave in their arms and clothing and were discharged.

An officer selected from each of the Royal dockyards has been ordered to proceed to Portsmouth in order to observe the method adopted in the fitting and equipment of the different classes of vessels of war at that dockyard. This is now to be being carried out at the various establishments.

A portion of the Channel Fleet will, it is expected, be dispatched to meet the Prince of Wales on his return from the United States. His Royal Highness will not, as at first intended, visit Portsmouth, but will sail for England direct from New York. The 17th of November has been named as the day of departure.

We have reason to believe (says the Army and Navy Gazette) that Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Fremantle, K.C.B., will succeed Admiral Dundas, and, pending the appointment of his successor, Rear-Admiral Erskine will have charge of the port division and Rear-Admiral Bosquet the coast division of the fleet.

The Hesperia corvette of eleven guns was successfully launched at Deptford on the Royal Victoria yard, Friday. A daughter of Captain Ward, the RSM Officer of Pendennes at Deptford, "christened" the vessel; and the ceremony was witnessed by 1400 children belonging to the various schools at Deptford, who were provided with cakes and buns by the liberality of Captain Ward and the Commissioner.

Admiralty orders have been received at Chatham Dockyard for building a wat composed of 12-gun vessel of 1,200 tons per annum and 1857 tons burden, to be named the Falmouth; also a 17-gun steamer, of 200-horse power and 950 tons burden, to be named the Dove; and a despatch gun-vessel, of 200-horse power and 630 tons, to be named the Merrywhim, and to be furnished with four of the new Armstrong guns.

WHISKERS AT ALDERSHOTT.—Considerable consternation has been caused in the camp at Aldershott by the issue of the following memorandum, by order of Lieutenant-General Rose Lambert, commanding the camp:—"Mem.—The Lieutenant-General wishes that general officers commanding brigades should report half-yearly (especially at the commencement of winter) the length of the whiskers of the officers and men. The Lieutenant-General has observed that some officers of the division have allowed their whiskers to grow side and length."

Her Majesty's steam screw man-of-war frigate Newcastle, of 31 guns and 800-horse power, was launched in a most successful manner at Deptford Dockyard on Tuesday afternoon. Her dimensions are:—Builder's old measurement, 3977 40-94. Her armament, 6 to be furnished from Woolwich and 25 from Sheerness, of 8 guns.

The 2nd battalion of the Scots Fusilier Guards was inspected, yesterday week, in the Windsor Home Park, by Major-General the Hon. General Commanding this division of the Guards. The battalion, under the command of Colonel H. E. Bruce, performed various evolutions in quick time, and afterwards performed bayonet exercise and various other movements with considerable precision, as the formation of squares when were formed into hollow squares, and addressed by Lord Rokeby at conclusion. Major-General Lord Rokeby expressed his thanks to Colonel Bruce for proceeded to the barracks and expressed himself well satisfied with the interior economy of the regiment.

SIR JAMES OUTRAM.—There is a great man who has landed on the shores of England so greatly that the land has not been conscious of the presence of any but most distinguished soldiers and statesmen. We feel deeply to hear that the cause which led to General Sir James Outram's retirement from the Council Board of India has passed away, and that he can now harvest his receiving the marks of public respect and private homage and affection which his distinguished services and character have earned for the modern Bayard have richly earned. We give sincere welcome to the hero of the Persian war and of the Indian mutiny, and we venture to say we hope he will soon receive what the Duke of Wellington has pronounced the full possession of his strength, and that he may enjoy for many years the honours he has won, in a field where honour is, indeed, hardly won.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE VOUNTEER MOVEMENT.

The officers of the West Riding Volunteers have invited their Lord Lieutenant, Lord Canterbury, to dinner at Leeds on the 2nd of November.

The colonelcy of the 5th West York Volunteer Rifles has been offered to Captain Richardson, of Beech Hill.

A grand review of the Volunteers of the Metropolitan district is to take place in Hyde Park on Saturday next Monday. More than 1000 rifle volunteers, besides a large body of yeomanry cavalry, are to be present.

A project is on foot for the establishment of a volunteer artillery company at Hornsea, in the Holderness Peninsula. Sixty-five persons have already put themselves as members of the proposed company.

A grand ball will be held in the Corn Exchange, Bedford, on the 28th inst., when prizes will be offered to all volunteers of the 4th, 16th, 26th and 30th battalions.

The review of the Dorsetshire Rifles will take place on the 30th inst. The company corps, artillery, and rifles (light) will assemble at Dorchester. The Lord Lieutenant (Lord Shaftesbury) will review the force.

Last Saturday week the City of Edinburgh Corps, stationed at Leith Fort for the purpose of receiving their newly-appointed Lieutenant-Colonel, Captain Macpherson Wedderburn.

The Wilton (5th Wilts) Corps of Rifle Volunteers were inspected by Major Thomas, commanding, in Fonthill Park, on Wednesday week, by the commanding officer, Captain Pearoddocks.

A rifle contest for by thirteen members of the Customs, or 20th Middlesex Corps was shot for yesterday week, at the Victoria Docks, the result being that the medal was won by Lieut. David Munro.

Lord Belper has sent a donation of £50 to the fund for erecting an armoury and rifle range for the volunteers for the Duffield district, Derbyshire. Capt. Paget, M.P., has also sent £50, and Mr. Mellor £25, towards the same object.

The members of the North Middlesex Rifle Corps will hold their annual week at the Victoria Tavern, Mornington-road, Regent's Park, to celebrate the considerable addition to the corps that has been made this year.

The 13th Middlesex (Working Men's Colony) has just received a notification that the 13th will be the inspection of the corps by Colonel Lord Elcho, M.P., next month.

The Crawley (Sussex) Volunteers have just held two meetings for rifle practice at the butts, in a field belonging to Mr. Goodwood, now in the Council, of Crawley; and a subscription, offered by Mr. Mark Lemon, was won by Mr. R. Hall, of Crawley.

A donation of £100 has been given by Lord Adolphus Vane Tempest to the fund for erecting a Rifle Corps Hall, in Seaham Harbour, where the volunteers held their first gun-practice on Thursday week, when ten rounds were fired from two of the guns in the garrison parade-ground.

The Duke of Devonshire met Colonel Sir Thomas Gresley and others in Derby, on Wednesday week, to make the necessary arrangements for the volunteer review at Chatsworth on the 24th inst. The review will commence at two o'clock, and will occupy about an hour, after which the volunteers will be entertained at lunch in tents by the Lord Lieutenant.

The Hornsey Volunteers, under the command of Captain Peel, were inspected by Major Rime, Deputy Inspector of Volunteers, on Wednesday week. The corps assembled drawn up in the Market Hall, and looked remarkably well. Captain Peel put the corps through the manual and platoon exercise, with which it exhibited a precision worthy of the Guards.

The Cotswold Company assembled at the police barrack-yard, Cheltenham, on Wednesday week under the command of Captain Hyett, and marched to Southam, headed by the band of the company, to compete for prizes. The first prize, a silver cup, was gained by Sergeant Hall, of Cheltenham; second, a silver vase, by Corporal Parkwood.

The 9th Brecon (Brecknock) Rifle Corps finished last Saturday a contest for a medal and silver challenge cup on their range on East Slwen-common. After the contest was concluded the cup and medal were presented to Corporal Gwynne, the victor, by Mr. E. Fenwick, one of the donors, in the presence of the officers, ladies and gentlemen who had assembled to witness the proceedings.

A numerously-attended meeting of newspaper proprietors, printers, and others connected with the newspaper and printing departments of the printing, engraving, and lithographic trades of Liverpool, was held on Saturday last, in one of the law courts, St. George's Hall, to consider the propriety of forming a volunteer corps or guard. The project, and resolutions in favour of the organization having been adopted, the details as to uniform and other matters were confided to a committee.

A letter in the Times points out that if the target at Southport was of the regulation Hythe dimensions—viz. 6ft. by 12ft.—the shooting by Messrs Ick and Lane would not bear comparison with that of Mr. Rose, as the latter fired at a target 6ft. by 6ft. "It must also be remembered that Mr. Rose shot at Wimbledon, which he had never seen before, and that he was obliged during the match to throw away two shots at each range for the purpose of sighting his rifle."

On Saturday a review and sham fight were appointed to take place at Nasing-common, near Rochdale, but the continual rain rendered field operations, to the disappointment of the volunteers, impossible. The commandant of the warbler, about 1500 volunteers were on the ground, who had been invited by Colonel Fallowe, of the West Essex Yeomanry Cavalry. After a variety of evolutions, lasting about an hour and a half, the proceedings terminated with the usual marching past and presentation of prizes.

The rifle contest that had been going on during the week at Newton Abbot, Devonshire, was concluded last Saturday. The £100 prize was carried off on Friday by Sergeant Gaydon, of the 12th Regiment of Foot. Sergeant Leach, the 11th Hussars, was the second prize winner. The other prizes were shot for. The engagements of Friday included some capital steeple chasing by mounted volunteers. A ball took place in the evening, under the chairmanship of the association, forming an appropriate conclusion of the first week's proceedings of the Newton Abbot Rifle Association.

The Bedfordshire Rifle Volunteers, under the command of Colonel Higgins, assembled on Monday week on their practice-ground at Southam for the purpose of holding their annual competition for prizes. Between five and six hundred persons were present to witness the proceedings. The first prize, a silver cup, presented by a lady, a rifle, presented by the commanding officer, and a gold pin presented by Mr. S. Gilney, was gained by Mr. Benjamin Arnold. Subsequently there were five prizes given, which were won as follows:—1st prize, £3 10s., given by Lieutenant-Colonel Higgins, won by Mr. R. Cole; a silver inkstand, given by Ensign Pitts, won by Mr. Keller; the second prize, a gold pin, given by Lieutenant Hall, won by Mr. Cole; the sergeants' prize, a sword pin, won by Mr. Hall; a plated cup, the gift of the Rev. Lieutenant Bonsfield, won by Mr. Benjamin Arnold.

A review took place on Saturday of the 3rd Surrey Rifle Volunteers, at Kingston Common, by the commanding officer, Colonel M'Dowall, Lieut.-Colonel Lord Ranelagh, and Major Hall, the inspecting officer. The corps, under Colonel Raymond, commanding 8th depôt battalion at Pembroke Dock: Lieut.-Colonel Lord Ranelagh, commanding the 3rd Surrey Rifles; and Lieut.-Colonel Lord Ranelagh, commanding the 3rd Surrey Rifles; and the Glamorgan Light Infantry, as Brigade Major. At the conclusion of the review Colonel Raymond complimented the officers on the soldierly appearance and excellent conduct of their men. He added that the wheeling was executed with precision, and the line of fire was well preserved.

The inauguration of the 1st battalion of the Somersetshire Rifles (consisting of the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th companies, Wellington), took place at Bath on Monday week. The proceedings commenced with a review of the whole force on Lansdown-common, under Colonel Jervis, the Lieutenant-Colonel of the battalion; Sir William Miles, M.P., Colonel of the Somerset Militia, commanding the brigade. Subsequently, the volunteers being under the command of Captain Randle Feel, the senior officer present, the battalion was formed into open order, extending in a field-day in highly-creditable manner, the volley-firing and light-infantry movements being executed with considerable precision. The corps marched in the evening the volunteers, with their fellow-citizens to the number of about 400, to the Pump-room, where they partook of a supper provided by Colonel Jones.

The Victoria Rifle Volunteers were reviewed on Tuesday week, at Dunrobin, by Lord Sydney, the Lord Lieutenant. At the conclusion of the review a dinner took place in a tent erected in the park, at which Lord Sydney, Hope, M.P., Sir John Herschel, and other gentlemen, addressed the company. Sir John Herschel, in proposing the health of Lord Sydney, the chairman, signified his sympathy with the volunteer movement. He considered that, relatively with the regular army, the volunteers were very inexpensive. While it would guarantee our position as a nation, and enable us to pursue, without interruption, the arts of peace, it would not be a burden to anyone. It would knit together men of all ranks and classes by bringing them into constant intercourse with each other. It would promote habits of order and subscription, influenced by no selfish motives, but coming of their own free will, and inasmuch as it would be entirely composed of men of good character, it would add thereto by its presence.

The annual rifle competition by the Leeds Volunteer Rifles for the various prizes left over at the previous competition, took place on Saturday. The principle competition was the Challenge Cup, worth twenty-five guineas, presented by Lieutenant-Colonel Gott, C.B., and the Lieutenant's prize, also worth £10, and a medal, presented by Lieutenant Hudson. Sergeant Holt was the winner of the Challenge Cup, obtaining 49 points, Lieutenant Hudson, who was entitled to the second Silver Cup. The third best was Private John Bell, who contended for the Lieutenant's prize, and won it. Another rifle competition was for a Silver Cup, presented by Captain Wilkinson, value six guineas. This was won by Sergeant Major Hudson, 46 points. He also obtained second prize in the contest for the Allcomers' Cup, he did not claim the bowers, and the second prize, £2 10s., was won by Mr. Bell. The last prize was a stocked Colt's Revolver in case complete, presented by J. Armitage, Esq. The winner was taken by Mr. Bell.

A review at Flixton Park, Suffolk, on Monday week, passed off very satisfactorily. The volunteers assembled in force, under the command of Colonel Adair, in addition to the review at Flixton several other matters of interest took place. Principal, in the morning, was a rifle competition, a shooting-match took place on Monday at Stowmarket. After the ties had been shot off the first prize fell to Private Cook, who made the score of 41½. Private Marriott, 6th Suffolk; second prize (silver cup, value £7); Sergeant-Major Hudson, 6th Suffolk; third prize (silver cup, value £5); Corporal Chapman, 1st Suffolk. The services of a corps in course of formation at Stowmarket were offered to Lieutenant-Colonel Adair, and accepted. The market is increasing in strength and efficiency. The Bury St. Edmunds, 6th Suffolk Rifles, have much to congratulate themselves upon, inasmuch as the ridge has offered prizes to the extent of £10, to be divided among the rifle volunteers.

The competition for York terminated on Wednesday week. The day was occupied with the contest for the Lieutenant-Colonel Rigby silver cup challenge. The first tie was that made by seven competitors for Lady Mary Vyner's prize, which was won by Private Smith, who made the score of 24 points out of a possible 25. The next tie, for Lieutenant-Colonel Rigby silver cup, between Sergeant Gilbertson, Private Smith, and Private Hutchinson, was won by Sergeant Gilbertson, who made the score of 24 points. He was thus qualified to win Captain Meek's cup and the subscribers' (2nd company's) cup, the former being won by the highest scorer, and the latter by the holder of the largest number of points. Captain Meek's cup consequently became the property of Private Hutchinson, who made the second highest score, and the cup for Sergeant Pearson and Private Oglesby, and won by the former. With the last tie for the Lieutenant-Colonel's cup the day's shooting ended, and a mustered strongly at the Guildhall, when the several prizes were distributed to the successful competitors by Lieutenant-Colonel Rigby, assisted by Lieutenant J. Cooper and Privates F. Bell, W. Robinson, H. Anderson Bainbridge, R. Anderson, and J. Smith.

The meeting of the various corps in the western division of the county of Surrey took place on Wednesday week, on the ranges at Merrow, near Guildford, by permission of the Dean. The competitors had been selected by local contests, at which the following corps were represented:—The Guildford (Captain Hartley); 13th, Guildford (Major Gill); 14th, Dorking (Captain Kerrich); 15th, Godalming (Lieutenant Hall); 16th, Chertsey (Captain Booth); and 17th, Farnham (Captain Ward). The conditions were five rounds each at 200, 500, and 600 yards, the highest number of points making most points in the aggregate to be entitled to contend for a handsome cup, presented by Lieutenant-Colonel Rigby, and the subsequent prizes were as follows:—At 600 yards—1st prize, a silver cup of £15 value and a challenge cup, value £5, Mr. Smith, of Guildford; 2nd, Mr. Cole, value £10 10s., Alexander, of Epsom, who beat Moon, of Guildford, in the tie. At 500 yards—1st prize, a silver cup, value £10 10s., Mr. Cole; 2nd, A silver tray, value £3 10s., won by Bonwick, after a tie with Vinter. At 200 yards—1st prize, a silver cup, value £10 10s., Mr. Cole; 2nd prize, Highbottom, of Esher; 3rd prize, a cup, value £3 10s., won by Keeling, of Godalming, who tied with Mr. Bonwick. Aggregate prizes for the whole 2000 yards—A £25 cup, won by Randall, of Epsom. Messrs. Alexander and Cole, who tied for the second prize, subsequently shot off for the cup and prize, and hence the above result.

The following is the list of the RIFLE CORPS MOVEMENT.—From a correspondence between the Mayor of Liverpool and General Sir Duncan Macdougall, we learn that a meeting of the Liverpool Volunteers will be convened prior to the Lieutenant-Colonel Bonsfield. It appears that in 1857 Colonel Bonsfield offered to form a rifle corps for Liverpool, and that he has since held the honorable office of service. The result of this last communication was a letter from the Secretary of State for War directing that the Act of 1804, and that of 1859, informing him that "a circular had been issued, informing Lord Lieutenants of counties of the consideration of the conditions on which they would accept the services of volunteer corps."

The Rifle Corps Movement.—A well-attended meeting, presided over by Sir J. Shelley, M.P., was held on Monday evening in the large room of the Farringdon Hall, for the purpose of forming a rifle corps. That this meeting is of opinion that the Royal National Rifle Association offers advantages to all classes, and therefore pledges itself to support and encourage the movement in every way, and is of opinion that it is the duty of every patriotic Englishman to concurse by every means in his power." That a levy was then signed to. Mr. Walmsley called that the annual subscription to an effective member was 10s., and the cost of uniform and accoutrements £3 6s.; the corps possessed many advantages for drill. The Duke of Cambridge granted them the use of the Wellington Barracks, the Lord Mayor the Guildhall, the Commissioners the Tower, and the First Commissioner of Works Westminster Hall. A great many names having been enrolled, the meeting separated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

PRESENTATIONS TO OFFICERS, BUGLES, ETC.—Mrs. Sandford, of Queen Anne-street, has presented three magnificently embroidered battalion silk colours to the West Middlesex Volunteers, on the occasion of presenting a silver bugle and canoe colours to the 1st Huntingdonshire Volunteer Rifle Corps, both took place on Wednesday week in the Town Hall, Huntingdon. Arrangements had been made on a grand scale for conducting the proceedings in the presence of the Duke of Manchester, but the inclemency of the weather rendered it necessary to defer the unfavorable state of the night to another day. On Thursday week, the honorable Mrs. Fellowes, wife of the member for the county. The event was looked forward to with great interest in the county, and the proceedings were carried out in the presence of the Duke of Manchester, Colonel Duncombe, Mr. Hunt, and Mr. Heathcote. A handsome silver bugle, with the arms of the corps engraved upon it, has been purchased for them by the ladies of Bilston. The ceremony took place in the Swan Hotel yard, the colours being carried on the occasion by Mr. Lewis. The corps then piled arms, and were supplied with cold meat and ale, the company in the meantime partaking of the refreshing viands. St. Alban's Corps.—The Company of the Queen's (Westminster) Corps have just presented a handsome pair of silver drums to the corps. Lieut. A. Waldron, on behalf of the donors, for his services in the formation of the company during the time he has been in command, and also as a mark of their esteem for his private worth. Lieut. Waldron, in acknowledging the gift, said he had been presented with a beautiful set of silver drums by the officers of the Queen's (Westminster) Rifle Corps, and he thought it was but right that the non-commissioned officers of the corps were through a variety of evolutions with much precision. The corps went through a variety of evolutions with much precision. The Lieutenant-Colonel then said that the Duke of Cambridge had kindly supplied with rust belt and bore, provided by his Lordship.—The Worcester Rifle Corps have been presented with a handsome silver bugle, by Worsley Park, the seat of the Earl of Ellesmere. The Countess of Ellesmere presented the bugle to the corps, accompanying the presentation with very volunteer movement, and Captain Topp replied in appropriate terms.—Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has appointed Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Ranelagh, M.P., Augerstein, M.P., for Greenwich, for the purpose of receiving, at Mr. Greenwich Hospital, the colours of the 3rd Surrey Rifle Corps, in the district. Captain Morris, on behalf of the corps, returned thanks, and stated that the corps had received the colours from the hands of the Prince Bertram. Bertram sent subsequently served in the task, when there hearty cheers were given in honour of the Prince.—The Wednesbury Corps of Rifle Volunteers were presented with a set of silver drums, on Saturday week, by Lady Fitzwilliam at the residence of Lord Fitzwilliam, Wednesbury Hall. The presentation took place in the drill-room, which was tastefully decorated with flowers. A handsome silver-headed baton, in token of their sincere respect.—Presentation to the 2nd Derby Volunteer Rifle Corps.—Lieutenant Major (T. Strutt, Esq., of Belper and Streatham) Rifle presented their late drill-instructors, Sergeant-Major Baker and Sergeant Hall, with a handsome gratuity on Tuesday week, the day succeeding the Dublin, with an elegant 5-pounder each, in token of the appreciation of their services in bringing the corps to its present state of efficiency.

THE WRECK REGISTER OF 1859.

This terrible storm of October 1859 will be long remembered as more productive of the most unprecedented disasters in the seas and on the shores of the United Kingdom, than any other recorded wreck and loss of life will be found in the "Board of Trade Wreck Register." This states that the increase in these disasters is most remarkable in the month of October, and more especially in the 2nd of October 31 and November 1 and 2 last. In the former gale there were 138 total wrecks, the following is reported in the latter gale, when 178 lives were lost. This number, however, includes the loss of 46 lives in the Royal Charter gale, and 45 lives are recorded as the loss of the crew of seven ship wrecks that ever occurred on British shores.

During the month of October there were 37 total wrecks and 37 casualties resulting in partial damage, and there was a loss of 21 lives. Besides these, 434 lives were lost on the coast of the United Kingdom in the gale of Storm Cork on or about December 30.

Again, in August 1857, the gale out of every 175 voyages made by British ships employed in the oversea-trade a casualty has happened, while in only one voyage in 1,000 has shipwreck occurred, and 997 voyages were not required by law to have certificates.

It is computed that the value of property caused by wrecks and casualties on the coasts of the United Kingdom during the year 1859 was, in cargoes, about £850,000, and in ships, about £1,000,000, a total loss of nearly £2,000,000. Surely this is so much wealth lost to the nation at large.

In a single gale of 24 hours' duration, on the 16th of March, 1854, 133 vessels, of which 49 were steamers, were driven into Yarmouth Roads, 70 of which were ashore or had foundered, with the loss of 200 lives.

In 1859 the wrecks and strandings involving total loss amounted to 827, being 1 more than in 1858; the number of lives lost was 1,111, as against 1,134 in 1858; the total number of strandings, &c., being 1987, against 859 in 1858, and 1,111 in the year 1857, when 1,134 lives were lost. Of the 827 wrecks 3 were supposed to be by fire, between 6 a.m. and 4 p.m., against 76 in the daytime, and 228 in the night. Of the 1,111 lives lost, 1,000 were in the night and 28 in the daytime. Of the 1,987 happened between April and October, inclusive, and 260 collisions happened between the same months. In 1858 it was almost impossible to ascertain the number of wrecks occurring on the stormy stones that the life-boat was busily engaged. It is a long list of noble services, and a few of the most remarkable will be mentioned when the Duke's National Life-boat Institution has on the public gratitude. Here is April 15.—Goodwin Sands—Lifeboat, No. 1, of Ramsgate, and No. 2, of the Duke of Northumberland, &c. Oct. 21.—Lytham, weather stormy; the brigantine Hannah Jane, of London, driven on the Lytham Sands; the Lytham life-boat was launched and got through a long list, enumerating services of the most humane and soothing character in the annals of the Institution, and recorded in the Secretary's ledger.

The Register states that the greatest number of casualties have happened to ships between fourteen and twenty years old; next, between twenty and thirty; and then in comparatively few cases to ships between thirty and forty years of age. It also happens that 64 were upwards of fifty years old, three of this number being upwards of 100 years old, and the oldest vessel lost was 104 years old.

A comparison of the wrecks that have occurred during the past two years on the coast, and on the shores of the United Kingdom gives the following results:—In 1858 the total number of casualties was 859; in 1859 they amounted to 1987—against 91 and 80 in the months of April and October, 1858, and 260 and 228 in the same months of the present year. The total number of lives lost in 1858, but in 1859 they had increased to 28. That the loss of money in the Canadian trade is very great is evidenced by the following:—In a single storm of a hurricane off the Canadian coast, on August 24th in the year 1853, 18 vessels, with a loss of £300,000. The Castletown life-boat, belonging to the National Life-boat Institution, has been instrumental in saving upwards of 100 lives in a year in saving life from wrecks off that island.

In August last 1,000 persons, or passengers, there were 10,538 persons on board these 1846 wrecks, and of these 1977 were actually imperilled, and 2138 have been saved by the Life-boat Service. Of life-boats and other craft; the remainder 1645 having unhappily been drowned.

The annual election of inmates into the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum took place on Wednesday, at the institution in the Old Kent-road, and passed off with more than ordinary spirit. Fourteen persons were elected.

Her Majesty's ship Enterprise well known in connection with Arctic explorations, was towed into the Tyne on Monday. The destination of the Enterprise is unknown, but it is supposed that she is going to Asia as a cruiser.

A drinking-fountain, the gift of a lady, has just been erected in Sloane-square. The design is in the form of a circular granite bowl and pedestal, polished, and mounted upon three granite steps. In the centre of the bowl is a carved plinth of white marble, supporting three ornamental jets of bronze, on which rests a vase in the same material, appropriately decorated with the water-lily. The work has been designed and erected by the sculptors, Will Brothers.

MIDDLE TEMPLE LIBRARY.—In a few copies of our Impression last week it was erroneously stated that the new Library in the Temple, of which we gave an Engraving, belonged to the Inner Portion of the Middle Temple. These two Inns of Court are divided by Middle Temple-lane. There are altogether four Societies in the Temple, viz. Inner Temple, Middle Temple, Gardens, lying to the west of the Middle Temple.

RIO DE JANEIRO.

THE capital of Brazil is situated on a river of the same name, at the head of a large bay. The houses are generally built of stone or brick. The streets are straight, well paved, and have excellent footpaths, though they are extremely dirty. There are numerous convents and churches. The cathedral, lately finished, is in a superior style of architecture. Parallel with the beach runs the main street, called Rua de Deresto, from which the minor streets branch off at right angles, intersected by others at regular distances. The Royal Palace skirts the beach, and is seen to great advantage from the landing-place, which is within sixty yards of its entrance. The harbour can scarcely be excelled for capaciousness and security. The entrance into it from the sea does not exceed a mile from point to point; it afterwards widens to about three or four miles, and is intersected with heavy batteries; the numerous islets with which it is interspersed being crowned with artillery.

The accompanying View of the Arsenal and part of the City of Rio de Janeiro is from a photograph taken from the Castle Hill (Morro do Castello), and the spectator is supposed to stand with his back to the entrance of the harbour. The first building on the right is the Church of St. José: the next to it, consisting of three roofs, is the House of the National Deputies, with its printing-offices: these buildings are not so deep as the church, and therefore leave exposed some of the windows of the left front of the Emperor's city Palace. The Palace itself fronts the waters of the bay, and runs back across the picture to the left, when it extends at right angles till it joins the Imperial Chapel, thus forming two sides of the area called the Palace Square (Largo do Paço). Within the square is a cab-stand, and on the other side of it are hotels and the houses of money-changers; and lower down towards the water is the side front of the fish and vegetable market, which inclose a small granite-flagged square, with a fountain in the centre, which fountain discharges water at four sides.

The shipping on the right are the merchantmen discharging cargo. These vessels, which have warped down "the Gut," in the centre of the picture, having discharged their cargoes, must warp back again, for, although the land on the right is an island (the Island of Cobras), yet there is a line of rocks and shallows extending from the north-east end of it to a point on the main land not seen in this picture, but which is on the right hand of the spectator. The island in front is, as has been before observed, the Island of Cobras, on the city side of which are to be seen wharves and warehouses of the Custom House; and the little distant island peeping out from behind the church on Cobras Island is that called Das Enchadas, a large coal dépôt, to which the Southampton steamers proceed to discharge their cargoes in lighters, and take in coals.

The Naval Arsenal is seen immediately under the Convent of San Bento, on the left distance; and the ships seen in the centre of the picture are Government hulks and vessels of war, the merchant shipping being restricted to anchorages to the left and right of it, where their masts may be discovered.

THE ARSENAL AND PART OF THE CITY OF RIO DE JANEIRO BRAZIL.

The distant mountains on the celebrated Organ Range (tower 7000 feet; the practicable passes (serras) averaging 3000 to 3600 feet above the sea. The low lands seen at their foot is the island called "Ilha Governador." The smaller islands on this side of it are numerous, but, being backed up by the Governador, are not to be distinguished from it.

The picture contains only one street (the Rua Direita) and the shore, there being in the old town eleven or twelve others parallel to it, and of about the same length.

The population of Rio and suburbs is estimated at 300,000 to 350,000 inhabitants, including slaves. Rio is the see of a Bishop, the residence of a governor, and the seat of an electoral college, which had, in 1844, 256 electors; it has many scientific establishments, a museum of natural history rich in ornithology and mineralogy, an alcala or theatre, and a public botanic garden. From its position, Rio is naturally the great mart of Brazil, and especially of the provinces Minas Geraes, St. Paul, and Goyaz, and its advantages are such as to fit it for concentrating the commerce of the globe. Its imports comprise the products of every country.

OVATION TO A GARIBALDIAN IN THE CAFÉ DI EUROPA, NAPLES.

ALTHOUGH Garibaldi himself arrived in the capital of the Two Sicilies on Friday, Sept. 7, the first of his followers, with the exception of a few of his personal staff, did not reach Naples until three days afterwards. One of these, in the historic red shirt, entered the Café di Europa to procure some refreshment, and to escape the crowd which was pressing on him in the street, when, to his surprise, he found himself suddenly hoisted on the shoulders of some half-dozen enthusiastic Neapolitans who bore him in triumph round the café.

LIEUT. CEUTO (SCOTCH COMPANY). MAJOR STYLES. SERGEANT SPARKHALL. A PRIVATE.

GARIBALDIAN VOLUNTEERS.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY HERR FEHRENBACHS.

GARIBALDIAN VOLUNTEERS.

A LOVE of adventure, as much, perhaps, as a love of freedom, is actuating our countrymen to volunteer for Garibaldi and to leave their ties and kindred at home to fight for the liberty of a foreign people.

Last week no less a number than 800 volunteers arrived at Harwich by the morning trains from London, and embarked thence for Southern Italy. Add this number to those who before departed, and there will be found to be considerably more than 1050 Englishmen and Scotchmen who have placed their swords at the disposal of Garibaldi.

It must not be supposed that all this number of volunteers are men whom poverty has compelled to accept this service as a means of livelihood or a last resource. Such is not the case. The majority of the volunteers, on the contrary, are men of middle-class position in society; and in very many instances lucrative employment has been given up for the purpose of accepting service in the Garibaldian corps. Many, also, of those who are now in Italy are men of independent means, who go out solely for the excitement of taking part in actual warfare. Garibaldi has but little to offer them. He can hold out no hope of any lucrative appointment or other emolument when the turbulent uprising of the Italian people shall once more be hushed into repose. The best he has to tender for the acceptance of his English and Scotch volunteers is a General's true and hearty welcome, a soldier's hard and uninviting fare, and an enslaved nation's thanks and prayers.

Garibaldi has a very high opinion of his English volunteers, and has so expressed himself through the medium of his Aide-de-Camp, late Captain and now Major Styles. This is a proof which, though not wanting, it is still agreeable to receive, that Englishmen never fail to maintain their prestige for military prowess and indomitable courage. The same spirit that led the brave band to follow their noble General Wolfe up the apparent inaccessible heights of Quebec still beats in the breast of the nation at the present day. Garibaldi knows this, and he knows that his English volunteers will stop at no danger, so long as the object they have in view remains unaccomplished. In whatever light this volunteering for Garibaldi may be regarded in a political sense, there can be but one feeling in the hearts of our countrymen, and that is, to wish their brethren who have volunteered godspeed.

A very gratifying mark of esteem, which is well worthy of being recorded here, was that of Mr. Henry Distin, the musical instrument-maker of Newport-street, Leicester-square, presenting to each detachment of British volunteers, numbering a hundred, a handsome and well-finished bugle. The volunteers seemed much pleased with this tangible mark of their worth; and the sound of these bugles is destined now animating them in their struggles for the freedom of the Italians.

Our Engraving, which is from a photograph by Herr Fehrenbachs, represents Sergeant Sparkhall, Major Styles, and Lieut. Ceuto, of the Glasgow company.‡ Major Styles, as will be seen, wears the Crimean medal; and, from his unceasing energy in raising the volunteers and assisting Garibaldi in his great cause, he will be remembered for many years to come.

THE DEMOLITION OF OLD WESTMINSTER-BRIDGE.—SEE SUPPLEMENT, PAGE 377.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE defeats of Thormanby and Diophantus were the two leading features of the concluding days of the Newmarket Second October. Setting aside the Grand Duke Michael, it is rather remarkable that Settling aside the Grand Duke Michael, it is rather remarkable that John Scott's stable should have taken such signal and unexpected revenge on both Derby and St. Leger winners, and, in both instances, with such very second-class horses as Tom Bowling and Cape Flyaway. Thormanby is said to have had cracked heels, and not to be himself in any way; and the distance was moreover, too short for him. After his four consecutive defeats it is hardly likely that he shall see him out again this year. Diophantus, on the other hand, we shall see him out again this year. Diophantus, on the other hand, we shall see him out again this Prendergast out of form. Mr. Ring have set down the chestnut's performance as nil, and take up to a fresh start with a view to which they lay 100 to 1 against the Oulston colt, which was second to Procyprus in the race. The Caledonian Hunt secretary keep up the charter by running once at Ayr this year, and the Gold Cup is the only just best a head by Greta for the Ayr Cup. Exciting races were quite the order of the day, as Greta was in the last event, and the Duke of Abercorn for the Caledonian Handicap. Old name distinctions are a very stout fight in Bullock's Underhand made a very stout fight in Bullock's Underhand made a very close finish in the Caledonian Handicap, who beat him again for the Queen's Plate. To the eye he is nothing like the horse he was last year at York.

The Newmarket Houghton fills with the whole of next week. The great 1000, in L. sovs., between Tom Bowling and Umpire is fixed for great 1000, in L. sovs., between Tom Bowling and Umpire is fixed for this day (Monday), and Knight of the Thistle, Brother to Sibthorpe, Monday, and Dundee, Knight of the Thistle, Brother to Sibthorpe, Klarikoff, Folkestone, Parasite, Wallace, Rosicrucian, Lady Elizabeth, Klarikoff, Folkestone, Parasite, Wallace, Rosicrucian, Lady Elizabeth, Chanselo, &c., are all in the Criterion. Dulcibella is not backed with much spirit, and Sir William, Rosetta, and Stampede are in most demand. The latter must have improved immensely since the autumn of 1859, if he is to have any chance. The Rover, Thormanby, Brown Duchess, Ida Scott and Wildrake are among the entries for the Rous Memorial the same day. On Thursday Klarikoff and Knight of St. Patrick are in the Glasgow Stakes; Parasite and Wallace in the Houghton; and Butterfly, Ida, Brown Duchess, and Five-year-old Handicap, and one of the matches on Saturday will be between two ponies under thirteen hands and a half.

Mr. Harey has just entered on his second course of cavalry instruction classes at Aldershot. The success of his first year's system of drill has been very marked, and the system has been carried out so precisely and effectively by them, that, in the regiments from which they have been selected, some of the most refractory kind have been generally put into the ranks at the end of three days. Mr. Harey has been giving a lecture this day, for the third of a series, on the use of the portable exhibition in the neighbourhood of London will take place at the Crystal Palace, on Saturday, the 27th inst., when Mr. Harey will take farewell, before he crosses the Atlantic in company with four Shetland ponies. One of the latter is so small that Mr. Harey intends to take it to run after the hounds in the same way as a Newfoundland dog.

At Melton Mowbray Mr. Gilmour's celebrated chestnut, Garibaldi, is quite as much at home among the stags as with the hounds. Captain M. de Sabouroff, an attaché of the French Embassy, has just taken stables for his horses, and Count Bathyany, another attaché, from the Calthorpe will also be among the visitors. The Queen hounds routed Gurtree Hill and Thorpe Trussells on Friday, and found at Gumley Wood. There is the usual story of abundance in one part of the hunt, and in the Belvoir and Mr. Tailby's as well. The Earl of Stamford's stud at Quorn numbers thirty-two, and he proposes to call one of his colts "Arbor is Lordship The Design," unless the Melton men put their hands into their pockets more effectively to their work, and raise a fund of considerable part of the £3500 subscription for some new master, which was made up in 1846-48 for Mr. Hodgson and Mr. Green.

The Isle of Wight has done good service to Mr. Randell, thus early in the season, as her Revolution by Judge won the Pen-gwern stakes at the Vale of Clwyd meeting. Thormanby's winning was looked upon as certainty, had to succumb to Tipsy Cake. The Vale of Master Mocking-bird, for the Vale of Clyd Cop. Patience was beaten, Racketty Hopjicker lost her first course, and Canrina was drawn after a tie with Tipsy Cake. Mr. Jeffrey lately purchased up his Biggar stable in the most remarkable manner, as Ingoman and Border Union, both by him, have divided the Border Leger. The Arbroath, Perth (Thursday) and Brough Cattrick (Cyre fared for Tuesday; the Tredegar and Southminster meetings for Tuesday and Wednesday; Taxiston (Southport) for Thursday; and Brampton, Scorton (O), and Langran (O) for Thursday and Friday.

LEWES AUTUMN RACES—WEDNESDAY.

Trial Stakes.—Castab, 1. Lady Peel, 2.
Nursery Plate.—Tonic, 1. Crocus, 2.
Lewes Autumn Handicap.—Royal Sovereign, 1. Tamandre, 2.
Brighton Stakes.—British Grenadier, 1. Ida, 2.
Stanklown Plate.—Von Stronm, 1. Rosalind, 2.
Maiden Plate.—Sunbeam, 1. Nymph, 2.
Selling Handicap.—White Wave, 1. Jacie Brown, 2.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.
Lat. 51° 31′ 30″ N., Long. 0° 4′ 18″ W., Height above sea, 54 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF							THERMOMETER.			WIND.		RAIN in the Day.
	Barometer reduced to 32° and Sea Level.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Ozone. Scale of 0 to 6.	Solar Radiation.	Terrestrial Radiation.	Cloud. Scale of 0 to 10.	General Direction.	Velocity in Miles.	Inches.
Oct. 10	29·544	44.2	67·7	3·6	10	36·9	53·8	SW. WSW.	6·2	0·000
„ 11	29·541	43·0	58·5	3·6	9	42·4	49·0	NE. N.	2·0	·133
„ 12	29·772	42·7	68·7	3·6	8	42·4	49·0	WNW. NW.	2·1	·018
„ 13	29·720	49·4	86·0	·2	8	37·6	52·4	WSW. SW.	2·6	·056
„ 14	29·722	47·1	82·3	·2	8	42·6	52·4	SW.	2·1	·000
„ 15	29·663	41·9	61·2	·36	10	29·2	37·7	WSW. WNW.	2·7	·029
„ 16	29·753	39·6	72·2	·36	10	29·2	37·7	NW.	2·1	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, at 9 o'clock A.M. mean time a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	29·145	29·69	29·976	29·663	29·553	29·789	29·760
Thermometer	49°	47°	54°	54°	49°	49°	47°	49°
Temperature of Evaporation	42°	45°	53°	54°	47°	48°	47°	48°
Direction of Wind	WSW.	SW.	SW.	WSW.	W.	W.	NW.	SW.

THE "GREAT EASTERN."—The report of the directors of the Great Ship Company was issued on Monday. The contract for the steamer New York have remitted £14,000, but not yet furnished their accounts. It is thought the receipts will more than cover the cost of the trip to America without trenching on the capital. The directors state that heavy outstanding claims are counterbalanced by the present value of property, and that a most unexpected one of £18,000 presents itself in the newest of the investments. The receipts will be considerably increased by the visit

NEW BOOKS.

THE PRAIRIE FLOWER. By GUSTAVE AIMARD. "See 'WELCOME HOME'!"—Athenæum of 22 pages, 32, wrapper. HOUTLEDGE and WARNE, 32, Paternoster-row, and all Booksellers.

CASSELL'S HANDBOOKS. Just published, in cloth, 1s. 6d. each, post 2d. each additional, or 3s. 6d. the three complete volumes.

HANDBOOK OF CHESS, containing a clear Exposition of the Game, Advice to Young Players, &c.

HANDBOOK OF BOOKKEEPING, by Single and Double Entry. Account Books extra, 1s. 6d. each set.

HANDBOOK OF BUSINESS, giving an Explanation of the Mercantile Terms in Common Use.

A HANDBOOK OF ETIQUETTE, for Ladies and Gentlemen, being a Guide to Polite Society.

HANDBOOK OF LETTER-WRITING.

HANDBOOK OF INVESTMENTS, being a Complete Guide to the Public Funds, &c. &c.

CASSELL, PETTER, and GALPIN, London and New York.

ILLUMINATED by OWEN JONES and HENRY WARREN; PARADISE AND THE PERI, from the Poem by THOMAS MOORE. Printed in Colours, and bound in full morocco, 42s. This work is intended to form the most elaborate and splendid gift-book for the ensuing season which has yet received the attention of the art-bookbinder. Price, bound in CLOTH, 21s.; in calf, 42s. 6d. Subscribers' names received by DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W.C.

Just published, crown 8vo, with 35 Illustrations, price 5s.

THE VOLUNTEERS' MANUAL OF HEALTH AND DRESS; or, the Laws to be Applied to the Natural and Healthful Development of the Human Body, and the Principles of Dress, Exercise, Exercise, Gymnastics, Diet, and Regimen, Life, Invigorating the Health, Strength, and Beauty of the Human Body may be attained and enjoyed. By HENRY SMITH, M.D. Member of Trade and Local, 1859, Field-street, and of all Book-sellers, and at the Railway Stations.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE (No. 11) for SEPTEMBER, will be published on Saturday, the 29th inst. Price One Shilling, with Two Illustrations.

Contents:—No. 11. "Into this Last." IV.—All Va-lentia. (With an Illustration.) Framley Parsonage. Chap. 8.—Silence. Fishing in Ireland. Chap. 9.—Lufton. Lady's Royal Liberators. Chap. 10.—The Visit and Con-sequences. Dance. To Manchester. Chap. 11.—Miss Dunstable. A Scandalous Journey (with an Illustration). Notes o' a Week's Holiday.

SMITH, ELDER, and CO., 65, Cornhill.

FIVE DAYS IN JERUSALEM. With six Illustrations. No. 24, for OCTOBER.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD, Conducted by CHARLES DICKENS, now ready. Office, 122, Fleet-street.

Price 1s., postage-free, 13 Stamps. Second Edition, Illustrated Wrapper, with 13 Illustrations.

HINTS ON ILLUMINATING; with Lithographic Illustrations from old and rare MSS. By H. M. LUCAS, Professor of Art. ADAMS and SON, 301, Oxford-street.

Price 2s. 6d., postage-free 3s. 6d., cloth gilt, Illustrated.

THE ART OF ILLUMINATING; A Guide to Beginners. By A. H. WARREN, Instructor to the Royal Family. ADAMS and SON, 301, Oxford-street, and all Booksellers.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE HUMAN BODY: ITS STRUCTURE AND FUNCTIONS. Illustrated by Physiological Diagrams, Coloured from 100 Coloured Figures. Designed for the Use of Teachers in Schools and Private Families, and for the Medical Student. By JOHN MARSHALL, F.R.S., Surgeon to the University College Hospital, Lecturer and Lecturer on Anatomy in the Science and Art Department, South Kensington. In Two Vols., royal 8vo, price 30s. each 800 the pages of Text. Vol. II., 153 Coloured Illustrations, price 30s. Vol. I., 100 Figures, and 32 Illustrations, price 30s. Vol. I. nearly Ready.

London: Day and Son, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

100 REAL PARIS WINTER FASHIONS and Shading Novelties in Muslins, Bareges, and Grenadines, with full-size Model Sheet of Sleeves, Collars, &c., in the LADY'S GAZETTE OF FASHION for November, price 1s., post-free 1s. 4d.—BERGER, Holywell-street, Strand.

Now ready, price Sixpence,

CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED ALMANACK for 1861, containing Thirty beautiful Engravings. May be had of all Booksellers.

CASSELL, PETTER, and GALPIN, London and New York.

THE ANATOMIST.—LLOYD'S DESCRIPTIVE PRICED LIST, with practical instructions for Tank Management, Fish, and Aquaria Stocking, free for one stamp. Apply direct to W. A. Lloyd, Portland-road, Regent's Park, London, W.

Just published, post-free, three stamps,

THE TREATISE ON GABRIEL ON THE LOSS AND ONLY EFFECTUAL MODE OF RESTORING THE TEETH. With Observations on Mastication and Subtle Combination of Ozone not lasts longer than three ordinary sets, and can be adapted, without the slightest pain, to decayed teeth. Also, on Irritation of the Mucous Membrane, Tic Douloureux, &c., only by Messrs. GABRIEL, Dentists to the Prince Consort, 110, Regent-street (near the Quadrant), and 33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London; and 134, Duke-street, Liverpool. "Gabriel's system avoids all the pain in past of economy, and is the best."—Lancet, Feb. 11, 1860. "Gabriel's Mineral Teeth.—Decidedly the best we have had the honour to wear for years, and the material protection. Athenæum Mineral Teeth, best for mastication."—Medical Times and Gazette.

THE LAST COPIES of ROBERTS'S HOLY LAND, EGYPT, &c., will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by MESSRS. SOTHEBY and BARRETT. Purchasers of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

THE LAST COPIES of the GRAMMAR OF ORNAMENT, by OWEN JONES, will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by MESSRS. SOTHEBY and BARRETT. Purchasers of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

THE LAST COPIES of the TREASURY OF ORNAMENTAL ART, Scott Exhibition Museum, by BEDFORD, LEMERE, and CO., will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by MESSRS. SOTHEBY and BARRETT. Purchasers of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

THE LAST COPIES of the ART TREASURES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, by WARING and BEDFORD, will be SOLD BY AUCTION shortly by MESSRS. SOTHEBY and BARRETT. Purchasers of DAY and SON, Lithographers to the Queen, 6, Gate-street, W.C.

SMARTS WRITING INSTITUTION, 97 B, Oxford-street, corner of Newman-street, for carriage entrance in Newman-street. Open from 9 till 9. Terms, 20s. per month. Lessons are received at any time, and may terminate at any one's convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Private lessons, 10s. 6d. per hour. Separate rooms for ladies. Lessons given to the Nobility and Gentry at their residences if preferred. No hours will extend. For prospectuses, terms, &c. apply as Mr. SMART above.

FOR FAMILY ARMS send to the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE Name and County. Arms Painted and Engraved. Pedigrees Traced. Crests on Seals and Rings for Families, Clubs, Public Institutions, Libraries, &c.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The establishment office for authority in England, which for many years has been conducted by Messrs. Rolls, with their assistants, known throughout Europe. H. SALT, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

CAUTION ON HERALDRY.—The Errors of Assumption, Forgery, Quartering, Engraving, and Painting, with their Remedies. Sent free for two stamps. Rolls, Engraver, and the maiden widowed. The public are solicited for their favours, patronage, and support. Her Majesty's Royal Arms, Crests, Mottoes, Heraldic Office, who now mounts Engraving.—H. SALT, Heraldist.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—Engraving on Seals, 3s.; Steel Engraving, &c., in accordance with the laws of Garter King-of-Arms Office, 10 heads or Rings, 6s. 6d. Book-plate Arms, 10s.—H. SALT, Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

EVENING AMUSEMENTS.—Bazaleile and Tricks, Rare Games, Beads, Conundrums, &c., in accordance of perfect power, and SHERWIN, 81, Strand, London, W.C.

NOTICE.

THE GENUINE and ORIGINAL BONDS of PERMANENT MARKING INK bear the address on the Label, 39, Long-lane, Smithfield, City.

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST. NEW PIANOFORTE AND VOCAL MUSIC.

C. E. HORN.—Greenland Fisheries. Three numbers. Each 2s.

G. F. WEST.—Operatic Melodies Transcribed. Nine numbers. Each 2s.

BRINLEY RICHARDS.—The Young Recruit. Arranged as a Duet. Each book, 2s. 6d.

J. L. HATTON.—Song. The old cradle. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves.

H. HOMMERTOFT.—Genevieve. Grand Valse for Piano. 3s.

ALFRED LEE.—Melodies of the Christy Minstrels' Melodies. Ten numbers. Each 2s.

ALFRED LEE.—Melodies of the favourite Operatic Melodies. Each 2s.

HENRY SMART.—Sacred Duets. Two books. With sacred text. Each 2s. And Duets Arranged. For Piano. Each 2s.

W. V. WALLACE.—Musical Reminiscences. Four books. Varied. 3s.

H. E. MORLEY.—Ballad: Linger, gentle maiden. 3s.

W. H. CALLCOTT.—Ballad: Such Bliss, O Love. 3s. 4s.; Paris, 3s.

BRINLEY RICHARDS.—The Plough Boy. Melody Transcribed. 3s.

W. F. TAYLOR.—Sacred Duets for Treble Voices. Arranged for Piano. 3s. each.

W. H. CALLCOTT.—The Holy Family. Three sets. Each, Solo, 3s. 4s.; Duet, 3s.

W. H. CALLCOTT.—The Adoration. Three sets. Each, Solo, 3s. 4s.; Duet, 3s.

W. H. CALLCOTT.—The Beauties of Handel. Selections. Arranged for Piano. Six set.

HALLETON'S Modern Instructions for the Pianoforte. Arranged by Czerny (200 Edition), with additional modern Airs, and Lessons, Exercises, and Scales. Complete, 4s. 6d.; Part I., 2s. 6d.; Part II., 2s. 6d.

HALLETON'S Modern Instructions for the Pianoforte. Arranged by Czerny (200 Edition), with additional modern Airs, and Lessons, Exercises, and Scales. Complete, 4s. 6d.; Part I., 2s. 6d.; Part II., 2s. 6d.

HAMILTON'S Modern Instructions for Singing. 18th Edition. 3s.

HAMILTON'S Modern Instructions for Singing. 18th Edition. 3s.

HAMILTON'S Catechism of Harmony and Thorough Bass. 32nd Edition. 3s.

HAMILTON'S Dictionary of Musical Terms. 32nd Edition. 3s.

ROBERT COCKS'S Edition of Czerny's Etude de la Vélocité, 34th Edition. 4s.

Catalogues of Pianoforte Music, of Educational Works, of Vocal Music, and of Concertina Music, gratis.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, Regent-street, W.

THE SAILOR'S WIFE.—Hatton's last new Song. Words by C. MACKAY, LL.D. Sung by Miss Palmer with great success.

ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

BALFE'S NEW SONG, SLEEP, MY LOVE, LULLABY. Poetry and Love. Words by TENNYSON. Price 2s. 6d. "One of Balfe's very best songs; the melody is charming."—Vide Musical World, Oct. 6, 1860.

ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

THE BLACKSMITH'S SON. New Song. Composed by J. L. HATTON, and sung with immense success by Mr. Sandford. Price 2s. 6d.

ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

TERRELL'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, for the PIANOFORTE SOLO, by THALBERG. HAMILTON'S Modern Instructions for Singing. 18th Edition. 3s. HAMILTON'S Catechism of Harmony and Thorough Bass. 32nd Edition. 3s. HAMILTON'S Dictionary of Musical Terms. 32nd Edition. 3s. Catalogues of Pianoforte Music, of Educational Works, of Vocal Music, and of Concertina Music, gratis. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, Regent-street, W.

THE SAILOR'S WIFE.—Hatton's last new Song. Words by C. MACKAY, LL.D. Sung by Miss Palmer with great success. ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

BALFE'S NEW SONG, SLEEP, MY LOVE, LULLABY. Poetry and Love. Words by TENNYSON. Price 2s. 6d. "One of Balfe's very best songs; the melody is charming."—Vide Musical World, Oct. 6, 1860. ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

THE BLACKSMITH'S SON. New Song. Composed by J. L. HATTON, and sung with immense success by Mr. Sandford. Price 2s. 6d. ADDISON, HOLLIER, and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street.

TERRELL'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, for the PIANOFORTE SOLO, by THALBERG. HAMILTON'S Modern Instructions for Singing. 18th Edition. 3s. HAMILTON'S Catechism of Harmony and Thorough Bass. 32nd Edition. 3s. HAMILTON'S Dictionary of Musical Terms. 32nd Edition. 3s. Catalogues of Pianoforte Music, of Educational Works, of Vocal Music, and of Concertina Music, gratis. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, Regent-street, W.

NEW PIANO MUSIC, by A. SCHLOSSER. "Rêverie." "Barcarolle." (Don Juan), 3s. "Valzer serioso" (Don Juan), 4s. "Valzer brillante" (Don Juan), 4s. "Valzer" (Don Juan), 4s. "Valzer" (Don Juan), 4s. "Valzer

NEW MUSIC.

ALBERT'S ATTILA QUADRILLE. The most new set. Just published, beautifully illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S MILANESE POLKA. Just published, beautifully illustrated in Colours by HEADLAND. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S NAPLES QUADRILLE. A new Edition of this celebrated set, on popular Italian Airs, Illustrated in Vivid Colours, and dedicated to Gertrude. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S GARLDI GALOP, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Festival. Splendidly Illustrated with a Portrait of that great Chief by BLAND. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S ERIN GO BRAGH QUADRILLE, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Festival. The new Quadrille on the most favourite Irish Airs. "Moore's National Melodies." Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN WALTZ, as played by the Prince Galitzin's Orchestra at the Jubilee Festival, and by the favourite song of "Kathleen Mavourneen." Illustrated with a Portrait of the Composer. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S NELLY GRAY VALSE, with Portrait of Nelly. Now set but published. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S PRINCE OF WALES or GALOP. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated with a Portrait in Colours of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by BARTHE. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT'S NEW MUSIC for DANCING.—The Princess Louise Valse, Victorine Quadrille, Lorraine Quadrille, Louise Valse, Trevelyan Hornpipe, Alexandra Quadrille, Jessamy Quadrille, Jessamy Valse, Jessamy Galop, Jessamy Polka, Rifle Corps Polka, Lurline Quadrille, Sultan Valse, Echo on Brigh Quadrille, and Alma Valse. Complete Lists of Albert's Dance Music, and Catalogues of this popular Composer's works may be had gratis and postage-free on application.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FASHIONABLE DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing fifty Quadrilles, Lancers, Waltzes, Polkas, Schottisches, Galops, &c., by CHARLES D'ALBERT, Strauss, Lanner, Lumbye, &c. Bound by HARRY ALLEN. Price 2s. 6d., post-free.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S STANDARD DANCE BOOK for the PIANOFORTE, containing one hundred Country Dances, Reels, Jigs, Hornpipes, Highland Flings, Sailleins, Spanish Dances, &c. Newly arranged by FRANZ NAVA. 320 pp., 4to, 3s. Cloth extra, gilt edges, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S SANTA LUCIA. Just published, a brilliant Fantasia on this favourite Air by the above popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO. 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' COMPLETE EDITION for the PIANOFORTE. The best, the newest, and largest of all editions. Contains all the contemporary ballads, airs, scenes, exercises, and a great variety of the most popular themes by various composers. Price 2s. pages, full music size, print, and post-free.
N.B. A List of Brinley Richards' Popular Pieces will be sent on application.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S NEW OPERATIC FANTASIAS, just published,
KUHE'S DIAMANS DE LA COURONNE, 4s. 6d.
KUHE'S LA FAVORITE DU REGIMENT, 4s. 6d.
KUHE'S CRISPINO, 4s. 6d.
KUHE'S DON GIOVANNI, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE RETREAT.—Sung by the Orphéonistes, and adapted to English words by Jaxley; and beautifully illustrated. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

I NEVER CAN FORGET. Ballad. Sung by Mr. Santley in Mildon's new Opera, "Victoria," and enthusiastically encored. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE LAST GOOD-BYE. Sung by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, for whom it was expressly composed by W. V. WALLACE. The popular Composer of "Lurline," &c. &c. Price 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LILY BELLS. Expressly composed for Mdlle. Liebhart by W. V. WALLACE, the popular Composer of "Lurline," &c. &c. Price 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE BELLRINGER. Sung by Mr. Santley. The most successful Ballad Song, by WALLACE, which has created such a sensation at the Monday Popular Concerts, &c., is now ready. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE ILLUSTRATED ALBUM.—Just published, A SELECTION of FAVOURITE MELODIES Arranged for the PIANOFORTE by CHARLES D'ALBERT. Price in cloth, gold bevel. No. 1. Holly Grey Valse (D'Albert) No. 13. Cremorne Polka Mazurka (D'Albert)
2. Overture to the Bronze Horse (Auber)
3. Nellie, let me Valse (D'Albert)
4. Cheshire Reel
5. Vesper Hymn
6. Egg Dance
7. Nightly in the Grotto (D'Albert)
8. Du zu Meine
9. Brides Versailles (D'Albert)
10. Ballet
11. Bellerophon Waltz (D'Albert)
12. Lurline Valse (D'Albert)
14. Cupid Leap Valse
15. The Flower Girl Maid (Meyerbeer)
16. Fairy Dance
17. Queen of the Valse (D'Albert)
18. Alice Valse (D'Albert)
19. Rifle Corps Polka (D'Albert)
20. Ballet
21. Babylon Waltz (D'Albert)
22. Lurline Valse (D'Albert)
24. Adieu Leap Valse
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S CHEAP WORKS FOR VARIOUS INSTRUMENTS. Price 1s. 6d. each, post-free.
VIOLIN.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Second Violin Book. Part 2 to ditto.
Chappell's 100 Dances (Second Series).
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorina."
Chappell's 100 Popular Song Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs with Cornet Obbligato.
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
VIOLONCELLO.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorina."
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Popular Song Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
CORNET-A-PISTON.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's)
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorina."
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's 100 Popular Song Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
ENGLISH CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Dances (principally D'Albert's).
Chappell's 100 Operatic Airs.
Chappell's Favourite Airs from "Lurline" and "Victorina."
Chappell's 100 Irish and Scotch Airs.
Chappell's 100 Christy Minstrel Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
ANGLO-GERMAN CONCERTINA.
Chappell's 100 Operatic Melodies, Songs, Dances, &c.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
GUITAR.
Chappell's 100 Dances.
Chappell's Popular Songs, with Guitar Accompaniment, in two books.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
HARMONIUM.
Chappell's 52 Sacred Melodies.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
Chappell's Popular Instruction Book.
Any of the above Works, or CHAPPELL'S Cheap Works, as they are called, may be had of all other popular respectable works.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

NEW NUMBERS of BOOSEYS' MUSICAL CABINET.—Boosey and Sons beg to announce the publication of the following new Numbers of their MUSICAL CABINET, all to appear at the end of next week:—Hullo-street, London.

9 ORIGINAL PIECES by ASCHER for One Shilling, Nos. 9 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet." The selection includes Les Guerres dans, Wiz, Reverie, Pepita, Etincina, &c.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

10 NOCTURNES and MAZURKAS for One Shilling, being No. 10 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet." This selection is by Ascher, Lindahl, Brissac, &c.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

12 DRAWING-ROOM PIECES for One Shilling, No. 12 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet." This selection is by Ascher, Reeves, Rosellen, Quintel, Funke, Lotus, Lindahl, Brissac, &c.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

20 BALLADS by POPULAR COMPOSERS for One Shilling, being No. 19 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet," containing Sweet Spirit, hear my Prayer, Sullivan; Ever of Thee, Miss Pricher, Campana, O. B. Allen, Charles Hackay, &c.; 41 well-known Ballads. Price One Shilling, Nett.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

12 SONGS by J. L. HATTON and GEORGE LINLEY for One Shilling, being No. 11 of "Boosey's Musical Cabinet." All with Piano Accompaniments.—Hullo-street.

20 SONGS by MENDELSSOHN for One Shilling.—No. 1 of "Boosey's Musical Cabinet" contains 20 Songs by Mendelssohn, with English Words and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling. Boosey and Sons, Hullo-street.

12 SONGS by BALFE for One Shilling.—No. 2 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 12 Songs by Balfe, with Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

14 SONGS by VERDI for One Shilling.—No. 3 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 14 Songs by Verdi, with English Words and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

20 SONGS OF THE CHRISTY MINSTRELS.—No. 4 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains Twenty Songs of the Christy Minstrels, with Choruses and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

50 FAVOURITE WALTZES for One Shilling.—No. 5 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains Fifty favourite Waltzes for the Pianoforte. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

12 SETS OF QUADRILLES for One Shilling.—No. 6 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 12 Sets of Quadrilles for Pianoforte (complete). Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

40 POLKAS and 10 GALOPS for One Shilling.—No. 7 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 40 Polkas and 10 Galops, all for Pianoforte and several packed complete, for Pianoforte. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

25 OPERATIC GEMS BY VERDI for One Shilling.—No. 8 of "Boosey Musical Cabinet" contains 25 Operatic Gems by Verdi, arranged for Pianoforte by Nordmann. Price One Shilling.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

BOOSEYS' MUSICAL CABINET, containing Pianoforte Pieces, Songs, and Pianoforte Music are published in three splendid Volumes, price 5s. each, bound in cloth, gilt, containing 100 pages of music over printed in Musical Cabinet.

1. THE ENGLISH SONG-BOOK, price 5s., elegantly bound in cloth, gilt, containing 44 Songs and Ballads, with Pianoforte Accompaniments, by
Balfe, J. L. Hatton
Benedict, Linley
Charles Hackay, Molloy
and other popular Composers.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

2. THE DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTE BOOK, price 5s., splendidly bound in cloth, gilt, containing 37 Compositions by Ascher, Brissac, Lindahl, Rosellen and Salaman, Marzials Brilliantes, &c., for Pianoforte, by Ascher, Reeves,
H. Cramer, Rosellen,
Lindahl, Salaman,
Brissac, Tolhurst,
Rosellen
and other popular Composers.
To be had of BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

3. THE BALLROOM MUSIC-BOOK, price 5s., handsomely bound in Magenta cloth, containing 12 Polkas 12 Quadrilles (complete)
12 Galops 12 Waltzes (complete)
by D'Albert, Lamothe, Tinney, Muller, Lumbye, Strauss, Lanner, Godfrey, Coote, Gung'l, Rosellen, &c.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

GUINEA EDITION of BEETHOVEN'S SONATAS.—Messrs. BOOSEY and SONS have much pleasure in announcing the publication of a new and handsome volume, bound in cloth, price 10s. 6d. each,
BEETHOVEN'S SONATAS for the PIANOFORTE.
Edited by W. Dorrell, Mus. Bac. Royal Academy of Music, with Introduction by Dr. J. F. Macfarren, and Portrait by John Jabez Edwin Mayall, F.R.P.S. The Portrait is from the most perfect and correct of any that has appeared in England. It will be found a handsome and valuable addition to the best pages. Orders received by all Musicsellers.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

NEW GALOP by ASCHER, Messrs. BOOSEY and SONS have just published a New Galop Brilliante by W. Ascher, entitled
LE CORSAIRE GALOP BRILLANT.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street; and all Musicsellers.

TWO NEW PIECES BY HERR MAUSS, Published this day, Two Pieces by this popular Composer, entitled
LE CORSAIRE GALOP BRILLANT.
NOURMAHAL DE LA FANTASIE WALTZ.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street; and all Musicsellers.

THE GERMAN CONCERTINA.—Published this day (Oct. 1), a NEW and CHEAP EDITION of the GERMAN CONCERTINA, including all the popular Music from "Lurline," "Bohemian Girl," "Rose of Castile," &c., specially published this day, Boosey's Shilling Tutor for the German Concertina, 1s., post-free, 13 stamps.—Hullo-street, London.

BOOSEYS' PART-SONG MISCELLANY is now published, complete, in a handsome volume, cloth, price 2s., containing 24 original Part-songs, with full (ad) Pianoforte Accompaniments by Meyerbeer, Verdi, Mori, Hatton, Linley, Henry Smart.
The above may be had separately, 2d. each.

PIANOFORTE RECREATIONS, the best and most popular collection of music for juvenile performers ever published. Price 1s. each number.
FIRST SERIES.—SATANELLA.
1. The Power of Love. 2. The Slaves Prayer.
SECOND SERIES.—DINORAH.
1. The Shepherd's Prayer. 2. Dinorah (canzonet).
3. Bazile Marie.
THIRD SERIES.—MARITANA.
1. M'appari tutt amor. 2. Scrvanne Duet.
3. Drinking Song. 4. Scrvanne Song.
FOURTH SERIES.—CHARLEY'S AUNT.
1. Beautiful Star. 2. Charley's Aunt Dance.
3. Good News from Home.
4. Were we coming, Sister Mary; and 5. I'm off to Charleston.
Wait for the Waggon.
FIFTH SERIES.—DANCE MUSIC.
1. Mand Valse. 2. Mand Quadrille.
3. Kensington Polka. 4. Portsmouth Galop.
BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street.

MUSIC HALF PRICE and Postage-free. Messrs. ROBERT COCKS and CO. supply any part of the Kingdom on receipt of postage-stamps to half the published price. Catalogues gratis. Country Musicsellers supplied at half trade prices.—Messrs. KUHE, DITTMARS & CO., 23, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, London, W.

NEW MUSIC.

HENRY FARMER'S MERRY MIDNIGHT POLKA. Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s., post-free.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

HENRY FARMER'S HYDE PARK GRAND REVIEW MARCH. Illustrated in Colours by Brandard. Price 4s., post-free.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW PIANOFORTE TUTOR.—"The most useful and best instruction-book we have seen." Price 2s., post-free.—JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S RIFLE GALOP, splendidly illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s.; Duets, 4s. 6d.; Orchestra, 2s. 6d.—JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, Wholesale Warehouse, 6, Milk-street, E.C.

VIOLETTE, I DREAM OF THEE! Ballad, Words and Music composed by Stephen Adams. Price 3s. Can be had either in the key of A or C.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

C. H. R. MARRIOTT'S NEW VALSE, "JESSICA." Illustrated in Colours by BRANDARD. Price 4s., post-free. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

BIRD, FLY FROM HENCE ("Voglein mein Sein"). List for Voice and Piano. By J. R. MOLLOY. Words, 2s. 6d.—JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street, E.C.

WILLIAMS'S 100 DANCES FOR THE PIANOFORTE. Price 1s., post-free. Arranged by HUGH SHIMMELL. Price 1s. 6d. each.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

MERRILY OVER THE SNOW (Key of C), By A. SCHLOSSER. Also, in Key of A, for Contralto or Soprano. Price 3s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

THE QUEEN OF THE SEA. The popular Song, by MOLLOY. Words, Price 2s. 6d.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL GALOP. By the Composer of "Garibaldi's Grand March." Price 4s. Orchestra, 2s.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside, and 6, Milk-street, E.C.

NEW SONG.—OLD FRIENDS AND OTHER DAYS. Composed by W. VINCENT WALLACE. The Words by Longfellow. Illustrated with a Photograph by means of the highly-successful Opera of "Lurline." It is written in the key of C, and is published for Voice and Pianoforte (middle voice).—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG.—THE DREAM OF OTHER DAYS. Composed by Lieut.-Colonel BROUN, Grenadier Guards. The Words by Longfellow. Illustrated with a Photograph of "The Dream of Other Days" still unique there all. Music Pages in singing it with the Pianoforte accompaniment.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65 Oxford-street.

NEW SONGS, Words by J. E. CARPENTER, Music by Stephen ADAMS. Price 4s. each.
The extraordinary success of the "Songs of the Season" has suggested the publication of a Cheap Edition, in the key of F, for the use of Amateurs, at the price of 2s. No. 1, "Only a Rose." No. 2, "Only a Rose" (for the Mezzo-Soprano). No. 3, "Only a Rose" (for the Contralto). No. 4, "I'm a Rose" (for the Mezzo-Soprano). No. 5, "I'm a Rose" (for the Contralto). Each song bound in handsome and pleasing—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NOTICE.—FRANK MORI'S New Ballad, "Love's Dream Soon Fades," is now published (Words by Desmond Ryan), price 2s. 6d.
HUTCHINGS and SUTCH, 62, New Bond-street.

DOWN BY THE SEA. New Song by J. W. CHERRY. Price 2s. 6d. The most popular song of the day. HUTCHINGS and SUTCH, 62, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S New PIECE, FOUR LES ATTRAITS, A most effective success by this popular composer. Price 4s. HUTCHINGS and SUTCH, 62, New Bond-street.

SNOW-WHITE BLOSSOMS. New Ballad, Composed by GEORGE BARKER. Sung at the London and Provincial Concerts with immense success. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S QUEEN OF THE HARVEST WALTZ. This popular waltz is now ready. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s. Solo or Duet.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NOTICE.—The SONGS and BALLADS (unrivalled edition) so sung by the BUCKLEY SERENADERS are only published by HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S MARIANA VALSE. The valse of the season. Price 4s.; free for stamps.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S "GREAT EASTERN" POLKA. 2nd edition of this popular Polka now ready. Price 3s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

TINNEY'S EVELYN VALSE. Price 4s. Another success by this popular Dance Writer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ROBIN HOOD, the new and highly-successful Opera, by G. A. MACFARREN, at Her Majesty's Theatre. Complete Edition for Pianoforte Solo, 20s. Regent-street.

LURLINE, the new Opera, by W. V. WALLACE. Publisher—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

ROSE OF CASTILLE, the most popular Opera, by W. V. BALFE. Publishers—CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE BUTTERFLY-HATCH: a Lyric of Alma Mater. Written by R. B. MONTGOMERY; the music by J. L. HATTON. Price 2s. 6d.—Regent-street.

WHAT IS LIFE? New Song by J. L. HATTON; the Poetry by MRS. ALFRED HUNTER. Price 2s. 6d.—Regent-street.

HATTON'S SONGS.—All the best Songs by this popular Composer, including those under the pseudonyms of F. C. Osprey, are published for the proprietor, C. Gilpin, 21, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE, 14s. per Month, Pianofortes of all classes for HIRE, at the lowest terms. Pianofortes to hire on the three years' system, with option of purchase if approved. Pianofortes by Broadwood, Collard, Cramer, Cornish and Co., &c.—JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS, 18, Wigmore-street, W.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES for Hire or Sale.—OETZMANN and PULLAN have a large choice of new and secondhand Pianofortes, Cottage and Grand, for Sale or Hire, also all descriptions of Musical Instruments and small requisites. Pianofortes, in elegant Walnut-case Pianoforte, in universal use throughout the Kingdom, for Hire, or may be had on the three years' system.—OETZMANN and PULLAN, 27, Hampstead-road, and 131, Regent-street.

WHEATSTONE'S HARMONIUMS are the most celebrated, combining the full organ tone, pleasing flute-like quality, and great variety of expression, with the utmost compactness and portability. Prices from £5, double manuals from £8. Lists free.—WHEATSTONE and CO., 20, Conduit-street, Regent-street, W.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price Fifty Guineas.—This handsome and elegant cottage pianoforte (Three Strings and the Fullest Grand Pianoforte Compass) is the result of many years' experience to combine the greatest amount of power, and to stand perfectly in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description; the tone is sound, full, and rich; and the power equal to that of a Boudoir Grand. The case is of the most elegant description, in rosewood, with handsome panels, trichord throughout, and check repeater action; has been in practice for Two Years. Chappell and Co. respectfully invite the attention of the public, the profession, and the trade to the Foreign Model Pianoforte, which, for Exportation to all tropical countries, has proved itself unequalled. Each instrument is packed in a case lined with tin, and will be warranted, and (if desired) exchanged within twelve months of the purchase.—50, New Bond-street, London.

HARMONIUMS at CHAPPELL'S.—The HARMONIUM is the most perfect instrument of the kind that emanates in tone; and the most elegant in appearance. Prices from 10 guineas to 150 guineas. A Lithographed List of Harmoniums, with full descriptive lists on application.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE PATENT DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 60 guineas. Illustrations of Harmoniums of every description, from 10 guineas to CHAPPELL and CO., New Bond-street; or 15, George-street, Hanover-square.

TO PURCHASERS of PIANOFORTES.—CHAPPELL and CO. have a large Stock of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, Kirkman, &c., &c., at very reduced prices. Also, New Instruments of every description, for Sale or Hire.—50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE.—Nearly 10 nett guineas each; as good as new, as greatly reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, New Bond-street.

EVANS'S COTTAGE HARMONIUM at £6 6s. This is a very handsome little piano-shape instrument, with Octaves, and a soft, subdued agreeable quality of tone, designed expressly for private use in small rooms.
BOOSEY and SONS, Manufactories, 24, Holles-street, London.

EVANS'S HARMONIUM at £10 10s., is in the same handsome piano-shape case, and possesses the most pleasing quality of tone to persons to an Evans's instrument.
BOOSEY and SONS, Manufactories, 24, Holles-street, London.

EVANS'S ENGLISH HARMONIUMS. An Illustrated Catalogue of the whole of these Instruments, with Testimonials, Prices, and Terms of Purchase, may be had free on application to 24, HOLLES-STREET, London, W., or any Musicseller in the Manufactories, BOOSEY and SONS, Hullo-street, London.

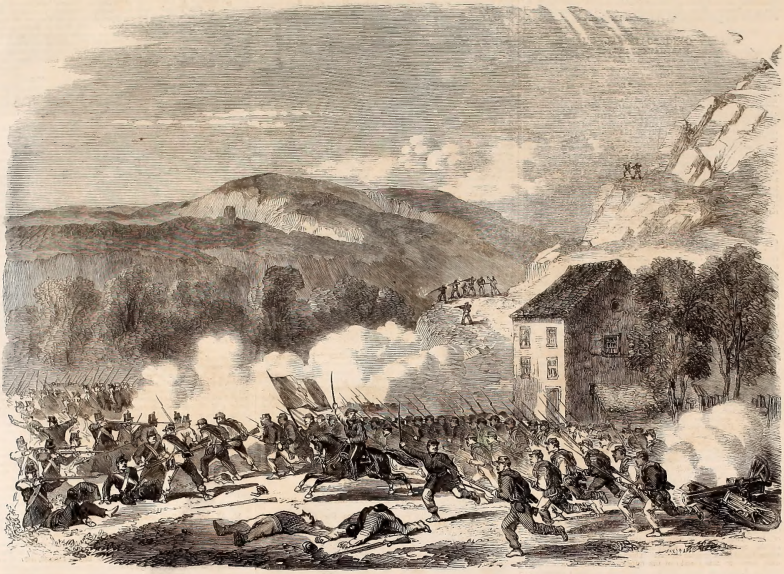
PIANOFORTES for HIRE, Carriage-free, with the option of purchase. An extensive assortment of every description, by the most eminent makers.
FRACHEY, Maker, 73, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C.

NO CHIMNEY WANTED for Rickets and Hale's Improved Cooking Stoves. Hale, Hale and Hale, and Shops, and where the ventilation is defective, a small pipe is all that is required. Illustrated Lists free.

F. and C. OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, W., Crystal Glass Chandeliers, for Gas and Candles, Table Glass, Glass Shades, Globes, and Lustres. Table Glass and Glass Vases in Ornamental Glass, English and Foreign, suitable for Presents. Mess. Osler and Fawdrey, Manufacturers, Broad-street, Birmingham. Established 1807.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, TEA, and TOILET SERVICES, Specimens of new and rare Patterns. Also a beautiful variety of every description of CUT TABLE GLASS.
Furnishers—Superior Quality and Moderate Prices.
ALFRED B. PEARCE,
23, Ludgate-hill, and 27, Cornhill (Mid 1760).

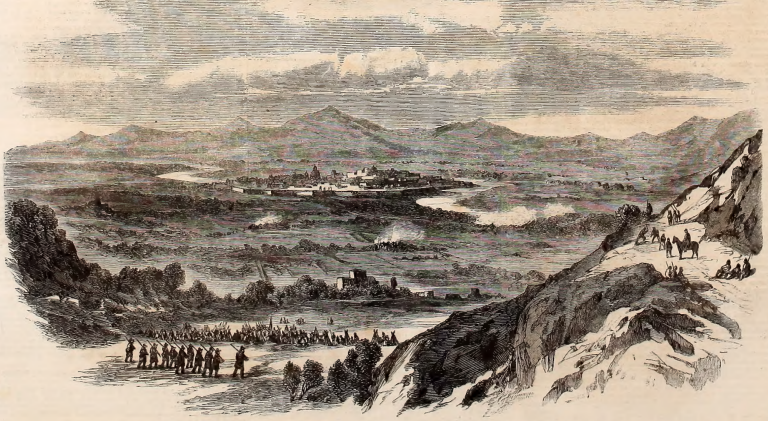


J. MAPLE and CO.'S NEW CARPET ROOMS are NOW OPEN.
Magnificent Designs.
No. 85, to 96, pay. 1882.

DINING and DRAWING ROOM CURTAINS.
All the newest Art Colours, patterns, Anti-Dyes.
J. MAPLE and CO.

DINING and DRAWING ROOM FURNITURE.
The Regents Easy Chair, price 3½ Gns.
The Queen of Wide Chair, price 7½.
The Victoria Couch, price 7½ Gns.
The Princess Couch, price 10½ Gns.
The Prince of Wales Couch, price 14 guineas.
J. MAPLE and CO.'S Superior Quality.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.
Containing the prices and terms required for completely furnishing a house of any size or class.
This is the largest and most convenient furnishing establishment in the Kingdom.
J. MAPLE and CO.,
145, 146, 147, 148, Tottenham-court-road;
1, 2, 3, 4, Grafton-place.



J. MAPLE and CO.'S SUPERIOR HOUSEHOLD LINENS.
Families requiring Linen should inspect this stock. Get patterns, wash and compare; the superiority of make will then be apparent. Special attention is directed to the following:—Linen Sheeting, 2 yards wide. Magnificent tablecloths, three yards square. Linen Huckaback Towels, 1s. 6d. per pair; very good. Linen Sheeting at 1s. per yard.

THE BATTLE ON THE VOLTURNO.—THE FINAL REPULSE OF THE NEAPOLITANS.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, FRANK VIZETELLY.

CAPUA, FROM MONTE ST. ANGELO.

THE Sketch from which our Engraving is taken was made by our Special Artist in Italy shortly before the battle on the Volturno took place. In the field in the foreground is bivouacked a battalion of Garibaldians serving as supports to the advanced line thrown out by the national army. The houses burning in the middle distance had been occupied by the Garibaldians, but the Neapolitans coming up in force compelled the few troops that held them to fall back. Skirmishing is going on at the extreme right, on both banks of the Volturno. Capua stands on the left bank of the Volturno, which forms so extensive a curve as to surround at least two-thirds of the town. Its fortifications, first erected in 1231 by Fuscio Florentino, were reconstructed and enlarged by Vauban on the modern system. They were remodelled and strengthened with earthworks in 1855, under the direction of a Russian officer. Cupan ranks as one of the three military stations of the first class in Sicquitian kingdom.

VIEW OF CAPUA, FROM MONTE ST. ANGELO.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, FRANK VIZETELLY.

CHELSEA CONGREGATIONAL CHAPEL, MARKHAM SQUARE.

This chapel, built by the congregation of the Rev. J. Clifford Hooper, has been recently opened for public worship, and is the only place of worship for the Independent body in Chelsea. The site is admirable in very prominent position, covering a large piece of ground at the head of Markham-square, formerly a very extensive garden, which forms from the King's-road and other parts of the district.

The form of the building is slightly cruciform, having transepts projecting about five feet from the body of the chapel. The prominent feature of the exterior is a tower and spire rising from the west side of the northern transept to the height of 120 feet, the proportions are well conceived and the effect good. The style of the building is in the second period of the Gothic—that as regards the general design, but not the execution, is considered to be superior to any chapel of the kind belonging to the Congregationalists in the metropolis. The chapel will accommodate 1150 adults, and there are lofty and extensive school rooms calculated to seat 320 children. The building has been erected from a design by John Turnley, Esq., of Bloomsbury, and the contractors were Messrs. Myers, of Lambeth, to all of whom great praise is due for the beauty of the conception and the stability of the structure.

JOSE GUELL Y RENTE.

Cuba has given birth to a considerable number of persons distinguished for their intelligence, talent, and wisdom. Amongst the foremost of the sons of Cuba is José Guell y Rente, a man of letters, a statesman, and historian. Don Pablo Guell y Fuelo, his father, belonged to one of the oldest families in Catalonia; and Doña Dorotea Rente, of the Perez Barroso, his mother, was a descendant of the first settlers in Cuba. Disciplined at the College of St. Columba, Havannah, in the study of philosophy and the laws of his country, he finished his education at the University of Barcelona, where, at the age of twenty, he received the degree of Doctor of Laws.

On his return to his native country he published his first poetical essay, under the title of "Amargura del Corazon" ("The Sorrow of the Heart"). Although irregular in versification, it has nevertheless been deemed worthy of translation by Spanish critics, as it is full of poetry in the immortal Dante. They breathe the spirits of soothing melancholy, and exhibit considerable refinement of thought and power of description. Later in life Don Guell y Rente, with such versification and knowledge of the world more profound, entranced his readers with his "Lagrimas de Corazon" ("Tears of the Heart"), a poem worthy, in the most touching language, the story of his love for the lady who is now his spouse, her Royal Highness the Infanta of Spain, Doña Josefa Dominga de Bourbon, sister of his Majesty the King. This work has stamped its author as the most exalted of our Castilian poetic celebrities. It has justly appreciated by the Spanish Academy, and held him in the highest esteem.

Besides this he gained him also the grateful appreciation of prose-readers by the production of the following works:—"Christian Philosophic and Political Thoughts," 1 vol.; "Lucrecia," 1 vol.; "Virginia Ancecsa," a novel; "A Comparison between Isabella I. and Isabella II.," "The Story of a Grief-stricken Soul;" and "The Granddaughter of Kings." He is at present preparing for the press a "History of the Conquest of America."

THE PROMOTER LIFE ASSURANCE OFFICES.

The offices recently erected for the Promoter Life Assurance Company are situated at 29, Fleet-street, and contain a frontage of about twenty feet by forty feet deep, and the whole of the front of the new building is constructed in Portland stone, except where inlaid with granite and marble. The capitals to the pilasters and piers are richly and beautifully carved, each to a different design. Below are fruit festoons, and the keys are composed of bunches of flowers or fruit form the keystones of arches; the sunbirds of the arches are elaborately carved, and from the centre spandrils on the second floor spring coved figures bearing the second projection of the upper stories of the building, which project boldly forward. The centre window in the said story has bold trusses, and the window is surmounted with a circular pediment, with a finely-executed shell in the centre. The ground-floor columns are to be supported upon polished granite. The first-floor window piers are inlaid with similar granite, with squares of Alpine-green marble set diagonally in the centre of each. The central attic window is supported by richly-polished granite shafts, with richly-carved capitals; rings or panels of alternately red polished granite and green marble occupy the space over the ground-floor windows, and set forth the title and foundation of the office (1870 in Arabian letters in gold; these rings are supported by shafts of polished granite inlaid with green marble. The spandrils of the ground-floor arches are filled in with polished granite and green marble set in geometrical designs. The panels under the first-floor windows and carved cornice and on the upper story are formed by slabs of polished granite projecting from the strongcourse are divided into slabs by the pyras of the cornice, on which are fixed enriched antefixæ. The cornice over the ground-floor window is decorated with modillions and richly carved blocks. A roof of peculiar form, surmounted with an ornamental cresting, forms an attractive feature in the elevation. Internally the ground-floor comprises the public office (the sides of which are decorated with pilasters, with highly-enriched capitals, friezes, and cornice) and the secretary's office. The basement contains accommodation for the porter, strong rooms, and lavatories for the clerks. The first floor contains large board-room, doctor's room, and secretary's room. The third and fourth stories are devoted for residential purposes. The ground floor is constructed on Barrett's fireproof principle. The public office is heated by hot water. The lobbies and hall are tesselated tiles. Mr. William G. Bartlett, of Pinners' Hall, Old Broad-street, is the architect; and Mr. William, the builder. The works were executed by Mr. Forsyth, of Hampstead, under the superintendance of the architect.

REVIEW AT CAPE TOWN BY PRINCE ALFRED.

During His Royal Highness's stay at Cape Town he was met by his Royal Highness to an inspection and review of the regular and volunteer forces forming the Cape Town garrison—of which we give an illustration on page 365. The following account of the review is abridged from the Cape Argus report —

On Saturday July 28, the troops assembled on the parade-ground at ten o'clock, and marched thence to the racecourse at Green Point, where a piece of ground had been marked out for the review. The regular troops of her Majesty's 91th Regiment, Royal Engineers, Royal Artillery, and Cape Mounted Riflemen, and the following volunteer corps—Cape Royal Rifles, Scotch Company, Sappers and Miners, Tidal's Field Battery of Artillery, and the Commissariat Department, under the personal superintendence of Commissary Fox, Deputy Assistant, was commanded by his Excellency Lieut.-General Wynyard, C.B. The Prince left Government House on horseback, accompanied by his Excellency the Governor, Major Cowell, R.E., Colonel Travers, Captain Porter, Lord Charles Scott, Captain Christmas, M.C., and Mr. Duff. His Royal Highness was received with the most hearty acclamations both in the streets and along the whole line of road. On arriving at the racecourse the distinguished party, attended by Colonel Bell, the Prince's Military Staff, rode down the line, his Royal Highness particularly inspecting the volunteer corps. The Prince then took up a position on the southern side of the ground where the Royal standard was waving, and the troops marched past. The scene was very animated. Cape Town had poured forth, seemingly, the whole of its inhabitants. Everybody was there, from the beauty reclining on silken carriage-cushions or sitting upright on her pillory, enjoying the fresh sea-breeze after two alights' successive dancing, and trusting to the roar of the cannon and rattle of the musketry to drown the humming air of that last waltz which will ring in her ears, to honest "Doortje," the black washerwoman, who for this day leaves her tubs and seaponds to gaze her fill on the mooi Heer here! ; from the dashing "sparkler" in blue and silver, "from spur to plume a star of tournament," or the regular in his yellow and patent leathers, to "Jack," the cooley, who enveloping his woolly head in a bran-new crimson dock, rushes to ask his shout to the cheering, and his happy, grinning face tells general hilarity. The troops having marched past in slow and quick time, and the cavalry and artillery having passed at a canter, the General commanding proceeded to carry out the plan of a sham-fight previously arranged. The enemy was supposed to have effected a landing on another Bay, and some cavalry and rifles were thrown out to reconnoitre. They were driven in, fighting and supported by two guns, on the main body, and it appeared as though the enemy were in a fair way of marching on Cape Town and delivering our right flank in the rear. Suddenly the Royal Artillery horsemen all waved proudly; the volunteers made another effort "against fearful odds, for the ashes of their fathers and the temples of their gods," and a fresh battery appeared on the scene.

Inch by inch and foot by foot the ground was contested, but the steady column pressed on, the rifles skirmished on the right, right on to the Green Point Common, with eye and ears the cavalry, their sabres glittering high above the dust, charged home on the left, and the Royal Artillery were in the right, and across the lake was seen the other column advancing. Another tremendous effort, one more charge, and a general advance effected—the enemy were driven back in confusion to the bay—there was a wild cheer and a rush, and our troops were victorious. The rocks swarmed with citizens, who greeted the victorious troops with acclamations of the waves. Indeed, so complete was the defeat of the enemy, that when the sham was resolved into reality by them and Mr. His Royal Highness expressed himself highly pleased with the whole affair, and complimented the commanding officers on the efficient appearance of their men.

The following is a copy of the general order:—"General advance:—The enemy's right, right, right, are thrown back by cavalry and guns; cavalry and guns to the front, guns in action, limber up and retire to flanks of present line; right flank column, rear of the right volunteer rifles in front of the left; squares on leading divisions; cavalry to the front—enemy's left, right, right and ground lost in front, with front from both flanks; rides deploy and ground lost in front, with front from both flanks by cavalry; echelon of companies of the whole reforming, the right guns and cavalry in support; company squares, en echelon from the right, right, right; the enemy's left driven in on flanks of volunteer rifles with two guns; volunteer rifles in line on left division, 50th, and 91th in rear, left in front; volunteer rifles to skirmish as a battalion, supports and reserves; guns fall back on the 50th; two guns at this time will be detached to the right in charge of the Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, and Volunteer Engineers, and on reaching the lighthouse, watch an opportunity to open fire on the enemy's flank. By no means the flank volunteer rifles driven in through the 50th, which must be deployed with guns and cavalry on right; the enemy's left, right, right, charge by mounted cavalry, cavalry to pursue; line advance, charge of infantry, file-firing again, cease firing, volunteer rifles to the front again; the whole advance and take up position on the beach, the volunteer rifles amongst the rocks, the guns under cover, the 50th flanking the main battery; the cavalry well in rear; cease firing; the 50th again deployed to the right in order to cut off the enemy's retreat, with cavalry on flank, covered by the rifles in skirmishing order, to effect which the General will himself lead the 50th from the centre order. The right bridge under the command of Colonel Staunton, the left brigade under the command of Colonel Bell, the whole under the command of Lieutenant-General Wynyard.

THE RUSSIAN GOLD MEDAL OF MERIT.

His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia has conferred upon Mr. Charles Frodsham of the Strand, London, the Grand Gold Medal of Merit (weighing 32 sovereigns), in testimony of the services which he has rendered to the Imperial Navy by the production of chronometers which facilitated and contributed so much to the success of the great Russian survey. In addition to this honour, the same gentleman has received, the Grand Gold Medal of Honour, awarded to him by the Emperor of the French for the superiority of his manufactures.

"MY LAST LOOK AT SICILY."

Under this heading our Special Artist in South Italy has forwarded us a sketch taken from the deck of the steamer between Reggio and San Giovanni, and which we have engraved on page 366. The view herefrom is exceedingly fine. On the opposite coast is the crescent-shaped city of Messina; while Etna is seen to the right, and a little above it, on its left, the low promontory of Faro, with its tower and lighthouse, and, nearly on a line therewith, Scylla, whilst dimly seen in the distance is the little fiery rock Stromboli,—forming a splendid panorama. The quay is broad, and is flanked all along by a handsome row of houses; but, instead of these dwellings resembling any other series of human habitations which Europe presents, they are remarkable for allowing much more gorgeous appearance. Though very low, they are adorned with columns and pilasters, in thickness and massiveness more resembling the proportions of lofty and magnificent abodes four or five times their height, while the utmost invariably prevails in their finishings, as to their tops and roofs, if the word finish can be applied at all in the description. The earthquakes with which Messina has been at different times so severely visited afford the explanation of this strange irregularity and form in the edifices. The houses of a lofty character suffered so much in that of 1783 that I understand the upper stories of such residences were never rebuilt, and the recent constructions have been erected with a view to stamp any fresh shocks which may arrive. At the same time grandeur and show have not been entirely forgotten on the part of those whose wealth and condition would, under ordinary circumstances, have led to its more and inhabit more lofty dwellings."

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT OTTAWA.

The proceedings of the Prince of Wales at Ottawa have been duly recorded in this Journal, and last week's Number contained an Engraving from a Sketch by our special Artist in Canada, of his Royal Highness laying the corner-stone of the Parliament Buildings in course of construction in that city. In our present Impression we give two more Illustrations in connection with the Prince's visit to Ottawa—namely, the Lumberers' Regatta and the Prince Descending a Rapid on a Timber-raft. Of the Toronto Globe gives the following details of these two interesting incidents :—

DESCENT OF A TIMBER-SLIDE BY HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS.

Before the Prince left the temporary home of the Parliament Buildings he had paid the Royal party took horse and rode, in plain clothes, to the Chaudière, where the Prince was to witness the descent of the beautiful lumberers' raft, containing no less than nineteen thousand feet of deal boards, which now forms a portal to it.

At the end exciting incident here occurred. Dismounting, the whole of the party, including the Earl of St. Germans, walked along a narrow path to the edge of the rapid, immediately at the head of the chaudière. A slide, everybody should know, is an inclined plane, with several feet of water running down it, and sometimes a stream of logs; the rush-ons pass without damage, thus avoiding waterfalls like the Chaudière, where they would be broken and the timber injured. A crib consists of sticks of timber, each about 12 inches square, a small half-way to feet wide, the longitudinal sticks having pieces across them to tie them, as it were, together. The cribs when ready launched, pass down the slide with great velocity, the water rushing over the forward part and sometimes dashing over the men upon it. On each side of the slide on this occasion were thousands of people, and the numerous bridges which crossed it were alive with human beings. When the Royal crib got under way and shot past the party below them these cheered and waved their handkerchiefs, and the most intense excitement prevailed; for, although there is really little danger, yet accidents sometimes happen, and in every case the passengers who try this mode of locomotion for the first time have a disagreeable sensation when the first jire and stand firm, lest the vibration and the shocks which the crib always receives should make them lose their footing. And when Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, and the gentlemen of his suite found how much greater than usual was the interest taken in the running of the crib, Royal Highness quickly went with both the Prince and his suite to the Chaudière.

THE LUMBERERS' REGATTA.

"There they found themselves surrounded by a hundred birch canoes, manned by lumberers in red shirts and white trousers. The Prince got into one alone—the rest of his suite and the newspaper writers into others and all were paddled to a beautiful island in the centre of the river, where they landed, and, while the Prince, &c., strolled about, or busied themselves with sketching the lovely scenery. After a short stay the Prince came to the water's edge with a fleet of canoes appeared, manned by half a dozen gentlemen of the city, in blue shirts and white trousers, and white caps, stepping the while in the canoes to a large scow, whence the canoes which intended racing were to start. Clambering to its deck by the assistance of the boat's crew, who had to lift him aboard, we found the Prince in the midst of lumberers. Now were the arrangements at all exclusive, but all who chose went on board too, and the lumberers themselves did not think the Prince was not abused, and that not the slightest inconvenience resulted. Six canoes started for the race, and for the second time I was left behind the third. The course was probably a mile each way. The lumberers paddled well, magnificently even. There must have been 2000 people in small boats on the river, and more in the hill above. Steamboats which were playing about, 20,000 on the heights on each shore, and when the winning canoe, the first which had come in, and, waving its hands, applauding, they all participated in his evident delight, and took up the applause in a tremendous chorus.'

The lumberers are thus described by another correspondent :— "They are a race of men peculiar to Canada. In the depth of the winter, before the frost has departed, they go into the forests, and to fell the huge white and red pines, which are drawn out of the snow by oxen and piled in vast heaps, ready till the return of spring gives them an opportunity of floating them down in immense rafts and masses, which all the streams, in May, for miles and miles, bring down to the pine-logs over cliffs and dragging them down ravines the lumberers before the thaw sets in manage to collect along the banks by means of immense booms. On the Ottawa and its numerous some millions of cubic feet of timber, and when the ice-bound streams are free once more, they commence their labours in right earnest. Long joined together in huge, rough, uncouth rafts, the logs are set adrift, and, with a few poles and sharp oars to guide them, the lumberers, armed in charge down currents and rapids of deep rivers swollen and flowing fiercely with the waters from the melting snow. In the midst of

THE DEMOLITION OF OLD WESTMINSTER BRIDGE.

It seems to us now strange that until 1736 (not much more than a century ago), notwithstanding the inconvenience of old London Bridge, the increase of trade, and the great extension of the west end of the metropolis, that it was only then that a determination was come to to span the Thames at Westminster. As far back as the reign of James I., reign of Queen Elizabeth, and, after that, in the reigns of James II., the two Charles's, and George I., the matter was greatly agitated. Great opposition was, however, on all these occasions made. The people in the City, with a so-called and narrow-minded jealousy, thought that a bridge at Westminster would be the ruin of their trade; notwithstanding a bridge at Westminster, by the peculiarity of its construction, the extreme London Bridge, by the peculiarity of its construction, the extreme narrowness of its roadway, and other causes, was quite proverbial. Besides for the ease of the inhabitants in the heart of the metropolis—for the ease of the inhabitants in the heart of the metropolis—before the ancient bridge stood for more than six hundred years—the foundation of its youthful and more symmetrical neighbour was laid at Westminster by the Earl of Pembroke on the 29th of January, 1738, about two years having been occupied in preparing the necessary excavations of the bridge. These were laid on a solid mass of gravel and boulders at the bottom of the Thames, in the part in which lies at the bottom of the Thames, in the part in which lies at the bottom of the Thames, in the part in which lies

THE BATTLE ON THE VOLTURNO.—BATTERY WHERE THE NEAPOLITANS BURNT THE WOUNDED GARIBALDIANS.—FROM A SKETCH BY T NAST.—SEE PAGE 395.

THE BATTLE ON THE VOLTURNO—FIGHT IN THE FIELD NEAR ST. ANGELO.—FROM A SKETCH BY T NAST.—SEE PAGE 380.

THE BATTLE ON THE VOLTURNO.—THE NEAPOLITAN TROOPS PASSING ALONG A RAVINE.—FROM A SKETCH BY T. MAST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Relics of the Past.

CURIOUS MUSICAL INSTRUMENT OF THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

PRYING among the untold treasures of our national manuscripts, we lately chanced upon a remarkable drawing of a curious musical instrument, represents an elaborate but nameless instrument of the Elizabethan era. This drawing has attached to it a specification and memorandum of agreement between the designer, Randolph Bull, musician and goldsmith of London, on the one part, and Richard Stapers, governor of the merchants' company trading to the Levant, for and on the behalf of the said merchants, on the other part.

The document sets forth that the said merchants desire to have "a very rare instrument of extraordinary kind, and endowed with various new inducement of contentment and delight, as for the unity motions, both musical and of other special use, as for the variety and multiplicity of many melodies it is to be sent from her Majesty to any Prince or Potentate whatsoever;" and in consequence of this fame which hath been reported to Randolph Bull, the said Randolph Bull has devised the one which is delineated in the drawing and described in the contract. In height, this instrument, which our Engraving shows in its miniature, is stated as twelve feet and a half or thereabouts; the breadth, five feet and a half; and the depth, four feet and a half: the whole stand and supported six inches from the ground by five small pillars of brass.

The principal outward features of this work may be thus briefly described:—The basement is of carved oak. Above it is a panel-arch, "garnished with every curious pointed work of gold and other rich colours," on each side of it no two smaller panel-arches, with sixteen pinnacles, and crowned with a pyramid, on the front over each appears the drawing. After the second fashion, which is of oak, carved, with mortise and rebate work, there is a keyboard, the purpose of which was probably to direct and control the sounds afterwards described. It us, however, is not described, nor is there any explanation of the dial-plate which stands above, and has twenty-four hours marked upon it, but "the shutting in of the pipes" on each side of the dial and the it, but "the shutting in of the pipes" on each side of the dial and the right Corinthian pillars are to be of oak, carved and gilded. After Corinthian pillars are to be of oak, carved and gilded. After another frieze carved in like manner as the four towers, one in each corner, each tower supported by sixteen pillars, and the whole surrounded by a cage of carved work. In the centre of the platform whereon the towers stand is the part named "The Presence," displaying a figure of Queen Elizabeth, adorned with appropriate ornaments, enamelled, and "the eyes cut and set, to the number of forty-five. Encircling her rubies, cut and set, to the number of forty-five. Encircling her Majesty are eight other figures, formed in the manner of the first and presently explain. Above the next frieze are the Royal arms embossed, painted, and gilded, and on each side a trumpeter, above the next is a head enclosed with mechanical motion to announce the hour; and crowning the fabric is a cock in the centre, with a pyramid on each side—finished with a gilded crown.

The appended document goes on to state, "There shall be placed in the lower part of the said instrument three several strong tymbrells, and such like musical bodies, with a very strong, sufficient motion of wheels and pinions, and all other engines and necessary instruments and helps, very well wrought, and sufficient to drive and move the same for the hours from time to time, for the space of six hours together, whensoever the wheels and pinions shall be applied to the purposes; and that there shall be contained within the said instrument a board called a soundboard, with certain instruments or engines called his barrel and keys board, with certain instruments or engines called his barrel and keys, and five-and-twenty of pipes—that is, one open principal unison recorder, octavo principal, and a flute, besides a shaking stop, a drum, and a nightingale." By means of the bellows, the keys, barrel, and other "engines" moving the said bellows, the pipes are to sound forth musical airs or for solo songs and dances, or for accompaniment on the keys, and are to continue playing for six hours "without any interruption, or ceasing, or discord," at the pleasure of the person directing the said instrument, and shall in the same way sound the shaking-stop, the drum, and the nightingale, and every one of them severally for six hours together; and the will of the director as to the functions of the instrument as a barrel organ, and the description would be tedious, is duly added the names of the tunes played. Those shall belong to it as a timepiece are set forth as follows:—"Within the middle part of the instrument, and behind the dial and the pipes there shall be placed and contained nine several motions, very strong and artificially wrought, which shall perform from time to time the several actions and motions following, viz.:—The motion belonging to a clock, shall drive, make to go and move the true course of the sun and of the moon, and shall show the age of the moon truly every day, with her increasing and decreasing; and it shall also show the reigning planets every day very truly. The second motion shall move an armed man, who shall be placed on one of the towers, and shall strike the quarter of the hour upon a fine, loud, and sounding bell. The third motion shall move an armed man in another of the towers, and shall strike the twelve hours of the day duly in their time upon a greater bell very loud. The fourth motion shall make the cock to crow very lond every hour, and as often as the director of the said instrument shall appoint; and the same cock shall be made strong, of metal, and shall be very artificially wrought, and made to flutter with his wings. The fifth motion shall be in the lower part of the instrument, and shall be a motion that be in the lower part of the instrument, and shall be a motion that shall be to the five pipes with the bells, and shall be made to play great barrel with a chime of very sweet melodies, and shall be made to shall appose. The sixth motion shall make all the persons (that is, the eight figures above described) to go in the presence and make their obeisance to the Queen's Majesty's image, and her personage to move her hand with a reverence to every one of them as they pass before her. The seventh motion shall make the two trumpeters to lift up their trumpets to their mouths and to sound as the time the director the trumpets to their mouths and to sound as the time the director shall set them. The eighth motion shall move and open the mouth of the great head, and make the eyes thereof to move and turn, every hour at the full stroke of the clock. The ninth motion shall move or turn an hour-glass which an angel shall hold in his hand, and turn it every hour."

The rest of the document stipulates that the instrument is to be finished and delivered before the four feast days of the Nativity of our Lord next ensuing, a period only of ten months from the time when the articles were signed and sealed. The machine is guaranteed to keep in order for seven years, and the maker is to alter or amend it at the pleasure of the merchants. He is permitted also to deviate from the original plan with the sanction of a portion of them. The price is fixed at £300—nearly £3000 at the present day—part of which is to be advanced at certain specified dates, and the remainder at such time as the instrument shall be delivered at the warehouse of the company. One of the concluding stipulations is that, if there shall not be three hundred ounces of pure silver used in embellishing it, to pay his workmen at the rate of six shillings and eightpence for every ounce there may be short of this quantity. There is no record to show for this singular instrument was repaid, or how the Queen was pleased to dispose of it, if, indeed, it ever came to her disposal.

The idea of combining musical sounds with instruments for recording time is at least as old as Plato, who, in the fourth book of his Republic cites that played upon flutes the hours of the night at a time when they could not be seen on the dials. The inventor of Plato's day, it is to be remembered, invented the clepsydra, or water-clocks, in which the time was measured by the discharge of a certain quantity of water through a narrow passage from one vessel into another, in the manner of a sandglass, and indicating the hour by the height of a piece of cork, or light wood, which floated on the surface of vessel. The Byzantine Emperor Theophilus is related to have possessed "two great golden organs, embellished with precious stones and golden trees, on the right hand of the throne of the lion-clad sat and sang, the wind being conveyed to them by concealed tubes." At a later period there was invention of an organ at the Church of St. Ambrose at Milan "wherein the pipes were gilded, some of wood, some of brass, and some of white lead, which, being played upon, did express the sound of cornets, flutes, drums, and trumpets, with admirable variety and concord."

It may be doubted whether the machinery for measuring time was ever employed to produce the noise of an organ from the days of Plato till near that in which the instrument shown in our Engraving was invented. Vast improvements have been made since then in clockwork and organ-building; and the most perfect examples of both in combination are probably found in the common barrel-organ, invented by Mr. Barnum, at Paris, 1810; and the apollonicon, built by Messrs. Flight and Robson, of London, and exhibited by them in 1817.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

H. K.—Mr. Healey's clearing problem, one certainly of his most finished compositions, is under consideration.

E. J. O.—Quoting the most obscurable view of the nine problems submitted to our notice, we must pronounce No. 1 to be the best, No. 2 the next, and No. 3 the third in point of merit among the eminent stand.

Z.—Your solution of the problem you sent us is right.

Alpha.—The solution of No. 1 is 1. B to K Kt 5th; 2. P takes Kt; 3. Q to K 5th, &c.

R. Bellenden.—The first move by Black in the solution of Problem 865 should be, K takes B.

Solution of Problem No. 865 by Dr. Wormald, Mr. Healey, and Captain Jenkins.

PRIESTLY.—See the preceding number for the solution of your problem.

Solution of Problem No. 866 by the Rather Poet placed to K B 4th; 2. P takes Kt; and we beg to call attention to the fact that 1. Q to K B 4th, &c., is also mate.

Delta.—The match between Messrs. Kolisch and Schneider (the former giving the Knight) has been concluded, and has resulted in favour of Mr. Schneider, who has, we apprehend, gone to Paris.

Solutions of Problem No. 867 by Mr. Healey, Dr. Wormald, Captain Jenkins, Rev. W. Wilkinson, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. G. A. Crake, Queery, Little Dorrit, Eliza, G. O., L. S. A., Rev. J. Wayte, Rev. J. Mitford, Rev. W. Mercer, Rev. J. Bell, Rev. J. Jones, Rev. J. Compton, Rev. J. Hall, Rev. J. Hall, jun., Rev. J. Abbott, Rev. J. Boudier, Rev. Mynors, Lt. of Galway, R. H. V., A Miser, Captain, are correct. All others are wrong.

Solutions of Problem No. 868 by Mr. Healey, Dr. Wormald, Captain Jenkins, Rev. W. Wilkinson, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. G. A. Crake, Queery, Little Dorrit, Eliza, G. O., L. S. A., Rev. J. Wayte, Rev. J. Mitford, Rev. W. Mercer, Rev. J. Bell, Rev. J. Jones, Rev. J. Compton, Rev. J. Hall, Rev. J. Hall, jun., Rev. J. Abbott, Rev. J. Boudier, Rev. Mynors, Lt. of Galway, R. H. V., A Miser, Captain, are correct. All others are wrong.

PROBLEM No. 869.
By Mr. J. Gilbert.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 867.

BLACK.	WHITE.
1. Q to Q 3rd (a)	(If B moves, 2. P to Q 4th, &c.)
2. P to Q 4th, &c.	(ch), and mate next move.)
Any move
2. Kt mates.

(a) 1. P to K 4th, &c., would be met by 1. B to Q 5th, &c.

CHESS IN LONDON.

Game played at the London Chess Club between Messrs. F. Deacon and Burden.

(Bishop's Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. B.)	BLACK (Mr. F. D.)	WHITE (Mr. B.)	BLACK (Mr. F. D.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	11. K to Q sq.	Q to Q 2nd
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P	12. Kt to K 5th	Q takes Q
3. B to Q 4th	P to Q 4th	13. Q R takes Q	Q R to Q sq
4. B takes Q P	Kt takes B	14. K to B sq.	P to K 5th
5. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt takes B	(Had he played K to K 2nd, Black would
6. P takes Kt	Q takes Kt	have replied with Kt to K B 4th, followed
7. P to Q 4th	B to K 3rd	by R to K sq., and must equally have won a second Pawn.)
(After the White cannot immediately capture the K B P (if—		15.	Kt takes Q P
7. P takes P	Q to Kt 5th (ch)	16. R takes B (ch)	B takes R
8. P to Q 5th	Q takes B	17. R to Q B sq.	B to K 4th
9. P to Q 6th	Q to Q B 5th (ch)	17. E takes Kt	B takes B
10. P to Q 7th (ch)	Castles (Q R)	18. P takes B P	P takes B
9. B takes K B P	Q to K R 4th	19. R to K B 2nd	B to K 4th
10. Kt to Q B 3rd	Q to K R 4th	And wins.

INCIDENTS OF THE BATTLE ON THE VOLTURNO.

OUR Special Artists in Italy have forwarded to us several Sketches of incidents in this battle, some of which are reproduced in this week's Impression. In relation to the scene depicted on page 379 the Times correspondent writes as follows:—"I shall first speak of the left column. Besides the great road from Capua, alongside the river, there is a by road, which, leaving the main road at a little distance from the town, strikes across the country and goes straight towards the village of St. Angelo, which lies on the retreating slopes of the heights. This was chosen by the Neapolitans as the centre of their operations against this point, while they sent one column by the main road towards the right, and another to the right across country to take the village in the other flank. The by road which goes direct from Capua to St. Angelo intersects the road from Santa Maria to the river just where the road turns up to St. Angelo. A little way to guard this position a barricade was constructed a little beyond the point and armed with four guns. The weather was favourable, the sultry heat succeeding the exhalations of the country near the river is so low that every morning the exhalations of the river are followed with a white mist, which lasts till the sun is up, or even at a little distance. Besides this, the torrents which come down from the hills have excavated paths of fifteen to twenty feet in depth, very steep, and covered with brushwood, which are dry now, and serve as roads. The Neapolitans, in marching by these and taking advantage of the mist, approached quite close to the barricade, and carried it at the first onset, driving our men across the main road towards St. Angelo. Having taken this position, they pushed out and formed in an open field which lies along the road in regular order of battle. Their left had been especially successful, and drove our men from the trench over the river, and forcing them back on the heights of St. Angelo. The great column to the right upon the road had not been quite so happy as to strike a little hill commanding St. Angelo. It was at this critical moment that Garibaldi arrived. He had taken with his staff carriages at Santa Maria, and was coming on in the main road towards St. Angelo. The balls and grape were flying about, but the carriages still proceeded. When they arrived in the neighbourhood of St. Angelo they were in sight of the Neapolitans, who were drawn up there in line of battle. Fortunately, the mist that usually rises one of the torrents dimmed the view, protected a covered way. In this the carriages turned down, except the last, which was struck by a cannon ball and remained on the road. Through this mist Garibaldi advanced, revolver in hand, towards St. Angelo, and arrived just in time to give new courage to the defenders. The object was to drive away the column in the rear on the hills to the left of St. Angelo; this was easily done by throwing some skirmishers on the flank and rear of those occupied by the intruders. There was fortunately some artillery in front, which was turned to good account, but, as usual, it was the bayonet which decided the day. Neapolitans tried to perform the same flanking attack, but were beaten back, chiefly by the coolness of the Calabrese, who behaved splendidly. After three or four hours' fighting the enemy found he got the better of available men were carried forward, and the Neapolitans not only driven back from their position on the great road, but likewise the main road."

St. Angelo and Santa Maria contrast with each other the honour of having had the hardest fighting, the fact being that there was very hard fighting at both places. According to the Times correspondent, at St. Angelo the position was carried after a defence three times in Santa Maria.

The village itself, or rather the old abbey and its dependencies, which are built on the slopes of the mountain, are extremely strong, and the position and their safety would only have been compromised if the Neapolitans crossed the river in the rear. It appears the mist had the Neapolitans crossed the river in the mountain road in our rear; but the important thing in St. Angelo was to guard the main road of communication with Capua, and the works and preparations which had been prepared towards the river. This made it necessary to push the line of defence beyond the road, and thus come even to the line of defence beyond the road, and thus come even to the line of the enemy. The very difficult work which was made a barricade of sandbags, with four guns on the road from Capua to the river. And sandbags, with four guns on the road from Capua to the river. And this became a half-circular work, with the guns in front. It was twice taken by the Neapolitans, and twice retaken. Although there were, besides the Calabrese and Garibaldians, numerous defenders in this position, there were in reality very little more than 3000 men present, while the enemy were in reality very little more than 3000 men present, while the enemy were in reality very little more than 3000 men present, while the enemy

NEW BOOKS.

30, Cornhill-street, Hanover-square.

MESSRS. SAUNDERS, OTLEY, and CO. IN LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC NOTICES for OCTOBER.
THE SKELETON IN THE CUPBOARD: a Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell.
THE CHILDHOOD OF CHARLES FOX, the Founder of the Opinions from numerous Original Sources. 18s. 6d.
THE SECRET FELLOW. By the Author of "Squire and Parson." 10s. 6d.
THE LIGHTHOUSE: a Novel. Two vols. 21s.
THE CRUISE: a Novel. By S. DIMSDALE. Two vols. 21s.
WHY CATHERINE KILLED HIS WIFE. By the Author of "Paul Ferroll." 1s. 6d. (Next week.
AN AUTUMN TOUR IN SPAIN. By Mrs. Hartwell. 18s. (Next week.

Nearly ready, with numerous Illustrations.

WILLIAM HOWITT'S NEW AND POPULAR BOOK.
IN JAPAN: a Romantic Biography.
By WILLIAM HOWITT,
Author of "The Wall-flower of China," "The White Elephant," &c.
London: G. ROUTLEDGE, 2, Farringdon Street.

This day, New Edition, with Map, post 8vo, 10s.
THE HANDBOOK FOR TRAVELLERS IN SOUTH GERMANY: including the Tyrol, Bavaria, Salzburg, the Austrian Empire, Prussia, and Switzerland. With Maps, Plans, &c. By KARL BAEDEKER. Translated by JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

Second Edition, with Portrait, 2s. 6d. post-free.
WILBERFORCE, the Slave's Champion.
A capital book for Young Persons.
"I like the style and the spirit of Roger.
"My wish is very earnest.—Morning Herald.
"All parties may be gratified and benefited by its perusal."—Patriot.
Address, inclosing Stamps, the Author of "The Cheapside Apprentice," Nav-road, Hammersmith, W.

WORTH NOTICING.—Ten Thousand, New and Enlarged Edition, 172 Additional Pages, price 3s., post-free.
THE DOMESTIC APPEAL DIX and GUIDE to CORRECT SPEAKING and WRITING, with upwards of 2000 Words not found in the dictionary, comprising a Pronunciation of Yorks, which perplex all writers. No person who writes a letter should be without it. "This book is invaluable."—
J. F. SAUL and CO., 26, Paternoster-row.

For Families and Emigrants, 14th Edition, price 10s. 6d.
MACAULAY'S MEDICAL DICTIONARY. Containing directions for administering medicines, the symptoms and treatment of the management of the diseases of women and children.—JOHNSON: 68 and 69, Fleet-street; and all Booksellers.

MADEIRA: its Climate and Scenery. A Handbook for Invalids and other Visitors. Second Edition. By J. Y. JOHNSON. With Map and Illustrations. Price 10s. 6d.
Edinburgh: SUTHERLAND and KNOX. London: Longman and Co.

Second Edition is now ready, price 7s. 6d., of CONSUMPTION, Treatment of. By J. CHARLES HUNTER, Licentiate Professor of the Institutes of Medicine, and Medical Jurisprudence, Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh: A. and C. BLACK. London: Longmans and Co.

In 8s. 6d., or thirty-two stamps, Fourth Edition,
CORPULENCY, and its new Self-dietary Cure.
By A. W. MOORE, M.R.C.S.
A. and M. W. MOORE, 44, Tachbrook-street, Pimlico, S.W.

Eighth Edition, price 1s., by post 13 stamps,
ON THROAT DEAFNESS.—By JAS. YEARSLEY, M.D., Surgeon to the Ear Infirmary, Soho-street, Inventor of the Artificial Tympanum, &c.
London: Simpkin, Marshall, and Co., New Bond-street.

FOREIGN LITERATURE.—Just published, a CATALOGUE of POPULAR and CLASSICAL FRENCH BOOKS.
CATALOGUE of POPULAR and CLASSICAL GERMAN BOOKS.
To be had gratis on application or by post, on receipt of one stamp.
DULAU and CO., Foreign Booksellers,
37, Soho-square.

JUST PUBLISHED, Greyness, Baldness, and other Diseases of the Hair, their Cause and Remedy, with Effects on the Hair, Health, and Character." By F. M. REDDING, 293, Basinghall-street, London. Post-free, 6d.

WHAT WILL THIS COST TO PRINT?—In a thoroughly conducted printing establishment, where economy, taste, and punctual attendance to the interests of customers are studied, a Specimen of Type, and every information for authors, on application to RICHARD BARRETT, 12, Bow-lane, Cheapside.

NO CHARGE MADE for STAMPING Initials, Crests, Addresses, Monograms, Creat, or Flat, Steel Dies, Embossing Presses, Visiting-cards, Relief Stamps, and Arms Engraved with Accuracy. Specimens free.—HENRY RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly.

WEDDING CARDS, WEDDING ENVELOPES, Invitations to the Ceremony, Breakfast, and Ball, Printed and Stamped in Silver, with Arms or Crest, in the Correct Style. Specimens and Estimates free.—HENRY RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly. N.B. An HERALDIC DICTIONARY, 5s.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS.—Dressing-cases, Travelling Dressing-bags, Dispatch-boxes, Writing-cases, Work-boxes, Ladies' Companions and Envelope-cases, Matrimonial Mounted Envelope-cases, Blotting-books, and Illuminated Stationery. Every article bearing the Address, Crest, or Initials, at the Lowest Possible Prices. Illustrations sent free on application to HENRY RODRIGUES, Stationer to the Queen, and Dressing-case Maker to the Royal Family, 42, Piccadilly.

FOR FAMILY ARMS or CREST send name and address to the ROYAL HERALDIC OFFICE, 2, Inverness-road. Arms searched and painted. Plain Sketch, 3s. in Heraldic Colours, 6s. Best Heraldic Work, 12s. Pedigrees collected from all Public Records, 10s. 10s. "Manual of Heraldry," 1000 Engravings, 3s. 6d. Seals, Dies, Rings, Crests, Engraved. Hall Mark, Hawley's, Heraldic Artist, corner of St. Martin's-le-Grand, W.C.

ARMS, CRESTS, &c., Engraved in the Best Style.—Crest on Seals or Rings, 7s.; on Steel Dies, 8s.; Initials, 1s. 6d. each; Plate Engraved with Arms, Crest, and Address, 50s.; Hall Mark, 18-carat. Illustrated, with crest engraved, 6d.; large size for Arms, Crest, and Motto, 1s. Arms painted and Pedigree traced. Arms, Crest, and Address on Paper, 10s. 6d. Gentlemen waited on or attended to by an Engraver. CULLEFORD, Heraldic Engraver to her Majesty, 25, Cranbourne-street, near the Post Office, 215, Oxford-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane, W.C.—Livery Button Dies, 5s.

WEDDING CARDS.—For Lady and Gentleman, 25 Best Embossed Cards, with Maiden Name Printed Inside, the Visiting Cards.—A Copper Plate Engraved with Arms, Crest, and Address, and 100 Cards Printed, 10s. 6d. Steel Dies Engraved, 3s. Cranbourne-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

MARK YOUR LINEN.—The Pen and Ink Marking Ink best and only method of marking clothes, &c., for books as to prevent the ink washing out, is still sold at 1s. 6d. per bottle, by CAVANAGH, 22, Piccadilly, Manufacturer to the Queen. Cavanagh's Stylographic Pens, 3s. 6d.; Steel Pens, 2s. 6d.; Cavanagh's Cement, 1s.; with directions for use, post-free for stamps.—22, Piccadilly, Manufacturer, 10, Cranbourne-street, and 10, Martin's-lane, W.C.

A GOLD PEN FOR TWO SHILLINGS!!! A really good Gold Pen, with Iridium Nibs, that will last for years, in a case, by post, 2s. 6d.—Every pen warranted to write well for 12 months; and fairly worth double the price. To be obtained as FARTHING and COKEN'S, Wholesale Stationers, 162, Fleet-street, E.C.

MECHI and BAZIN'S DESPATCH-BOX and DRESSING-CASE, in russia and morocco leather, with all the different forms and sizes, fitted with real Bramah and Chubb Locks, and Solid Silver Fittings, Ivory Brushes, Combs, Razors, Scissors, Penknives, Writing and Dressing Cases, Portfolios, Envelope-cases, Pen-and-ink cases, Writing Materials, Inkstands, Sporting Knives, Wine and Spirit Flasks.—14, Regent-street, W.; and 4, Leadenhall-st., E.C.

DENT'S CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS.—H. F. DENT, 33, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, Watch Clock and Chronometer Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen.—33, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross.

FRODSHAM and BAKER, Chronometer Makers to the Admiralty, Clock Makers to the Queen, Chronometers, Duplex and Lever Watches of the most finished construction, at moderate prices. Astronomical and other Clocks made to order.—3, Strand-under-Drive, Northumberland House.

THE EXMOOR PONIES, COBS, and GALLOWAYS.—THE ANNUAL SALE of 300 EXMOOR PONIES, COBS, and GALLOWAYS, the property of Mr. Robert Smith, will take place at Dulverton, on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 30th and 31st of October next. Catalogues will be prepared one month prior to the sale, and every information given by Mr. Smith, Barton's Grange, Southmolton.—September, 1860.

THE EXMOOR PONIES, COBS, and GALLOWAYS.—Catalogues of the Annual Sale of 50 Exmoor Ponies, the property of F. W. KNIGHT, Esq., of Pixton Park, Dulverton, and Galloways, the property of Mr. Robert Smith, to be sold at Dulverton, on the 30th and 31st of October, may be had of Messrs. Tattersall, Knightsbridge; Messrs. Aucock, Bazaar, Baker-street; Sells and Son, Hampton; or of Mr. Smith, Somerset's-garage, Hampton. Persons, also, can be conveyed from the Dulverton Station, Forty of Mr. Smith's cobs, &c., are quiet to ride and warranted sound. Hampton, Thursday, Oct. 11, 1860.

SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY.
The Directors are prepared to receive TENDERS for LOANS on the Debentures of the Company, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, for one year, or such longer period as may be agreed upon. Forms of Tender may be had of the Secretary of the Scinde Railway Company, 3, Parliament-street, Westminster, S.W., at the option of the holder, at any time within that period.
By order of the Board of Directors, H. P. RUSSELL, Sec.
Graham House, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 1, New William-street, London. Established 1834.
Parties assuring with this Society before the 31st inst. will participate in the Assurances of every description undertaken on the most liberal terms consistent with safety.
Money advanced on Mortgage, Life and Reversionary Interests, and Sums required for the Purchase of Annuities.
Responsible Agents wanted. Apply to the Secretary.
W. E. DENT.

THE IRON BRIDGE ASSOCIATION, 58, Parliament-street, Sydney, undertakes to Design, Manufacture, and Wharfs of every description. Agents wanted in British Columbia, Hong Kong, and Shanghai.

THE FITZMAURICE GASLIGHTS.—The Proprietors having fitted many numbers of the saloons and shops of the Crystal Palace with their Gaslights, are now prepared to light any towns, mansions, factories, shops, or mines, with unequalled brilliancy and economy. The Gas is made from the purest oil, and is perfectly safe. Estimates and plans will be prepared for clearing-gas, mineralizers, &c. Apparatus for the light, 40s. 6d., 50s., 60s., 70s., 80s., 90s., 100s., 120s., 150s., 200s., 250s. Apply at the Works, 66, St. John's-square, Clerkenwell, E.C.

Established 1820.
PATENT CRYSTAL WINDOW-BARS, for shop and domestic windows, skylights, conservatories, &c., sold by LUCAS and SONS, Manufacturers, 18, Great Turnstile, Holborn-hill.

SAFETY for STREET-DOORS.—CHUBB'S PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS.—Purposed to-day of all time: and Chubb's Detector Locks for every purpose.—Chubb and Son's Lock Warehouse, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, LIBRARY, &c.—An extensive assortment of ALABASTER, DECANTERS, VASES, and other ORNAMENTS, Manufactured and Imported by J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London.

GARDNER'S 42 2s. DINNER SERVICES are now ready, quality, Beautiful, Tasteful, and Useful Dessert, Tea, and Breakfast Services, Glass, Lamps, Clocks, Bronzes, &c., at GARDNER'S, 453, West Strand, Temple Bar, next door.—H. and J. Gardner, by appointment to her Majesty (established 100 years), 453 and 454, Strand. Engravings free by post.

ROBERT GREEN and CO., 24, Mortimer-st. (near Regent-st.), manufacture the largest variety of cabinet-makers in London, undertake to FURNISH a tasteful Drawing-room complete, in Rosewood, Walnut-tree, or other woods, for 50 guineas. Handsome Dining-room Suites, in Leather, 20 guineas. Carriage-free to any railway-station in England. The Trade supplied. Illustrated Price-list recommended for a most liberal scale of reasonable moderate; the whole to be purchased again if required.

WALNUT SUITE OF DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, consisting of a handsome Couch, upholstered in fine walnut shell-fluted, with elegant back and marble slab; a chiffonier, with plate-glass back, marble slab, and drawers; a suitable settee, easy-chair, and six chairs covered in rich figured velvet, complete, 50 guineas. Also a handsome Suite of Dining-room Furniture, in Leather, consisting of Sideboard, Table, and six Chairs, complete, price 42s. To be seen at H. GREEN and CO.'S, Upholsterers, 19, Mortimer-street, five doors from Regent-street.

FURNITURE.
WHERE TO BUY, WHAT TO BUY, HOW TO BUY.
P. and H. LAMBERT'S Guide
Contains carriage-paid to any part of the Kingdom.
Bedsteads, Bedding, Carpets, Furniture, Ironmongery.
Address, 28, Leicester-square, London.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE.—W. VAUGHAN and SONS, 2 and 4, Goodge-street, and 45 and 46, Tottenham-court-road, W., Manufacturers of Brussels, Tapestry, Velvet, and Kidderminster Carpets.

SCIENTIFIC PRESENTS.—Collections of Minerals, Rocks, Fossil Shells, and Fossils, to illustrate the study of Geology and Mineralogy, from 5s., 10s., 21s., 42s., 63s., 105s., and upwards. J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, London.

PUZZLES and TRICKS.—The Prince of Wales's Puzzle, 1s. 6d., or thirteen stamps. Maze, 1s. 6d. Money Box, 3s. 6d.—free, on receipt of stamps; also, the Arabian Trick, Magic Cards, Tricks, &c. Catalogue of Puzzles, Tricks, and Conjuring Apparatus sent, where every description of Puzzles and Conjuring Tricks may be had. Wholesale and for Exportation. Prompt attention to country orders.

STORMS and BAROMETERS.—The Board of Trade Storm Signals established on the Coasts of England, Scotland, and Ireland, by the Meteorological Department, being now in operation, and have appointed them special Agents for the Sale of the Barometer, and price 4os.—T. HARRIS, Optician, and Scientific Instrument Maker, 52, Haymarket, and Cornhill, London, E.C.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES.—The largest and most extensive Stock in London, of every variety to select from at CALLAGHAN'S, 22a, New Bond-street (corner of Brook-street). Glasses of the highest celebrated make and powerful Glasses and Photographic Lenses made by Voigtländer.

SPORTSMEN and GENTLEMEN of the ARMY and NAVY.—R. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Cornhill, have constantly on Sale a large Assortment of their celebrated Field-glasses, BACKSIGHTS, Telescopic Rifle-sights, and general out-door Toy and night powerful Waterproof-pocket Telescopes, Compasses, Thermometers, &c. Also a large stock of Opera Glasses, ranging in all kinds, constructed on fortune glass, will show distinctly at the distance of three miles. Also Telescopic Rifle-sights, adapted to the Enfield and Sea Service Rifles. Every description of Glasses and Rifle-sights carefully repaired. Observe, 39, Cornhill, corner of Finch-lane.

DEAFNESS.—A newly-invented Instrument for extreme cases of Deafness, called the Sound Magnifier, Patented, is now ready for sale. It fits into the ear so as not to be in the least perceptible; the unpleasant sensation of singing noises in the head is entirely removed. It affords intense relief to deaf persons and enables them to hear distinctly at church and in public assemblies. Sold by the Inventor, Mr. JAMES HOWARD, Optician, 31, Aldermanbury, London.

"ORCHARD HOUSE" TREES for PLANTING.—Mr. Rivers, "Orchard House," 6th Edition, post 12, free.—"January, paint the trees over-night and half with GISBURNE'S COMPOUND; half a pound to the gallon of water. This will destroy the Moss and Insects."
GISBURNE'S will be home in, 5s., 10s., 18s.
Retail by Ironmongers;
Wholesale by PRIDGE PATENT CANDLE COMPANY (Limited).

ROYAL ASYLUM for ORPHAN and other NECESSITOUS CHILDREN of PARENTS ONCE IN RESPECTABLE CIRCUMSTANCES.—Founded in the year Half-yearly Elections.
Subscriptions gratefully received by Messrs. Spencer, 37, Gracechurch-street; or by E. F. LEMAN, Secretary,
3, Wallbrook.

HOSPITAL for CONSUMPTION and DISEASES of the CHEST, Brompton, S.W.—The distress upon this special hospital, owing to the large continued indebtedness of the Institution, and the increased number of patients applying for admission, is urgently required to meet them. Further Donations, Subscriptions, and Legacies are most earnestly solicited. By order, J. H. TYLER, Secretary.

MOURNING.—NEW FABRICS.—MESSRS. JAY have the honour to announce they have had several new and elegant Fabrications and various other Novelties in Mourning Goods.
These textures are well adapted to the purpose for which they have been manufactured, and are now for the first time in the newly enlarged Show-rooms.
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
247, 249, 251, Regent-street.
JAY'S.

PARISIAN MANTLES.—MESSRS. JAY have just received the first delivery of the newest Paris MANTLES from PARIS. As soon as the Patterns have been taken, the Mantles will be made in the Workrooms of the Establishment, and will be ready for Inspection in the Show-rooms, trimmed with Lace, &c., by next or the first week.
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
247, 249, 251, Regent-street.

JAY'S MANUAL OF FASHION will be published in the course of a few days, and forwarded gratis on application.
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
247, 249, 251, Regent-street.

MILLINERY FOR MOURNING WEAR.—MESSRS. JAY have the honour to announce the Manager of the Millinery Department has returned from Paris with the newest modes for Morning wear.
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
247, 249, 251, Regent-street.

RICH SILKS of the Past Season, at half-price. All the New Checks for the Present Season.
The Richest Moiré Antiques, 3 guineas. 11 patterns Du Deuil.
Draperies, Linseys, Reps, Merinos, and New Fancy Dresses.
Imitation Sealskin Paletots, new and fashionable shapes, 36s. to 63s.
Sole for Dyed Velvet, Velveteens, New Doll and Evening Flowers.
Rich Plain Silks in all the new shades, and Black Silks of all kinds.
SEWELL and CO., Compton House,
Print-street, Soho, London.

HOUSEHOLD LINEN DEPARTMENT.—JOHN HARVEY, SON, and CO., 42 & 43, Ludgate-hill, embrace every description of Linen for Household purposes, and have a large Stock of Linen Damask, 2 yards wide, at 2s. 11d. per yard. DOUBLE DAMASK TABLE CLOTHS, with Napkins and Slips cloths to match, damask and damask, 2 by 2 yards, 10s. 6d. each; 2½ by 2½, 12s. 6d.; 3 by 3, 15s. 6d.; 3 by 3 yards, 21s. each. Strong Huckaback Towels, 1s. 6d. per pair. Strong Barnsley Sheeting and Pillow-casing, fine and made clothes, Sheets, Shirts, Collars, Cuffs, and every description of Linen Goods. Patterns and price-list sent upon application above £1. Families waited upon at home in London.

SILKS, Rich, Plain, Striped, and Checked Silks, at 2s. 6d. per dress of 12 yards, well worth the attention of purchasers. Patterns free.—JOHN HARVEY, SON, and CO., 42 and 43, Ludgate-hill, Corner of Old Bailey. Observe the Number and Address well. Established nearly Quarter of a Century.

COMPLETION of the Extensive Alterations and Improvements on the Premises of BEECH and BENNALL, Linendrapers, 49, 50, and 51, Cornhill, E.C.
Unrivalled Display of an entirely new Stock of Mantles, Shawls, Dresses, Silks, Velvets, Furs, Baby Linen, Hosiery, Ribbons, Gloves, Trimmings, Laces, &c., &c.
Parcels for Monday's delivery should be sent on Saturday.
Ladies favouring us with their address will be apprised of Twenty Thousand Pounds sterling having been purchased entirely for ready money, and of the Prices at which they will be offered for sale.
BEECH and BENNALL, 49, 50, and 51, Cornhill, E.C.
N.B. For the convenience of Ladies in the country, Patterns of all the New Goods for the season have been forwarded postage-free. Early application is respectfully solicited.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS and MANTLES.—Messrs. Nicholson's Overcoats and Cloaks Patterns of material and prices sent post-free.
J. B. and T. NICHOLSON, 37, Wood-street, Cheapside.

Patterns post-free.
LADIES' MANTLE CLOTHS, plain and fancy, Velvets, Velveteens, Cords, Cashs, Buckrams, and Trimmings of every description.
Patterns sent free by Twitchen.
Parcels carriage-paid to any part.
Address—S. BRIGGS, Twitchen.

MOIRES ANTIQUES.—SEWELL and CO. have now SELLING the richest MOIRES ANTIQUES in Black, to celebrate the Dress, as all colours.—COMPTON HOUSE, Frith-street, Soho.

MADAME CLOPIN, de PARIS.
By Appointment to several Foreign Court.
These Corsets are recommended to the notice of the ladies as the most perfect fitting, the most comfortable to wear, and the most elegant; unless a dress to set over them with better style than any other in England.
Silk-quilted superfine Coutille, 12s. 6d. per pair.
Ditto, ditto, Extra Long Waist, 15s. per pair.
In ordering of Madame Clopin, de Paris, it will be well that it be actually required, but only other measures can be made to order.
ADDRESS, 214, REGENT-STREET. MAY BE OBTAINED.

LONDON:
S. and J. Garrard, Goldsmiths to the Queen; Hopkins and Strongitharm, Chiswell-street; Hunt and Roskell, Bond-street.

PROVINCES.

J. Blackwell, Aylesbury
C. Stevens, Aberystwith
T. Cook, Bridgewater
A. Cann, Cranbrook
G. Sale, Altrincham
J. Bennett, Ashford
J. Bothwell, Bury, Lancashire
W. Bell, Bishop Auckland
Mrs. Bell, Barnard Castle
H. W. Morley, Braintree
J. Hall, Bedford
J. Hughes, Bala
D. and W. Davies, Carmarthen
R. Phillips, Cardigan
Davis and Bennett, Chepstow
J. Hall, Dorchester
Frost, Dublin
Frost (late of Man), Douglas
J. and H. Lewis, Dudley
Moon, Longland, and Co., Dundee
Hamilton, Edinburgh
Reynolds, Exeter
Lockhart, Dumfries
Hall, Dartford
H. Copeland, Enniskillen
Hall, Gravesend
Goodridge and Tye, Guildford
D. Bryant, Gravesend
Hamilton and Inches, Galway
Arnott and Co., Glasgow
Hall, Gravesend
T. R. Bentall, Halstead
E. Davey, Hurstpierpoint
Hall, Hertford, and Ware
Hall, Hertford, and Bishop Hall
H. Sheppard, Ilminster
Hall, Ipswich
W. Baker, Kimbolton
J. Hall, Leatherhead
Hall, Leighton Buzzard
B. B. Lewis, Lynn Regis
Hall, Maidstone
Mitchell and Co., Macclesfield
A. Worrall, Malton
Hall, Newbury
Paine and Lewis, Maidstone
Hall, Northampton, and Market
Hall, Oxford, and Cowley
C. Orde, Penrith
Hall, Reigate
Hall, Rochester, and Strood, Perth
J. Fisher, Rugeley
Hall, Sevenoaks
Hall, Stevenage
W. Jones and Co., Splashdom
Hall, Tunbridge Wells
J. Trapnell, Selby
Hall, Tunbridge Wells
R. Fenwick, Shilbottle
H. Phelps, Tenby
Hall, Tonbridge
W. L. Mallett, Tewkesbury
Hall, Tunbridge Wells
J. Ackerman, Witney
Wilcox and Stainton, Whitby
Hall, Wellington, Salop
Hall, Worcester, Wisbeach

SHETLAND and SCOTCH WOOLLEN SHAWLS, SCARFS, and CO. have now on hand a large assortment of the above, consisting of Shetland Knitted Shawls, Scarfs, Mufflers, Hoods, Caps, Gloves, Hosiery, Lambswool and Lisney Woollens, &c. &c., in great variety. Patterns forwarded to the country.
SAMUEL and CO., Shetland and Scotch Warehouse,
119, Jermyn-street, St. James's.

